I will ask room in your column to tell the brothers and sisters of our interesting and encouraging meeting. Dear Bro. Hatch was with us from April 24 until May 5. Preached fifteen able discourses. A good many seemed to be interested, and good attention by all was given to the blessed truths of God's Word, and the way of salvation so plainly pointed out by the Brother. On Saturday before the meeting closed, one who had belonged to the Christian order, but for some time had been much dissatisfied and could not go with them, came out on the Lord's side and was buried with Christ in baptism, and arose to walk in a new life. Oh, may this dear Bro. Black be faithful. Brothers and sisters pray for him that he may stand firm in the faith, and boldly face the sneers and scoffs of a frowning world and overcome the many trials and temptations that will be before him, looking unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith. We were all strengthened in faith, and feel that good has been done. We want to have Bro. Hatch come again soon as we can. May the dear Father bless him with health and strength that he may work in the Master's vineyard. Oh, may we all be ready with our lamps trimmed and burning when the Savior comes. Your Sister looking for Jesus.

KEZIAH ROGERS.

Editor Restitution:

Brothers and sisters of the household of faith, it does me good to read the many letters from members of our family; and the cheering assurance that they have their lamps trimmed and burning, and are ready to meet the Bridegroom. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. iv. 16. Then may we hear the voice of the Master, saying, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. xxv. 34. Now I believe that the time of the Gentiles is about fulfilled, and Christ is soon coming back to this earth again, for we have the positive assurance that this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i. 11. If Jesus was ever on earth, just so sure he is coming again. "Let us lift up our heads for our redemption draweth nigh, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin unto salvation." Heb. ix. 28.

I would like to hear from all of our family through our good paper, THE RESTITUTION. Don't think you can't write for you can write something that will be of interest for us to read. Let us work while the day lasts, for the night will soon overtake us when no one can work. "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen." Rev. xxii. 21.

M. L. ADAMS.

Editor Restitution:

The Church of God at Niagara Falls, New York, sends greeting, and as Paul says, "come not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God." In like manner we come to you for the first time, asking that you patiently bear with us, while we take up your valuable time and space in your paper to declare unto you and the brethren at large, the valuable services under the guidance of the Lord, rendered by Elder B. W. and Sister Mary A. Woodward. Paul planted, Apollos watered, and God gave the increase. The little flock was planted here, and Bro. and Sister Woodward heard the Macedonian cry and came over and watered—commencing their meetings Sunday morning May 5th, and holding forth every night during the week. They were ready for service on arrival here May 4th, at 6 P. M., but this we would not permit after their long ride of a day and a night.

The people around and about are so prejudiced against us, imagining we are the only ones who advocate and earnestly contend for the faith, that we are fanatics and whatnot. Under these disadvantages and discouragements, every one against us and our glorious doctrine, they commenced declaring the counsel of God in a simple, sound, humble and energetic way, that carried conviction with it.

The average attendance during the week days was about twenty. On Sunday the brethren gathered together from the distance and good meetings were held. The meetings closed Sunday May 10th after evening service. The result, God gave the increase—eight were baptized into Christ believing the gospel of the kingdom, buried with him to rise to walk in newness of life. God grant that they taking him as their guide and example may be able to do so. This stands to the credit of these faithful works in the Master's vineyard and their reward will later on come from the heavenly Father. The little flock here has been built up and strengthened by hearing the simple and sound way of their presenting the gospel. Our Heavenly Father loves simplicity, and they simple that deprive carnal [illegible] any it. It has been a feast to the little flock, and they will be long-remembered by the brothers and sisters here.

The giving of the right hand of fellowship at the communion service, the simple, sound and practical advice given to each of the baptized ones, by Bro. and Sister Woodward was solemn and so impressive, that all here will remember it as all were weeping. Possibly they may have another call from around or about here in the near future, for truly they are the servants of the Lord. They feed the flock of God, taking the oversight, not by constraint but willingly, not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind, neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being examples to the flock. Truly when the Chief Shepherd shall appear they will receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. v. 24. May God's blessing go with them in their labors for the Master, is the prayer of the little flock at Niagara Falls, New York. Yours in the Master's service.

MARRIED.

At residence of the bride's parents at Bradgate, Iowa, June 27, 1895, by the writer, Mr. Edwin Gould of Boone, Iowa, to Miss Grace A. Nowlin of Bradgate, Iowa. The bride is the daughter of Bro. and Sister W. C. Nowlin. It was an interesting and joyous occasion, only the immediate relatives being present. They were the recipients of many beautiful presents, and many were the prayers that they may soon become obedient to the truth and be faithful to the end of life's journey, and that the blessing of our Father in heaven may ever attend them through the cares and sorrows of this mortal life.

Courage does not consist in feeling no fear, but in conquering fear. He is the hero who, seeing the lions goes straight on.

He must indeed be busy who cannot find time to keep himself alive.

OBITUARY.

F. M. Clifton was born Feb. 18, 1823, and died March 22, 1895 being 72 years, 1 month and 0 days old. A large congregation assembled at the Grand Prairie Schoolhouse to pay their last respects to the deceased. The writer spoke from Job xvii. 13, for a text after reading the 8th of Romans as a lesson, dwelling principally upon the 23rd and 44th verses. Brother Clifton was born in Kentucky and came to Illinois while quite young, living near Springfield. When a young man he came to Ft. Desmoines, and afterwards settled on a farm where Marshalltown now stands. From this place he enlisted in the Mexican War, under Captain Guthrie, who was killed in an action. His father was a Christian preacher. He was converted to the gospel of the kingdom about 42 years ago, by Brother Cramer, which gospel he has preached to the hour of his death. He leaves a wife and three children. His son J. R. Clifton, lives at Shell Rock, Iowa, and one daughter is in Oregon. The writer of this article is one converted by this dear brother from the Roman Catholic faith to the faith once delivered to the saints. He has been a faithful supporter of THE RESTITUTION for over 30 years. He had preached on Saturday evening and Sunday morning to quite a number of his neighbors in his own house as he was not feeling well enough to go to his regular appointment. On Sunday, about two hours after he was through preaching he went to bed saying, "I will never get up again," and he only lived nine days afterward. His last words to his friends were, "We will meet again." Yes; dear ones, let it be our aim to meet him in the kingdom of God.

Your Brother in hope of immortality in and through the resurrection from the grave.

J. L. HERRIMAN.

Emma E. Bowman fell asleep in Jesus, at Ripley, Ill., May 2, 1895. The cause of her death was Paralysis. She was a daughter of Brother and Sister Robinson. She was born April 14, 1840, and therefore, was about 55 years old when she Chase in 1862 and was married to Dr. H. Bowman. She has been an invelid for some years past, and in the last few weeks of her life she was a great sufferer, but I was told that she never complained. She desired very much to live until the Lord would come and change her suffering to immortality. She always occupied her place in the church whenever she was able. She leaves a husband, two sisters, two brothers, a church and a host of friends to mourn her loss. On Sunday the 5th day of May we preached her funeral discourse to to a large and attentive congregation. From her death we learn the lesson that in the midst of life we are in death. May we all so live that we may be prepared to meet all in the kingdom of God is my prayer.

Grace is God's balm for a wounded conscience.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks - those not able to pay for their paper - will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8-page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of chester, Va. not to this office.

Conference Notice.

The Iowa State Conference of the Church of God will be held in Marshalltown, beginning Thursday evening August 15th, and lasting over till Sunday evening the 25th, 1895. Our reasons for place—the most central, and most convenient in the State for railroad for all brethren. At the crossing of the Chicago & North-Western, Iowa Central, and the Great Western or Diagonal Road. The location in the city is on North Third Street opposite the Green House. The street car line starts out just east of the depot and for a nickel will carry you to the ground. Come prepared to tent and to live. Will have tents on the ground, but all who have tents bring them.

As to time, it will be of more leisure than in June, and therefore secure a better attendance. Also crops will then be sufficiently matured to tell of a certainty what can be done for Evangelistic Work. A regular programme will be given out for work. Begin now to arrange to attend the meetings. Leave your hobbies at home and come prepared for a meeting of straight-forward gospel and Bible work. We shall try to make this one of the most interesting meetings we have ever held in Iowa. We expect to be able to secure reduced rates upon all of the railroads in the state for this occasion.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

God's Plan.

Then, Great Jehovah, let us praise
His wonderful and Holy Name—
For the last made salvation's plan
To take away the sins of man.

Jesus, the Lord, Himself went down
To be baptized in Jordan's stream,
He showed the way, portrayed the plan
Of God's salvation for man.

Now, may I ever thoughts provoke our hearts,
Wherever we go, in God's behests,
When risen, or if resting be,
Our great Jehovah—all to free.

He sent his Son, our Lord in Living;
Who did the blessed message bring:
"I am the vine, the branches ye,
If ye will but abide in Me."

And these, Christ's loved, faithful friends
He sent, to bear the Word to men:
"But wait," said he, "For power divine,
Which, when 'tis come, will prove 'tis mine."

Till on the Pentecostal day,
They in Jerusalem did stay.
The Spirit came—they preached to man,
God's good and consummated plan.

They both by miracle and word,
Did testify of their dear Lord.
Showed he was slain, but rose again
And thus, eternal life did win.

When sinners saw the Lord was slain,
And let benighted hearts had been
"What must we do?" they sadly cry,
"The Lord we've shunned and passed him by."

Then, did his servant Peter say:
"Repent, each one of you, this day,
And be immersed, in Jesus' name,
Then, you the Lord's great gift will gain."

The richest promise has been made
To all, whose lives in Christ are hid,
In fair Jerusalem, a home,
On the bright resurrection morn.

Then, will the Savior be earth's King,
Then righteous judgment will be bring.
No more of sorrow, sin or tears,
But peace and joy, through endless years.

MRS. E. B. BOYER.

Light Asked For.

A Brother writes asking questions concerning the proper time to observe the Lord's supper, and also concerning the observance of the seventh day Sabbath.

The question concerning the communion is whether it should be observed weekly or yearly.

There being no positive law concerning time, it is unwise to stir up any strife on the question. My study has led me to believe that the weekly observance has the weight of example both Biblical and historical. Many err in endeavoring to add to Christian institutions some part of the old law which has been fulfilled, and accomplished all that was designed by it, and is now relegated to the past. As for instance the time for holding the passover under the law they endeavor to fix onto a new institution. There is no warrant whatever for taking times and laws that belonged to the old ordinances and transferring to new observances. There was a natural tendency to do this during the transition state between Judaism and Christianity, but one would suppose at this late day that tendency would have passed away. Paul says in Galatians iv., 10:11: "Ye observe days and months and times and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed on you labor in vain." This, of course, relates to "days," "months," "time" and "years," that the old law required them to keep, which they seemed to think they ought to attach to the new order of things. It is sad to think that many well meaning brethern try to attach "times," "months" and "days" belonging to the old passover law onto a new institution under a new order of things.

In Acts xx. 7, we have an evidence that the disciples observed the ordinance on the first day of the week, when the disciples met together to break bread. Paul being about to depart on the next day, discoursed to them," etc.

If we analyze this, what do we find? "On the first day of the week when the disciples were together." This intimates that the disciples were accustomed to meet together on that day of the week. The object of the meeting was "to break bread," it is evident that it was not done to satisfy hunger. Paul, in Cor. xi. 34, corrects the Corinthian Church who had fallen into an error in observing the Lord's supper, and says: "If any man hunger let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto condemnation." If they only met together yearly, it hardly would have been frequent enough to degenerate into a common meal and merit the correction of the apostle. 1 Cor. xvi. 1:2. The apostle gives the Corinthian Church the same direction as he did the Galatian Church about the collection on the first day of the week, showing their custom to meet on that day.

Heb. x. 25, exhorts not to forsake the assembling of themselves together in the manner of some is, "and so much the more as ye see day approaching." Yearly gatherings would be too far apart for this language to have any force especially when Acts xx. 7, gives the object of meeting together, "to break bread," (not as a common meal as the Corinthians were doing) but to remember the lord. As there is no specific law saying it must only be done once a week, "So much the more, as ye see the day approaching," would suit me better to remember my loving Savior. I would starve on once a year.

History also confirms the custom to commune weekly.

The blessed results of weekly communion is in its favor. For the past thirty-five years I have noticed that those who were steadfastly in their place every first day of the week to remember the lord have stood firm in the faith; they have not been drifted about by every wind of doctrine. They also are main ones at the helm to-day, standing in its defence both by voice and pen. No good comes in trying to blend the old and new order of things together.

WITH REGARD TO THE SABBATH.

I am simply astonished that any Bible student should have any question about that. Why is it not enough when Eph. ii. 15, speaking of the commandments of the old laws, says: "Having abolished in his flesh (on the cross) the enmity, even law of commandments contained in ordinances." What have we to do with old commandments that have been abolished?

Of like import is Col. ii. 14: "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross." I can't imagine what any one wants with what is blotted out and took out of the way. Why bother the weak with such things? Verse 16 says: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat or drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath, which are a shadow of things to come." If the Sabbath was in force we would have a right to "judge," and also to to stone them to death for violation. How foolish it is to insist upon chasing a "shadow." There would be more sense in chasing after something substantial.

This Mosaic law business which had been fulfilled and taken out of the way early, crept into the church. See Acts xv. 5: "There rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying that it was needful to circumcize them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses." Peter says in verse 10: "Why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear."

Yes, why? Not a single soul of those who profess to keep the Sabbath either does or can keep it. If the law is in force, the penalty is in force. A law without a penalty is a dead letter.

Paul says in Gal. v: "If ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the Law." We are also taught that if a man keeps a part of the law he is obligated to keep the whole. Paul further says: "Christ is become at no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace. Sabbath keepers had better quit chasing after shadows and take to something more real. lest in their efforts to obtain justification by observing a portion of the deeds of the law, Christ should "become of no effect unto you." Be careful, this language means something.

P. S. I never see the paper you speak of.

PSALM. 51.

52 COM. VER.

1. Unto the end; David's (psalm) for understanding:

2. When Doeg the Idumanian went and told Saoul and said to him, David hath gone into the house of Abimelech.

3. Why doth the able one boast of transgression in his evil-doing?

4. All the day long hath thy tongue accounted iniquity; Like a razor that hath been honed hast thou practiced deceit,

5. Thou hast loved evil more than good, iniquity more than to talk righteousness. Interlude:

6. Thou hast loved all the words that overwhelm a deceitful tongue,

7. Therefore may God have taken thee down utterly: May he have plucked thee up and removed thee from the habitation and thy root from the land of the living. Interlude.

8. And justified ones will see and will have feared, and will laugh at him and say,

9. Lo, a man who did not make God his responsive-helper, but hoped in the abundance of his riches and whose enablement was in his folly:

10. But I am an olive-tree as it were bearing fruit in the house of God; I have hoped in God's mercy unto the age and unto the age of the ages.

11. I will confess unto thee unto the age what thou hast done; and I will wait for thy name, because it is useful-good in the sight of thy holy ones.

PSALM 52 (53 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; Concerning mercy learned; For understanding; David's (psalm);

2. The thoughtless hath said in his heart, There is no God: They have become corrupt and abominable in transgressions; There is no one who doeth good.

3. God bowed down from out the heavens to look at the sons of men, to see if there was one who understood or was seeking out God.

4. They had all inclined away, together had they become unprofitable: There was no one doing good, no not so on e.

5. None will comprehend who are working the transgression, who are devouring my laity in the eating of food; they have not invoked God.

6. They have feared a great fear where there was no fear; because God hath scattered the bones of men-pleasers; They have been put to shame because God despised them.

7. Who will give the instrumental salvation from Sion? When the Lord returneth the captivity of his laity, Jakob will be glad and Israel will have rejoiced.

PSALM 53 (54 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; among hymns for understanding: David,s (psalm:)

2. When the Zeiphaioi went and said unto Saul, Hath not David hid himself along side of us?

3. O God, in thy name mayest thou have saved me, and in thine ability mayest thou have judged me.

4. O God, mayest thou have hearkened unto my votive-prayer; mayest thou have marked well the oracular-words of my mouth.

5. Because aliens have arisen against me, and controling ones have sought my soul (life); They have not set God before their eyes. Interlude.

6. For lo God is my responsive-helper and the Lord is an intervener for my soul (life.)

7. He will turn away the evil-devices of my enemies; In thy truth mayest thou have utterly destroyed them.

8. Of my own free will will I sacrifice unto thee; I will confess in thy name O Lord that thou art good;

9. That thou hast delivered me out of every tribulation, and that mine eye hath looked down upon mine enemies.

PSALM 54 (55 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; Among hymns for understanding; David's (psalm.)

2. Mark well my votive-prayer O God, and do not disregard my supplication;

3. Heed me and hearken unto me. I have grieved in my meditation and have been disturbed at the voice of an enemy and with the tribulation of an obdurate-sinner; Because they have inclined out transgression against me, and with wrath have they been indignant with me.

5. My heart hath been disturbed within me and cowardy fear of death hath fallen upon me.

6. Fear and trembling have come upon me, and darkness hath covered me;

7. And I said who will give me wings of a dove as it were, and I shall have flown and shall find rest (final-rest here.)

8. Lo in fleeing to escape I went far away and camped in the wilderness. Interlude;

9. I awaited expectantly the One who saveth me from dejection and compunction.

10. Overwhelm them, O Lord and destroy their tongues; because I have seen lawlessness and gainsaying in the city.

11. Day and night will it encompass her on the walls thereof, transgression and pain in her midst.

12. And iniquity and usury and deceit have not ceased from out the public-squares.

13. Because if an enemy had approached me, I would have endured it patiently, and if the one who hateth me had magnified speech against me I would have hidden away from him.

14. But thou, O man of iniquity, (equal-souled man) my leader and my acquaintance,

15. Thou who hast sweetened food when we want our way together unto the house of God in concord of mind.

16. May death have come upon them; May they have gone down into Hades alive; because wickedness was in the midst of their sojournings.

17. I have cried unto God and the Lord hath hearkened unto me.

18. Evening and morning and midday will I discourse and declare and he will hearken unto my voice,

19. He will redeem my soul in peace from those who draw nigh unto me, because in many ways they were with me.

20. God will hearken and will humble them, he who was before the animate-ages. Interlude. For there is no exchange for them and they have not feared God.

21. He hath stretched out his hand to repay: They have abominated his covenant:

22. They have been apportioned from the wrath of his face and his heart hath drawn nigh; his words have been made softer than olive-oil, and they are hardened bolts.

23. Cast thy anxious-care upon the Lord and he will care for thee: He will not allow the justified one to slip forever (or always).

24. But thou, O God, will lead them down into a pit of corruption. Men of blood and deceit shall not live out half their days: But I will hope in thee, O Lord.

PSALM 55 (56 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; Concerning the laity that hath been removed far from the sacred-places: David's (psalm) for a votive-pillar inscription, when the other tribes in Geth (Gath Cum. Ver.) got control of him.

2. Have mercy on me, O God, because man hath trodden me down: all the day long warring hath he afflicted me.

3. Mine enemies have trodden me down all the day long from day-dawn; Because the many who war against me,

4. Will have been made to fear, but I shall hope in thee;

5. In God shall I speak my words of praise: all the day long have I hoped in God; I shall not have feared what flesh will do to me,

6. All the day long have they abominated my words; all their thoughts against me are for evil.

7. They will stay by, will bow down, will watch my heel, even as I have patiently endured it in my soul.

8. For naught will thou save them; in wrath wilt thou lead down laities, O God.

9. My life have I declared unto thee, Set my tears before even as in thy promise.

10. Mine enemies are turned back on the day when I shall invoke; Lo, I know that thou art my God.

11. Unto God will I speak an oracular-word of praise; Unto the Lord will I address a word (the fir t is "hrema" and the last is" logos").

12. In God have I hoped; I shall not have feared what man will do unto me.

13. In me, O God, are the vows which I will pay for thy praise.

14. Because thou hast delivered my soul from death, my feet from destruction, to be pleasing in the sight of God in the light of the living.

COMMENT.

The 51st psalm is a minor-harmonic and this incident in the life of David becomes a theme for a Messianic hymn—the burden of which is justification for the righteous as personified in David, the royal representative of Christ the Righteous and judgment for the unrighteous as personified in Doeg the Idumanian a royal representative and courtier of Saoul. The gist of the instruction is the wisdom of choosing the higher rather than the lower utility in life. The one of the fifty-one indicates the perfection here referred to, to be in one person - the Messianic one.

The fifty second (52nd) psalm is also a minor-harmonic and like the preceding is designed to give understanding, meaning of course understanding in esteric spiritual things, and as all these things center in Christ, we know that this hymn is especially Messianic in some way. In the previous psalm we have the righteousness of the One emphasized, and in this the unrighteousness of the many. Man in the abstract a failure—man in the concrete a success and a glory. But when? When the Lord returneth the captivity of his laity, etc. The two of the 12 numerically indicates the body of Christ as the One indicated him personally—or the Christian Church "the instrumental salvation from out Sion."

Psalm 53rd becomes a minor-major ming d. Starting out with a prayer for salvation from enemies and impending destruction it appropriately closes with the notes of victory and praise, as indicated numerically by the third, the first major-harmonic. The eighth verse contains the free-will-offering, and the confession which become the foundation of our hopes as Christians and its resurrectional import rises in as a full octave major chord in the general minor harmony here.

The 54th psalm with this same general heading "for understanding" is a prevailing minor with a strong major "ought of hope interwoven throughout like significant and suggestive incidentals. And well do they suggest the interventional angelic help and hope sustained in the extreme depression of Gethsemane. The betrayal in the house of his friends, the addition of insult to injury, the failure of every human hope; but still the assurance of "a better hope," "and having done all to stand"—"and wait for the judgment of the Lord of all the earth" the triumph of righteousness over iniquity—these are the incidental fourths in the minor harmony here.

The 55th psalm is a full minor both numerically and as indicated by the heading "Concerning the laity that hath been far removed, etc. "The promise" here seems to be the last ground of hope remaining and the whole hymn seems to be more of an elegy than anything else. All human reliance is gone and yet the psalm closes with a double seventh of ultimate assurance in "light" and "life."

CHAS. GARDNER.

"I Go to Prepare a Place For You."

In defense of the belief of a sky kingdom we are almost always referred to John xiv. 2, as proof that Jesus Christ has gone to prepare a place for us, and those holding that belief continue the argument by saying: "If Christ went to prepare a place for us, it must of course follow that we must go to that place which he has prepared if we would receive it." They hold to this belief in spite of the assertion of Jesus that he would come again and receive them unto himself, and that where he was (the place where he would receive them) there they would be also.

They cling tenaciously to this belief in spite of the positive words of Jesus to the unbelieving Jews (John viii. 21) and to his disciples (Chap. xiii. 33): "Where I go ye cannot come."

Because of this declaration the disciples were troubled, and the Savior pacifies them by saying, "Let not your heart be troubled;" and he continues to console them by telling them that he would come again after he had prepared a place, and would receive them unto himself and remain with them.

In harmony with Christ's words are the words of John in Rev. xxi, 1: "And I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." John sees the holy city in vision and describes it in detail. He tells us again in the 10th verse that he saw the holy city descending out of heaven from God, and then follows the description.

This beautiful city will be a fit metropolis and capital for the new earth which John also saw in vision. The Jerusalem that is to be built in troublous times will be destroyed as Daniel tells us (Dan. ix. 25,26) It will pass away when the earth and the works therein are burned up, and give place to the New Jerusalem, and then shall "the tabernacle of God be with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

"If the vision tarry, wait for it."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the Scriptural restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also the early baptism of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sin, and holy life as essential for final salvation.

It is yet for an appointed time, but we can see that the blessed time of its fulfillment is near at hand. Then let us wait with patience for the coming of the Bridegroom. The hour of his coming is near at hand, and then shall the earth be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the the. Even so, come, Lord Jesus is my prayer. Your brother in Christ,

J. EDGAR HATCH.

Farmer Was Puzzled.

Farmer Oatcake, who, with his good wife, Mandy, is on a brief visit to a daughter-in-law in Buffalo, looked over the newspapers of Saturday in an endeavor to find a service on the following day which he might attend with hope of securing spiritual satisfaction. He soon gleaned that the following Scriptural subjects would be discussed from various city pulpits:

"Is the 'Tribby' Craze Dying Out?"

"Fitzsimmons vs. Corbett."

"How the Pastor Spends His Vacation."

"Should Our Daughters Marry Foreign Noblemen?"

"High Sleeves and Theater Hats."

"The Gold Brick Saloon."

"Canal Street on Saturday Night."

"Wordsworth and the Lake School of Poetry."

"The Fifty-Third Congress."

"Rights of Motormen."

Farmer Oatcake gave it up after awhile and laid down the paper, saying, with a sigh: "Laws sake, Mandy! I do believe that the gospel and the scheme of salvation have gone clean out of fashion. —Buffalo Express.

Prayer-meeting Hints.

1. Let the weekly prayer-meeting live in your heart.

2. Study to bring some blessing with you when you come.

3. Prepare for the meeting; don't rush into it with your heart filled with the world.

4. Be interested in it yourself, and then it will be interesting to others.

5. Give attention. Don't expect others to arouse you, but help arouse others.

6. Don't criticise, don't find fault. Think of your own imperfections and wants.

7. Exercise your mind in the exercises. Get all that is good out of every prayer, song and exhortation. —Young People at Work.

We are those that march through a wilderness, and each one carries some burden on his back—of toil of sorrow, of sin; and in this caravan some go grumbling and complaining all their lives because of the burden they are bearing, and some try to get their burden silly off on to another's sholders, and some bear bravely thier own burden, and march uncomplainingly on; but some—the noblest of them all—are they who stand erect, bearing their burdens, then creep up behind others burdened like themselves, and put their shoulders beneath the burden of his fellows and lift it, lightening the load. Blessed are they who know how to so bear their own burdens as joyfully to bear the burdens of others also!—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

"To live for Christ, Christians should not forget that, in view of what Christ has done for them, they are under special obligations so to live each day as to make his presence manifest in every affair of their lives—in buying and selling, in their social intercourse, in their presence in places of amusement, in the depositing of their ballots; in short, in every act of thinking, loving, receiving, or doing, they should always manifest the spirit of Christ."

WORD comes just as we are ready for the press, telling of the death of Sister Willey, wife of Brother J. H. Willey. Obituary next week.

A PERSON who makes happiness the object of his life is pretty sure to be unhappy. If he lays himself out to to be a worker with and for God, he is pretty sure to be happy, no matter how forbidding his surroundings might be.

"WHOSO is walking in a perfect way he serveth me: he dwelleth not in my house who is working deceit: whoso is speaking lies is not established before mine eyes." Young's translation of Psalm ci: 6, 7.

ONE of the Chinese ports recently thrown open to the world is that of Kai-feng-foo, where the last remnant of the ancient Jewish settlement exists. It should not now be long, says the Jewish Chronicle, before trustworthy information as to the condition of the Jews of Kai-feng-foo can be obtained. It is moreover probable that other Jewish colonies, or traces of their existance may be found in the hitherto inaccessible parts of the interior. The Kai-feng-foo colony was surely not the only one that was formed in China more than 2,000 years ago. The expedition which travelled from the Euphrates to the Yellow River must have been considerable in numbers, and its history must be very romantic.

What Patience Is.

From an unknown writer we transcribe the following truthful and sensible remarks concerning patience:—

"Of all the virtues that of patience is the most deliberately misunderstood by the masses of men. It is stamped with the ignominy of cowardice, and the so-called "patient man" has come to be regarded with the charity of contempt. He is meek, say they, and therefore to be spurned. But what a radical misapprehension of the real meaning of the term lies here! Patience according to the Bible is not a negative, but a positive quality. It has to do with suffering, but it is not passive. It is not the insipid placidity of the sheep, but the stern self-control of the strong man under great provocation.

Patience has nothing to do with goody-goodyism, excepting in so far as it is called into exercise by contact with people possessing the latter disagreeable trait. Yet there is a sentiment abroad that patience is a cloak under which cowardice and unmanly docility [illegible] to masquerade. Many people [illegible] themselves patient and are [illegible] garded as such because they la[illegible] and true God; and the words the aggressiveness to assert wh[illegible] they believe to be right. "My son," said an Arab, "Hasten to the spring and bring me a basket of water." The lad hastened, and worked long and diligently to fill the basket, but before he could return to the tent the water leaked out. At length he returned to his father and said, "Although I repeatedly filled the basket, the water would not stay." "My son," said the father, "what you say is true. The water would not stay, but see, how clean the basket is." So it will be with your heart. You may not be able to remember all the precepts you hear, but keep trying to treasure them, they will make your heart pure and in for goodness.

WE met with a paragraph during the past week which said that the infidelity of the last twenty-five years has been that which has sought to emasculate religion, by separating it from practical life, and lifting it so far above everybody's daily and familiar use, that they might as well be without it. The pretence is, that religion is too sacred to be rendered in useful common matters. Over the church doors men write, "Religion is religion;" and over the store door: "Business is business." And the church says to business, "Don't you come in here;" and the store says to religion, "Don't you come in here."

IT is said that "Yiddish" is the every-day tongue of 100,000 people; in New York City six daily newspapers are printed in it; and it is spoken regularly at three theatres, and occasionally at others. The New York Sun says the significance of these statistics lies in the fact that Yiddish (the name is corrupted from "Judish" the German for Hebrew) is the language of newly landed Jewish emigrants. Properly speaking it is not a language at all, but a paragon compounded of German and Polish, with stray words gathered from everywhere. It is spoken by the army of Hebrews that have recently came to America from eastern and south-eastern Europe.

Waiting for God's Son From Heaven.

The glorious return of the Lord Jesus was the doctrine that seemed to stand out in boldest relief among the Thessalonians. We read they had "turned from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come." Doubtless this refers to the imaginary images of divinities made as objects of worship; things without life made by the hands of men. They had turned from these senseless and false gods to serve the living and true God; and the words, "to wait for his Son from heaven," show where they looked for their blessings and reward of faithfulness. Oh, there are idols and idols, and for ages it has been so, but the Thessalonians had turned from them to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven.

But what is it to serve God? Is it merely to sing and pray and be happy? Are we not apt to take things for granted along here, and get somewhat mixed? To us it seems that these devout exercises serve ourselves more than God. If we are all the time occupied with ourselves, and continually drawing upon God's bounty, are we not serving ourselves more than God. When Jesus speaks from heaven to say, "To him that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations," does he refer to those who are mere recipients of God's bounty and supplicants of his favor? And when he says, "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give to every man as his work shall be," does he mean that he will reward people for loading up at God's storehouse two or three times a day without money or price? Will he reward men for working for themselves all the time, when he says "it is he who keeps His works unto the end" who receives the power and authority promised? Paul highly commended the Thessalonians for their works of faith and labors of love, and the vast region over which they sounded out the word of the Lord, shows how they served the living and true God.

Waiting for God's son implies a readiness and preparedness to meet and greet him. Their faith and hope were set in God and Christ, for whose appearing they so earnestly longed. Not for the spirit, or providence of God did they wait, but his Son: not his coming at the destruction of Jerusalem, nor any other mysterious manifestation, but He whom God raised from the dead, even Jesus; not his coming at death, but the coming of this same Jesus, in like manner as he was seen go into heaven: his coming in power and great glory: coming with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, when the dead in Christ shall rise first: coming to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired by all them that believe—coming to bestow power over the nations,—coming that where he is we may be also,—coming to write his dear name upon our foreheads,—coming to remove our pains, and end our sorrows, and stop our groans. Oh! he is coming to lead us to fountains of living waters, and give us to eat of lifes fair tree, and wipe away our tears and start us singing of blessing and honor and glory and power unto him who sits upon the throne, and unto the lamb forever. These are some of the reasons why the Thessalonians waited for God's Son from heaven.

What they expected at his coming? Dear readers, are you all waiting for Jesus? By that we mean, are you ready? Are you expecting him? Are you all anxiously looking for him? Need we say, no one could have a well grounded, living hope of all this blessedness and not eagerly wait his coming. Say, are you who have named his name keeping in memory the fact that he who has this hope within him purifies himself? Brothers and sisters, this purifying process must go on. There is no standing still. We must be pressing upward, onward, forward in the divine life, or else drifting backward. We must not cater to the flesh; we must not dally with the world. We must stand like a rock in defense of the truth, ever watching unto prayer, and giving need to the sure word of prophecy, and then we shall be ready to meet Jesus whether he come at midnight, or at cock-crowing or in the morning; and Blessed Jesus, come quickly will be ever on our lips Let us now sing:—

"Son of God thy people shield
Must we still thy absence mourn?
Let thy promise be fulfilled,
Thou hast said, "I will return."
Gracious Master, soon appear,
Quickly bring thy morning's light,
Then will cease the constant tear,
Hope be turned to joyful sight.

As a woman counts the days
Till her absent Lord she sees,
Longs and watches, weeps and prays,
So the church must long for thee.
Come, that we may see thee nigh;
Then the sheep will feel in peace
Hushed forever trouble's sigh,
Sin and sorrow's triumph cease."

"HE that is just in his own cause seemeth just, but his neighbor cometh and searcheth him," Prob. xviii 17. "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." Thess. v, 21.

OBITUARY.

Died June 2, 1895, at Philadelphia, of bright's disease, Adam Wood, in his 86th year. Another old soldier has fallen with the armor on, and with his face set toward the [illegible]. For more than forty-five years he has waited for the "glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." The 10th band in Philadelphia is being diminished once in one they are passing down into the silent domain of the king of terrors. Bro. Wood was a constant attendant in our assemblies when able to be present. He delighted to attend a prayer or [illegible] and cannot recall an instance on such an occasion when his voice was not heard either in supplication or testimony for the truth concerning the coming kingdom, its kindred doctrines. We shall miss him. There is a vacancy in our congregation, but God in our hearts. He rests in Mount Peace, and we trust that his slumbers will soon be broken by the joyful awakening of the saints. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first." Our brother will be there. Bro. Wood leaves an aged widow to mourn his loss for a little while, when will be a reunion. May she be kept by the power of God unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. Sermon by the writer.

C. C. RAMSAY.

Caleb Railsback, the oldest citizen of Walnut township, if not of Marshall County, Ind., died on Tuesday morning, the 9th inst., at his home in Argos. The beginning of the end occurred five months ago, when he was prostrated with heart failure, and from that time his vital powers gradually gave way. He sank into the long sleep as peacefully and as painlessly as a child falls to sleep on its mother's bosom.

Ninety years! almost a century marked the period of his existence. What eventful years they have proved. Four years after the death of Washington, and sixteen after his inauguration as President, Caleb Railsback was born—during the third administration under the constitutional period of our history, when Jefferson, the author of the "immortal declaration," was called to preside over the destinies of the rapidly developing nation. Just previous to the war of 1812 he became a citizen of Indiana Territory, and in his youth the Red Man of the forest was still a troublesome factor. He remembered and frequently related many scenes and incidents occurring in those years, in which the Indians figured conspicuously. During Jackson's canvas for the presidency he was married, and the Mexican war was on when he moved to Marshall County in 1846. He helped to clear off the forests in this vicinity, and performed his full share in making Indiana soil blossom as the rose. He was possessed of a strong constitution, and throughout his long life was troubled but little with the ills that are now so common to humanity. Owing to the natural infirmities of life he had taken but little interest in current events for the last decade of his earthy pilgrimage. He lived in patient waiting for death, which he knew could not be far off, and as the "full ripe ear" he was gathered to his fathers. He was born in Rowan County, North Carolina, July 7, 1805, and died at Argos, Indiana, July 9, 1895, aged 90 years, 2 days. His father and family moved to Indiana Territory when he was but two years of age, and settled on the White Water River, about seven miles south of the present city of Richmond, in Wayne County. He grew to manhood there, and January 28, 1828, was married to Miss Nancy Barnhill, of Marion County, Indiana, where they settled on a farm and lived until 1846, when they moved to Marshall County and bought a farm in Walnut township, about one and a half miles south of where Argos now stands. They resided in this vicinity the remainder of their lives, with the exception of one year in California. His wife died April 20, 1875, aged 64 years. Unto this union were born nine sons and two daughters, of which surviving him are seven sons, with twenty-one grandchildren and nineteen great grandchildren. He united with the Christian (Campbellite) church at Oak Union, Marion County, while young, and remained a member of that church until 1847, when, having heard of the gathering of the kingdom of God, and life and immortality only through Christ, he embraced these precious truths and united with the church of God at Pisgah, in Marshall County, and remained a member of that church until January 1, 1860, when he, with seventeen others, organized the church at Argos, where he was faithful and devout member until he died.

He always had a word for his Master and exhorted others to be faithful that they might meet in the soon coming kingdom. He was kind to his friends and was ever ready to assist those in need. Though a constant sufferer from heart trouble and old age for the past five months, he bore his afflictions patiently, mostly regretting he could not attend divine worship. In his last illness he often expressed a wish to his children that he might be laid to rest by the side of their mother to await the coming of the Lord.

The funeral services were conducted at the Church of God, Thursday afternoon, by Elder Hatch, and the remains were interred beside those of his wife in the Argos cemetery.—Argos Reflector.

Letter Drawer.

Dear Restitution:

Some one else younger than I am wrote a letter and so I thought I would. I have read Auntie Wines's articles as far as they reach at present, and I think they are very instructive. I began over and am reading them to my sisters. We love THE RESTITUTION very much. it has so many good things in it. My father was so pleased with the article of Bro. Joblin's entitled "Following Christ." I hope you will all remember me in your prayers as I am young in the service of Christ, that I may meet you in the kingdom of God. Your Sister,

MAMA ASLAKSEN.

Editor Restitution:

As we have just had a meeting I thought I would write a letter to THE RESTITUTION. Bro. Foore preached his farewell sermon at this place a week ago last Sunday. While here there were eight buried in baptism. We regret very much to have him leave us, for we feel that his place can never be filled. But if we never be permitted to meet him again on earth, my prayer is that we may meet in the soon coming kingdom where there will be no more parting, sickness or dying.

We have a Bible class every other Sunday. "May we let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works, and glorify our Father which is in heaven." I ask an interest in your prayers that I may ever be faithful and meet you all in the soon coming kingdom.

"Oh! thou, by whom we come to God,
The life, the truth, the way,
The path of prayers thyself hath trod,
Lord, teach us how to pray."

Yours in hope of eternal life.

LILLIE SEBRIGHT.

Dear Restitution:

As our subscription is past due I enclose $1.50 for the renewal for another year. I have been reading so many letters every week in THE RESTITUTION that I thought I would try to say something. It is two years ago this month since we heard the gospel of the kingdom. Brother A. Adams opened the way of truth in St. Paul, and we rejoice that we heard him. We have a great deal of preaching here now, but it seems like idle tales to us now, since we heard the truth. We meet every Sunday at two in the afternoon for Sunday school. Our Elders, Brother Bartlett and Brother Crow expound the way of truth. We have prayer and social meetings in the evening. I would like to say to all of like precious faith we are living in a [illegible] when we can look for the King in his beauty. When he shall gather his dear ones from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and we shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the Kingdom of God, and may the Word be a lamp unto our feet and a light unto our path that it may shine more and more unto the perfect day, and may the God of mercy guide and keep us in all truth so that we can say like Paul, "We have finished our course, we have fought the good fight, we have kept the faith, henceforth there is a crown of righteousness laid up for us which the righteous Judge shall give us in that day, and not to us only but unto all that love his appearing" is my prayer. Your Brother and Sister in Christ.

H. & L. ROADS.

Dear Restitution:

I am still alive and in tolerable good health for a man of my age. I am nearly eighty years old and am very nearly blind, so you will please excuse my bad writing. I will just say that I am strong in the faith, waiting till the Lord shall come, and I am trying to live so that when he does come, whether dead or alive that I may be accepted of him and an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, and I am doing all that I can to induce others to obey the gospel. We have an organization of about thirty members and we meet every first day to break bread and read God's Word, and to encourage each other to hold out faithful to the end of the race. I have been trying to get some of the brethren to take the paper, but times are very hard in this part of the country. We have been suffering with drought for over a year, till lately we have had plenty of rain, so much that what little wheat we have raised will perhaps be lost. I have never been so hard pressed for money for years. I love to read the good letters in the paper, they are very encouraging. I hope our brethren and sisters will all try to be over-comers for such surely have the promises. You can do as you like with what little I have written. I have friends in Oregon and in Kansas that would like to know that I am living, and that I am still in the faith. I am not able to do any work to earn any thing, and my income is very small. I will just say that I neither smoke nor chew, nor drink.

A. T. PURCELL.

Dear Restitution:

I am much pleased to read the letters of the brothers and sisters scattered up and down through the land. I am alone with the exception of a very few in the belief of the soon coming King, like many others of the blessed hope of a resurrection out from among the dead the Word of God is sure and steadfast, we will trust in him. I see a sister wishes an explanation of John iii. 13, also Luke ix. 30-35. I would first refer her to John xvi. 28-29; Acts ii. 32, 34-36; 1 Cor. xv. 47; Eph. iv. 9, 10; John xiii. 3. Second to Matt. xvii. 9, 12-13; xi. 12-14; iii. 17; Mark ix. 9; Acts iii. 22. These are a few references on this subject. Let us do as Paul instructed Timothy, study the Scriptures, rightly dividing the Word of truth, or as the Diaglott has it, rightly relating the Word of truth. Thank God for raising up a man by his Word like Bro. Wilson, who has given us a word for a word translation from the original Greek MSS. How I remember meeting him and his nephews, Thos. and William. He spoke to us on "What it is to be a Christian," in a hall in Chicago, Ill., on the 8th day of Oct., 1893. There was a goodly number of brothers and sisters in attendance, whom I hope to meet with all of God's people in the soon coming kingdom of God's dear Son; whom indeed, heaven must retain till the times of restitution of all things which God spoke by the mouth of his holy prophets of old. Submitted in love of the truth.

Yours truly.

A Meditation on Divine Love.

O my soul, "God is love," and thou knowest it. "The Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy." Forget not to praise Him; trust in Him at all times, and make His service thy chief joy. Who loves like him? Who but he can turn darkness into light, and make the sorrows of life material for exultant joy? Seeing the end from the beginning, and comprehending every incident of the way, and its exact bearing upon the mind, he so arranges in his infinite tenderness that every tear shall become a gem, and every sigh a song of grateful adoration. His love makes music of our moanings and transforms our weakness into holy strength. Having given Christ, the Son of his love, to deliver us from sin and death, with him "he freely gives us all things," and fits us through the discipline of grace to wield the sceptres of glory; therefore let him have the tribute of praise before we get the triumph of perfect victory. He is my song and strength, and the horn of my salvation. Blessed be God!

And "thou hast heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war." Does not humanity shrink aghast at the fierce shock of hostile armies, the agony of suffering, the terrible carnage, the wailing widows, and desolate orphans. "The nations are mad." The war fiend, in his blind fury, destroys the splendid gifts of God in the fruitful fields. He who should have filled his arm with the golden grain, matured by genial shower and sunshine, is on the field of horrors killing his fellow or lying dead among the horrible mass of victims to royal ambition. O my soul, take refuge again in the love of God, for he will most surely "send Jesus Christ," the Prince of Peace, that an end may be put to this long, long story of blood. The Millennium so long promised by preachers, and writers, and politicians, as the result of Christian civilization, science, education, and commerce, has not come, and cannot come! I have not looked for it, neither have I taught others to do so. If men are disappointed in their expectations, they have no right to talk about "the mysteries of Providence," for there is no mystery in the matter. The Millennium is coming, for the King Himself is coming, and the day of his advent cannot be far distant; but woe to the oppressors of men and the scourgers of the earth in that day! In that day "he will cut off the spirit of princes, and be terrible to the kings of the earth" (Ps. lxxvi. 12). It will be a day of darkness, gloom, and terror, and "as a destruction from the Almighty shall it come." The destroyers of the earth must be destroyed (Rev. xi. 18), that "the blessed and only Potentate" may reign in peace, righteousness, and glory, over a renovated world. "The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Love to his Son and his people and pity for bleeding nations and a groaning creation have engaged him to do this, and he will do it. "Our Father which art in heaven, thy kingdom come!" Thy way is best. Come, Lord Jesus. Amen!—Wm. Leask.

"The crown of patience cannot be received where there has been no suffering. If thou refusest to suffer, thou refusest to be crowned, thou must fight manfully and suffer patiently. Without labor none can obtain rest; and without contending there can be no conquest."

If two men men were put to sea in an open boat, in less than an hour one would be captian, and the other, crew.

POETRY.

The 148th Psalm.

"Praise! praise! praise ye the Lord!
Praise him in the heights! Praise him in the sun!
Praise him, men of Israel! Praise ye the Lord!
For he exalteth high his people,
And reigneth evermore!

Praise him, all ye angels! Praise him, all ye hosts!
Praise him, sun and moon, and all ye stars of light!
Praise him, fire and hail! Praise him, snow and vapour!
For he joineth the earth in righteousness,
And reigneth evermore!

Praise! praise! praise ye the Lord!
Praise him, winged fowl, and herds, cattle, and all beasts!
Praise him, king and people, princes, priests and judges!
Praise him, youths and maidens, old men and young children!

Praise the name, let them praise the name,
Praise the name of the Lord God of hosts!
For his name alone is excellent,
His glory above the heavens:
Israel is his first-born, a people well beloved,
Praise! let Israel therefore praise him!
Praise him evermore,
Evermore ever, evermore!"

TRUE REPENTANCE.

"How pleasant are these quiet beauties of nature after the heat and turmoil of the city! Cool breezes play about our faces refreshing us like the promises of God do the faint and weary spirit. I always feel, Ella, as though closer to God, when surrounded by His sylvan handiwork."

"So do I, brother; especially when I have not visited them for some time. How lonely I have felt whilst you have been away."

"I too have often longed for my dear sister. Yet my return does not seem to bring the old joy back to your countenance. Why?"

"Dear Alfred, do not ask me."

"Dear sister, what fault have I committed which should deprive me of the pleasure of sharing your griefs?"

"None, none, Alfred. I am unhappy, but have no wish to conceal anything from you. My hesitation arose from other causes."

"Let me try if I cannot remove your troubles as I used to do. But first, let us take a seat in our old leafy retreat. Now we can talk at ease. These causes I suppose are religious ones."

"They are; but how could you tell?"

"Never mind reasoning that out; perhaps it was from sympathy. But you have not yet told me what they are."

"I have been some months unhappy about the state of my soul. But let me tell you all the circumstances, and then you will understand me; and you must help me too, dear Alfred, for I see from the tone of your letters that you have found religion and peace. About three months since we had Revival Services at our church, during which Mr. Phelan preached some powerful sermons. Oh brother! had you heard him discourse so awfully about the terrors of hell and the anguish of the damned, and then heard him suddenly change and contrast the glory of heaven and the ecstasy of the saints, you would not wonder that these things affect me as they do. I have often laid awake all night weeping, or if I have fallen asleep I awoke in horror from dreams in which I saw hell as he described it. I am surprised at myself when I look back and think of it, but I was so excited that I went up to the penitent bench. You wonder how I so overcame my timidity as to do such a public thing; but I felt almost beside myself. I neither saw nor heard anything but my conscience and my fears. I went up, and asking, 'What shall I do to be saved?' the leader answered, 'Believe!—believe on the Lord Jesus Christ.' But although I have prayed for hours, and attended the class meetings, and have read all the 'Persuasives' and 'Calls' and 'Guides' I could meet with, I seem unable to get rest for my soul. It has been explained to me how that Christ died in my stead, delivering my soul from the everlasting torments of hell, and that all I have to do is to believe this. I have tried, but yet I am unhappy. Others have found peace, and every week tell the blessedness they feel, whilst I am downcast and oppressed. Oh! Alfred, I fear that I may be one of those given up of the spirit, my heart appears so hard. I have prayed often, often, that I might have peace; but I am as distressed as ever, after the first emotions have subsided. And now can you wonder that I am no longer merry?"

"No, Ella, I do not wonder, because it is but the confirmation of my suspicions. I have been as you are, and from similar causes, and like you I was diffident about telling my troubles. You say you were impressed at some Revival Services; the true state of the matter was that your feelings were excited by the magnetic influence which always pervades a crowd whose spirits are wrought upon by oratory. I do not profess to understand the philosophy of it, but do not think me ungenerous because I doubt that your fellow 'penitents' were 'saved through believing' by such means. Their more immediate ease of mind may be the result of their ignorance; your reason being, by cultivation, of a higher order to most of the assembly, was not convinced by fallacy, and lulled into ease by the mesmeric process of oratory."

"I think you are wrong, Alfred, for cousin Edith is one who was brought in at the time; and her reason I do not think to be an inferior one."

"I am sorry to hear that she was one. I certainly do not class her among the ignorant; but that does not alter my position, for, to use an idiomatic phrase, in some persons the heart rules the head, and in others, the head the heart. But the revulsion, when Edith's excited feelings have subsided to zero, as they will, and when the examination is undertaken by the reason, will be pitiable. I shall want you to support her then, with a better faith than that your preacher presented to her and you."

"But, brother, what more can I have?"

"What was it you had? What foundation did he lay on which you could build your trust? and what hopes and objects did he set before you on which you could lay hold with faith? For, 'faith is the substance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen.'"

"Why, what other could he give than that Jesus died to procure our salvation, and to avert the curse from us by paying the penalty of God's broken law and propitiating His favour? and what better inducements could he hold forth than escaping the torments of hell, and attaining the happiness of heaven?"

"Ah! Ella, this is not an answer to what I asked, though it is as much as I expected. But these are neither the means of redemption, nor the faith or hope of the scriptures. Did he tell you anything about the kingdom of Christ on the earth,—the resurrection and reign of the saints with their Lord here? Did he preach anything of a change of mind, to precede immersion into the name of Christ? anything of a belief in the promises made to the fathers?"

"I do not understand you, Alfred. What have these things to do with attaining peace of mind and religion? He said nothing about any of these."

"Dear Ella, a knowledge of, and belief in these are all-important requirements ere you can become a child of God 'chosen to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth.'"

"I did not know that anything more was needful than repentance and believing in the Lord Jesus Christ."

"Nor is there, dear sister, but do you know what is meant by these? What is repentance?"

"Oh Alfred, how can you ask such a question? What can it mean but being sorry for our sins."

"What then does Paul mean when he says, 'I rejoice that ye sorrowed to repentance * * * for godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of?' Just answer me the question as though it were one of our old exercises in grammar."

"Well, dear brother, I never thought of there being such sentences, but I see the passage is here. Certainly it is illogical to suppose cause and effect are the same. Will you please tell me where the error is?"

"Not in the passage, sister, but in your mistaught idea. The Bible doctrine of repentance is a change of mind: in the case of a sinner, that he forsakes his sins and rebellion, and becomes on the side of God,—thinks with God in fact. But then the question arises, what is that which is to cause the change of his conduct? and what the thought of God in which he is to accord."

"I cannot tell, unless it be that Jesus died to save sinners."

"Again, dear Ella, you use a comprehensive expression of which you do not seem to know the meaning. Save them from what? Save them -what to? What is salvation? But we will let this wait a little. You have seen your error in the matter of repentance, can you tell me what you mean by believing on the Lord Jesus Christ."

"Oh yes! I have just told: it is that Jesus came into the world to die in my stead, that I, having my sins washed away, may attain to holiness."

"My poor Ella, I must bring you to the point as I did before. What does John mean by 'whoso believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God.'"

"I confess I cannot say, he arranges it so differently from what I have always understood. I had never thought of these being anything in particular but names. What is the meaning?"

"I wish that I was better able to show you the way of salvation. But, like you, I was till lately ignorant of the Scripture teaching concerning the CHRIST. However if you turn to John i. 40, you will see that this name had a definite meaning in the Apostolic days. Andrew's glad cry to his brother Peter was:—

'We have found the MESSIAS, (which is, being interpreted, the CHRIST.)"

This shows that Christ is the Greek representative of the Hebrew Messiah, and both mean in English, the Anointed. The Jewish Messiah was that Prince or Son of David whom the expected to set up their everlasting kingdom. Look now at Matt. ii. 2, 4-6. Herod understood by 'King of the Jews' the same as 'the Christ.' And the Scribes and call him 'Governor.' Turn now to Luke i. 32, 33, where the angel, after telling Mary she should have a son, testifies of him:

'He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give to him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.'

The same idea was in the angel's message to the shepherds,—'a Saviour which is Christ the Lord.' And Simeon, who waited for 'the Lord's Christ,' so recognized Jesus. (Luke ii 11, 27-32.) It was the same idea of Christship which prompted the inscription on the cross, (Matt. xxvii, 11, 22, 37.) Now read carefully with me, Acts ii. where you will see the same conception of the Christ opens the Apostolic preachings. That it continued unaltered you may notice by reading Acts xvii. 3, 7. Preaching 'the Christ' was the same as preaching another 'King.' And by Acts xxvi. 22, 23, we have a clear understanding of what Paul meant when he gloried in the Cross of the Christ, or preached 'Christ and him crucified':

'Having therefor obtained help of God, I continue to this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come: that Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first who should rise from the dead, and should shew light unto the people (of Israel,) and to the Gentiles.'

"Thank you, Alfred, you are giving me something to look into. But I don't see what bearing this has on our salvation."

"I will try to shew you, my dear sister. When Jesus was on earth he went about preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom; and saying 'Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.' The Jews, his hearers, well knew what this kingdom was, concerning which he proclaimed the glad tidings of its nearness, for it was the hope to which the twelve tribes served. This hope was founded upon the Covenant of Promise made by God to Abraham, under which he engages to bless all the families of the earth by giving to Abraham the land of Canaan and the adjoining countries for a possession for the ages—a numerous seed and a glorious kingdom under his descendant, the ONE SEED, which is Christ. As more fully witnessed by the prophets, this Covenant was one of Israel's universal dominion under the righteous government of the Messiah. It was this kingdom which the Jews were then expecting, and to which Jesus laid claim. But the people, dazzled by the predicted glory of the reign and exaltation of the King, overlooked the previous humiliation to which both Monarch and Administrators should be subjected; nor did they understand its righteous and holy character. And so, because Jesus claimed that he, the despised Nazarene, was the Heir to this dominion, they rejected him: because that none but the righteous and the sanctified could have entrance into it, their sinful minds opposed its establishment. The faith and hope of Christ's gospel are as simple as they are grand, all who will can be joint heirs with him of this everlasting kingdom. The qualifications are that they shall be found worthy. The way to attain to the character qualifying for this rule Jesus taught to be faith in the message he brought reformation, or forsaking the deeds of sin and doing the will of God having his name named upon them in the waters of immersion living holy in His sight. To those who were thus obedient he promised that they should be resurrected, and should live for the ages as kings and priests with him in this kingdom upon earth. But to effect this salvation of his followers from sin and death, two things were needful: that Christ should die, for as men are under the curse of death, their Saviour must be able to redeem them from the power of death; and to be resurrected, that they might have both the earnest and the means of life. So he became obedient to death, even the death of the cross, rather than that our salvation should be imperilled. This is the faith which the Word of God sets forth for salvation, not the substitutionary punishment of Jesus in our stead."

"Alfred? Alfred?"

"It is so, Ella. Christ died to reconcile, or atone us to God, breaking down the barrier of sin, and drawing us, by the exhibition of his love, to lay down our weapons of rebellion: not to reconcile the the Father to us, for it is He who through Christ is reconciling the world to Himself, not imputing their trespasses to them, so that there was no need for Christ to satisfy (un-)offended justice. No, blessed be His holy name! 'if we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins.' This is all Gods justice requires for the rebellion against himself; the penalty of sin is paid by it causing death."

"But if all the penalty of sin is paid by the death of the body, will the soul escape punishment?"

"My dear sister, the Bible is as opposed to the doctrine of Immortal-Soulism as it is to Expiation. It teaches man's total unconsciousness in the grave; therefore there can be no punishment required for such a nonentity as a never-dying soul, no flaming fire of hell for disembodied spirits; nor on the other hand any heaven or 'kingdom beyond the skies' for these ghosts. Nay, do not interrupt, you shall say all you wish shortly, but please allow me to finish, dear sister. It is this doctrine which has eaten out the heart of the primitive faith like a canker. By making man think he has immortality he does not seek for it in the only way, and at the time revealed; and by expecting an immediate reward in ethereal regions he feels no need for resurrection to the Kingdom of God on the earth."

"But father and mother did not think so, Alfred."

"Happily their lives were superior to their faith, and doubtless our God will so account it. However that does not excuse us from ascertaining and obeying what the Bible teaches as saving faith. So, my dear sister, let me ask you to weigh over what I have said, with your Bible in your hand, and I am sure that you will arrive at the truth. You will find that the Kingdom of God upon earth was the hope of the fathers and elders, and the saints of all ages. Paul affirms that the gospel was preached to Abraham in the words, 'in thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed.' This contains nothing of the expiatory sacrifice of Christ, usually proclaimed as the gospel whereby we are saved. This foundation of Abraham's faith being established, he declares that 'if we are Christ's (by immersion) then are we Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the Promise.' Thus the Apostle affirms the predicate that there is no future inheritance except through Abraham, he being 'the Heir of the World.' But it draws late now, and we had better return: we will resume the subject, if you wish, some other time. Meanwhile let the chapters I have marked on this note have your careful perusal."

"Thank you, dear brother, they shall: but I do not see what the question of faith has to do with the peace of mind?"

"It has this. 'Being justified by faith we have peace with God.' So long as your faith is based on men's traditions can you expect to have 'the peace from God which passeth understanding.' 'The God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing,' is my prayer in your behalf. Here is the paper containing the pencilled passages. Good night, Ella."

Please read carefully through the following Scriptures:

Gal. iii. iv. 1-7; Rom. iv; Heb. xi. xii. in connection with Gen. xii. i-3; xiii. 14-18; xv. xvii. xxii. shewing the FAITH.

Heb. vi. 11-20; ix. 11-17; Acts xxvi. 1 Cor. xv. 2 Cor. iv. 13 to 11; John xiv. 1-4, 18-21; xvii. as to the HOPE.

Psalms ii; xlvi; xlvii; xlviii; lxxii; cx; cxiv. Isaiah xi. xlix; li. to lv; lx. to lxii; xv 17-25; Dan. vii. 9-14, 22, 27; Rev. vii; xx. Some things of the Kingdom.

Rom. iii. 19-26; v; vi; viii; Eph. i; Acts ii; x; 1 Pet. i. Various aspects of the way of Salvation.

OUR CHILDREN.

Teacher and Taught.

The frost-bound earth of winter
Crisp 'neath my footsteps rung;
From withered boughs, full lonely,
A few brown leaflets hung.

In sooth the gnarled old branches
That once so proudly spread,
A tender little maiden
Broke a milk-white loaf of bread.

"What are you doing, Annie?"
I cried, with hasty sign:
And her violet eyes she lifted
In mute surprise to mine.

Lightly her golden ringlets
She shook back from her head;
A smile her rose-lips parted—
"I'm helping God," she said.

"You're helping God! Why, Annie,
What sort of help is this?
God needs no help of any
Or every child of his."

"Why? Don't you 'member," cried she,
In quick, astonished way,
"What you told all the people,
Last Sunday, yesterday,

When you stood in the pulpit,
And from the great Book read,
And turned the broad leaves over,
And wide the covers spread?

You read God hears the ravens,
And feeds them when they cry;
He doesn't make birds worry,
But lets them sing and fly.

And watches little sparrows,
If they fall upon the soil;
He feels so many—so many—
That I'm just helping God."

Then her voice rang out a summons,
Clear, and shrill, and sweet,
And she strewed the crumbs by handfuls
On the ground about her feet.

Down from the spreading branches
A hundred rushing wings
Winnow the air with music,
As her call to the banquet rings.

Up to the clear blue ether
Their joyful notes arise,
While the sweet child smiles and listens,
Like a babe of Paradise.

Just helping God! I, shame-faced,
Murmured, I thank Thee, Lord;
From the mouths of babes and sucklings
The wise are taught Thy Word.

The love of the heart is living:
The gift of the heart is love.
Who loves and gives with a child's sweet faith
Is helping the Father above.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 26.

NOTHING LEFT BEHIND.

Did you notice that when the Israelites started on their journey, they left nothing behind? The old Egyptian world could hold back from God not a thing that was theirs. Their wives, their little ones, their flocks, their herds, their silver, their gold, must all go with them in their journey to the promised land. And we, when we start for the kingdom, must like them, dedicate all that we possess to the Lord. Feet and hands and voice must be consecrated to Jesus.

"Take my silver and my gold.
Not a mite will I withhold."

will be our song and prayer, when the gospel has taken hold of us and made us over into new men and new women in the Lord.

Were the Israelites baptized? Yes, in the cloud and in the sea. It was like being in a great grave. And that is what it proved to the Egyptians. What made the difference? Why did the one people come up out of that gloomy cavern of death, and the other people perish?

Because pardon comes through obedience, and life beyond the grave is the outcome of pardon.

"The wages of sin is death." Pharaoh and his hosts held fast to their sins. They would not give them up. God gave them every possible chance to repent and escape. He takes no pleasure in destroying sinners, but "sin and the sinner cannot both live." If sin is put to death, then He spares the person; if it is not made to die, then the sinner's life must pay the forfeit. It is a picture for us all, that grave in the Red Sea. Let us look at it long and earnestly and profit by the lessons, God intends to convey to our hearts thereby.

You remember the request of Joseph? That when God visited them as he surely would, they must carry his bones up out of Egypt? Gen. l. 24, 25, 26. It was just before his death. He was 110 years old, and had been in Egypt 93 years. It was more than 130 years after he died, that the Israelites went out of the land of bondage. Yet "by faith, he gave commandment concerning his bones." Heb. xi:22. He believed God and wanted to be buried in the dear land of promise where he had been born. "And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him." Ex. xiii:19. Joseph had been embalmed and placed in a coffin. If we could find his grave to-day, the mummied form would still be there and the features of the noble face could be seen. He was buried in Shechem. Joshua xxiv. 32; Gen. xxxiii. 19. Of all who died in Egypt of the Hebrews, only Jacob and Joseph are buried in the Holy land.

Was any thing else carried out of Egypt? What did Jacob mean when he said in blessing Joseph, "From thence is the Shepherd, the stone of Israel?" We must go back to lesson 24. We found in that lesson that the birthright that had been Isaac's, Jacob's and Joseph's, had passed to the nation.

But to what part of the nation? Who among the tribes is to be God's first born? Who of them does he call his son? Who is to stand as a type of the coming Shepherd or Savior?

Does he not say Israel is my son, even my first born? Do you remember to whom Jacob gave the name of Israel? Was it not to the sons of Joseph? And did he not confer the name in a peculiar manner upon Ephraim, the younger son? "From thence"—from Joseph—is to come the shepherd nation. Just as Joseph has been the savior of his people, so are his tribes to be the saviors of men. Joseph, as an individual, has represented Jesus; he is to do the same thing as a nation.

We are studying the Bible closely now; we have never studied it so closely before. We are doing this because we want to understand just what the blessed gospel is, that is to work such wonders in the world.

Well, we understand this much, that the nation that is to be shepherd, or gatherer of all other nations, just as a shepherd does his sheep, is to come from Joseph. Israel is to be the Christ nation, or the Christ workers of the world.

A hint, and more than a hint of their after division from Judah, is given here. There are to be two nations—one is to hold fast to the cornucopia of blessings that is to be shaken over all lands; the other is to guard for a time the crown, the royal seed, and the title deeds to Canaan.

Israel and Judah, though seeming to be one nation, until the time that the ten tribes separate themselves from the house of David, and set up a kingdom for themselves, are kept always apart in the mind and purpose of God. 2 Chron. x:16, 19.

But something else is to come out of Joseph—or, is it the same thing by another name? "From thence is to come the shepherd, the stone of Israel,"—what is this stone of Israel that comes from Joseph? Is it not the same shepherd nation that is to act as the agent of God in christianizing the world, and in carrying the gospel of the kingdom as a witness to all nations till the end shall come? It must be Christ is not to come of the seed of Joseph. So the shepherd, the stone of Israel, cannot be Christ. We read about a stone kingdom in Daniel, it is to be the fifth universal monarchy of the world; Ephraim—Israel must be the beginning of this kingdom.

But was there a real stone carried out of Egypt? I think there was. It was Jacob's Pillar, that he anointed at Bethel or Luz. We will look up the story of the stone in our next lesson.

AUNTIE WINCH.

The Sacred Oracles.

The sun is a great way off; it is so far distant as to be of little particular interest to most of us, a round ball far yonder in space—some millions of miles—looking not larger than a brazen shield or a dinner plate; nor is it a perfect orb. The maculæ can be seen upon it with an unaided eye. And it resists an intrusive gaze What care we then, for the sun? But quench it, and lo, the light is gone out of the diamond, the sparkle from the brook, and beauty from the whole earth; the grass has withered, the birds have ceased their singing, and themselves have faded out. Our world would still be here, or somewhere, rolling round an eccentric orb in silence utter darkness, and eternal solitude, an uninhabited and voiceless ruin.

The Bible is our noonday sun. Its glories are far from the multitude who will not receive it. There are mysteries, vast and incomprehensible here; but burn the book, or, what is the same, let the world lose its confidence in it, and all that makes life worth living goes from us. Our civil and ecclesiastical freedom, the sanctions of home and social life, hope, triumphant faith, all are gone. A sunless world is no more desolate than a Bibleless world would be.

But the Bible is in no danger; it has come to stay; to glorify life. The burning of the Scriptures is an old story. All along the path of history are bonfires of the sacred book, and still it lives. Voltaire said he pass through the forest of the Scriptures and girdle all its trees, so that in a hundred years Christianity would be only a vanishing memory. The hundred years have expired; Voltaire has gone and "none so poor to do him reverence;" but Christianity is still here, and the trees of the Lord are full of sap. The brazier of Jehoiakim is a golden altar, the fumes of which, like frankincense, have gone through all the earth. The wrath of hostile criticism in seeking to destoy the life of the Scriptures has but crushed its spices, sending forth their fragrance to the skies.

The truth is indestructible. All flesh is grass, and the glory of man as a flower of the field that withereth. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the word of our God shall stand forever.—Rev. D. J. Burrel, D. D.

"We, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." "He that overcometh shall inherit all things." "Wherefore seeing that you look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless."

With God there is mystery, but it is the mystery of light. Without God there is a mystery, but it is the mystery of darkness.

Responsibility is our ability to respond.

QUESTIONS.

Could you or some of the brethren give an exposition on the following questions:—

1. Why was Isaac denied the privilege of selecting his wife: and Jacob permitted to select his?

In Gen. xxiv. 1-9, Abraham caused his eldest servant to take an oath, that he (the servant) would not take a wife unto his son Isaac of the daughters of the Canaanites, but go to his (Abraham) father's house, of his Brother Nahor's family. Gen. xxii. 20-24. Accordingly Rebekah was selected, a daughter of Bethuel, son of Nahor. "And the servant said unto him. Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me into this land. (Canaan). Must I needs bring thy son again into the land from whence thou camest?" xxii. 5. And "Abraham said unto him, (the servant) Beware that thou bring not my son thither again." Gen. Hagar. Jacob was sent to the house of Bethuel, his brother's father to take a wife. (Gen. xxviii. 2) of the family of Laban, his mother's brother.

2. In Gen. xxix. 10-15, Jacob was nephew to Laban, in what way was he brother? Was it as family unit? See Abraham and Lot. Gen. xiii. 8-11. xiv. 14. 16. as of a royal house.

We humbly and faithfully submit this to your perusal, desirous if any good can be realized by an expose, the readers of our esteemed paper may be benefitted thereby. My father-in-law, Wm. M. Buzzell, lives with us, and is a subscriber to THE RESTITUTION. Therefore, we are cheered by its weekly visits, and precious truths, which brighten our daily walk, whilst waiting for the return of our Elder Brother Christ Jesus. Your Brother in the one faith.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

Previously published $309.27

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have or can means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Works;" one of 8-page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va. not to this office.

Conference Notice.

The Iowa State Conference of the Church of God will be held in Marshalltown, beginning Thursday evening August 15th, and lasting over till Sunday evening the 25th, 1895. Our reasons for place—the most central, and most convenient in the State for railroad for all brethren. At the crossing of the Chicago & North-Western, Iowa Central, and the Great Western or Diagonal Road. The location in the city is on North Third Street opposite the Green House. The street car line starts out just east of the depot and for a nickel will carry you to the ground. Come prepared to tent and to live. Will have tents on the ground, but all who have tents bring them.

As to time, it will be of more leisure than in June, and therefore secure a better attendance. Also crops will then be sufficiently matured to tell of a certainty what can be done for Evangelistic Work. A regular program will be given out for work. Begin now to arrange to attend the meetings. Leave your hobbies at home and come prepared for a meeting of straight-forward gospel and Bible work. We shall try to make this one of the most interesting meetings we have ever held in Iowa. We expect to be able to secure reduced rates upon all of the railroads in the state for this occasion.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Niagara Falls Excursion, Thursday, August 8, 1895, via the Lake Erie and Western R.R.

On Thursday, August 8, 1895, the Lake Erie & Western R. R. will run their popular excursion to Cleveland, Chautauqua Lake, Buffalo and Niagara Falls at following very low rates, viz:

Peoria	$7.50
Bloomington	7.00
LaFayette	6.00
Michigan City	6.00
Indianapolis	5.00
Tipton	5.00
Lima	4.00
Ft Wayne	5.00
Muncie	5.00
Connersville	5.00
Rushville	5.00
New Castle	5.00
Cambridge City	5.00
Fremont	4.00
Sandusky	4.00

With corresponding reductions from intermediate points.

In addition to the above, the purchasers of these tickets will be given privilege of special excursion side trip tickets to Lewiston-on-the-Lake, including a steamboat ride on Lake Ontario, for 25 cents. To Toronto and return by lake from Lewiston $1.00; to Thousand Island $5.00. Tickets for the above side trips can be had when purchasing Niagara Falls ticket, or at any time on train.

Besides the above privileges with that of spending Sunday at the Falls, we will furnish all those who desire a side trip from Brockton Junction to Chautauqua Lake and return free of charge.

Tickets of admission to places of special interest at or near Niagara Falls, but outside the reservation, including toll over the great International Bridge to the Canadian side, elevators to the water's edge at Whirlpool Rapids on the Canadian side, will be offered on train at a reduction from prices charged after reaching the Falls.

Do not miss this opportunity to spend Sunday at Niagara Falls. The excursion train will arrive at Niagara Falls 7.00 A. M. Friday, August 9, 1895, and will leave the Falls returning Sunday morning, August 11, at 6 o'clock, stopping at Cleveland Sunday afternoon, giving an opportunity to visit the magnificent monument of the late President Garfield, and many other interesting points.

Tickets will be good, however, to return on regular trains leaving the Falls Saturday, August 10, for those not desiring to remain over. Tickets will also be good returning on all regular trains up to and including Tuesday, August 13, 1895. Secure your tickets, also chair and sleeping car accommodations, early. Those desiring can secure accommodation in these cars while at the Falls. For further information call on any agent Lake Erie & Western R. R., or address C. F. Daly, Gen. Pass. Agent, Indianapolis, Ind.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Enclose a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road for an elaborately illustrated Art Souvenir entitled "Summer Outings."—aug 31.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Fayetteville, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication of receipts of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the service of an administrator.

Rates, Dates, Conditions over Pennsylvania Lines During Season of 1895.

Liberal concessions in fare over the Pennsylvania Lines have been granted for numerous events to take place this summer in various parts of the United States. In addition to local excursions, tickets at reduced rates will be sold over these lines as given in the following paragraphs. Excursion tickets may be obtained at ticket offices on the Pennsylvania System and will also be sold over this route by connecting railways. Some of the points to which tickets will be sold and dates of sale are as follows:

To Baltimore, July 16th and 17th, good returning until August 5th, inclusive, account the Convention of Baptist Young People's Union of America.

To Boston, August 19th to 25th, inclusive, account Triennial Conclave Knights Templar. Return limit extended to Oct 3d by special arrangement.

To Louisville Ky., in September for National Encampment, G. A. R. One cent per mile. Reasonable return limit.

The reduced rates over the Pennsylvania Lines will not be restricted to members of the organizations mentioned, but may be taken advantage of by the public generally. Any Pennsylvania Line Ticket or Passenger Agent will furnish desired information concerning rates, time of trains, and other details, to all applicants, or the same may be obtained by addressing J. E. Haines, Ticket Agent, Plymouth or F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Penna.

Summer Tourist Rates.

The North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western R'y) is now selling excursion tickets at reduced rates to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Ashland, Bayfield, Marquette, Deadwood, Dakota, Hot Springs, Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou, Salt Lake City, and the lake and mountain resorts of the west and northwest. For rates and full information apply to agents of connecting lines. Illustrated pamphlets, giving full particulars, will be mailed free upon application to W. B. Kniskern, G. P. & T. A., Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago, Ill.

To All Concerned.

We desire to call your attention to the additional train service, recently inaugurated by the Vandalia Line, between Logansport and St. Joseph, Mich. Trains run daily affording excursionists a full day for a summer outing. The bathing at both lake Maxenkuckee and St. Joseph are exceptionally fine, while the boating facilities are excellent. Sunday excursion tickets at half fare. Call upon Vandalia Line agent for particulars or address E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.—July 31.

The Nickel Plate Road has compiled a list of country homes along the South Shore of Lake Erie, willing to accommodate summer boarders, and a copy will be mailed to any address by enclosing a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road or to B. F. Horner, Gen'l Passenger Agent.—Aug. 31

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

Poetry.

Take the Tiny Stones.

Master, to do great work for thee, my hand
Is far too weak! How gained what men call skill
Some little chips to cut with one minute cutting, or grave, or polish, others stand
Before their quarried marble fair and grand.
Shall I make a life-work of the great design
Which their best tools, of many skilled combine
To build next temples, gloriously planned,
Yet take the tiny clue which I have wrought,
Just one by one, as they were given by thee,
Not knowing what connect in thy wise thought;
So each stone by thy master-hand of grace
Becau the mosaic as than will for me,
And in thy temple pavement give it place.

Who Is An Overcomer?

We read: "He that overcometh and he that keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give authority over the nations."

All who desire in company with Christ, to exercise "authority over the nations," must first learn to control or govern him or herself now. People who cannot control themselves, are not fit to exercise authority over others. On this account all human government, both monarchal and republican, is a complete failure. People have imagined that the desired result could be attained by this or that form of government. But the fact is, that the most perfect form that men can devise will prove a failure as long as those who are placed at the head are imperfect, and unable to govern themselves.

When God sets up his kingdom upon the ruins of all earthly empire, he will place in authority only those who have previously been tried, and overcome themselves. People who cannot rule themselves will never be fit to rule others, either now or hereafter!

Are we not told that greater is he that ruleth his own spirit, than he that taketh a city? It is a far greater conquest to overcome self, than to overcome an enemy by force of arms.

What are we to understand by the phrase: "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end?" We find the word "overcometh" connected with the phrase: "and keepeth my works," by the conjunction "and." Do they both express the same thought? if so, would it not seem like a useless redundancy of words? The phrase: "and keepeth my works," may be the same as he that keepeth my commandments, and by that means keeps, or does the works suggested by the commandments.

An overcomer is one who obtains the mastery over that with which he contends. The words: and "keepeth my works," may relate to the overcoming of the sinful inclinations of the flesh. This being the case, may not the word, "overcometh," in this text relate to the overcoming of error by the word of truth?

The works of faith must first be preceded by the "word of faith which we preach." The life of a Christian is a contention all the way through, contending for the faith, and contending with the sinful inclinations of self, and he or she who would contend successfully must carry on the warfare in the proper way.

See 2 Tim. ii. "The things which thou hast heard from me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also. Suffer hardship with me, as a good soldier of Christ Jesus. No soldier on service entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who enrolled him as a soldier. And if also a man contend in the games, he is not crowned, except he have contended lawfully."

A soldier in the service of his country is not permitted to entangle himself with affairs apart from his military service. So a "good soldier of Christ Jesus" cannot "entangle himself with the affairs of this life." While he is in the world and has to do with the world in making a living, yet he must not be entangled in worldly matters. What have we to do with the political affairs of the Gentiles? Have we not allied ourselves with the commonwealth or civil polity of Israel? What have we to do then with those who are "alienated from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of the promise, having no hope and without God in the world?" What have we to do then, in uniting with them in helping to bolster up the rotten political affairs of corrupt Gentiles? We have all the work that we can attend to in the army of the lord, and if we entangle ourselves with the affairs of this life, our work as a "good soldier of Christ Jesus" will be neglected in proportion as we divide our service. If we would be successful overcomers, we must, as far as possible, separate ourselves from the impure and vile.

There is a valuable thought contained in the text: "And if a man contend in the games, he is not crowned, except he have contended lawfully." This is meant to apply to those who are striving for the crown of glory which faileth not away. No one can obtain that except he contend "lawfully." Aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise we are told in the Sacred Book have "no hope, and without God in the world." There are any amount of people who profess to be seeking salvation, who know but little, and care less about these "covenants of promise," consequently their striving is not 'awful. "He is not crowned except to have contended lawfully." Another feature in lawful contention is found in Gal. iii. "For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ." "And if ye are Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, heirs according to the promise." Having done this we have enlisted for the prize, and rules for lawful contention require us to acquire a mastery over the sinful inclinations of the flesh, and this warfare will have to be kept up constantly until the warfare is accomplished, and we come off conquerors through him that loved us.

The True Worshiper.

There are formel worshipers, insincere worshipers, and irreverent worshipers, as well as humble, devout, true worshipers. "They come unto thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them; for for with their mouth they show much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness."

The true worshiper is a joyful worshiper. "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." Always, unless providentially hindered, the true worshiper is in his accustomed place of worship promptly and regularly When one has the opportunity of attending a meeting at which he hopes for much enjoyment and profit, and especially where he expects to actively participate in the proceedings, he will try to be present at the beginning of the exercises. So the Christian worshiper, with joyful anticipation, yields a prompt and cheerfull response to the proposal, "Let us go into the house of the Lord:" "I made haste, and delayed not to keep thy commandments." The true worshiper is deeply interested in the services of the sanctuary. They may not be so well conducted as they should be. The singing may be faulty, the prayers may be tedious, the sermon unembellished, and yet a true, sincere worshiper in God's house, on God's holy day in the place where he delights to dwelt, where his people meet him, where he blesses them, and where, it may be, they have often enjoyed a very delightful foretaste of heavenly service must experience emotions akin to those of Peter on the Mount of Transfiguration, when in bewilderment and joy, he exclaimed, "It is good for us to be here."

The true worhiper is always reverent in the house of God. He feels that he is in the presence of the Holy One, who is "of purer eyes than to behold evil, and cannot look on iniquity." Conscious of his own unworthiness and sinfulness, "I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to Thee, my God." His every act in the solemn services is performed with deep humility. He has a realizing sense of his nearness to "the great and dreadful God." He knows that God is everywhere, and yet that he is specially and peculiarly present in his holy temple, where he has recordered his name, and where he has promised to come to his people and bless them. "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."

The true worshiper desires to go to the house of God with mind and heart prepared for the solemn services. His thoughts are not upon the things of the world. His mind is not occupied with the news of the day. He will not even glance at the "Sunday" newspaper. He prefers to be ignorent, for the time at least, of the result of the last foot-ball game and horse race. He remembers the exhortation: "Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God, and be more ready to hear than to give the sacrifice of fools." The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise." What an important difference is there between these two sacrifices? The one is offered by the fool—the Pharisees, the formalists, and hypocrites; the other by "true worshipers, who worship the Father in spirit and in truth."

The true worshiper is helpful to other worshipers. He helps the preacher. Every preacher knows that he is greatly helped every Sabbath, not only by the prayers of his people, but by his faithful attentive and intelligent hearers. He also knows that he has often been greatly disturbed and grieved by the light and irreverent deportment of a careless hearer. If people knew how often such hearers are responsible for a minister's embarrassment, or pulpit failures, he would recieve more sympathy, and often escape much unfavorable criticism. Every sincere worshiper, by his sober deportment, and his devout and intelligent interest in the public service of God's house, is a help to all worshipers, and especially to the young.—The United Presbyterian.

Bear Reproach for Christ.

The Lord Jesus is as thoroughly outside the gate now as he was when he suffered there eighteen centuries ago. What was it that put him outside then? The religious world of that day; and the religious world of that day is; in spirit and principle, the religious world of the present moment. The world is the world still. There is nothing new under the sun."

Christ and the world are not one. The world has covered itself with the cloak of Christianity: but it is only in order that its hatred to Christ may work itself up into more deadly forms underneath. Let us not deciove ourselves. If we walk with a rejected Christ we must be a rejected people. If our Master suffered without the gate, we must not expect to reign within the gate. If we walk in his footsteps whither will they lead us? Surely not to the high places of this Godless, Christless world.

"If path enclosed by earthly smiles Led only to the cross"

He is a despised Christ, a rejected Christ, a Christ outside the camp. Oh, then, dear Christian reader, let us go forth to him, bearing his reproach. Let us not busk in the sunshine of this world's favor, seeing it crucified, and still hates with an unmitigated hatred, the Beloved One to whom we owe our present and eternal all, and who loves us with a love which many waters cannot quench. Let us not, directly nor indirectly, ascribe that thing which calls itself by His sacred name, but, in reality, hates his person, hates his ways, hates his truth, hates the bare mention of his advent. Let us be faithful to an absent Lord, Let us live for him who died for us. While our consciencies repose in his blood, let our heart's affections entwine themselves around his person; so that our separation from this present evil world may not be a matter of cold principle, but an affectionate separation, because the object of our affections is not here. May the Lord deliver us from the influence concentrated, prudential selfishness, so common at the present time, which would not be without religiousness, but is the enemy of the cross of Christ.

Take Time To Pray.

"I have extra work to do to-day, I must take an extra hour for prayer," said one of the busiest men the church has ever known. With the care of scores of churches upon him, preaching so constantly that he regarded it a day of rest when he spoke but twice, writing books, traveling constantly and carrying an immense correspondence, he must take an extra hour of prayer, because of extra work one day.

The ordinary rule seems to be, the more press of work the less time for prayer. One woman said: "I have so much Christian work to do, I am losing my Christian life. Attending church services, committee meetings, missionary, Sunday school and temperance meetings making personal visits, selling lecture tickets, preparing church suppers, sending out circulars, writing letters—I am so driven I have scarcely time to think of God." "Thee has too much creaturely activity," said the sweet-faced Quaker friend. "Thee needs to take time to pray." A Christian business man in New York not unfrequently goes without a meal, that he may spend that hour in communion with God.

Time for prayer lessons the "creaturely activity" and calms the spirit that it may hear the Still Small Voice. It prepares the heart to leave some things unsaid and undone that the flighty activity of an hour ago deemed immediatly necessary. It sets things forth in their right proportions, reducing the abnormally large, and increasing in importance the duty dwarfed and neglected apprehension. If Martha would only take time to listen, the words of the Master might often be heared, "Thou art anxious and troubled about many things, but one thing is needful." Take time to pray. Take time to be conscious of the presence of God. "In thy presence is fullness of joy," and "The joy of the Lord is your strength." Take time. Christ did. Long before day he arose for communion with the Father. Did he so need it? Then do we.

OUR CHILDREN.

"I Bring it to Thee."

The dusky skein, from her grandame's reel,
She eagerly grasped with a willful air
This little maiden with dancing eyes,
And flakes of gold on her wind-blown hair;
Her nimble fingers fluttered among
The creamy threads she sought to find
The broken end which she seized at last,
With heedless zeal and began to wind.

At first these threads so evenly lay
That her ball grew rapidly smooth and round;
Then "thick-and-thin" they began to play,
And many a wrinkle and twist she found.
I watched the dimpled, impatient hands
Make trouble worse which they sought to right,
Make thread run forward that should have turned back,
Draw tangles here into tangles tight.

A weari-some while, in feverish haste,
The childish fingers threaded the wool;
But passed, at times, beneath many a tear
That overflowed from the eyes still full,
At last the skein in a tangled heap
By tear-damp fingers roughened and soiled,
Fell to the floor, and a child-voice wailed,
"I cannot wind it, 'tis spoiled all spoiled."

I looked at the mass of tangled threads
And sadly thought, "It is like my life,
With lines all crossed, and many tear-stained,
My own hands' doing—my own heart's strife."
Time reeled it well, but I knotted its threads,
By oft mistaking the wrong for the right;
When I should have turned back, passed rashly on,
With willful trust in my own frail might.

"Ah, bring it to me!" a soft voice spoke;
A mother's fingers, with patient grace,
Soon placed aright many thread astray,
And smoothed away every tangled place.
Then, firmly held on the same fair hands,
The glad child wound it with eye-shine,
As she watched the ball, by her handiwork
Grow larger, and rounded in every line.

"Ah me!" thought I, "if only some hand
Would take my life, with its heart'sdream light,
And straighten out its threads, and hold them fast,
That I at last might wind them aright!"
Even as I murmur a still voice asks
"Is there no Mighty One watchful of
thee?
Who pityeth the ills of thy life so much
And calleth all day long 'Bring it to me?'"

"Aye, verily, verily take it to him—
Its knottiest lines with thy tears all soiled,
Lay down at his feet and humbly cry
'Without thy helping my life is spoiled!'
He will take it up with the tenderest care,
He will loosen its tangles and hold it fast,
And guide thy winding with soothest words,
'Till smooth and rounded 'twill grow at last."

Forgive, O Father, my heedless past;
The proud self-will that hath kept my heart
Away from trustful dependence on thee;
Unmindful of the better part;
Oh, take my life in thy strong, firm hold
And shape it as thou would-st have it be;
I'll wind its threads, if held in thy hand,
And know they are right—"I bring it to thee!"

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea.—No 27.

THE WONDERFUL STONE.

What were we to look up in this lesson? The story of the stone. It will be a pleasant task, for that strange stone, has had, and will yet have a great deal to do with the history of Israel.

We must turn back a good many pages in our Bibles. Can you find the place? It is the 28th chapter of Gen., where Isaac blesses Jacob in such beautiful language, and sends him away to find a wife in another country. They were living at Beer-Sheba then, and Jacob was to go to Padan-Aram. When the first day's journey was over, he began looking about for a good spot to make his bed, because the sun had already gone down. I think that God guided him in his choice, for the eleventh verse of our chapter, says, "he lighted upon a certain, (or particular) place and tarried there all night. In Jacob's language (the Hebrew) the word "place" is "Makhome," and means, "a consecrated spot." Some one had been there before Jacob, and had set apart this little plat of ground by the roadside as a place where God was to be worshipped. It must have been Abraham. He traveled over the same road when he came out of the land of the Chaldees and went from the plain of Mareh down to Egypt, and from Egypt back to Bethel, and on to Hebron.

East of Bethel, he built an altar unto the Lord, and called upon the name of the Lord. Gen. xii; 8; xiii. 3.

He offered prayers here both in going and in coming from Egypt.

And he called the name of the place, Bethel, or "house of God, We call our churches, houses of God, because we build them on purpose for him. We go to our Bethels to worship him and to receive blessings from his hand.

The place was called Luz, at the first. There may have been no town there. If there was, its gates were shut, for Jacob slept in the open field,

"And he took of the stones of that place and put them for his pillows and lay down in that place to sleep."

Mrs. Rodgers, in her "Britain in History" thinks that Jacob, took a stone from the shrine, or altar, that Abraham had built, and put it for his pillow, or rather,—she quotes the words of some other writer, who thinks that this was the case.

"And he dreamed,"—what a strange dream it was! He saw a ladder, set up on the earth and the top of it reached to heaven, and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

And behold the Lord stood above it and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham, thy father, and the God of Isaac, the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed. And thy seed, shall be as the dust of the earth and thou shalt spread abroad, to the east and to the west and to the north and to the south, and in thee, and in thy seed shall all families of the earth be blessed. And behold I am with the and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this place, for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of." These promises of the Lord to Jacob, reach down through all the years of after-time. We have a part in them, if we are of Jacob's seed, through faith in the dear Savior, and we too, shall be brought to the land.

Do you understand about the ladder? In pictures, we have seen it represented, just like the ladders on which men climb to the tops of buildings and standing strait up with nothing for the top to rest against. We have never imagined it to be any other kind of a ladder, but the Hebrew word here is sul-lam, from salal, to raise up in a pile, by casting, or heaping up. So Prof. Hush, says, "we take the term to mean, a towering elevation, mountains heaped on the top of mountains with ledges, for the steps, or stairs."

In the Bible a mountain is many times used as the symbol of a kingdom, was not this dream mountain, a picture to Jacob, of the kingdom that was to be built about the stone on which his head was resting, that Daniel says shall never be destroyed? Isa. 2; ii, Dan. vii; 27; ii. 34, 44-46.

If it was such a ladder it certainly had a firm foundation, and to make the matter stronger, where we read in our version. "And the Lord stood above it," the Greek is made to say. "And the Lord was firmly fixed or established, above it," "or upon it." implying, that in the future, the throne of the Lord will be settled on the summit of a kingdom, made up of all earthly kingdoms. God as the ladder was set up on the earth, so will the kingdom he set up on the earth.

Jacob is startled when he awakens and remembers his dream. He did not know, when he went to rest that it was in the house of God, where the gates of heaven opened, and angels talked with men. He was grateful to God for his loving favor, but still, he could not help feeling afraid.

He had received a title—deed to the land of Canaan, like that which God gave to Abraham, in the fifteenth chapter of Gen. and the only witnesses, are the angels, and the attesting stone, that had been his pillow. He set it up as a memorial stone, and pours oil upon it, promising that if God will indeed go with him, and keep him in the way he is going, so that he may come again to his father's house in peace that then the Lord shall be his God, and this stone, the house of God.

In the 35th chapter of Gen. we find him at Bethel again, talking with God. This time he builds an altar and sets up another pillar or stone.

He must have taken the first stone away. It could not become Gods dwelling place to him unless it went with him.

Jewish Rabbis when asked "what became of Jacob's stone?" Say, it was placed as the head corner stone on the top of 'Solomon's temple." And Mr. Bush says, "the Jews believe, that it found a place in the sanctuary of the second temple, and that the Ark of the Covenant rested upon it."

But we can talk no more about it tonight, there has been so many other things to tell.

ORITUARY.

Eliza Sigler was born in Lake Co., Ind., Jan. 16, 1844, and moved with her parents to Wheeler, Porter Co., Ind., in 1859. She was married to Joseph H. Willey Oct. 14, 1863. In May 1860, she moved with her husband to Rensselaer, Ind., which, with the exception of the last few years, has ever since been her home. In 1869, she with her husband was baptized into Christ by Elder D. T. Halstead, and became a member of the Church of God in Rensselaer, since which time she has been one of its most faithful and consistent members. She died July 5, 1895, aged 51 years, 5 months and 19 days. Sister Willey was truly a noble woman. Being of a very quiet and unassuming disposition, only those who were intimately associated with her knew how to appreciate her She was one of the few of whom it can be truthfully said: "She did not murmur nor complain when trials and troubles came." When the church she loved so dearly was prospering and the members of her household were well she was happy and contented. During the last three months of her life she suffered much, but did not complain, being patient and hopeful to the last; when, grasping in one hand the hand of her faithful husband, and with the other the hand of her youngest son she peacefully closed her eyes in death, leaving a husband and three sons, of her immediate family, to mourn the loss of a faithful wife and a devoted mother. In her death the church has lost one of its truest members. But we sorrow not as those without hope. She sleeps in Jesus. Funeral services were conducted by the writer.

L. E. CONNER.

Some one has said, "When I dig a man out of trouble, the hole he leaves behind him is the grave where I bury my own trouble."

God is willing to take us as we are, provided we are willing to become what he desires.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations: the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

THERE are five Wednesdays this month. Our next issue will be on August 7, 1895.

IN apostolic times the truth was that that day of the lord's coming could not arrive until there had been an apostasy from the faith. Now it is taught for God's truth. —i. e. in place of God's truth—that "that day shall not come until the world is converted." Paul taught that the world was not as guilty yet in his day as it would be at the dawn of that day. The prevalent doctrine of today, is, that the world is not good enough yet, for that day to come. It is plain to be seen that the two doctrines could not be more opposed to each other. The reader can take his choice.

THE United States, like all other countries are preparing for war. A navy is being built up, that, according to all accounts is beginning to make Uncle Sam look like a gentleman abroad. It is costing something, too, besides the enormous first cost. It costs the government $3000,000 a year to maintain the cruiser New York; almost a thousand dollars a day. The Baltimore follows the New York very closely in the matter of expense.—the cost of running that ship being $321,000. The Chicago comes next, the cost of maintenance being $311,000. The San Francisco cost $283,000. The Philadelphia $270,000, the Charleston $259,000 and the Newark $271,000. Judging by the latest experiments in guns, it may not be long before these sea monsters are condemned as useless.

THE Rev. D. D. Reed D. D. of Jersey City locates heaven in the star Alcyone, because Maedler has shown that all stars move around that star, proving it to be the center of the material heavens. The earth moves about it in an orbit in 20,000,000 years. This dignitary of the church also says the Hebrews believed in three heavens: —First, where the birds and clouds fly,—the second was the stellar heaven,—and the third heaven beyond our system, and illustrates the language of Paul concerning Christ, that he ascended far above all the heavens, and Paul was caught away to the third heaven. But he asks us to believe that he is not speaking dogmatically—is just feeling for the truth. When asked by the reporter if he believed in a material hell he answered, "Well, I don't know, but I have collected material enough to warrant me in delivering a series of sermons on the subject, and I may do that when I have finished with heaven." Had he not better make up his own mind first?

IT really seems that some religious leaders are awaking to the fact that they have been sailing on a wrong track, and will have to set aside the mystical principle of the schools and obtain God-ideas from the words he employs, or else they will have to give up the ship. The New York Advertiser of the 15th inst. says: "Rev. Thomas Dixon Jr. preached at the Academy of Music yesterday morning, continuing the subject for July, 'Are we degenerating?' He said that mysticism must be eliminated from religion in order that Christianity might survive." We think we understand him and his situation, but he is unfortunate in expression. The mystery is not in religion, as we understand it. God's rebinding system is wondrously simple. About this system men have woven a web or cloud of mysticism that obscures the light of life. He is mistaken again when he calls the great mystical system Christianity. When we do not find one unadulterated truth in that system we honestly believe it should not be called Christianity;—but "remodelled paganism," rather. The statement of Mr. Dixon is a confession that mysticism has supplanted the truth of God, and that it has no regenerating power. We are thankful for this little rift in the cloud.

MAJOR Gen. Tullock of the British army has for the past year been making government surveys for Great Britain in that part of Egypt where the Israelites accomplished their famous journey. The General has just published a report in London which substantiates the Biblical story of their crossing the Red Sea dry shod. In the published statement he says that in the spring of the year he was engaged in surveying the borders of lake Menzahleh, on the Red Sea. On one occasion a sudden violent windstorm arose, the force of which was so prodigious as to carry everything before it, including, incidently the waters of the lake. In a few hours the whole body of water had been abducted, and naught remained, save vessels, mud, sand and the Major General. The vessels moored in the lake were stranded high and dry and no water in sight. This is undoubtedly what occurred in the days of Moses and gives a new interest to that famous history wherein is set forth the triumphant flight of the captives dry shod through the way of the waters, whose returning floods destroyed their oppressors. Next to the resurrection of Christ the passage of the Red Sea by Israel has attracted the most attention from scholars. Books have been written explaining one thing, some another, and some nothing at all. The faithful have accepted it as a marvelous miracle with entire confidence, while with equal confidence the skeptical have denied it altogether. Archeological investigations in Egypt have verified so much of the Scriptural account that its substantial accuracy is generally admitted. An examination of the various routes over one or another of which the fleeing Hebrews took their way has demonstrated the fact that in many places they could have managed a cross g under favorable natural condit ns. As the result of this many now believe that the escape through the waters was by miraculous intervention from God working through natural causes. The skeptic on the other hand, admits the escape, but denies the providential intervention.

His Coming Near.

A special from Pittsburgh to the Chicago Tribune on the 15th inst. informs us of a meeting of prominent ministers and members of Churches that has been held in the parlors of the Young Men's Christian Association to arrange for a prophetic conference in Allegheny City from October 29 to Nov. 4, inclusive. It seems that the subject has been agitated in widely separated cities, and it has brought out some interesting expressions as to why the Advent of Christ is to be expected soon. It says all who will participate in this movement are pre-millennialists. They do not propose to name the definite time of his coming, but hold that it is near, within a year or two, and will be as real as that of the first coming, and quote Acts i. 9 to prove it. They say his appearance will be made on the Mount of Olives before Jerusalem on the east, and quote Zech. xiv. 4 to prove it. It is refreshing to note that the movers in this affair are a long way ahead of those who hold that the end of all probation takes place at the Lord's coming. A long list of able men is given who evidently see that another glorious chapter of Redemption's story opens at that time. And it is also gratifying to read the reasons why they believe as they do. 1st, it is to be at a time of unparalleled wickedness, and say that as the churches are full of apostates, scoundrels and thieves, and the inspiration of the Bible openly denied, and men pray on Sunday and chant on Monday, and as men's hearts are failing them on account of the universal unrest which prevails,—and the vast preparation for war, and as the Jews are wending their way back to the land of their fathers, and as the fertility of the soil is returning, it all goes to make up a sign of great magnitude that the King of the Jews is soon coming. And it looks to us as if the brethren of Jesus and children of Abraham who have taken out their papers, so to speak, and become joint-heirs with Christ, and partners in Abraham's blessing- yes it looks to us as if some able advocate of the truth should be selected by them to go to Allegheny City and show these advanced students that the great truths which have dawned upon them are not mere truths,—not truth in the abstract, as it were, —but part of THE Truth, the veritable power of God unto salvation to every one who believes it; not merely grand, glorious and true- all of this and more,—the Word of salvation without which no one can be saved. What think you? Is it duty or not. While we rejoice to see the light breaking in upon some of the ablest and most devout religionists of the day, it gives us pain to think that they are strangers to the conditions of Sonship. Do not know that the things promised are the gospel, - do not know that God's law of pardon and peace and reconciliation has three clauses Faith, Reformation, Baptism, followed by a godly life. Do not know or realize that what they, in advance of their brethren, have come into possession of, is really the pearl of great price.

PSALM. 56.

57 COM. VER.

1. Unto the end; Do not destroy; David's (psalm) for a votive-pillar inscription, when he ran away from the face of Saoul into the cave (of Odullom).

2. Have mercy on me, O God, have mercy on me: Because my soul hath trusted in thee, and in the shadow of thy wings will I hope until the lawlessness hath passed by.

3. I shall have cried unto God the Most High unto God my benefactor. Interlude.

4. He sent from out the heavens and saved me; He gave unto reproach those who were treading me down. God sent out his mercy and his truth,

5. And delivered my soul from the midst of lion's whelps. I lay down disturbed. Sons of men, their teeth were spear and arrows and their tongue a sharp sword.

6. Be thou exalted above the heavens and over all the earth thy glory.

7. Snares did they prepare for my feet and they bowed my soul down; They dug a pit before my face, and

8. They fell into it. Interlude. My heart is ready, O God, my heart is ready I will sing and exalt the strain.

9. Awake, O my glory, awake, O psaltry and cithera; I shall have been awakened in the morning.

10. I shall confess unto thee in laities, O Lord, I shall exalt the strain unto thee in nations;

11. Because thy mercy hath been magnified unto the heavens and into the clouds thy truth.

12. Be thou exalted above the heavens, O God, and over all the earth thy glory.

PSALM 57 (58 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; Do not destroy. David's (psalm) for a votive-pillar-inscription.

2. If forsooth ye are in truth talking righteousness, judge uprightly, ye sons of men.

3. Yea, indeed, in the heart of transgression are ye employed on the earth; your hands are plaiting iniquity,

4. The obdurate-sinners have become alienated from the matrix; from the womb have they erred; they have talked lies:

5. Their anger is according to the likeness of the serpent, like that of a dumb asp that stoppeth her ears;

6. That will not listen to the voice of enchanters and of the pharmacist, though the pharmacy be from a wise one,

7. God hath broken their front teeth in their mouth; the back teeth of the lions hath the Lord crushed.

8. They will have been accounted nought like water as it were that hath gone its way through; he will stretch his bow until they grow weak,

9. Like wax that melteth as it were will they have been taken away; Fire hath fallen and they have not seen the sun.

10. Before your thistles go along with the thorn, as it were alive, as it were in wrath will he drink you down.

11. A justified one will have rejoiced when he shall see a requital of irreverent ones; he will wash his hands in the blood of the obdurate-sinner;

12. And man will say, If, indeed there is fruit for the justified one, forsooth God is the one who judgeth them on the earth.

PSALM 58 (59 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; Do not destroy; David's (psalm) for a votive-pillar-inscription: when Saoul sent and set a watch about his house to kill him.

2. Deliver me, O God, from my enemies, and from those who rise up against me redeem me.

3. Rescue me from those who are working the transgression, and from men of blood save me.

4. Because lo, they have hunted my soul; contriding ones have disposed themselves against me; not is the transgression mine nor the sin mine, O Lord.

5. Without transgression did I run away and I had acted uprightly. Awake to meet me and see.

6. And do thou, O Lord God of the hosts, thou God of Israel, give heed to visit (take an oversight of) all the nations: do not pity all those who are working the transgression, Interlude.

7. They will return in the evening and will be famished like a dog as it were, and will encompass a city.

8. Lo, they will give utterance with their mouth and a sword in their lips: Because who hath heard it? (will they say).

9. And thou, O Lord, will laugh at them: Thou wilt account all the nations as nothing.

10. My controlling-power I will watch (i. e. guard for thee, because thou O God, art my intervening-helper.

11. My God, his mercy will anticipate me; My God will show unto me in my enemies.

12. Do not slay them lest perchance they may have ignored thy law; Scatter them in thy ability and lead them down, O Lord my protector:

13. (Scatter) the sin of their mouth and the word of their lips, and may they have been arrested in their haughty-pride;

14. And consummations of cursing and lying will be proclaimed in wrath's consummation, and they shall no more be: and they will comprehend that the God of Jakob is sole Lord of the ends of the earth. Interlude.

15. They will return in the evening and will be famished like a dog as it were and will encompass a city:

16. They will have been scattered to eat, but if they shall not have been full-fed they will even murmur,

17. But I shall sing praise unto thy ability and I shall be glad of thy mercy in the morning: Because thou hast become my intervening-helper and my refuge in a day of my tribulation.

18. My responsive-helper, my God, I shall exalt the strain unto thee: My intervening-helper art thou, my God, my mercy.

PSALM 59 (60 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; For those who yet will have been alienated; for a votive-pillar-inscription, David's (psalm) for teaching;

2. When Joab had ravaged Mesopotamia of Suria with fire and Suria of Sobal, and had returned and smitten the valley of the salt-wells, twelve thousand,

3. O God thou hast thrust us away and thou hast taken us down: Thou hast been wrathful and thou hast pitied us:

4. Thou hast shaken the earth and disturbed it; Heal the shaken parts thereof, because it hath been moved.

5. Thou hast shown severity to thy laity; thou hast given us to drink wine of compunction:

6. Thou hast given unto those who fear thee by signs that they might flee from the face of the bow. Interlude,

7. Would that thy beloved ones might be delivered; save with thy right hand and hearken unto me.

8. God hath said in his sacred way (oracular) I shall be glad and distribute Sikima, and the valley of the tents I shall measure through:

9. Mine is Galaad, and mine is Manasse, and Ephraim is controlling strength for my head. Joudas is my king;

10. Moab a lover of my hope: over Idoumaia I shall extend my sandal; other tribes have been decreed subject to me;

11. Who will lead me unto a city of circumference; Who will guide unto Idoumaia?

12. Not thou, O God, who hast thrust us away? and thou wilt not, O God, come out in our hosts?

13. Give unto us responsive-help from tribulation; and vain is man's salvation.

14. In God we shall make a host (an ability) and he will make naught of those who afflict us.

PSALM 60 (61 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; Among hymns. David's (psalm).

2. Hear, O God, my supplication, heed my votive-prayer;

3. From the ends of the earth unto thee have I cried, when my heart was depressed. On a rock didst thou lift me up; thou didst guide me.

5. Because thou hast become my hope, a tower of strength from the face of an enemy.

5. I shall sojourn in thy habitation for the ages; I shall have been sheltered in the shadow of thy wings. Interlude.

6. Because thou, O God, hast hearkened unto my votive-prayers, thou hast given an inheritance unto those who fear thy name;

7. Days wilt thou add unto days of a king; his years are unto days of a generation and a generation.

8. He will continue through forever (or unto the age) in God's sight: His mercy and truth who will seek them out?

9. In this wise will (or shall) I exalt the strain unto thy name unto the age of the age that I may have paid my vows day by day.

PSALM 61 (62 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; For Idithoun, David's psalm.

2. Shall not my soul subject itself unto God? For from him is my instrumental-salvation. (Christ meant).

3. For he is my God and my Savior, my intervening-helper: I shall not be moved any more.

4. How long are ye going to rely upon man? Ye are all killing like a leaning-wall and a hedge that hath been thrust out.

5. Yea they have been counselled to thrust away mine honor; with thirst have they run; with their mouth did they bless and with their heart did they curse. Interlude.

6. But do thou subject thyself unto God, O my soul, because from him is my patient-endurance.

7. Because he is my God and my Savior, my intervening-helper: I shall not flee.

8. In God (rests in faith) is my instrumental-salvation and my glory: The God of my responsive-help and my hope (or rests upon) is in God.

9. May ye have hoped in him, all ye synagogue of laity: Pour out your hearts before him, because God is our responsive-helper. Interlude.

10. But useless are the sons of men, liars are the sons of men, with balances to do iniquitously; together are they of fruitlessness.

11. Hope not in iniquity and hanker not after the results of robbery; If riches flow like a stream; do not set thy heart on them.

12. Once for all hath God spoken; those two things have I heard; namely that the controlling-power is God's;

13. And thine, O Lord, is the mercy, that thou wilt repay to each one according to his deeds.

COMMENT.

The 56th, 57th, and 58th psalms with the same general introductory-heading "Do not destroy," etc. and based upon personal experiences in the life of David the Author, constitute a trilogy of divine import, David's personal experience being employed as a framework upon which to build the far-reaching Messianic fuller, deeper and higher hope which rings out through the strains of tribulation and woe. However dire the distress or narrow the straits always victory at last, but victory for the truth and the right—the trump of righteousness; but always God's righteousness, just as Paul puts it in Romans. The 56th and 58th are more particularly representative of the individual experiences of the "man of God," while the 57th is an epitome of warning, reproof and exhortation on the part of the Man of God as the divine seer to the obdurate-sinners to turn unto God while there is yet time. The tribulation, the cry for divine help, the assured hope, the sure retribution, the city, the "dogs" outside, the joy and song of praise within —the whole picture in outline of judgment and redemption as elsewhere more fully given.

The 59th psalm as its number as well as explanatory heading in the first two verses indicates, is a consummation—one series full in the nine—a consummation of alienation, illustrated by an event in the victorious career of David. "For teaching" and "unto the end" are finger-posts to guide us in our interpretation of the subject-matter of the psalm. Observe the several things prophesied elsewhere here spoken of as consummated in the 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th verses especially to say nothing of the "thou hast said" and what follows from the eighth verse to the close of the psalm.

The 60th psalm is conjunctive, a sixth conjunction and a majors harmonic resonant with hope and assurance, and the vision extends backward as well as forward to the payment of vows and the realization of the Christian hope. "Days wilt thou add unto days of a king; His years are unto days of a generation and a generation" marks it unmistakeably as a Messianic hymn "among hymns" as stated in the heading or first verse.

The 61st psalm with the heading "For Idithoun" and number one in a new series we would expect to be especially individual and personal in its character, and we so find it a divine soliloquy, a communing with one's own soul and designed to emphasize the esoteric and exoteric watch. Remember that Idithoun was the ancestral watchman of one of the gateways to the tabernacle or temple as appointed, when David instituted the Levitical courses. The gist of the psalm is in the name and the office he represented, "The inner-sanctuary" to be guarded then was typical of the heart that we are individually to watch, "For out of it are the issues of life," and the Christian is his own Idithoun to watch to keep in and keep out. "For God is in his sacred temple" and that temple is now the human heart, out of which Christ has driven "the money-changers" and the things that desecrate.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Notice of Lecture on the Nature of Man.

A few weeks ago the writer, by invitation, delivered an address before the Liberal Society of Cincinnati, (a society organized for the spread of infidelity,) on the immortality of the soul.

After the address, the chairman, in accordance with the society's attractive custom, invited a free criticism of the address by any one who cared to do so. In response to this invitation a debate occurred between a Gentile and a Jew, unique enough for publication. The controversy arose over a passage which long remained a stumbling block to the writer's approach to the life giving truth. Here it is in substance:

A gentleman of scholarly appearance arose to criticise. He said, among other things, that he had studied theology, and was greatly surprised that a man of manifest intelligence should not only deny the soul's immortality, but should make the preposterous claim that his denial was founded on Scripture. His closing statement occasioned the debate. It was this: "I would be willing to stake my belief in the soul's immortality on the reply of Jesus to the Sadducees, viz, 'God is not the God of the dead, but of the living."

A Jew then arose. His German accent was as marked as his features. He said, in effect. "My friend who preceded me, tells us that he has studied theology, and that he has done so is quite clear. It is equally clear that he has not read the New Testament carefully. If he had done so he would not stake his faith in immortality in Jesus' reply to the Sadducees. If he understood that reply he would not cite it as proof of immortality. The reply proves the absolute necessity for a resurrection, and forcibly disproves the soul's immortality. Resurrection, or no resurrection; was the issue presented to Jesus. They denied a resurrection; and attempted to bring ridicule upon Jesus advocacy of it by showing, by an imagined case, the hopeless confusion that must result from it. Jesus replied by showing (first) that their case would create no confusion whatever; and (second) that there must be a resurrection in order that Scripture may be fulfilled, and that God may become the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who had been in their graves for centuries. The soul's immortality was not the matter before Jesus. The Sadducees had asked nothing respecting it; and to contend that Jesus reply proves immortality is to make that reply absurdly irrelevant. The Sadducees understood his reply better than my friend. To them the argument was terrific and final. So overwhelming was it that a Scribe, who stood by, spontaneously gave evidence of his admiration for the argument."

He resumed his seat, amid applause, possibly unmindful that he had discovered the central truth of the gospel of reconciliation.

This most remarkable incident is given with hope that it may clear the mind of some one, as it has cleared mine. From all doubts as to the construction of a passage which is the stronghold of even the intellectual among the orthodox.

There were other points made by the critics which I would like to submit. STANLEY E. BOWDLE

The Bible Proving Itself.

One of the most convincing proofs of the divine origin of the Scriptures is found in the perfect unity of its various writers, living in different countries, and writing under circumstances and influences very unlike. A recent English work, has a good passage on this point.

Its various books bear testimony to one another. They speak the same origin. They lead to the same result. Each individual writer, as he appears or disappears, points to some one who has gone before, or prophesies of some one who is yet to come. Successive ages are linked together; hand joins in hand; and all stand or fall together. The biography, the history, the prophecy, the devotion, are all true or all false.

If Elijah never lived, what sense is there in the prophecy of Malachi? How can it reach backward to the great reformer of Israel and forward to the great forerunner of our Lord? If "Noah, Daniel, and Job" were myths, then Ezekiel's praise is fabulous; but if they really lived and served their generation by the will of God, then his words carry conviction over 1,200 years, and touch matters of importance. If Isaiah saw with his eyes the hosts of Sennacherib struck down without the walls of Jerusalem, then the books of Kings and Chronicles, in which the event is recorded, are true and trustworthy. David commemorates in sacred verse the varied history of the Jews, as recorded in the Pentateuch. If Moses is false, David cannot be true. Josiah finds the long-neglected Book of the Law, and bows before it as the Word of God, and all his people with him. The whole nation is deceived, or else that Book of the Law is genuine and authentic. Josiah tells of the impulsive, but temporary repentance of the Ninevites; and Nahum confirms his word by recording their final and subsequent destruction. If Ezra and Nehemiah really rebuilt the temple, then Haggai and Zechariah really prophesied. The sermon delivered on that occasion within the rising walls indorses all the miracles of Egypt, and enumerates the provocations of the people and the forbearance of God. If the text is false, the sermon cannot be true.

All hangs together. If Moses is false in prose, David is false in poetry. If Jeremiah never wrote, Daniel's prayer is an absurdity. You have either a succession of holy, trustworthy, divinely chosen, and divinely taught men, each delivering, it is true, his own independent testimony, but making himself responsible also for what had been "written aforetime;" or you have the blind falling into the ditch! And how can this blindness be supposed, when their mighty words are mingled with mighty works! The question is not simply that historians, and seers, and psalmists, and prophets believed in one another; but that God wrought with them, and confirmed their words with signs following. It is not that you have Moses standing alone and demanding credence to the word he speaks; but you have Joshua also, who bade the sun stand still; David, who was a man after God's own heart; Elijah, who was taken to heaven in a whirlwind; Isaiah, who saw Christ's day; Daniel, who was delivered from the lion's den all uniting in their testimony to his truth, making his writings the text of their sermons, and the burden of their prayers.

POETRY.

Awaiting the Unloading.

In the gay, shifting markets of the East,
Unmeet and grotesque, the patient camels stand,
Calm amid busy tumult, ugly and grand,
With rough-haired form, and neck, uplifted face,
Ready to bear afar in conscious strength,
To fast and thirst and labor, till at length
The desert crossed, and won the resting-place,
A master's hand shall lift the load away.

O still, strong, human natures whom we meet
Day after day, in adverse circumstance
Serene and faithful! Have ye learned patience,
From these dumb heroes of the Eastern scene
The untold secret, wonderful as sweet,
Of all that grandly simple strength of heart?
In meekness fitth might. Such souls as these Accept their burden upon bended knees.

Conversations on Important Bible Topics. No. 2.

BY JOHN WILSON.

"Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart."

THE IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL.

"How do you like Mr. Phelan, Alfred?"

"The man or the sermon, Ella?"

"The sermon of course, I mean."

"To confess, then, I regretted the time misspent in listening; after our conversation yesterday can you think that I could like it?"

"I do not know. When he described so eloquently the power, majesty, glory, and attributes of the immortal soul, I did most certainly wonder how you could remain so unmoved, and how you could overcome such splendid demonstrations."

"I heard much oratorical flourish but no 'demonstrations.' It may be an apparent loss of pleasure, but I am apt to try all I hear in the crucible of truth, and I have found that the most sparkling ore usually contains the least portion of good metal. Beware, Ella, of buying quartz for diamonds."

"And so you account the sermon this morning as so much dross?"

"With few exceptions, sister."

"And which are they?"

"Simply those Scriptural statements which negatived all his high-flown hypotheses."

"And do you mean to say, Alfred, that he failed to prove the immortality of the soul?"

"Certainly. He told how great the powers of the soul are; how it can measure the earth; map out the starry universe; ascend into the heavens; approach, by affinity, to God. But he failed to prove the first essential of his argument, i. e. the existance of such a separate soul. This being wanting, how can he know it to be a part of God, or in affinity to him?"

"From the Bible. God said, 'let us make man in our image,' and 'He breathed into his nostrels the breath of life.' Besides which, Solomon says, 'the spirit returns to God who gave it.'"

"And so, Ella, you have nothing better in prospect than the old Pagan notion that the immortal spark, after flickering in the body, returns into the divine element from which it sprung."

"I do not believe any such thing, Alfred, for I expect to live a distinct entity through all eternity."

"Do not think I wish to vex you, Ella dear, I am only showing you the absurdity to which such reasonings reduce themselves. For if, when God breathed into Adam the breath of life, he gave him an immortal spirit as an emanation from himself, then, according to your other citation, when man expires this spirit must return to God. The argument, I am aware, is used in the sense that if man has a particle from God in him, he must be immortal, because God is so; but by the same logic men have omniscience, omnipotence, and all the other attributes of deity. Do not use this argument again, sister, as there is a spice of blasphemy in it."

"I did not intend any when I used it. But there still remains the question of the attributes of the soul. As Mr. Phelan said, 'the mind which can press the lightning into its service and make steam its artificer, which can build a Menai bridge or bore a Thames tunnel, which manifests its powers in a Bacon, a Newton, a Milton, a Herschell, must be imortal.'"

"Why must it? Is a machine enduring according to its power? Mental power is simply a quality of matter, and, compared with other organized beings, a matter of degree: monkeys make a live suspension bridge, engineers iron ones; a beaver builds its pier, a Stephenson his railway."

"Yes, but it is only instinct in the animal—none of them plan or vary."

"Variableness is imperfection. And what, Ella, is the difference between instinct and reason? where do you draw the boundary line? I am sure I have seen many animals more intelligent than their masters; witness the cartman today who was beating his horse for his own mistake, thereby confessing that he considered it to have the most sense of the two. A Fejee islander is a human being, (and so must have a soul to go to heaven, as well as the kin he masticates;) but I had a thousand fold rather have a Newfoundland dog as a companion. What use is immortality to such a savage? The fact is, man has a higher cerebral development than the brutes, because made in the image of God, but his powers are only displayed, like a plant's according to the culture,—as the purity and weight of the brain so is the intellectual flowering."

"I also would prefer a faithful dog, like Fido; but you know the savages are degraded beings."

"Their brains are corrupt, or undeveloped. So much so, indeed, that there is a greater difference between a savage and a Bacon, than between a domestic animal and a man. But you have not yet drawn the line betwixt instinct and reason."

"I do not see that I can, for I am not aware of the limits of each."

"Would it not be best to take them to be one in kind, two in degree? For there appears to be as much reason shown in the act of the elephant lifting the cannon wheel lest it crush the prostrate soldier, as in the wagoner stopping his horses because a child was in the way. What can you call our Fido's act when he rushed into the water to rescue Annie?"

"It seems like a rational deduction from cause to effect, that if not brought out he would lose her."

"Certainly: and it would not be necessary to constitute him minor-rational that he be able to understand the physiology of drowning. I thing you will perceive the source and cause of thought to be in the brain, and I hardly need adduce as as argument the manifestations of the disordered brain in idiotcy, its sluggish action in imbeciles, and its over-tension in maniacs."

"I see that I cannot from reason prove the immortality of the soul, but the universal prevalence of the belief in a future state, or spirit land, ought to weigh much in the scale of argument. I wish Mr. Phelan had quoted entire those lines from Cato's Soliloquy on the immortality of the soul."

"He quoted sufficient for his purpose and mine. Addison does well to ascribe the idea to Plato, where it would be best to leave it, for what can be more illogical nonsense than the sentiment of the lines Mr. Phelan quoted. I am hungry, ergo, I have eaten my dinner, is a perfectly collateral syllogism. I pity those who use such arguments, and am only pleased when they abide by Plato; but to have them foisted upon Scripture arouses indignation. And so, sister mine, you thought that the universality of the belief was evidence of its truth! Did it never occur to you that sin is the most universal power, and therefore, that general belief might be an offspring of sin-thought?"

"But all men believe there is a God. Is that a 'sin-thought' as you call it?"

"Men know there is a Supreme Power, but in the exercise of their sin-deteriorated brains, they make to themselves gods of metal, wood, and stone. Idolatry is universal, and immortal-soulism is a child of it, being originally hero-worship. Your preacher made a false statement in saying that it was the 'universal belief through all ages,' for the source of his ideas, even Plato himself, says, 'the soul does not die—as most men believe.'"

"But the Jews believed in the immortality of the soul."

"From when?"

"From Moses I suppose."

"Who was Jesus speaking to when he said, 'Ye have made void the word of God, by your vain traditions received from your fathers?'"

"To the Pharisees."

"And whence had their fathers obtained these traditions?"

"I cannot say."

"The Talmud, or oral law, commenced from the Babylonish captivity. But the Pharisees were only a small portion of the Jewish people, who, I hesitate not to affirm, did not believe the doctrine."

"Were they without hope of a future state, then?"

"By no means they had the covenants of promise made to the fathers. Martha's confession, 'I know that he shall rise again at the last day' is an instance of the popular faith. The Sadducees, an opposing sect, did not believe in resurrection, angel, or spirit, but neither were they the representatives of the people's creed. If Jesus taught the orthodox dogma do you not suppose they would have tried to overthrow him by founding their puzzle about the woman with seven husbands, upon the disembodied state, instead of passing to the far-off period, and inquiring, 'in the resurrection whose wife is she?' No, neither Jesus, nor his apostles ever taught this doctrine."

"Oh, Alfred! be careful what you say. Did not Jesus say, 'Fear him who can destroy both body and soul in hell?' and 'what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?'"

"Those do not oppose my argument. Will you open this concordance and find me the passages which declare that man has an immortal soul?"

"I cannot find it under immortal': stay, here is 'immortality.' Rom. ii. 7. That is not it. 1 Tim. vi. 16. Nor is that; where shall I look?"

"You will have to search outside the cover, not inside, for it never once occurs. Rom. ii. 7, you might well say was not it, as it teaches immortality as a condition to be sought for:

'To them who by patient continuance in well-doing SEEK for glory and honor and immortality, God will render eternal life.'

And in the other reference it is declared that God only hath it:

'Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man seen, nor can see; to whom be honor and power everlasting.'

If, therefore, the expression is not to be found in the book, how do you know the idea is there?"

"But, Alfred, may it not be implied if not affirmed?"

"Ella, God has stated in plain unmistakeable terms all the cardinal points of his truth. Implication is dangerous; but where is it even implied?"

"Look at Matt. xvi. 26."

"Here it is: but we will read the 25th verse also.

'For whoso will save his life shall lose it it, but whoso will lose his life for my sake shall find it. For what is a man profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own life? or what shall a man give in exchange for his life?'"

What use are riches in death?—of what value was all the subjugated world to Alexander the night he lay dead in Babylon?"

"But it is 'soul' not 'life in the 26th verse. I notice, Alfred, that you don't always quote passages as they are in my Bible."

"True, Ella. The reason is that I have so accustomed myself to improved versions that I often quote some one of them unconsciously. But you must excuse this, and let us turn to our passage, where, however, I made the change wittingly. The words are the same in the Greek, but if you prefer the word 'soul' to 'life' put it in the 25th verse, as you in honesty should do."

"Oh dreadful!"

"Certainly so, attaching your present idea, but read the whole paragraph, and you will see that my rendering is required to make it harmonious. Turn to the same words of Jesus in Luke xii. 4-5:

'I say to you my friends, Be not afraid of them who kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. But, I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear Him, which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear Him.'

Hear you find the evangelist understood 'soul' in the sense of a whole living man, 'himself,' and its loss to be 'cast out' of the kingdom. I think I know all the passages you can bring in support of your opinions, have frequently refuted them, as well as urged them formerly. Matt. x. 28, is proof sufficient of the mortality of the soul, seeing it can be destroyed. The rich man and Lazarus you must see is a parable, and as such must have a parabolic interpretation. You remember what Dr. Trench says, 'The parables cannot be made the first sources of doctrine.' The dying thief prayed for an entrance into the kingdom when Christ comes, which I showed yesterday is yet future; and the answer was to that request, not a promise of something totally different. The words of that reply, 'To-day,' may be either taken in the Greek sense of 'that day' 'this day' (of his advent,) or the natural sense by altering the punctuation to what it is in most and the best MSS., 'I say to thee today.' This is required by facts, for it is doubtful if the thief died that day, he being alive at 'even.' (John xix. 31-33; Mark xv. 42-44.) Certainly Jesus did not go to the heavenly paradise that day, or he could not three days after have said to Mary, 'Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father.' Besides it is a most gratuitus assumption that 'Paradise' is the disembodied heaven. The other instances where the word occurs, 2 Cor. xii. 4; Rev. ii. 7; are associated with the third or new heavens, i. e. Eden restored. This not having yet come to pass shows that we must understand the Paradise of this promise to be as much in the future as the kingdom mentioned in the malefactor's prayer."

"It never occured to me to doubt that Paradise meant heaven, but I see that there is some difference."

"I hope you will see more when we come to speak of the new heavens and new earth. But let us keep to our present subject. 2 Cor. v. 1-8 is the furthest remove from your side, being the apostle's longing for the resurrected state, (1 Cor. xv. 43, 44,) not the disembodied. The preacher in stereotyped style, spoke of the soul being imprisoned in this earthly tabernacle, clogged with the body, uttering impassioned longings for its release and bodyless condition, in utter contrast to Paul's calm, earnest desire 'to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven, (not in us,) if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked, (as would be the case in his disembodied soul-state.) For we who are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened, (but better the flesh than nothing, for) not that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, (why?) that mortality may be swallowed up of life.

We are willing to be absent from the body, [at the resurrection, but we must retain it till then) and to be present with the Lord,' (at his coming.)"

"But Paul had the idea that the soul could be separated from the body, for he says 'whether in the body, or out of the body.'"

"Let us see how the passage reads under a careful examination, remembering what I have already pointed out as to Paradise, or the third heaven being yet future:

'I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord. I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell, God knoweth;) such an one caught up to the third heaven. And I knew such a man, (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell, God knoweth;) how that he was caught up to paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for man to utter.'

The time given carries us back to that of Paul's virtual martyrdom by stoning at Lystra; one which left its life-long traces in a daily dying. My idea is that it caused him to suffer from something like syncope every day. Be that as it may, Paul evidently recognised some psychological phenomenon as having occurred at the time when he was drawn out of the city for dead. To Stephen was granted, under the very same suffering, a glimpse of Jesus in glory, seen in the opened heavens. To Paul, the chiefest apostle, was given a vision of the grandest scene in the world's history. He seems to have been privileged to see and hear before the beloved disciple, some of the things contained in the Apocalypse. But because they were to be sent out to the seven churches in a completer form by John, Paul was prohibited from uttering them. I have given you my idea in full to show you that he the physchological mystery of 'in or 'out of the body' what it may, it does not necessarily imply a separately existing entity called an immortal and immaterial soul."

"Then you admit the possibility of being 'out of the body.'"

"Yes, during life. You seem to think it a strange expression, but I believe there is more to be discovered in physchology than in almost any other of the sciences, and always in the opposite direction to immortal-soulism. The facts (apart from the superstitions) of trances, apparitions, and the like mysteries will I believe yet be made more plainly confirmatory of Scripture. Sometime I may perhaps let you read my essay on 'Ghosts.' But let us leave this for the present. I hope I have shown you that Paul's visions and revelations being connected with a future era, can prove nothing to the point this passage is usually cited for. It teaches us Paul's own uncertainty as to the condition in which he received them. And where he was ignorant Are we be confident?"

Editor Restitution:

I thought probably some of the dear people of God would like to hear from the few of us down here in Missouri. I will just say, that on Saturday May 11, Bro. John Foore of Kansas landed in our midst, and preached from Saturday night until Thursday night, two sermons each day. And on Thursday he baptized seven of us into Christ, four men and three women, namely, George Townsend, Wm. Cooper and wife, Nancy Graham, the writer's aged mother, Mary Smith my sister, and wife and myself. The first three named were baptized just one year ago by the Baptists in the same place that Bro. Foore baptized them in. On Friday we took Bro. Foore to his train and bid him farewell. May God's blessings rest upon him. Bro. Foore is a very able speaker and can do a great work for our Master if he was only sent out in the field. We have organized a Bible class, and our subject for last Sunday was the "Kingdom of God;" and next Sunday our subject is, "What is Faith?" We have no preaching brethren so we have to content ourselves by meeting together every Sunday to investigate the Word of God in a Bible class. Brothers and Sisters everywhere, pray for us that we may stand firm and have on the whole armor of the Lord when he comes.

P. J. GRAHAM.

Dear Restitution:

Dear friends and brethren, I will try to write a few lines for your columns, think it my duty to do so. Dear brothers and sisters in Christ, I send greeting. I, too, am trying to walk the narrow way. I am trying to live a godly life, a life of self denial. As time moves on I see the path to life everlasting is still more narrow. If we could just see the life of Christ as in the days of his flesh, and I think we can see it by close study, we would pretty generally know better how to walk and how to talk. O, for a closer walk with God. I say this, dear brothers and sisters, to stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance. If we can realize what sort of creatures we must be to inherit a better country that is heavenly, we will try to bring our bodies in subjection to the will of God by trusting in Christ. To be the Bride of Christ we must be a chaste virgin, unspotted from the world, clothed in fine linen, clean and white, for fine linen is the righteousness of saints. To think of going in at the gates of that beautiful city, whose gates are of pearl, her walls of jasper, her streets of shining gold. Can we attain to that high station? Yes, by the grace of God, and a closer walk with God. We certainly are near the close of Gentile times, and the ushering in of a better age, an age of glory. Oh, for the faith of ancient worthies; oh, for that reign of a thousand years. "A thousand years of earth's coming glory. O, for that reign of a thousand years."

Let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. This will put away the use of tobacco. O, that filthy stuff, made so much use of. I pray the Church of God to quit the use of it, and be a clean vessel for the Master's use when he comes. Your brother looking for the soon coming of the Lord.

S. V. GRIM.

Dear Restitution:

Your paper comes to me like balm to the wounded. I am alone in the faith, as the churches teach here that we are going off to some mystical heaven that is some place above. Ask one of them to locate or describe what kind of a place it is, and they can give you no answer, but they know there is a heaven some place where many mansions are prepared, and one deacon when held down to the question said, "it is a place to sleep." When I tell them that they that are in Christ will receive their reward on this earth and that Christ will come and establish his kingdom on the earth and set down on his Father David's throne in Mount Zion, I am called a heretic, an advocate of a new and dangerous doctrine. Yes, and for so teaching they turned me out of the synagogue. I am here alone and strong in the faith once delivered to the saints. I have my Bible and THE RESTITUTION to comfort me. Brethren, pray for me that my faith fail not. I am waiting for the Master to come, and bring his reward with him to give to every man according to his works. There will be some that receive their portion with the hypocrites that stand high in the Church today.

With your permission I will say a few words to Bro. Cady, like him I am pleased with your answer on secret societies. John calls them "dens and rocks of the earth." Rev. vi. 15. Now as to politics I have my views this way. It is good for a Christian to vote for good men to fill the offices from president down to school director. Why? So that we may have the best men we can get to govern the country, that we may lead a quiet life, Peter says, "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man," etc. 1 Pet. ii. 13-14. Then we want the best of men to make and execute the laws. Paul says, "I exhort therefore that first of all supplications, prayers, intercessions and giving of thanks be made for all men, for kings and for all that are in authority." 1 Tim. ii. 12. Now, why pray for them and not vote for them? If we pray let us work to that end. We need not and ought not go to the foolish campaign meetings (rowdy), keep away from that torch light procession, there is no instruction in that. A Christian should never take any part in such folly, they do not belong to the electing of officers, it is added for show to be seen of men. If any one has different views, I will accept them in a Christian spirit. I have another subject at some future time if acceptable. The first and second death, are they alike, and what are they? Yours in hope of the kingdom.

S. D. SPEAR.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Dear brothers and sisters, how are you all this morning? We cannot speak personally to each other, but how glad I am that although scattered abroad over the earth, we are brought very close together when we speak to one another through THE RESTITUTION, and read the comforting words of the same family, although scattered among the nations and some sleeping in the dust of the earth. Yet we shall be gathered at the coming of our King, as the first fruits unto God of those that have trusted our Father, and taken him at his word, and obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto us. Therefore, brethren let us hold fast to the things we have heard and learned, lest at any time we should let them slip, for we are all saved if we keep in memory what God has delivered unto us through the prophets, apostles, and Jesus the highest of all teachers. Then, dearly beloved in Christ, let us strive earnestly for the prize of the high calling set before us in Jesus the Christ, redeeming the time knowing that the day is far spent, and soon shall come to the city of the living God, if faithful to our trust, and in view of the coming victory, and as Christ our head for the glory that was set before him endured the cross and became perfect through suffering. Let us take up our cross daily and deny ourselves and follow him and not set our affections on earthly things, for where the treasure is, there will the heart be also. Therefore, brethren, do not let us become surfeited and overcharged with the cares of this life, and the Word be choked out, and we become barren and unfruitful. Therefore, dear brethren, let us be diligent and make our calling and election sure. For the encouragement of the brethren, I wish to say I was invited by the Church at Ripley, Ill., to pay them a visit at and meet Bro. John Foore, of Kansas, at that place. Complying with their wishes I went and had the pleasure of hearing him preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. Bro. Foore has been preaching at Ripley for seven years, twice a year; and the brethren are thoroughly educated in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and are alive to to the truth. The meeting was well attended notwithstanding short nights and busy times of the year, and the people seemed anxious to hear the truth. I shall long remember my visit with the brethren at Ripley. I left the brethren promising to return and preach for them Oct. 17, provided the brethren cannot secure some other preaching brother. Your brother in hope of the coming kingdom.

There are persons who criticise the Church because it does not afford sufficient entertainment for the people. These critics forget that the object of church services is something different from that of a concert or theater. The latter is set up to gratify the flesh, while the Church is established to save men.—Herald and Presbyter.

Only a Woman.

Only a woman,
Filled with despair;
Grief-stricken, heart-broken,
Burdened with care.

Only a woman,
With swift falling tears
Old in her pain,
But young in her years.

Only a woman,
Whose deep, fondest trust
Was trifled with, outraged,
And trailed in the dust.

Only a woman,
With low, pitying breath,
Pleading with God
For a merciful death.

Only a woman
Caught in a snare,
Pitifully weak
Wondrously fair.

Only a woman,
That, tempted astray
Seeks rest from her shame
Washed up from the spray.

Only a woman
In her long, last sleep.
Only a woman,
For whom angels weep.

"I could be of no service to you, for I have no heart in the work." This was the answer given the other day by a politician who had been appointed chairman of a committee to promote the success of his party. The man declined the position and offered this candid excuse for his course. His words are to be commended to many in the church, and, forsooth, to some in the pulpit, or about to enter it. If you have no heart in the work, you can be of no service to the cause represented. Far better a thousand times to keep out of a position or a profession when your heart is not in it.—Herald and Presbyter.

Methinks the humble, oft-repeated prayers from an honest heart are more acceptable to the Lord than flowery and eloquent language, though we may admire the latter more.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

Previously published	$300.27

Please write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of love we can get into The Restitution for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

WHO ARE LED BY THE SPIRIT?

This is the title of a new 4-page tract that contains just the arguments needed in mission-work in every community. Price 25 cts per hundred. Written and for sale by, Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8 page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va. not to this office.

Conference Notice.

The Iowa State Conference of the Church of God will be held in Marshalltown, beginning Thursday evening August 15th, and lasting over till Sunday evening the 25th, 1895. Our reasons for place—the most central, and most convenient in the State for railroad for all brethren. At the crossing of the Chicago & North-Western, Iowa Central, and the Great Western or Diagonal Road. The location in the city is on North Third Street opposite the Green House. The street car line starts out just east of the depot and for a nickel will carry you to the ground. Come prepared to tent and to live. Will have tents on the ground, but all who have tents bring them.

As to time, it will be of more leisure than in June, and therefore secure a better attendance. Also crops will then be sufficiently matured to tell of a certainty what can be done for Evangelistic Work. A regular programme will be given out for work. Begin now to arrange to attend the meetings. Leave your hobbies at home and come prepared for a meeting of straight-forward gospel and Bible work. We shall try to make this one of the most interesting meetings we have ever held in Iowa. We expect to be able to secure reduced rates upon all of the railroads in the state for this occasion.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to The Restitution office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed. The fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Reduced Rates—Excursions over Pennsylvania Lines During Season of 1895.

Liberal concessions in fare over the Pennsylvania Lines have been granted for numerous events to take place this summer in various parts of the United States. In addition to local excursions, tickets at reduced rates will be sold over these lines as given in the following paragraphs. Excursion tickets may be obtained at ticket offices on the Pennsylvania System and will also be sold over this route by connecting railways. Some of the points to which tickets will be sold and dates of sale are as follows:

To Boston, August 19th to 25th, inclusive, account Triennial Conclave Knights Templar. Return limit extended to Oct 3d by special arrangement.

To Louisville Ky., in September for National Encampment, G. A. R. One cent per mile. Reasonable return limit.

The reduced rates over the Pennsylvania Lines will not be restricted to members of the organizations mentioned, but may be taken advantage of by the public generally. Any Pennsylvania Lines Ticket or Passenger Agent will furnish desired information concerning rates, time of trains, and other details, to all applicants, or the same may be obtained by addressing J. E. Hanes, Ticket Agent, Plymouth or F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Penna.

Summer Tourist Rates.

The North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western R'y) is now selling excursion tickets at reduced rates to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Ashland, Bayfield, Marquette, Deadwood, Dakota, Hot Springs, Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou, Salt Lake City, and the lake and mountain resorts of the west and northwest. For rates and full information apply to agents of connecting lines. Illustrated pamphlets, giving full particulars, will be mailed free upon application to W. B. Kniskern, G. P. & T. A., Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago, Ill.

To All Concerned.

We desire to call your attention to the additional train service, recently inaugura'ed by the Vandalia Line, between Logansport and St. Joseph, Mich. Trains run daily affording excursionists a full day for a summer outing. The bathing at both Lake Maxenkuckee and St. Joseph are exceptionally fine, while the boating facilities are excellent. Sunday excursion tickets at half fare. Call upon Vandalia line agent for particulars or address E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.—July 31.

The Nickel Plate Road has compiled a list of country homes along the South Shore of Lake Erie, willing to accommodate summer boarders, and a copy will be mailed to any address by enclosing a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road or to B. F. Horner, Gen'l Passenger Agent.—Aug. 31

Appointments.

I will be at Roll, Ind., the 1st Sunday in July. Near Kokomo the 2nd Sunday, near Colfax the 3rd, and at Argos the 4th. All to begin Saturday night before.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 7, 1895. NO. 29.

The Restitution.

The Restitution advocates the final "restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also the unity of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a only life as a representation of final salvation.

Jesus Loves the Children.

He loves the children
Whether rain watch and weep,
The angels will receive them
When open glory's gate.

When in the clouds of heaven,
All kindly and divine,
He come to claim his chosen,
Who like him shall shine.

Then will the children praise him,
"Caught up" from land and sea;
The lovely host of children,
A glorious company!

And many a gathered family
Will greet with joyous songs
And as they reach the Savior,
Will sweetest praise prolong.

Be faithful, little pilgrims:
Be pure, watch and wait
To see by eternal morning
From heaven's open gate.

Who has Authority to Baptize?

A correspondent writes asking an answer to the above question. The incident which gave rise to the query, was that a friend of his whom he had been interested in bringing to a knowledge of the truth had asked for baptism. A Methodist minister hearing of it paid him a visit, and cautioned him against letting those people baptize him, he told them that they were not authorized to administer baptism, and on this account his baptism would not be valid. He was told that none but ordained ministers were authorized to administer baptism.

Now, the thing all comes to this point. Who gives exclusive authority to a set form of men to baptize, who style themselves "Reverend," "Right Reverend," "Most Reverend," "Doctor of Divinity," "His Grace," "His Reverence," "His Eminence," "Father," "Priest" and "Pope?" Where do we read anything about these high titled gentlemen in the Scriptures of Truth? Do we read anything in the Word of God about gentleman who claim a right to hear these titles, are given a monopoly to administer baptism? I have read my Bible a great deal, and have never yet seen them mentioned a single time. A very strange thing is this if they hold a divine monopoly to administer baptism that the Bible is as silent as the grave about their existence. Another thing about these gentlemen which the Bible has not thought worth while mentioning, is that they claim the right to differ with the Bible which says:

"Buried with him in baptism," and use any style their fancy may elect, and even change the wording of Bible words to make them harmonize with their human tinkering. They even dare call caricature baptism. Who ever heard of dipping by sprinkling? What wonderful privileges these gentlemen possess?

Now the real question arises, who gave these men their titles, and [illegible] and a monopoly to administer baptism? As the Bible don't seem to give them any authority for their existence, they can't get their authority to administer baptism from that Book, here we must look for some other source. It is this, some man fancies he has a call to preach, he applies to some denomination which holds the various isms which pleases his fancy, and he is sent to a college well supplied with teachers sent there to teach the isms of the denomination. After he graduates, he receives a call from a church of the same denomination to become its pastor. A company of these Reverends get together and perform their ordination service and install him as pastor. Some one lays hands on his head that he might receive the Holy Ghost (which he don't possess himself) and is set apart and authorized to preach the isms and administer the kind of baptism which please the fancy of his denomination. It is right here he receives his title of "Rev." "D. D." etc., and receives his commission to preach and baptize. The source is wholly human.

Now, let us turn to the Bible and see who were authorized to baptize.

There certainly could not be any question with regard to those who administered baptism in the very presence of the Lord Jesus himself. See John iii. 22.: "After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea; and there he tarried with them and baptized." See John iv. 1; 2: "When therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John, (though Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples.)" Those baptisms administered by "his disciples" were said to be the same as if he had done it, because he authorized it. Who were those "his disciples" baptized? See John iv. 1: "Disciples," (Followers of Jesus). Then they being obedient disciples, were just as much authorized to baptize as those disciples who baptized them. It is simply a question discipleship without regard to official position. An elder, deacon, or evangelist is authorized to baptize, but no more so than a disciple who has no official position. Christ never had any "Reverend Doctors of Divinity" in his day, they did not come in until the apostacy, when they became puffed up, and began to lord it. They derived their authority from human sources, entirely.

It is simple folly to believe that our Lord would give a monopoly to men who walk contrary to God's Word both in doctrine and practice. W. H. Wilson.

Timely Admonitions.

"Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." 1 Cor. ix. 14.

"Why transgress ye the commandment of the Lord, that ye cannot prosper?" 2 Chron. xxiv. 20.

The Church comprises many members, each with a task allotted by God; when all do their duty the work prospers; when some fail the work suffers, and each slothful servant will be held individually responsible.

There are various gifts: preaching, editing, praying, writing or working. Some have influence, some have money, some great love, some a pure and holy life, but each individual has his own special talent entrusted for improvement.

There is a very prevalent idea that more self sacrifice is required of the preacher than of other Christians. There is no warrant for such assumption. The preacher is a brother who has a faculty for expressing himself in public his duty is on the same plane as that of others, no higher reward is promised him, no greater self-denial is demanded. If he be nearer to God than some others, it is not who gave these men their titles, [illegible] and a monopoly to administer baptism? As the Bible don't seem to give them any authority for their existence, they can't get their authority to administer baptism from that Book, here we must look for some other source. If he be nearer to God than some others, it is not because he has made better use of his talents, and received a greater portion of God's Spirit, "for to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge according to the same Spirit." The preacher works for a future reward, he may suffer now, but he is laying up "treasures in heaven." And what pray, are the rest of us working for? The preacher is God's mouthpiece he may be carped at, stoned, and misrepresented as were the apostles, but sooner or later God will judge those who, in Him crucify the Savior afresh.

Many people steel their hearts against any consideration that the minister is a man of like needs and feelings as themselves, as this dependence is made a subject for vulgar wit. Really the minister is a country. The bulk of contributions is from the few, the majority give little or nothing. Some again, contribute of their means liberally and valuably in addition with heart and brain. The Christian holds his money as God's steward, it is not his own because he earns it, often better men have none. It is given of God as a cross or to prove him, or a blessing if rightly appreciated. To deny this is infidelity. Does a Christian wish to place himself on a par with unbelievers and reap their reward? Money has a direct tendency to render men arrogant and self-sufficient. Some consequently regard their gold as more valuable than the gift of other Christians and that they have a right of greater control over it, which is not true. Suppose the brain and heart workers formed their ability to money-spinning, what would become of the cause and what avail would money alone be? Suppose the editor of The Restitution renounced his Christian principles, took in all sorts of advertisements and branched forth into racy articles. He might lose a few subscribers, but these would be speedily replaced by more profitable ones, and he could pay good prices for spicy sketches. Why does he not? Because he has more faith and a greater sense of responsibility than those who muddle away their lives in dreams or noxious delights, or bury their talents in the bank, or use it to their own destruction.

Some of our ablest men have tried to work among our people and have been rejected. They were unappreciated and unsupported. The Lord instructed his folk were to depart in such case and their blessings should return to them. Some thing like this seems to have happened. Perhaps this is why the increase has failed. The Evangelist is discouraged, the gospel beat moulders in disuse. "Also I have set a watchman over you saying, Hearken to the voice of the trumpet, but they said we will not hearken." Exaggerated love of money is the result of a corrupt state of society; a concomitant of advanced civilization founded on heathen principles. It is a sign of the last days. The qualifications most useful in hoarding wealth are anti-Christian and have a direct tendency to destroy souls and waul them to the present world, and this is why it is hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom. It is often the prize of the dishonest and vile, and rapid acquisition of wealth that has come to be regarded as prima facie evidence of fraud or dishonor. He who cultivates his mental and moral qualities gains that which is of permanent value hereafter: he who devotes himself to the accretion of wealth to the neglect of his mental and moral nature, is a curse to humanity, and sows the seed of his own destruction. He is on a par in, 'actually with the slave who says, 'that belongs to me, that belongs to ole master.' Sooner or later he leaves his wealth and the ruin he created behind, to rise in the future age a vicious, selfish, impure, unintelligent brute, destined to perish finally in his own corruption.

LETTER DRAWER.

Dear Restitution:

I am glad there is a way in which the isolated ones can meet with the household of faith, and sit together in heavenly places in Christ. This is a favored privilege, which the children of God may often enjoy, when they are conveniently located. To speak of the prospects of the coming kingdom, and hope of the promises soon to be realized and exhort one another, and so much the more as they see the day approaching. These feasts of love through The Restitution as well as local gatherings, are as gushing springs in a desert land in which the wayworn pilgrim can slake his thirst, as he journeys toward the eternal city. Dear friends, wherever you are, separated from any body of the faith, I sympathize with you with all my heart. But let us not be overcome by our surroundings, nor become drowsy and fall asleep. To go to sleep on duty is a crime for any soldier, and often the punishment is death. Let us watch and be sober. If we suffer with him we shall also reign with him. If we deny him, he also will deny us. We may become lonesome and yearn for congenial associations. Our Exemplar, the Master, sometimes would leave the sweet society of his disciples to appear in the midst of the swelling multitude, to teach and reprove them and to preach the gospel, working miracles to prove to the Jews his authority as the Messiah of the prophets. He was opposed by his near relatives, for we are told that "neither did his brethren believe on him." He has no doubt was lonely and sorrowful. With heart full of love and pity for sinners, he would arise before day, and go up into the mountain to pray. Let us look for a moment, and see him in his lonely walk up the mountain side, until hidden by the foliage of that sequestered spot, perhaps the light of the moon makes his path more visible. The place is familiar for he often resorts thither. In this quiet retreat with the burden of a sinful world upon his shoulders, he falls on his face and pours out his soul in prayer to the Father. He must not err, he must be without a single fault for he is to be the sacrifice for sin, like the typical Lamb without blemish. Dear ones, are we really in sympathy with him, who for the joy set before him, endured the cross, despised the shame. Can we not make some sacrifice? Can we not watch with him one hour, when his soul is exceedingly sorrowful even unto death? Hear him telling his disciples, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me they will persecute you also. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer. I have overcome the world. Dear friends, have you money, houses and land? Doubtless some have, and it is all well enough. Jesus had no where to lay his head. Can you not divide with him? by helping to give the living bread of heaven to some starving soul. Brothers and sisters of southeastern Kansas, why are we not represented at conference with our people in other parts of the State? And if we should have only a single penny to spare, let us be faithful, God knows our ability, and will reward us according to our works. Will not some of you propose a plan of co-operation, that the gospel of the kingdom of God may be preached to the people in all parts of our country who have hitherto heard nothing of it. Let us be in earnest and to God be all the glory. The suggestions I humbly submit to the consideration of every brother and sister in Kansas, and I pray they may be received in the same spirit in which they are given, that others as well as ourselves may enjoy the unsearchable riches of Christ by and by. We have the dear old Restitution, let it ring out the news. There is not a congregation of our people in Wilson County that I know of, only a few scattered here and there. There are three or four of us here near Dan, but none of us able to preach much. I understand the Seventh Day people are about to capture some of the picket guard, out at Lafountain, some ten miles west of here. I will close as my letter is already too lengthy. Your Sister in hope of eternal life.

Sallie Black.

Editor Restitution:

I will try and write a few lines this morning to the letter drawer. It cheers me up to read the many letters from the believers of the one faith. There are but few of us in this part that are contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, and as we all know it is not a popular doctrine, and a true believer of the one faith must have the courage of Christ and the apostles to stand firm. If we would work with other churches in all things it would not make so much difference what we believed, but to step out on the promises and stand firm is another thing. I believe that a person should stand firm in what they believe. Let it be what it may be, but it seems with some it is any thing to be popular in this world. I hope this is not the case with any of the one faith. Let us stand firm on the foundations of the apostles and the prophets, Christ being the Chief Corner Stone, and not be carried about by every wind of doctrine. We have many ups and downs, dark and cloudy days that cross our path in this world, but oh, let us stand firm and when the Son of righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings then the clouds will clear away, there will be no more darkness, no more sickness, pain nor death, for the former things will have passed away. I think that time is near at hand. Through the kindness of some friend I have been getting The Restitution about a year. I appreciate the kindness and return many thanks, for I receive much information from its columns. We hear no such good news from the brethren here. I love to hear the brothers and sisters proclaim their hope of the promise made to the fathers. Although we may never see each other in this life, may we so live that when they shall come from the east, west, north and south, and set them down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God that we will be in that happy company. Talk with the people here and they tell you we are not to go to the old Bible for anything for it has all been fulfilled. They do not believe Christ will come in person to be King of all the earth. It seems as if the people are like Christ said of the Pharisees, "For this people's heart is waxed gross and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and should understand with their hearts and should be converted and I should heal them." Oh, I long for the time to come when the curse will be removed off this earth, when it will be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. Yours in hope of the soon coming of the Lord.

Jesse Harrold.

Dear brothers and sisters of the one faith:

As the love feast calls for a word from all, I will say that we have been greatly refreshed in the Word of God, by the coming of Bro. George Kidwell and brother Joshua Kidwell and wife. Brother George preached three discourses here. He is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. He had been preaching over on the Osage

Come out from the world and put on Christ by being buried in baptism at that place. Two of them were brother Joshua Kidwell's children. I will say that it is sad to part with dear ones of like precious faith, but we all realize that the time is near when we shall meet to part no more in the kingdom of God, which is to be under the whole heavens. We believe we shall soon reach the end of our toilsome journey, and we realize that the time is near at hand that will test every man's work of whatsoever it is. Let us ask ourselves this solemn question, "Are we ready to meet the King, and will it be well with me and with you, dear brothers and sisters, when he comes? How few there are who are willing to forsake the world with all its pleasures, deny themselves, take up the cross and follow the footsteps of our blessed Redeemer? Dear brothers and sisters, let us turn our backs to the world and all that is of a worldly nature as much as we can, for James iv. 4 says, "Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God," and as we have come out from the world, let us be careful that our daily walk is such as becometh Christians. We should be separate and touch not the unclean thing that we may be received of him when he comes." Let us be strong in the Lord and put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to withstand in the evil day, having on the breastplate righteousness and our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, above all taking the shield of faith that we may be able to quench the fiery darts of the wicked and take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, and ever walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called with all lowliness and meekness with long suffering, forbearing one another, in love endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace." Oh, let us build up on that most holy faith and keep ourselves in the love of God. Oh, dear brothers and sisters, if we only could say with the great Apostle of the Gentiles, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto them also that love his appearing." What do we care for the honors of this world so long as our faith grows the eternal? I beg an interest in your prayers. Yours in Christ.

Mary E. Howard.

Weeding and Seeding.

Coleridge, the philosopher, was once visited by Thelwall, a skeptic. Thelwall maintained that children should not be taught religion: it was interfering with their freedom, and filling their minds with prejudices; they should be allowed to grow up naturally, and then choose for themselves. The two sauntered into his garden, Coleridge loved his books more than his plants, and his garden was a mass of weeds; but Thelwall was fond of gardening. "I wonder," said he, "Mr. Coleridge, that your garden is in such a state. Why don't you weed it and plant flowers?" "Oh," replied Coleridge with a smile, "I want my garden to grow naturally. I won't fill it with prejudices."

Your soul resembles your garden in this, the evil seeds lurk within, and good seeds must be planted in their place. To let it alone is to give it over to utter waste. Near some farm-houses there used to be a corner called "the devil's neuk." The superstitious idea was, that by giving one spot over to the evil one, he would be propitiated and would not injure the rest of the farm. The "neuk" was simply left to itself, and thus became a wilderness at the corner of a beautiful field. Any human heart, if left without Christian training, might soon be overrun with all the foul growths of evil.—Rev. James Wells, M. A.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

WE shall do our best to keep these lines from an unknown author going the rounds: -

Is thy cruse of comfort wasting?
Rise and share it with another,
And through all the years of famine
It shall serve thee and the brother,
And the Lord Himself will feed thee.
For thy handful will suffice;
Scanty fare for one may thus
Make a royal feast for two.

For the heart grows rich in giving:
All its wealth is living grain;
Seeds which mellow in the sowing,
Scattered, fill with gold the plain.
Is thy burden hard and heavy?
Do thy steps drag wearily?
Help to bear thy brother's burden;
God will bear both it and thee.

Is the heart a well left empty?
None but God its void can fill;
Nothing but a ceaseless fountain
Can this ceaseless longing fill.
Is the heart a living power?
Self-entwined its strength sinks low;
It can only live in loving,
And by serving love will grow.

THERE are three hundred and three verses in the epistle to the Hebrews, and in thirty-six of these, nearly one in every eight references is made to the second coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, or to events closely related to his reappearing. We refer to this because a certain member of a Bible class left it while this epistle was studied because it was a waste of time to talk so much about the second coming of Christ.

The Immortality of the Soul.

For some time past this subject has been discussed in the New York Morning Advertiser. On commencing upon the flood of letters pouring into the office on this subject the editor remarked that a vast majority of philosophers, scientists and thinkers from Socrates, Plato, Aristotle and Cicero down to our times have accepted and taught the doctrine of endless life; and adds if it is a myth, it is at least a harmless and consoling myth, having lightened many a load,—and the day is apparently far distant when the majority of mankind will part with it.

It is impossible to read what the spiritual guides say about the immortality of the soul without coming to the conclusion that they are trying to make themselves believe it,—although they talk as if they knew all about it. The Rev. B. B. Tyler, the most prominent minister of the Disciple Church says, "It is universal'y believed and taught by Christian people." But what of that? Why does he not show why they believe and teach it? Ought not this doctrine so universally believed and taught as essential truth, be provable by the Word of truth? If not, by what authority do they teach it? How does it prove that the soul is immortal to say as the Doctor does, "That every part of the body is a product of the soul, according to its likeness. This is so the soul may be prepared to carry out the work laid out for it while on earth." We say, Now, do you know that, sir? The fact that you give no proof of the doctrine you defend is conclusive evidence that you have none to offer! Have they not begun at the wrong end? Instead of taking many thousand a year to save immortal souls, ought they not first establish the fact that there are immortal souls that need saving? If they go to Socrates and Plato to prove the immortality of the soul, are they not in duty bound to save them by means of their philosophy? They have no right to come to a book that not only ignores the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, but positively teaches the contrary. The Book of God furnishes no medicine for the cure of immortal souls. It offers to confer immortality upon mortal souls. This shows the editor grossly at fault when he says "if it is a myth, it a harmless myth." Was it a harmless myth when the belief of it by our first parents brought death and a thousand ills into the world? Shame on the Doctor of divinity that says that Christ, Paul, Peter and John all taught the immortality of the soul, and neglects to say where. It was the serpent who taught it. The Doctor must have been absent minded when he says "every part of the body is the product of the soul." Gen. ii. 7 rather gives the impression that elohim formed man of the dust of the ground.

A Letter.

From Dr. Talmage to Philip Philips, the great composer of sacred song of Delaware, Ohio, but which failed to reach him before his death, proves the Doctor to be in the front rank of paganism. A visitor from another planet would never dream that the Creator had ever revealed man's state and destiny, judging by this epistle. It is as follows:

LINCOLN, NEB., June 25, 1895.

My Friend of many years, Philip Philips: I hear you are going home. I congratulate you. When you get there, kiss for me the sacred hand of him who was slain to redeem us. When you meet any of us kindred tell them I expect to join them through the grace that saves the chief of sinners. Cheer up! It will not be a half a second between your pillow and the city of rapture. As you go in among the choirs of the ransomed to resume your work of Christian song, reserve for me a seat back of the door. Multitudes who were blessed by your singing all around the world will be at the shining gate to welcome you. Good by! Good by! Good by!

T. DeWitt Talmage.

He speaks with great assurance, authority and familiarity for the chief of sinners, does the Doctor. How in the name of truth does he know what he says when we have but one source of information on these matters, and it perfectly silent? It is serpent philosophy throughout; and if Jesus told the truth he and all of his followers will be ditched together. We do not see how he could more flatly contradict the truth of God, or more completely supercede the gospel of Christ as the saving power, than he does by song-singing. Song-singing is the modern power for converting people. We realized this more than ever after attending one of the Moody meetings in Cleveland. Having never seen nor heard him, we decided to attend one of his great meetings, and study his methods, and endeavor to divine his power. We found some four or five thousand people packed into Music Hall. On the platform was a person of fine presence and beautiful voice delighting the audience with solos, the whole congregation being invited to join in the choruses. For about one hour and a quarter this was kept up, each song seeming to enthuse more and more, and at last having reached a red heat, there was an address of some 30 or 40 minutes —the story of David being the subject. It was interspersed with droll remarks and witticisms that raised laughs all over the hall,—but from beginning to end not a word of gospel truth—God's saving power—was uttered,—and "the glorious meeting" was dismissed between ten and eleven o'clock, and we sorrowfully wended our way homeward more than ever convinced that the inhabitants of earth will never learn righteousness till God's judgments are in the earth.

Question Drawer.

"Dear Bro. Joblin:- Can you help me to give a clear explanation of Mark ix. 49 to one who is apparently honest? It says, 'For every one shall be salted with fire and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt.' It is claimed that salt is a preserving agent, and that when God says he will salt the wicked with fire, it means that he will preserve them by fire in Gehenna. Of course I don't believe that, but at the same time I do not seem able to shape an answer that shows up the truth, as I would like to." Yours in hope.

H. M.

In response to the above we would say you will not see any serious difficulty when you know that neither the Sinaitic nor the Vatican MSS. contains the words, "And every sacrifice shall be seasoned with salt." They are only found in Alexandrian MSS., and it is well known that Alexandria was the center from which the Platonic philosophy radiated, and the mystical principles of interpretation were promulgated. Take notice that fire is God's devouring element; he says he will burn up the proud and all that do wickedly so completely that neither root nor branch shall be left of them, (see Mal. iv. 6). As it would be folly to think of two destinies for one class of people, we know right well that preservation by salt or anything it might typify is a fallacy. It is true that every oblation of meat offering in the Levitical ceremonial was seasoned with salt; but we regard that as a prevention of corruption, pending the burning upon the altar, and possibly to ensure complete destruction by rendering it denser, or solider. You are aware that the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah are held up as an example of punishment awaiting the unsaved. And is it not in agreement with scripture, that as truly as the rain, not of water but of fire, destroyed those cities, so the salting the wicked with fire will chase both them and their memory from our planet?

From the Chicago Tribune we learn that Elder Joshua V. Himes, well known by many as a co-worker with Wm. Miller back in the 40s, died at Elk Point, S. D., July 27, aged 91 years.

THE Times' Constantinople correspondent says that "The increasing gravity of the situation in Macedonia and Crete may compel the powers to take into consideration the condition of all the Christian subjects of the Porte. Large supplies have been sent into Macedonia, and there is every probability that serious events will occur soon in that country. It is hinted that a European congress to work out the Sultan's offer of a general system of reforms for his provinces. A widespread agitation among the Christian population would inevitably be attended by terrible atrocities, the Turkish government being wholly unable to control the turbulent Albanian chiefs."

WE learn by the London Times of an anti-Semetic outburst in Galicia last week. Over a dozen persons were tried for rioting, and a majority of the accused were convicted. It appears that a Hebrew gentleman named Dr. Leser took lodgings at the house of a widow in Sandyesh. This set the whole town in an uproar and Dr. Leser's lodgings were stormed under the eyes of a police inspector, by a crowd who had been singing hymns before the statue of a saint. The mob included not only the lower classes, but numbers of the best citizens. As it was well understood that the accused were mere instruments of the real instigators, the sentences were the lightest which it was possible to impose.

Dear Restitution:

I will write a few lines. I will say THE RESTITUTION is all the preaching I have. Once in a great while I get to Rossville to hear Bro. Conner preach, but I live twenty miles from there, so I don't get to go very often. I have tried to get some new subscribers for the paper, but no one will take it. Some say they would just as soon be an infidel as to believe as I do. I find some that will read the paper so I scatter them around where any body will read them. Your Sister in Christ.

MRS. M. A. WARREN.

Report of Labor.

Those who were present at the June meeting at Antioch will remember that Bro. Israel Roberts, presented a letter written by Bro. D. F. Bowles, of Minocqua, Wisconsin, requesting the service of some minister to teach and immerse some into the all-saving name. The duty of answering this urgent call was assigned to the writer, and on June 27th bidding good-bye to loved ones at home took the afternoon train for Chicago, thence over the C. M. & St. P. with one change at New Lisbon, arrived in safety at Minocqua where I was met by Bro. Bowles and conveyed to the pleasant place that became my home during my sojourn in the land of pines and lakes. Bro. Bowles had secured the use of the Baptist house in Minocqua for a series of meetings. After a days rest we held the first service, using the words of the Master "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly" as a foundation. The closest attention was paid as the mighty truth "life only through Christ" was unfolded and the impossibility of future life without a union with the life giver, seemed to come to clothe the Scriptures in a new and beautiful garb, eliciting from some such expressions as, "how plain the subject is made," "I can understand the Scriptures now" and "how easy to understand the Bible as it reads" showing that today as when the Master taught it the truth is heard gladly by the "common people" and if the simplicity of their minds were not corrupted by false teaching how gladly would they accept the truth. But the worst enemies of the truth are not scoffing infidels and openly profane men as the sequel will show. At the time of commencing these meetings, the pastor of the congregation Mr. Cain was absent, attending an association. At his return the town was filled with reports of the "stranger" who was teaching a strange doctrine, and he must needs go and hear what the "babbler" had to say. And right here a word to all who teach the pure word of God, this man was not greeted as "brother", neither was he invited to a seat on the rostrum, but to sit among the other hearers and learners, until he could be educated in the school of Christ, and thereby become qualified to enjoy that closer relation of brother and associated worker in the cause of Christ. A few lessons convinced Mr. Cain that there was no congruity of doctrine between us, that if this course of teaching should be permitted, trouble would assuredly be the result. Permission had been given to ask questions pertaining to each lesson. At the close of the lesson on the Abrahamic promise and showing that faith in these promises and baptism into Christ was the only possible way to obtain salvation, and the line dividing between time and false hopes of salvation stood out so clearly that Mr. Cain openly declared that "if I intended to continue preaching such doctrine they would not feel justified in granting us the further use of their house," to this I respondedly promptly that I had not taught them anything except the teaching of the prophets, Christ and the apostles, and if I could not be permitted to teach this they might close the house at once, that it was a matter of indifference to me whether they closed it or not, if the continued use of the house depended upon a change of doctrine. Then Mr. Cain put the question direct "did I believe and teach that they (the Baptists) could not be saved unless they believed as I had taught in the lessons presented." Wishing to modify the question so as to leave "me" out and substitute the exact words with a familiar illustration, but this would not answer his purpose, the question must be answered direct. "Did I believe they could be saved without believing this" (alluding to the gospel) and the answer came quick, positive and emphatic "no." Then a hurried consultation was held by the pastor and a few members who retired to counsel together. In a few minutes they returned and in a lugubrious tone said we "could continue the meeting."

The entire proceedings were so unique that we suspected a design on the part of the pastor and were not mistaken as the next meeting showed. Neither pastor nor members were visible. The policy adopted was "you can have the house but not the members of the church." And from that time on they were conspicuous by their absence. Discretion is sometimes the better part of valor, for "he that fights and runs away, may live to fight another day, but he that is in battle slain will never live to fight again." Capitalists get a "corner" on wheat, why not a pastor get a "corner" on his congregation? But seriously would such material work into the divine plan? God loves free men, not slaves to tradition, let us not expend all our sympathy on the poor deluded slave of Catholicism, others are as much or more entitled to it. As we had no interest in giving lessons to the walls, pews and chandeliers, we secured a hall in the town, but owing to a number of secular meetings in the hall interrupting our line of argument, the next move was made into the country and two meetings were held at Bro. Bowles home. A report came to us that the Methodist house was to be placed at our disposal, but the pastor put a hasty quietus upon this movement by telling the people that I was teaching a false doctrine. A suggestion was then made to speak in the open air on the streets. This I consented to do but in the meantime arrangements had been made to use the public school building, a commodious well seated handsome building. In this place we gave lessons to a small attendance and on Friday night closed the week's meetings at the school house.

Our last meeting was held on the second Sunday in July. A little company assembled at the margin of the Lake Kawaguesaga and after reading the sixth of Romans and invoking the blessing of him who ordereth all things well we led four willing believers in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, into the rolling waves and while the feeble voice of the administrator was drowned by the winds and dashing waves so that those on shore could scarcely hear the words—may we not hope the act was approved by him whose voice hushed to silence the mad rushing waves, and whose can speak peace to troubled hearts, and whose patient voice sounds through the pardoning words "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." We formed the acquaintance of three others who attended a few lessons, but owing to the frequent interruptions in the meetings they were not fully persuaded. To overcome this private instruction was given, but the golden opportunity was allowed to pass unimproved. Another opportunity to hear the truth proclaimed publicly may never occur to these people, and in view of this I instructed Bro. Bowles to supply the needed instruction to these inquirers after truth and if they demanded baptism to assist them in putting on Christ as the great sin-covering. And also to "strengthen the few that did obey. Call them together, hold social meetings, attend to all the ordinances of the Lord's Body, in short use all the means of grace that will enable you to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. Let the Word of God dwell in you richly, admonish, encourage, and exhort one another that you may be found of him in peace and blameless at his coming. In closing this brief report I wish to acknowledge the aid to the work through the persistent teaching of Bro. Bowles who holds the truth so sacred that no compromise will ever be made with error. He has patiently taught in a private way all who would listen. Let all who have the truth, impart it to those who will hear it.

May the grace of God be with you all.

J. F. WAGONER.

Dear Restitution:

Enclose please find copy of our programme for the state conference. I wish also to say that our hearts have been made glad to have another of the called out ones come out and take a stand for the Lord and be baptized unto the all-saving name. This is the first addition to our little body here since Bro. Eychaner was here last summer with the tent. Others are seriously thinking of the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and we hope in the near future to add some more to the body of Christ at this point. Pray for us brethren. Yours in Hope.

Dear Restitution:

"His Coming is Near."

"Christ Will Soon Appear."

These are significant words to appear in the head lines of the Chicago Daily Tribune. But there they are in large letters so spaced as to give them prominence. They are the head lines to a special in the Tribune of the 16th inst. from Pittsburgh, Pa., giving an account of the calling of a prophetic Conference to meet in Allegheny City, from Oct. 29 to Nov. 1, inclusive. The conference is called by and will be participated in by persons representing the Presbyterian, United Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist Churches; and no doubt many other churches will be represented at the conference. The last conference of this kind was held in the city of Chicago, in Nov., 1886. It was very largely attended by persons from nearly all the large cities and representing most of the churches. This is not a movement by, or in behalf of the churches, but by individual members of the different denominations. The signs of the times are ominous. Fifty thousand delegates attended the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Association held last week in Boston. More than five thousand delegates are in attendance at the convention of the Baptist Young People being held this week at Baltimore. Five thousand delegates, with more coming, are in attendance on the Pan-American Congress of Religion now in session at Toronto, Canada. The holding of three such meetings, all so largely attended, within less than two weeks, is unprecedented. Add to this the calling of the Advent Conference mentioned above, and we have a record that is not equaled in the history of the nation, and perhaps not in the history of the world. We are surely in the last days. They cry peace, peace, but there is no peace. Come Lord Jesus and come quickly.

R. S. DAUGHTS.

THEOLOGICAL mysteries have so darkened the minds of men that when the "Truth as it is in Jesus" is presented, they can see no fatal difference between it and the ecclesiastical fables so carefully cherished by the creeds. Such fold their hands, soothing themselves with the thought that "Belief in Christ is all that is necessary"; and wandering aimlessly through life, stumble at last into that yawning certainty—the grave. To them, if haply we may arouse one, these lines are addressed.

At the risk of being charged with dealing in fundamentals we make the statement, approved by the best logicians, that the meaning of a word is that which we think about when we use the word (see Jevon's Logic) A moment's reflection will demonstrate the truth of this.

Now, we ask our friends what the name, Jesus Christ, suggests to the minds of Presbyterians or Baptists, or Methodists? What do they think about when his name is presented? It is as easy to answer as to ask the question: Ideas of a spirit world appear immediately. Thoughts of a realm of immortal spirits "beyond the bonds of time and space" float through the mind attended by a panoramic view of that place of torment so necessary to immortal soulism. This mysticism stands for his name. With them his name means just that. Destroy THAT, and his name with them loses all meaning and significance. But how beautifully different is that for which his name stands with us. It's mention brings visions of a glorious King, rending the heavens, calling to a blessed immortality his sleeping saints; and changing, in the twinkling of an eye, to incorruptibility his living worthies, who, with "bodies fashioned like unto his own glorious body," as royal princes, "reign in righteousness" and "rule in Judgment" during a reconstruction period in which the "Restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began," making radiant the whole earth with God's glory.

Say you there is no difference? Why the difference here is just as vast as the difference between man and God made things—it is immeasurable. The one is the vain speculations of dreamy, transitory men; the other, the eternal decrees of the ever living God.

We may be sure that the Christian system does not consist in sounds or names; but in vital doctrines, plans and purposes—in the Gospel of the kingdom inseparably connected with his name. It is not a meaningless belief in a name that saves. It is belief in his words and obedience to his commandments that is fraught with eternal Life—"The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life."

Say you still "there is no difference"? Why the very sepulchres wax eloquent in the presence of the vastness of the difference—the words of the one are life giving; of the other, mere foolish fancies. Arouse yourselves then, friends. Hesitate not for a moment about a choice. Be wise—"and shine as the brightness of the firmament."

Resurrection.

Behold the Savior rising from the tomb!
Superior to the hands of Death's cold sleep
He rises while his followers mourn and weep
Conquering Death bereft of half its gloom
And taking from the grave its dreaded sting.
Thus triumphing o'er all his enemies,
Who vainly tried their arts to check his rise.
The Crucified is now the risen King.

"First-fruits of them that slept," the Savior lives,
And all who "sleep in him" shall rise again.
And with him in his kingdom yet shall reign
Eternally triumphant o'er their foes.
In that "first resurrection" may we share,
And arise to meet our Savior in the air.

They Sang a Hymn.

They sang a hymn, but never before
Did heart on earth such thought inspire;
Not Moses on the Red Sea shore,
Nor David with his living lyre;
It was a long-lost Hebrew air,
Oft by wild hills where exiles trod;
And while they sang, as heaven it were,
To look upon the Lamb of God.

The Paschal moon was shining bright
On Olivet, and tower and tree;
In every house a burning light
In every soul a jubilee;
Save in that lonely upper room,
With fear and anguish hearts were wrung;
Dim shadows of tomorrow's doom
Above the cross on Calvary hung.

The trembling stars then watch'd on high
The garden of Gethsemane;
While powers of darkness gathered nigh
That timid flock of Galilee!
Thrice prayed our Lord—even out, they slept.—
"Father, thy will be done," cried he;
And drops of blood his body wept.
In that dread hour of agony!

From heaven he came to heal our woes;
His blood he shed the best to save;
Like man he died; like God he rose;
Ended in glory from the grave.
No tongue can tell, no heart conceive,
The rest to his beloved given;
Those martyr'd saints, who met that eve,
They sang a hymn; 'twas heard in heaven.

Conversations on Important Bible Topics. No. 3.

BY JOHN WILSON.

"Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart."

"You may perhaps be right, brother, in this, but it seems impossible for you to explain away such as Paul's 'desire to depart and be with Christ which is far better,' and 'to die is gain.' How could it be gain to the apostle to leave his work unfinished? And he could not be with Christ in the grave."

"My dear sister, I hope I shall never attempt to explain away any statements of the Bible, though I may try to drive away the mists which have been raised about them by a false theology. As to this fortress in which you seem to entrench your argument, let us see if it will avail you. Read the whole passage, Phi. i. 20-24,

'Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether by life or by death. For to me to live is Christ, and to die gain. But if I live, in the flesh this is the fruit of my labor, yet what I shall choose I wot not. For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better. Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you.'

You see that Paul's noble self-abnegation affords no warrant for immortal-soulism. The gain by his death would be to Christ, his Master, in the way expressed in the saying of Luther: 'the blood of the martyr is the seed of the church." If you take the 23rd verse in the same connection you cannot be far wrong. The state of Paul's mind I think is expressed in these lines from a piece entitled Paul the Aged.

To be offered for the Lord
I am willing, so the word
Of the Kingdom freely run,
As it mightily begun.

If I tarry yet in life,
Christ the object of my strife,
If a martyr I am slain,
By my death let him have gain.

If my choice it were to be,
Savior, I'll second to thee;
Without dying, change my state;
But with thee, Lord, is my fate."

"Then you think Paul desired a translation?"

"Such seems most agreeable to the words. Cousin John has another explanation of this passage. He thinks that Paul simply desired to be released from prison, and to be with Christ in the sense of gospelling—that companionship expressed in the last words of Jesus, 'Go you and preach, &c., I am with you always.' But anyway, he says nothing about his soul departing from his body. It was he himself who wished for a release, an unloosing, that he, not a part of him, might be with Christ. I acknowledge that there is some difficulty in understanding this passage, but is it not unwise to think to escape it by bringing in an idea foreign to the Bible teaching. It is evidently a mistake to try to make one difficult passage override a hundred plain testimonies."

"I would not wish to do that."

"I know it. Therefore I speak the more plainly. There is another supposed proof in Heb. xii. 23: 'Ye are come to the spirits of just men made perfect.' But you must take this approach to be in the future, whether you reason Scripturally, (chap xi. 40,) or rationally, (for neither the writer nor they to whom he wrote were already in spirit-land.) When we receive the spirit-body then we shall join the company of the perfected just ones, we cannot before. The souls under the altar can afford no ground for argument till it has first been proved what and where the souls and the altar are. Have I mentioned all the doubtless passages?"

"In the New Testament you have done most. But does not Paul in one passage make a distinction between soul and body?"

"I suppose you refer to 1 Thess. v. 23. But which is the immortal principle—the soul or the spirit?"

"I always understood them to be synonymous."

"Then argument from the passage in question falls to the ground, for Paul's prayer is that their 'whole spirit and soul and body, be preserved blameless to the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.' You must have either two immortal entities, or a mortal soul or a mortal spirit; or otherwise make the three to be alike. Paul speaks the Word 'piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit,' and those which can be separated cannot be one and the same. Which will you chose as the immortal?"

"The soul is always so called.

"The soul that sinneth it shall die. 'In thy skirts is found the blood of the souls of the poor innocents.' 'Ye have slain the souls who should not die, and kept alive the souls who should not live.' 'They slew all the souls which were therein.' 'God will redeem thy soul from the hand of the grave.' 'What man is he who liveth and and shall not see death? shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave?" These are a few instances of the use of the word soul in Scripture; beside which God is spoken of as having a soul, and the land as possessed of both soul and body."

"You almost frighten me; but will not spirit stand the test then?"

"The preacher says of men and beasts, 'they have all one spirit, as dieth the one, so dieth the other; man hath no pre-eminence above the beast.' And in Moses we read of 'the breath of the spirit of lives.'"

"Oh, Alfred, you leave me without any ground to stand upon; but you know our preacher said he could lay the whole argument on 'the spirit returns to God who gave it."

"I did not cite this passage again as I thought I had sufficiently demonstrated the absurdity of the argument founded upon it. What is spirit? Or firstly, where did you get your immortal one?"

"I suppose I was born with it."

"Not an answer, Ella dear: where or whence, not when, was my question. Did you receive it from your parents, or direct from God?"

"From my parents, I suppose, for scripture speaks of Adam receiving the breath of life from God."

"Good. But if the popular philosophical arguments are true, Adam could not transmit it. They pronounce it to be indivisible and indissoluble, consequently it cannot be communicated to others. Yet holding opinion as you do, that it is naturally depraved, you dare not resort to the other supposition of a sinful soul coming from the Creator of all good. And in the supporter you brought from Gen. ii. 7, there is not the slightest allusion to an immortal soul; the statement being that the breath of lives which man has in common with other creatures was breathed into him, whereby he became a living soul, so that he must have been a dead soul previously. The radical meaning of the word 'spirit' is breath, air, or the principle of vitality in the air which we breathe. We are dependent for existence on the reception of this air into our lungs, hence Isaiah's emphatic testimony to man's mortality—'cease ye from man whose breath is in his nostrils,' and Job's, 'all the while my breath is in me, and the spirit of God is in my nostrils.' No, sister, the Bible teaches me that man has no life but through the air-energized blood. He is mortal altogether, and when this grass-like period of existence ends, he goes to 'the land of forgetfulness,' 'of silence,' 'the land of darkness as darkness itself.' 'In the grave there is no remembrance of God,' for 'all our thoughts perish' then. 'There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in sheol, whither thou goest.' 'The dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward, for their love, and their hatred, and their envy are now perished."

"But the idea of lying in the grave for so long a time, if there is no existence till the resurrection, is so gloomy."

"Why should it be? Time you will know not of there, so that it will appear but a short night's sleep. In the elders' faith it was a welcome repose.

'Where the wicked cease from troubling,
And the weary are at rest.'

Many, I doubt not, experience the feelings, I read of a poor girl expressing: 'she was so tired and sick of the noise and bustle of life, that she was afraid of going to heaven without a good long sleep in the grave first.' I can conceive no terror in death except for the ungodly; the Christian has the awakening in prospect. Oh, Ella! the joys of that awakening the tongue cannot describe, for even the psalmist is compelled to make his satisfaction the climax, 'I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness.' Said the patient man:

'I know that my Redeemer liveth.
And that he shall stand in the latter day upon the earth:
And though after my skin, worms destroy this body,
Yet in my flesh shall I see God.'

And again,

'All my set time will I patiently wait.
Till the period of my reviving shall come:
Thou shalt call and I will answer.
Thou wilt long with desire the work of Thy hands.'

Job xiv. 14, 15. (New Translation).

And how triumphantly the Apostle Paul exults in the resurrection. To him there was no anodyne for sorrow like the hope of this awaking out of sleep. 'When I die, if so I should, let it be with the anticipatory benison resting upon me,

'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth.
Yea, said the Spirit,
They rest from their labors,
And their works do follow them.'

Christ's grand attributes, of which immortal-soulism robs him, are the Resurrection and the Life; and 'because he lives we shall live also;' but 'now our life is hid with him in God.'

"Yes, and he is in heaven, so we must go there ere we get it. You cannot deny there being a heaven above."

"I cannot, Ella. I feel one, I see another, and I know on testimony that there is a third, the heaven of heavens where Jehovah's throne is. But we have no promise given us of living there, because the heaven is the Lord's, but the earth hath he given to the children of men.' And your inference, that we must go to heaven to get the life, is uprooted by the continuance of my quotation, 'When Christ, our life, shall appear, THEN shall ye also appear with him in glory.' Jesus comforted his disciples with a promise of heavenly mansions, but they are after he comes again. To me, a delay, even though it may be mostly passed in 'the city of the silent,' so that I may have part in the heaven promised, is far more welcome than an insensible, intangible condition of disembodiment, for such it must be if the soul is immaterial."

"Where is the heaven you expect then?"

"Where?—in the land of promise, or restored Eden: when?—from the appearing of our Lord. To reign with him over the nations, to be the evangels of righteousness, peace, and blessing to the peoples, is far preferable to being eternally playing on the golden harps with fingers which cannot touch them, or singing praises with tongues from which no sound can be produced, according to the logic of the philosophic definitions of immateriality. Our home will be in the city of our God in the land and time when sorrow and sighing shall be done away, all tears be wiped from the eyes, 'where the inhabitant shall no more say, I am sick.' The temple of God will be our sanctuary, where we shall join the song of Moses and the Lamb, and we shall stand before the throne of Jesus, and as his younger brother princes share his government, till the new heavens and earth we look for appear."

"I wish, dear Alfred, that I could think with you, for your hope raises strangely pleasant feelings, but I do not see yet how it can be as you state. But we must have some more talk about these things when you get back from Kirkby."

Out and In.

God' grace brings out of old practises into new ones. Conversion, if it is genuine, makes a radical change of conduct. The profane lips stop swearing, and the tippling lips stop drinking. The careless sinners seek the house of God, and the lover of pleasure finds a higher pleasure in trying to please Jesus. Old habits are sloughed off; there is a new hand at the helm, steering the life into new channels. This is the only religion worth the praying for—a religion that purges, cleanses, sweetens, and regulates the whole life When stingy A begins to send bucks of coal to the poor, and churlish B begins to take his children on his lap and treat his poor relations kindly, when slippery C begins to practice honest dealings, and godless D sets up a family altar, there is pretty good evidence that God's grace is at work. They have come out of the old path. They have taken a new departure.

There is another coming out that is essential to all healthy and impressive piety. It is a coming out from the world into Christ's fold. The friendship of the world is enmity to God. No man can serve two masters. No man can remain in Egypt and yet enter Canaan. "Up, get thee out of this place!" said the Lord to Lot. And Jesus says: "Come out and be ye separate. Be ye not conformed to this world."

Never was there a time when distinct, clear, and decided emancipation from worldly-mindedness and sinful conformities was more demanded than now. The Bible draws sharp lines. On one side walks Christ. On the other goes "the world" on its thoughtless way toward destruction. No man can bestride the line and walk with both. And, if we draw the frivolous, and selfish, and unconverted over to our side of the line, we must stand firmly by conscience and by Christ. It is not by yielding to the world that we can ever convert them. We must come out and stand separate, and then endeavor in loving earnestness to draw them over to Christ's side. Compromises are the devil's baits. The moment we quit the position of staunch conformity to Christ's commandments and begin to walk "one mile" with the world, it will soon compel us to "go with them twain." If we yield the "coat," they will soon rob us of "our cloak also." When Moses tried to get Hobab toward Canaan, he did not offer to stay with him. He said: "Come, go with us, and we will do thee good." We, too, must come out from the territory of sin if we would bring any souls into Christ. —CUYLER.

Report of Labor.

On July 20th I went to McBride to baptize a dear old gentleman who has been brought into the truth principally by the efforts of our noble workers brother and sister Boice. All last winter at the request of Brother Dolph they met with him evening after evening to study the Scripture together. Brother Dolph saw a beauty in its unfolding as he had never seen before and accepted the good news, and at his request I baptized him June 21st into the all-saving name. From there I visited the little flock at Millbrook, returning home on Monday June 24th to find our little grandson at our home dangerously ill with cholera infantum, for 21 days and nights wife and daughter have scarcely left his side, day after day fighting the enemy, death, and at last thank God, we can sit down and look at him rejoicing to know he is past all danger. Life and death, how full of hope is one, how laden with sorrow the other. At a recent meeting at Dutton, a husband and wife expressed a desire for baptism, and on Friday p. m. June 28th they were buried with him to arise to walk in newness of life. God is still giving the increase; who will be the next to accept him, be faithful dear ones, for the overcomers' crown waits every faithful one. Yours working for the King,

B. W. WOODWARD.

A Terrible Accident.

The sun shone just as bright Saturday June 22nd as ever. The morning meal had been eaten, and out from their homes walked Martin Skinner, Arthur Barney and Avery Crocker to begin their day's work at the saw-mill. How little they thought of the awful death awaiting them. Each man began his work, one filing the saw, another fired the engine, the third attending some other duty. Not an hour had passed since leaving their homes, when out upon the air rang that awful blood-curdling sound that startled the whole neighborhood and was heard for miles around. What was it? No need to ask the dreadful question, for looking in the direction of the noise the flying timbers, sawdust, escaping steam, and dust told the awful story. The boiler had burst, the mill was blown up. Hurrying feet soon reached the spot and the sickening sight soon told its own story. Two of the men lay dead, the third unconscious with an ugly wound in the back of his head, from which he has not yet recovered sufficiently to realize what has happened to him. The entire back of M. Skinner's head was blown off, and could not be found until a dog brought it out the next day. He was terribly mangled other ways so as to be almost unrecognizable. Arthur Barney was instantly killed, a large iron passing through his head, one arm twice broken, besides other injuries.

Martin Skinner was about 34 years of age, Arthur Barney and Avery Crocker were about nineteen years of age. Arthur was the eldest son of our much respected friends Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Barney, and their wild grief was terrible to witness. Sister Barney has been a faithful believer for several years, and although she was nearly crazed with the death of brother and son, she laid them away in hope. Elder Woodward was away from home, and the sad duty of preaching the double funeral sermon devolved upon the writer. The text for the occasion was chosen from Psa. cvii. 18. "And they draw near unto the gates of death." Fully five hundred people listened with wrapt attention while we tried to show them that death was not a friend, but the most bitter of enemies and how we were at last to be reclaimed from his powers.

OBITUARY.

James Pallett was born Dec. 21, 1818, in Sussex, England, and died at his home in Martin, Michigan, July 3, 1895, being 76 years, 6 months and 12 days old. He was married Aug. 17, 1839 to Rebecca Catt, in Sussex, England, who was laid to rest 2 years and five days ago. They were the parents of eight children, four sons and four daughters. Two sons and three daughters survive them. Brother Pallet has been a firm believer in the faith for more than 30 years, having been brought into the truth by Bro's Miller and Simons. Bro. Pallett was on his way to Sonquenck to visit his daughter when near the depot the horses became frightened, ran away, throwing him out, and injuring him internally, which caused his death in twenty-four hours later. We laid him to rest by the side of his faithful companion to await the resurrection morning. Elder B. W. Woodward spoke from Thess. iv. 13. Truly we sorrow not as others who have no hope. THE RESTITUTION has lost another faithful supporter as he has always taken it. May God keep the remaining sons and daughters true to their father's faith that the family may be an unbroken circle in the kingdom.

B. W. WOODWARD.

John Y. Hecter, son of George and Elizabeth Hecter, was born in Montgomery County Ohio, June 25, 1838; died May 1, 1895. Was united in marriage to M. A. Wagoner of Fulton County, Indiana. Both became obedient to the faith once delivered to the saints. Brother Hecter was a patient sufferer from a lingering and painful sickness, but through it all could see gleams of the coming glory that shall fill the earth, when no inhabitant shall say, "I am sick."

"O for the dawn of that brighter day,
When sorrow and sighing shall vanish away;
When death shall be vanquished, his reign will be o'er,
We'll meet all the loved ones on the evergreen shore."

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill; some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1896. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

G. A. R. AT LOUISVILLE.

The rate to Louisville, Ky., for the Twenty-ninth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be based on One Cent per Mile from Ticket Stations on the Pennsylvania Lines. Excursion tickets will be sold at that rate September 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th, 1895. The return limit will cover sufficient time for an extended sojourn, and will be ample for side trips. Southern Railways are expected to make special rates to historic places, and to commercial and industrial centers, enabling visitors to see the South at slight expense. Low rates have already been arranged for the Chickamauga National Military Park dedication which takes place shortly after the Encampment at Louisville closes. Excursion tickets to Chattanooga for the dedication will be sold over Pennsylvania Lines Sept. 10th to 19th, inclusive.

Special arrangements may be made by Posts desiring to go in a body, or parties of friends wishing to travel together can be satisfactorily accomodated if they will kindly make their wants known to the undersigned. Valuable information will be cheerfully furnished applicants, and any required aid in shaping details will be promptly extended. It will pay to investigate.

C. L. KIMBALL, Ass't Gen'l Passenger Agent, Cleavland, Ohio.

That Trip To Boston.

Boston excursionists over the Pennsylvania Lines will be carried in the luxurious ease to be expected on "The Standard Railway of America"—the standard in construction, equipment and operation. This merited distinction means that every requirement for comfortable and delightful traveling is provided on these lines. The Parlor, Sleeping and Dining Cars and Coaches are up to date in design and finish. The Pennsylvania is an up-to-date railway system, the foremost in adopting practicable ideas for the conveniences and pleasure of patrons.

Stop-over privileges will enable excursionists to visit places of summer sojourn along the Atlantic Ocean. Long Branch, Cape May, Asbury Park, Atlantic City, Ocean Grove and resorts on the New Jersey Coast are on the Pennsylvania Lines, and may be reached at slight expense from Philidelphia and New York by daily excursions thither during the season. Historic scenes in Philadelphia, including Independence Hall with Old Liberty Bell and numerous interesting relics, the United States Mint, Masonic Temple, Fairmount Park, the city of the Centennial, may be visited within the stop-over limit.

Returning excursionists may make the trip over different routes to be selected at the time tickets to Boston are obtained. By this arrangement the return journey may be made via the Hudson River, Niagara Falls, and other attractive places. If excursionists wish to reach home in the most expeditious manner, they should obtain tickets with return portions reading over the Pennsylvania Lines. When big crowds break up and the rush for home commences, it should be remembered the Pennsylvania Lines always meet all the requirements and handle passengers expeditiously and satisfactorily.

Excursion tickets to Boston account the Knights Templar Conclave will be sold to all applicants at ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines from Aug. 19th to Aug. 25th, inclusive. One-half the excursion rate will be charged for tickets to be used by children under twelve and over five years of age. Connecting railways will also sell reduced rate tickets to Boston over these lines. Information concerning rates, time of trains and other details will be promptly furnished applicants to nearest Pennsylvania line ticket agent, or may be obtained by addressing F. VAN DUSEN, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

please permit a short space for a few lines from me. We meet each Sunday for Bible study and exhortation. Our subjects are of the practical sort as taught by Christ and the apostles, and we think Paul means this in Heb. vi. 1. Our numbers are not large, some that met with us a year ago are now teaching for doctrine the commandments of men, and living after the flesh instead of the spirit, by their fruits we know them. One of the reasons that we know we are living in the "last times," is that it was prophecied of with the pen of inspiration. See Acts xx. 30; 1 Tim. iv. 1. I want to say to the dear ones scattered abroad that I have acted in the capacity of secretary of the Nebraska State Conference since the fall of 1888. My reports from time to time have shown a growth in the work. It has been a responsible position, but I can say with clear conscience in the sight of a just God who knoweth the hearts of all men, that I have labored faithfully in that discharge of duty for the good of all (not a few) and for the advancement of the Master's cause. That my judgment has not been equal to men of greater talent, and mistakes have occurred, I freely admit. That my efforts have been appreciated by the brethren, and still are, I have reasons to believe. With regard to the protest entered against me in the quarterly report of the conference recently held at Moorfield, I feel it my duty to make a correction. It would seem only a small matter, but knowing all the facts in the case as I do, and the cause leading thereto, I have reasons to believe it done out of personal spite and to injure me. In the first place my report was absolutely correct. Had it been a mistake and my attention called to it, it could have been easily corrected. At the March conference there were two business meetings. At the first one a constitution was drafted; at the second it was approved. I was not present at the last one, there may have been but one dissenting vote; but at the time of "shutting" there was a small majority just as I have stated. As to the said constitution, it is claimed to be gotten up simply to regulate the duties of officers. Is not an allwise God able by his Word to tell us what is our duty? Can man better God's plan? Because I have opposed this man-made creed, tobacco, politics and partaking of the many pleasures of the world, which some of our brethren freely indulge in; they have taken this means to misrepresent and prejudice others against me. One of the principles I hold most sacred is, that the truth should come out on all occasions. If my daily life and actions will not bear the most severe criticism, then there is something radically wrong. I do not hold envy or malice toward my one, but when obliged to speak of these in order to defend the truth, it is done for the good of the cause in general. Will the love of God prompt men to publicly enter protest against a brother without a cause? "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor," the good old Book says.

My term of office will expire in a few weeks, I desire, therefore, to take this opportunity to thank all the dear brothers and sisters of whom I have formed so agreeable an acquaintance at our meetings, and otherwise for their hearty co-operation in the work, and for their words of encouragement. One word in reference to the annual conference. I have been informed in an indirect manner that it will be at St Paul the last of August, although two members of the board have never been consulted or notified as to time and place. However, all who can come to the meeting, work with an unselfish interest for the right. Come determined to renew your zeal and earnestness in the Lord's service and when the time of the Lord's harvest shall have come, may we all be as golden sheaves in his kingdom and bask forever in the sunlight of immortal bliss, is my prayer. Yours for the truth.

J. J. CADY.

[WE are not informed regarding the trouble mentioned by Bro. Cady, and do not care to be, as it is none of our business. However, if all will work truly and heartily for the purpose of spreading abroad the message contained in the gospel of God's dear Son, no time will be found when it will be convenient to continue this. Please "drop it."—Ed.]

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on receipt, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor who are not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who have the cash and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of those friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You do by paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

Conference Notice.

The Iowa State Conference of the Church of God will be held in Marshalltown, beginning Thursday evening August 15th, and lasting over till Sunday evening the 25th, 1895. Our reasons for place the most central, and most convenient in the State for railroad for all brethren. At the crossing of the Chicago & North-Western, Iowa Central, and the Great Western or Diagonal Road. The location in the city is on North Third Street opposite the Green House. The street car line starts out just east of the depot and for a nickel will carry you to the ground. Come prepared to tent and to live. Will have tents on the ground, but all who have tents bring them.

As to time, it will be of more issiste than in June, and therefore secure a better attendance. Also crops will then be sufficiently matured to tell of a certainty what can be done for Evangelistic Work. A regular programme will be given out for work. Begin now to arrange to attend the meetings. Leave your hobbies at home and come prepared for a meeting of straight-forward gospel and Bible work. We shall try to make this one of the most interesting meetings we have ever held in Iowa. We expect to be able to secure reduced rates upon all of the railroads in the state for this occasion.

G. M. MYERS, Pres.
O. J. ALLARD, Sec.

The first excursion on the Nickel Plate Road to Niagara Falls will be Aug. 10th. Ask agents for schedule of special train and rates.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

The first Niagara Falls Excursion of 1895 will be run over the Nickel Plate Road Aug. 10th. Ask agents for time and rates.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Niagara Falls Excursion, Thursday, August 8, 1895, via the Lake Erie and Western R.R.

On Thursday, August 8, 1895, the Lake Erie & Western R. R. will run their popular excursion to Cleveland, Chautauqua Lake, Buffalo and Niagara Falls at following very low rates, viz.:

Peoria	$5.50
Bloomington	5.00
LaFayette	5.00
Michigan City	5.00
Indianapolis	5.00
Tipton	5.00
Luna	5.00
Ft Wayne	5.00
Muncie	5.00
Connersville	5.00
Rushville	5.00
New Castle	5.00
Cambridge City	5.00
Fremont	4.00
Sandusky	4.00

With corresponding reductions from intermediate points.

In addition to the above, the purchasers of these tickets will be given privilege of special excursion side trip tickets to Lewiston on the lake, including a steamboat ride on Lake Ontario, for 25 cents. To Toronto and return by lake from Lewiston $1.00; to Thousand Island $5.00. Tickets for the above side trips can be had when purchasing Niagara Falls ticket, or at any time on train.

Besides the above privileges, with that of spending Sunday at the Falls, we will furnish all those who desire a side trip from Brockton Junction to Chautauqua Lake and return free of charge.

Tickets of admission to places of special interest at or near Niagara Falls, but outside the reservation, including toll over the great International Bridge to the Canadian side, elevators to the water's edge at Whirlpool Rapids on the Canadian side, will be offered on train at a reduction from prices charged after reaching the Falls.

Do not miss this opportunity to spend Sunday at Niagara Falls. The excursion train will arrive at Niagara Falls 7.00 A. M. Friday, August 9, 1895, and will leave the Falls returning Sunday morning, August 11, at 6 o'clock, stopping at Cleveland Sunday afternoon, giving an opportunity to visit the magnificent monument of the late President Garfield, and many other interesting points.

Tickets will be good, however, to return on regular trains leaving the Falls Saturday, August 10, for those not desiring to remain over. Tickets will also be good returning on all regular trains up to and including Tuesday, August 13, 1895. Secure your tickets, also chair and sleeping car accommodations early. Those desiring can secure accommodation in these cars while at the Falls. For further information call on any agent Lake Erie & Western R. R., or address C. F. Daly, Gen. Pass. Agent, Indianapolis, Ind.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one elected the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be required. Publication to be made of amount of donation and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount inscribed, the fund to be created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood, are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Reduced Rates, Excursions and Commercial Lines During Season of 1895.

Liberal concessions in fare over the Pennsylvania Lines have been granted for numerous events to take place this summer in various parts of the United States. In addition to local excursions, ticket at reduced rates will be sold over these lines as given in the following paragraphs. Excursion tickets may be obtained at ticket offices on the Pennsylvania System and will also be sold over this route by connecting railways. Some of the points to which tickets will be sold and dates of sale are as follows:

To Boston, August 19th to 25th, inclusive, account Triennial Conclave Knights Templar. Return limit extended to Oct 31 by special arrangement.

To Louisville Ky., in September for National Encampment, G. A. R. One cent per mile. Reasonable return limit.

The reduced rates over the Pennsylvania Lines will not be restricted to members of the organizations mentioned, but may be taken advantage of by the public generally. Any Pennsylvania Line Ticket or Passenger Agent will furnish desired information concerning rates, time of trains, and other details, to all applicants, or the same may be obtained by addressing J. E. Haines, Ticket Agent, Plymouth or F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agt. Pittsburgh, Penna.

Summer Tourist Rates.

The North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western R'y) is now selling excursion tickets at reduced rates to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Ashland, Bayfield, Marquette, Deadwood, Dakota, Hot Springs, Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou, Salt Lake City, and the lake and mountain resorts of the west and northwest. For rates and full information apply to agents of connecting lines. Illustrated pamphlets, giving full particulars, will be mailed free upon application to W. B. Kniskern, G. P. & T. A., Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago, Ill.

To All Concerned.

We desire to call your attention to the additional train service, recently inaugurated by the Vandalia Line, between Logansport and St. Joseph, Mich. Trains run daily affording excursionists a full day for a summer outing. The bathing at both Lake Maxenkuckee and St. Joseph are exceptionally fine, while the boating facilities are excellent. Sunday excursion tickets at half fare. Call upon Vandalia Line agent for particulars or address E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.—July 31.

The Nickel Plate Road has compiled a list of country homes along the South Shore of Lake Erie, willing to accommodate summer boarders, and a copy will be mailed to any address by enclosing a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road or to B. F. Horner, Gen'l Passenger Agent.—Aug. 31

Appointments.

I will be at Roll, Ind., the 1st Sunday in July. Near Kokomo the 2nd Sunday, near Colfax the 3rd, and at Arcola the 4th. All to begin Saturday night before.

Poetry.

The Coming One.

"I am coming again," the true-hearted ring. John xiv. 2.

Jesus, thou Coming One
What joy to know thee come,
To take us to thyself,
And to thy heavenly home!
O blessed hour when that shall be,
Then we shall ever be with thee!

Love brought thee here aforn,
To seek and save the lost,
What could have love done more?
Thy precious blood the cost.
Thy love has drawn our hearts to thee,
And made us long thy face to see.

Soon shall all things be well,
Though saying this away;
Then are our Priest with God,
Yet longing for the day,
When thou wilt take thy bride above,
To share the fullness of thy love.

We miss thee, Blessed One,
Ah, we should miss thee more
Less cleaving to the dust,
And things which seem are not;
O may we more thine absence feel,
Thy coming ev'ry wound will heal.

We wait thy coming, Lord,
In patience we would wait;
Thou will not come too soon,
Thou wilt not come too late;
Though love says, "Come without delay,"
God's time is best for break of day.

And yet we would still wait,
Yea, watch for thy return,
With hearts with love aglow.
Ah, few thine absence mourn.
Lord, thou hast said, "I quickly come;"
Our hearts respond, "Come, take us home."

—R. Hutchinson.

By-past Times.

There are treasures in memory's urn;
Enshrined with the love of the past,
And we have lived, to know and learn,
Their joys were so fragile to last;
Yet while affection's ties remain,
There by-past times come back again.

Forever o'er the sea of thought,
Like gentle swells of peaceful waves
That hide the wreck and ruin wrought,
By tempest, when it fiercest raves,
A heart-calm to unrest and pain,
Comes some sweet by-past time again.

Wonderful sea, Oh! changing tide,
Forever freighted with weal or woe;
Joyous sunbeams dance and ride,
Thy billows crest, or cradle low;
And o'er thy bosom now and then
Plays some sweet by-past time again.

Some idle song in sweet low trills,
That wafts along the shaded years;
Soft as the pearl of meeting rills,
Entering hopes, dissolving fears,
Awakes from its dream Lethean,
And echo's by-past times again.

Most it seems so passing strange,
That from the corner of those days,
The incense should so widely range;
And their perfume, thro' distant mazes,
Wake in each heart the mellow chimes,
And fragrance of the by-past times.

How Soon?

"Searching what time....which things the angels desire to look into."

We were talking of the angels,
Brave little John and I,
And of the glorious Coming
That will be in the sky.

The boy of five, glad listened
To Holy Bible lore,
And hungering for its stories,
Would ask oft, "please tell more."

He loved to hear of Joseph,
Of Moses, David, Paul,
But the story of our Savior,
That charmed him most of all.

To think he dwelt among us,
Fairest of sons of men,
Died, rose, and left, oft saying
That he would come again.

That he will raise from buried-place
The children loved and lost,
And gather all, from every race,
His happy, singing host.

Then there will be no sorrow,
No sin, no death, no tears,
And not a sign of crying
In all the blissful years.

The Lord Christ with us dwelling,
None hurt and none destroy,
But good-will as in heaven
Fill all the earth with joy!

John listened with bright, wistful eyes,
To word of promise true,
His loyal heart, with glad surprise,
Beheld this Eden view.

"I know," he musing said, "I will be
All right when he shall come;"
And, like the angels, added he,
"I'd like to know how soon!"

PSALM. 62.

63 COM. VER.

1. David's psalm when he was in the wilderness of Idoumain.

2. Unto thee O God, my God will I arise in the morning; My soul hath thirsted for thee; how many times for thee my flesh, in a desert-island and one without path and without water;

3. In this wise have I appeared unto thee that I might see thine ability and thy glory.

4. Because better (more efficient) is thy mercy than life; My lips will praise thee.

5. In this will I commend (bless) thee in my life, and in thy name will I lift up my hands.

6. May my soul have been filled as it were with fatness and richness, and lips of gladness will praise thy name.

7. If I remembered thee upon my bed in the morning-hours I meditated on thee.

8. Because thou hast become my responsive-helper and in the shelter of thy wings I shall be glad,

9. My soul hath been drawn after thee; thy right-hand hath intervened for me.

10. And these have sought my soul in vain; they will go into the lowest parts (or forms) of the earth;

11. They will have been given up to the sword's hands; portions for jackals will they be:

12. But the king will have rejoiced in God; Every one who sweareth in him will have been commended, because the mouth of those who talk iniquities hath been stopped.

PSALM 65 (64 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; David's psalm.

2. Mayest thou have heard my votive-prayer, O God, when I pray unto thee; Deliver my soul from fear of an enemy.

3. Thou hast sheltered me from a conspiracy of those who do wickedly, from a multitude of those doing iniquity;

4. Who have whetted their tongues like a sword as it were, who have been stretched like a bow a bitter thing,

5. To shoot in ambush at a blameless-one: Suddenly will they shoot at him, and they will not have feared.

6. They have laid hold of a wicked a word for themselves; they have discoursed of hiding snares: They have said, Who will see them?

7. They have searched out transgression; In searching they have failed; a man and a deep heart will come and God will have been exalted: a weapon of children have their blows become;

9. And their tongues have made naught of him; all those who behold then have been disturbed,

10. And every man hath feared; and they have declared them God's doings, and have understood his creative-works.

11. One justified in the Lord will have been commended, and will hope in him; and all the upright have been commended.

PSALM 64 (65 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; David's psalm: An ode;

2. A hymn befitteth thee, O God in Sion; and unto thee a vow will have been paid,

3. Mayest thou have heard my votive-prayer, and unto thee will all flesh come.

4. Words of transgression have been too much for us, and do thou be favorable to our acts of irreverence,

5. Blessed-happy he whom thou hast chosen and taken unto thyself; he will tabernacle in thy courts; We shall be filled with the good things of thy house; thy inner-sanctuary,

6. Wondrous is it in righteousness. Mayest thou have heard us, O God, our Savior (personal appellative not the instrumental-salvation nor salvation in the abstract. The three words are Sofer, Savior, Soterion, Instrumental or instrument of, and Soteria, salvation) the hope of all the ends of the earth and those in the sea afar off:

7. Who maketh ready mountains in thy strength, who girdeth thyself with ability to rule,

8. Who stirreth up the poured-out flood of the sea to the echo of its waves; The nations will have been disturbed,

9. And those who inhabit the ends (of the earth) will have feared by reason of thy signs; Thou wilt cheer the outgoings of morning and evening.

10. Thou hast visited (taken an oversight of) the earth and thou hast intoxicated it with delight; Thou hast abounded to enrich it: The river of God hath been filled with waters; Thou hast made ready their sustenance, because in this wise is the preparation.

11. Mayest thou have made the furroughs thereof drunken; Mayest thou have multiplied the products thereof: In her drops of dew will that which springeth up have been made merry.

12. Thou will bless the crown (garland) of the year of thy useful-goodness; and thy plains will have been filled with fatness.

13. The mountains of the wilderness will have been made fat and the little hills will girdle themselves with gladness,

14. The rams of the flocks have clothed themselves, and the valleys are being filled with grain; They will have shouted; Yea, indeed, they will hymn praise.

PSALM 65 (66 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; An ode for a resurrection psalm. Alala unto God all the earth.

2. Exalt the strain, indeed, unto his name; Give glory in praise of him:

3. Say unto God how fearful are thy doings: In the plentitude of ability to rule thine enemies will falsify thee, will they?

4. May all the earth have worshiped thee and may they have exalted the strain unto thee; May they have exalted the strain unto thy name. Interlude.

5. Come hither and see God's doings, one to be feared in counsels above the sons of men;

6. He who turneth the sea into dry land; They will cross a river on foot: There shall we have rejoiced in him.

7. Who ruleth as sole lord in the ability of his age: His eyes look upon the nations; May they not, while they are embittering, have been lifted up in themselves. Interlude.

8. Commend our God, ye nations, and may ye have hearkened unto the voice of his praise,

9. The praise of him who set my soul in life, and did not allow my feet to to slip.

10. Because thou hast proved us, O God, hast tried us with fire as the silver is tried.

11. Thou didst lead us into the snare; Thou didst place tribulations on our back;

12. Thou didst conduct men over our heads; We passed through fire and water, and thou didst lead us out into a place of refreshment,

13. I will go into thy house with whole-burnt-offerings; I will pay my vows unto thee,

14. Which my lips sent through and my mouth talked in my tribulation;

15. Whole-burnt-offerings fat with marrow will I offer unto thee with incense and rams; cattle with he-goats will I offer unto thee. Interlude.

16. Come hither, Listen, and I will discourse all that he hath done for my soul, all ye who fear the Lord.

17. Unto him did I cry with my mouth, and in subjection did I lift up my tongue.

18. If I have been regarding iniquity with my heart, may the Lord not have hearkened,

19. Therefore did God hearken to me: He heeded the voice of my votive-prayer.

20. God be praised, who did not reject my votive-prayer and withhold his mercy from me.

PSALM 66 (67 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; David's psalm, among hymns,

2. May God have pitied us and blessed us; May he have shown his face unto us. Interlude.

3. To make known thy way on earth, thy instrumental-salvation among the nations;

4. May laities have confessed unto thee, O God; may all laities have confessed unto thee.

5. May nations have rejoiced and been made glad, because thou wilt judge laities in uprightness and guide nations on the earth. Interlude.

6. May laities have confessed unto thee, O God; May all laities have confessed unto thee.

7. Earth hath yielded her fruit. Mayest thou have blessed us, O God, our God;

8. May God have blessed us and may all the ends of the earth have heard him.

PSALM 67 (68 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; David's psalm for an ode.

2. May God have arisen, and may his enemies have been scattered, and may those who hate him have fled from before his face;

3. As smoke leaveth off, may they have left off; As wax melteth from before the face of fire, may obdurate sinners in this wise have perished before the face of God.

4. And may the justified have rejoiced; May they have been made glad in the sight of God; May they have been delighted with rejoicing.

5. Sing unto God; Exalt the strain unto his name; Make way for the one who mounteth to ride to the west; The Lord is his name and be glad in his sight,

6. They will have been disturbed before his face, the face of the father of orphans and the judge of the widows, God in his sacred place.

7. God causeth those who are living alone to dwell in a house, leading out in manhood those who have been bound haud and foot, likewise those who are embittering, those who are dwelling in graves.

8. O God, when thou didst go thy way out in the sight of thy laity, when thou didst go through the wilderdess, Interlude.

9. Earth shook, yea, indeed, the heavens distilled before the face of the God of Israel.

10. A willing shower wilt thou set off for thine inheritance, O God; It hath become weak forsooth; but thou will restore it.

11. Thy living-creatures (the cherubim) take up their abode in it; thou hast made ready for the beggar in thy useful-goodness, O God.

12. The Lord will give an oracular-word to those who announce the good-tidings (preach the gospel) with great ability, the God of the hosts of the Beloved, the Beloved, and that they divide spoils in the ripened season of the house.

14. Though ye have slept between lots (the allotments of natural and spiritual life meant) a dove's wings are silver-glinted and her back in green of gold;

15. When the heavenly one commissioneth kings over her, they will have become white as snow on Selmon.

16. The mountain of God is a fat mountain, a mountain curdled with fatness, a fat mountain.

17. Why do ye suppose they are mountains curdled with fatness? It is the mountain which God hath become satisfied to take up his abode in. Yea, the Lord will pitch his tabernacle down at last.

18. The host (chariot lit.) of God is manifold, myriads of those who prosper, the Lord in their midst, on Sina, on the sacred Sina.

19. When thou didst lead captivity captive; thou didst take gifts in mankind, yea, though they do not believe that thou wilt pitch thy tabernacle down.

20. The Lord God be praised, the Lord be praised day by day, and the God of instrumentalities to save us will prosper us. Interlude.

21. Our God is the God to save, and the ways through and out of death are the Lord's.

22. But God will break the heads of his enemies, the crown of the hair of those who go their way through in their discordant errors.

23. The Lord hath said, From out Basan shall I return, in depths of a sea shall I return,

24. O that thy foot may have been dipped in blood, the tongue of thy dogs on account of enemies therefrom;

25. Thy goings, O God, have been viewed the goings of my God the king, in the sacred place.

26. Rulers went on before next to players upon psaltries between young maidens playing upon tympana. (saying)

27. Praise God in churches, the Lord from fountains of Israel:

28. There was Benjamin a youngest in ecstacy (the prophetic state meant), rulers of Jouda their leaders, rulers of Zaboulon, rulers of Nephthali.

29. Command, O God, in thy ability, Enable, O God, with this which thou hast prepared in us.

30. From thy inner-sanctuary at Hierousalem will kings bring votive-gifts unto thee,

31. Rebuke the wild-beasts of the reed; the synagogue of the bulls among the heifers of the laities, that they be not excluded, those who have been approved with the silver; Scatter the nations who will war.

32. Elders will come from out Egypt; (Aiguptos) Aithiopia will extend her hand unto God.

33. Ye kings of the earth, sing praise unto the God; Exalt the strain unto the Lord. Interlude.

34. Exalt the strain unto the God who mounteth to ride unto the heavens of the heavens at the East. Lo, he will give with his voice of ability.

35. Give ye glory to God; his majesty is over Israel, and his ability is in the clouds.

36. God is wonderful in his holy-ones; The God of Israel, he will give ability and controlling-power to his laity; God be praised.

COMMENT.

The 22nd psalm is suggested to David by his own experience in the wilderness of Idoumain, when he was fleeing from enemies, and is Messianic as an expression of the Son of David's experience in the great wilderness of sin; as a second numerical. (22nd) it also intones the voice of the church in its experience in the sinful world and is major-harmonic of faith of hope in the Babel of discordant error all around it—a heavenly strain of coming-victory in the blood of the Lamb. The coming-victory fully prophesied in the 12th and last verse.

The 68rd psalm from the first to the 7th verse is clearly prophetic of the Messianic experience and tribulation and reminds one forcibly of the language of the Christ where he says "Now hath the ruler of this world been overcome," etc. The 7th verse reads "They have searched out transgression; In searching they have failed; A man and a deep heart will come and God will have been exalted:" This reminds one of "I have glorified thee on the earth"—"And now, O Father, glorify me with the glory that I had in thy estimation before the cosmos (world) was." The psalm being a third (68d) we would expect the thought of it would have to do with the first perfection namely the assertion of man's justification in Christ through the resurrection and the glorified body as brought out in the 11th verse. This psalm leads up to the great hymnal-"ode" which is the next in number and order, the 64th namely and sings of what God has been preparing for those who love him. It seems to depict a time of general rejoicing here upon the earth for God's people. "Thou hast visited the earth and thou hast intoxicated it with delight; The river of God hath been filled with waters; Thou hast made ready their sustenance, because in this wise is the preparation." "Laying foundations," "squaring things to the line and the plummet," are not these the preparation? And this is what we would expect the four to indicate some way in the 64th. The new literary excellence of this psalm is something wonderful. It will bear the most careful study and criticism merely as a literary product.

The 65th psalm is also an "ode" of victory and completes the trilogy, ...ing the final Jubilate of resurrection-triumph. Those who are sung as this ode are represented as having gone through "the fiery trial" and "the tribulation" and as being in the act of paying the "vows" made in the day of calamity and trial. The vows of course here referred to were "the covenant vows" and this is in substance "the ode of the Lamb" referred to by John in the Apocalypse. This psalm is the great minor-harmonic as indicated by the fire of the 65.

The 66th psalm is a double-major in number and has a heading that appears several times, "Among hymns" showing that it is general rather specific in its teaching and as designed for use in the temple-service. It has the general form of a prayer and invocation....It is also a confession and a desire expressed for confession on the part of all nations, that "God may have blessed all the ends of the earth—that all the ends of the earth may have feared him."

The 67th psalm, as indicated in the heading is also "an ode" and a very grand and significant one in its thought. Being a seventh we should expect consummations of some sort to be the burden of the thought and so we find it. There is "the leaving-off of obdurate sinners" emphasized and "the delight" and "rejoicing of the justified," the fulfillment of the "common hope," "the gladness in the sight of God," the review of God's triumphant way from the east to the west, the way of "him who mounts to ride, et cet" as here stated. The consummation of glory to the earth, as indicated by "the Cherubim taking up their abode here" again—the sending forth of the final gospel call to the nations "with great ability"—"the host of the Beloved or the Beloved"—repeated for emphasis—the exaltation of "the mount of God"—"the kings over Sion" commissioned,—"the myriads of those who prosper"—"the gifts in mankind"—the glorification of salvation through all its instrumentalities"—the return "from out Basan" to glorify and requite as well,—the review of the typical teaching of this triumph as seen in the old temple service—the location of the place of the coming glory and its environments with a reference to the great sacrifice and offering of the nations to "the Majesty over Israel." God wonderful in his holy ones" "the controlling-power given to his laity, and the final ascription of praise, "God be praised." Showing that the great purpose of redemption has been accomplished, "the consummation devoutly to be looked for."

CHAS. GARDNER.

As the seed which is sown with toil springs up beneath the clods and yields an abundant harvest; so labor performed in the night of trouble, is often to the righteous the beginning of great prosperity and joy.

Are You in Adam?

It is sometime said a stream cannot rise higher than its fountain. Adam is the fountain from which has flown the vast stream of humanity. On account of sin, Adam was deprived of access to the tree of life, lest he should partake and live forever. It was in this way God in his wisdom and mercy prevented Adam from becoming the father or fountain head of a race of immortal sinners, had this been the case, sin and sinners would have been a blight upon the world forever. Adam having fallen, and being of the earth earthy, he could not possibly impart to his descendants anything but an earthly existence. See 1, Cor. xv. 47-48: "The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is of heaven. As it the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. And as we have borne the image of the earthy we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

Before any one can have any prospect of attaining the "heavenly" nature, he must first change his relationship from Adam the earthy, to Christ the heavenly. As all in Adam die, but all who are in Christ shall live as long as Christ is his federal head. This change of relationship is a personal act, every one has the opportunity of making this change, if they fail to make this change they remain where they were,—in Adam, and can rise in nature no higher than Adam. Those in Adam are spoken of in Eph. ii. 11. as "Gentiles in the flesh." Verse 12, says: "that ye were at that time separate from Christ, alienated from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. So says God's Word.

Effect this change of relationship, and we have hope. See verse 13: "But now in Christ Jesus ye that were once far off are made nigh in the blood of Christ."

See verse 19: "So then ye are no more strangers (from the covenants of promise) and sojourners, but ye are fellow citizens (not alienated from the commonwealth of Israel) with the saints and of the household of God, being built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Christ Jesus himself being the chief corner stone."

A person possessing the true faith of the gospel can effect a legal change of his relationship from Adam to Christ, in the ordinance of baptism. See Gal. iii. 29: "if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, heirs according to the promise." How much hangs on that little word "if"? See verses 26, 27: For ye are all sons of God, through faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ." The reverse of this would be, "For as many of you as were (not) baptized into Christ did (not) put on Christ."

See Rom. vi. 3-4: "Are ye ignorant that all we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death! We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life." Being "in Christ," we can walk the new life both this and the other side of the resurrection but not otherwise. Don't deceive yourselves.

The miller that relies upon the occasional freshet to grind his corn, has a very uncertain prospect of buisness. What he needs, is the bubbling fountain. So our Christianity should be a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

If we attend carefully to our duty, and keep both beams and motes out of our own eye, the faults of others will not often disturb or trouble us.

LOWELL has said, "Every man feels instinctively that all the beautiful sentiments in the world weigh less than one lovely action."

By the unanimous request of the Church at Argos Bro. M. Joblin will attend the conference to be held there over the fourth Sunday in September.

TRUE goodness has been compared to the glow-worm in this that it shines most when no eyes, except those of heaven, are upon it.

"PROMINENT among the plain things taught by Christ through his apostles, is that false teachers would arise, against whose deceitfulness he warned his followers. May we not conclude that the deceptiveness of their teaching would consist in its close outward resemblance to the true Christianity? If while claiming relationship to Christ the false systems were really adverse to Christ, would they not answer to "Satan Transformed into an angel of light."

A VIENNA correspondent says the hatred of Jews preached by Dr. Luger and his party is bearing fruit sooner than expected. A short time ago a Jewish funeral procession was molested and the mourners were insulted. The other day a regular Jew chase took place at the suburb of Walhring, close to the parish of a priest who had been foremost in denouncing the Jews. A Galician Jew wearing a long Kafton, ringlets, and the tall hat peculiar to his caste, was walking through this suburb, when close to a children's playground, a woman pointed to him and called to the children, "There's the Jew." She added that he must have stolen "the child," referring to a little boy who had been missing for some days. The children followed the Jew, threw stones at him, knocked his hat off, pulled his coat tails, and pushed him right and left. By the time he had reached the shop of his nephew a crowd of men and women, numbering many hundreds, was following him. They smashed the shop windows and clamored for the Jew, whom they threatened to lynch on the spot. A large detachment of police was necessary to disperse the mob."

Asleep for a Full Week.

On the evening of July 15 Sunny Frank, a young man about 19 years old was put to sleep in Army and Navy Hall, by Santaneli, the Hypnotist, before a large audience. For a full week he was watched night and day in turn by professors of Western Reserve Medical College, his pulse and temperature being frequently taken. A great crowd witnessed the awakening at the end of the week. The boy seemed hard to convince that he had been asleep for more than half an hour. During the sleep he had lost between 14 and 15 pounds in weight, and his pulse at the time of his awakening registered 74. He said he was neither hungry, thirsty, cold, or in pain, but felt a little weak. He was given a supper of bread and milk, broiled steak, fried potatoes, bread and butter, and a cup of tea, and at midnight complained of being sleepy and went to bed. The medical men seem to think that hypnotism will be of great importance to the profession in certain cases, because, as all the faculties rest there is but little waste, and they learn that no risk is run under these circumstances by depriving a patient of nourishment for a number of days. But the theological doctors seemed to have learned nothing by the experiment. Dr. Talmage was talking yesterday about the eyes as the windows of the soul. Just as if it had never happened. Singular it did not make him curious to know something about the brains of the soul. Men can think when their eyes are put out.

DR. LORIMER, speaking of the prophets, says: "That which struck their senses they delineated; in their descriptions we find there is no exact account, no explicit mention of immortal spirits."

SAYS Dobney, "In argument with the common people, how do we substantiate the views we present on the great leading truths? Assuredly not by philological societies, nor by laying stress on mere words that look to teach a certain doctrine; but by snares of arguments from Scripture that demonstrates the indispensableness of just such or such a view."

AN English brother writes of public affairs in that country and the condition of the people, as follows: "It is possible to do very little real good by parliamentary legislation. When the legislators would do good evil is present with them in a different sense to that in which Paul used the expression. Take the question of 'Free Trade.' It has cheapened the commodities used by the multitude, but at the same time we owe to it, in a large measure, the sweater's dens, the depopulation of rural England, and that utter dependence upon foreign grain, which may yet prove a cause of national weakness and possible calamity. And then the pandering to the votes of the majority threatens, unless God turn away the evil, to bring about a mob tyranny—the worst of all tyrannies." We see from the above that even in favored England, matters are in a very unsatisfactory state socially and politically, and grave apprehensions are held that the worst is not yet. We see, too that the great thing clamored for so long, and of which so much was expected - the extension of the franchise - is not the cure-all it was thought to be. Evidently the lower classes, so-called, are being swayed there after the American fashion. Again we see how vain is the help of man.

SUNDAY the 4th of August was another joyous day to the household of faith in Cleveland, and as busy as joyful. There was the usual Sunday School work, then a short discourse on "The Gospel of the favor of God." After the breaking of bread there were three addresses on the Skin Lamb that brought vividly to mind the divine love that concentrated at the cross, and showed the absolute necessity of Christ's death although he died instead of no one, but on our behalf,—and also carried us forward to the time when we shall see him whom we love without having seen. We were visited for the second time by Miss Mary Barber of Salem, being accompanied by seven others, the sisters Knowles and other relatives and friends. And before the evening service Miss Barber had made the good confession and decided to put on the Anointed One as her sincovering garment. In the evening a large audience assembled to hear a lecture on "The Thief on The Cross," in relation to man's nature and destiny," under peculiar circumstances. One of our members had somewhat interested members of a Presbyterian Church with the truth. Word of this reached the ears of the pastor, who, to reassure his people and straighten matters out, preached on "The Thief on The Cross;" this was followed by a request from the interested ones for us to deliver a lecture on the same subject, and quite a number would attend. We think between thirty and forty did come, and the eagerness to procure our literature manifested at the close of the meeting would seem to indicate that they were not a little interested. This grows out of [illegible] together,—and must encourage the Sister and others not to grow weary in well-doing. Sow beside all waters. We cannot tell which may prosper.

Question Drawer.

For T. W.—Yes; we believe a special providence accompanies the servants of God—the faithful in Christ Jesus,—to protect them from, and to sustain them under, evil not of their own making. But we do not believe that this protection or favor will attend them when in an evil hour, through vain conceit or self-interest they succumb to evil, or lend their influence to it that good may come. Indeed special punishments await such presumptuous sins as these. Saul was dethroned, Nadab and Abin were burned, Koran, Nathan and Abiram were swallowed up on account of services taken upon themselves to do,—although, probably, they were actuated by good motives. The prayer of David should hourly come from our hearts in these days when sincerity is almost universally held to be the power to save, instead of the gospel of Christ."

"The Scriptures are God's inspired lesson books for mankind. Their writers are the great Masters of divine instruction. If a person wants to train himself for poetry, music, painting or sculpture, he will make himself familiar with the great masters in these arts and their nations, and the great authors who have written concerning them. So a person who wants to train himself for God and Truth and Righteousness will make himself familiar with the masters, and the people of those masters, and the writings inspired for that purpose. These writings deal with the great moral and spiritual facts duty, character, responsibility, and the happiness resulting from harmony with the will of God. Their object is to teach the eternal contrast between righteousness and unrighteousness, obedience and disobedience, selfishness and unselfishness, purity and lust, and to show that God is on the side of holiness and goodness, and that his help is near in the fight of temptation, and that even when the fight is lost and the life defiled, there is a way back to holiness and God if men will but earnestly seek it."

Scientific Gleanings.

Our readers are doubtless aware that one school of scientists believes in regard to the origin of life, that under certain chemical conditions living creatures are continually coming into existence, engenerated by any living parent; born as it were without birth; and acquire an animated existence, with powers of motion, feeling and reproduction from substances previously wanting in one or all of these capacities,—such creatures, in short, as if asked of their parentage, would but answer each for itself, "My father was an atom, and my mother was a molecule." In combatting this theory Prof. Ingraham states this teaching nakedly, as follows: "The basis of life is protoplasm. All the phenomena of life are resultant of protoplasm. All thoughts and feelings, as well as motions—all forms of activity, moral, mental as well as physical—are properties of protoplasm; that is, of carbonic acid, ammonia, and water, chemically combined. Carbonic acid, water and ammonia, apart are lifeless bodies, subject to the common law of gravitation. Lying inert and dead in the common mass of matter, they enter into a copartnership, and go walking and flying, exhibiting all the phenomena of life. They were, when separate, involuntary and impassive and unintelligent; united, they think, and will and feel. One parcel of carbonic acid is cunning, shy, deceptive; another dull and stupid and idiotic. One parcel, timid, hesitating, cowardly; another, bold, fearless, brave. One parcel, selfish, sinister, knavish; another disinterested, magnanimous, cosmopolitan. One parcel the slave of lust, of appetite, of passion, given to rapine, cruelty and war; another yields to the sway of the ideas of right, the beautiful, the true, and gives himself to the arts of peace and deeds of charity and love. One parcel loves song and becomes a Handel, a Mozart, a Haydn; another is enamored of poetry, turns into a Homer, and writes the Iliad; into a Shakespeare, and composes the immortal tragedies; into a Milton, and creates the dream of heaven and hell. And yet another is imbued with the fervor of eloquence, and pours Ciceronian, Demosthenian and Websterian thunders down along the ages. Carbonic acid, water and ammonia, that is all! One set of protoplasms indite laws, philosophies, religions, and set up governments, constitutions and dynasties; another set invent steamships, printing-presses, electric telegraphs; and yet another hoard of brigand protoplasmic cells let loose the dogs of war, and rushing with the frenzy of hate, fatten the fields of Marathon, Waterloo, Gettysburg and Sedan with their carbonic acid, water and ammonia —protoplasmic dust!

Of this marvelous thesis we are bold to say, you will search in vain, not only through all the pages of these eminent men, but no less fruitlessly through all science, and over the entire field of nature for a particle of proof. Neither experiment nor observation has ever been able to point to a single instance of the origin of life from the mere union of carbonic acid, ammonia and water. It is an assumption without the shadow of proof, and an assumption beset with the most trenchant difficulties that ever confronted any hypothesis. The entire of what is known of life is, that it is a force which never under any chemical or other conditions of matter, comes into existence or manifestation in unliving matter, except as it is propagated by living matter. Dead matter, organic or inorganic, has not now, and so far as the proof extends never did have power, under any conditions, to originate it; or, if so, the fact has never been made known to man, and rests upon no other foundation than unwarranted conjecture."

Dr. Lonstrom has recently described some cases of plant mimicry. The cultivated plant known as calendula, may in different conditions produce at least three different kinds of fruit. Some have nails and are suited for transportation by the wind, while others have hooks and catch hold of passing animals, but the third kind exhibits a more desperate design, for it becomes like a caterpillar! Not that the fruit knows anything about it, but if be be sufficiently like a caterpillar, a bird may eat it by mistake, the indigestible seed would be dropped, and so the trick succeeds. The next case is more marvellous. There is a very graceful wild plant, with beautiful delicate flowers, known to many as the cow-wheat. Ants are fond of visiting the cow-wheat to feast on a sweet banquet spread out upon the leaves. Dr. Lonstrom has observed one of these ants, and was surprised to see it making off with one of the seeds from an open fruit. The ant took the seed home with it. On exploring some ant-nests, the explorer soon saw that this was not the first cow-wheat seed which had been similarly treated. Many seeds were found in the ant nurseries. The ants did not eat them or destroy them; in fact, when the nest was disturbed the ants saved the seeds along with their brood, for in size, form, color and weight, even in minute particulars, the seeds in question resemble antcocons. Once placed among the cocoons, it requires a better than an ant to distinguish the tares from the wheat. In the excitement of flitting when the nest is disturbed, the mistake is repeated, and the seeds like the cocoons awake out of sleep. The awakening displays the fraud. The seeds are thus supposed to be scattered; they germinate and seem to thrive in the ant-nests."

"Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship. Where is the difference?"

Paul's observations in the city of Athens, that was wholly given to idolatry furnished him a suitable text or subject for a short but cutting discourse. It seems natural to view such scenes with disdain rather than pity. "And yet I would ask where is the difference between them and us?" While the great mass of men and women were bowing down to many thousands of idol gods, that infested the populous city of Athens, there were seen another large group of frenzied folks, who were paying homage at the altar of an unknown God, whom Paul makes known unto them. Question, Do you really believe that this God whom Paul declares unto them, heard and accepted the pious worship of all this mass of blind idolaters? If so ignorance must be bliss, and the popular pet ministers are correct when they say, "It don't make any difference what you believe, or how you worship, just so long as you are sincere in it." And yet I would be pleased to have said ministers explain and show the propriety of Paul's cutting discourse unto those sincere Athenians. It seems that all honest men and women must admit that this great multitude of worshipers were sincere in their devotions. Then I ask again. "Where is the difference?" The secret of the answer is here, "ignorance has played havoc with the people then as now, and no doubt but that the leaders were dealing out their deadly dose then as now, by telling them that it makes no difference, just so you are sincere." The Master has said something about such leaders, and to where they are going. What is it? It seems clear to my mind that candor must compel us to admit that all such blind idolatrous worship is vain, and that this popular plea that "it makes no difference," is but a delusive, deadly snare of the enemy. Avoid it as you would the smallpox. These fat, sleek, stall-fed teachers, that teach for hire, and divine for money, and thus lead the people astray, have their deadly doses formulated into a creed, which reads thus, "There is but one living and true God everlasting, without body, parts or passions. . . . And in unity of this godhead there are three persons of one substance, power and eternity; —the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost." This is one of the articles of faith that men and women are compelled to subscribe to, and yet I will venture the assertion that there is not a man or a woman on earth that can comprehend and sense such an article of religion. Try it please. And more, it is directly contrary to reason and revelation. What, some men and women try to worship a God that has no body, no parts, no eyes to see with, no ears to hear with, no passions to love and hate with. And yet this very strange gas that is pictured out for us to love and adore, is said to be composed of three persons, of one substance, power and eternity. Poor, frail, dying mortals, let me tell you kindly, that this is a strange god that has newly come up, and is but the imagination of the human brain. And I am led to enquire again,—"where is the difference between them and us?" Are we better than they? How can we be? They worshiped a god that was real and that had a body, while those who worship this very popular god of the creed, worship they know not what. And most certainly this is not the God that Paul declared unto those devoted Athenians. I tell you my friends that ignorance is not confined to Athenians by a long way. Can you worship such a god as described by the creed makers, only ignorantly? "Then where is the difference between them and us?" There is another pet elephant found among another set of zealous folks that needs a little oiling. What is it? It is this, while most all Christian people worship on Sunday or first day of the week, and call it the sabbath, answering to the fourth commandment, which is much easier found in the creeds than in the Bible, yet their brethren and friends who keep the seventh day and esteem it above all others, in their great zeal cry out aloud," you are worshiping the pope, and if you continue in that way you must bear the mark of the beast, and suffer the fearful consequences." A horrible scarecrow is this. Well, is there no hope for those good people who lived and died in the faith that the Sunday was the sabbath? O yes, because they did it ignorantly. Then ignorance is bliss again. "And where is the difference between them and us?" Now, let me turn the picture a little, for many years our sabbath day friends began and ended their sabbath at six o'clock in the evening, and thanked God for the hallowed hours of the sabbath rest, and all this was under the direct instruction of their acknowledged prophetess. But by and by some one who dared think for himself discovered the mistake, and found to his sorrow that they were all ignorantly worshiping God by piously observing a portion of common time every week, and desecrating sacred time as often. Well, what did they do about it, did they oust their humbug leaders? Not at all, but just threw their mantles over them as others do, and changed their reckoning and went on, of course they did it honestly and ignorantly much as their neighbors were doing. "Then where is the difference between them and us?" You say this is the difference, we turned about when we saw our mistake. Yes, and so will all honest people, and many have turned from the plain, simple truth of God's Word to follow after the fables and fictions and shadows that lead astray, and think they are doing God service. From then on, these folks have tried to keep sacred the definite seventh day, from sunset to sunset, and thanking God for its sacred hours of peaceful rest and quiet, and by accepting a man-made "day-line" they have been and are yet keeping the wrong day most all over the world, as shown by one of their own recent writers, who has for years seen the folly and impropriety of trying to keep sacred the definite seventh day by reckoning from a purely human standpoint, erected in the most improbable place found. And now the writer is engaging his powers in trying to get back to the old landmarks, the old paths, and to have the day line re-established back in the neighborhood where the garden of Eden once was, where day began and ended. And why sabbath keepers should kick and fight against it is hard to account for, unless it is humiliating to confess that we have been in the fog and keeping the wrong day very much as our neighbors are doing. "Then where is the difference between them and us?" They are ignorantly worshiping on the first day of the week, and calling it the sabbath of the Lord, while many seventh day folk are doing the same thing, they being witnesses. "Then where is the difference?" Brethren, I would suggest that we call a halt, and "stop the old dead line, and let our neighbors rest while we apologize like men to them for our rash treatment, until we can run out the lines, and settle this much vexed question, and can agree among ourselves as to what day is the sabbath day. For I perceive that in this thing we are too superstitious, for we felt very sure that our neighbors were in Babylon, and we were trying to turn on the search lights and help them out, while we ourselves are somewhat confused, and are not sure where we are at or which day we are keeping. I fear that Paul would say to us as he once did to other unstable souls, "O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that you should not obey the truth," the gospel. "Stop your longing to be back under the law, where you can observe days, months and times and years, I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain." And to those who were troubled about their meat, and their drink, or their holy days, and their new moons and their sabbaths very much as we as a people are, he would say, "Let not men therefore judge (or rule) you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days, which are a shadow of things coming; but the body is of Christ. Brethren, let us go to and leave the shadow, and follow Christ, and not another.

Editor Restitution:

I have not written for our dear paper for some time, and I thought I would put in my mite and say a word for my dear Master. I was eleven years old when I was baptized two years ago this month by Elder B. W. Woodward and arose to walk in newness of life. I am striving to walk in that straight and narrow way, but there are trials and temptations that seem hard to bear, but if we go to him and ask him he will help us, for he says, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." What a blessed promise that is. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may ever be found faithful, and always have my lamp trimmed and bright ready to meet our soon coming King.

I am visiting Elder and Auntie Woodward for the last time before going to my home in New York State. Your Sister in the one faith.

GERTRUDE EYRE.

A little girl five years of age, on being asked what is faith, artlessly replied: "It is doing just what God wants us to do and ask no questions about it." This covers the whole field; perfect trust, combined with implicit obedience.

Have Ye Kept the Faith?

Two brothers had been long parted, and had wandered far and wide. They met on two railway trains at a station, and as they were passing, the one recognized the other. There was only time for a word, and that word was: "Have ye kept the faith?"

Questions of health and wealth, business and prosperity, all were of secondary importance compared with this momentous question, "Have ye kept the faith?"

The faith which God has given is the most precious treasure that man possesses. No matter what else he has gained, if he has not gained this he is poor. No matter what he else has, if he has not kept the faith he must perish.

"Have ye kept the faith?" Health and wealth may have gone, friends and associates may have passed away, hopes once bright may have grown dim, and joys may have darkened into griefs, but if ye have kept the faith, all is well.

"Have ye kept the faith" young man? You have left your father's house, you have outgrown your mother, you know more than both of your parents. They have toiled to educate you; you have gained knowledge; have been through college; have listened to skeptics who know so much that nobody can teach them anything; you have imbibed advanced ideas about human progress and the dignity of humanity, but "Have ye kept the faith?" You think you have found something better; but know this thing, If ye keep the faith, the faith will keep you; if you depart from the faith, you may find yourself a helmless wreck, upon a dark and dangerous shore. You have learned things your mother could not teach you; you have gone to places where you would not like to meet your mother; you have found companions to whom you would not be pleased to introduce her; but "Have ye kept the faith?"

Many a man makes shipwreck of faith. Many who with faith in God might have been shining lights pass out into the darkness because they have lost faith. How many men great in ability, mighty in wisdom, profound in knowledge, have yet sunk down into gloom and darkness unspeakable, while others who have trod the narrow path, have through storm and conflict, trial and temptation, pressed onward to the eternal rest, and when life's last sands were faltering, and the shadows were gathering, could say with the Apostle, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

Be not Conformed To This World.

We must influence the world or the world will influence us. Must act or we shall be acted upon. If we do not try to straighten the world to the standard of right, the world will bend us to the standard of wrong. The fashions, the follies, the maxims, the customs, the practices of the world exercise a moulding influence on all who yield to their power. If we are to withstand these influences, we must plant our feet on the Eternal Rock, we must oppose the current of worldly influences, even though we resist unto blood, striving against sin; and we must be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. If we are passive and listless we will be overcome; we must actively oppose those influences which seduce us or assail us; we must neither be beguiled by earth's blandishments nor swept away by its rushing tides. We must stand fast in the faith.

The spirit of the world is the spirit of concession, compromise, and conformity; but "all that is in the world" "is not of the Father," and is contrary to the truth of God and to the word of Christ. If we are to be Christians we are "not of the world;" if we are followers of Christ the world will hate us as it hated our Master. Let us learn to take his yoke, knowing that if we do follow him, the world will reject us and despise us, but God will honor and bless us, and if the world crucify us here, the Master will crown us by and by.

Poetry.

Thou Art the Way.

Oh Father, when the tempest comes,
The tempest fierce and wild,
And all the path that we should walk
With tangled drift is piled;
When lost among the gritty cold rocks,
And in the dark defiles,
Where torrents roar with icy wrath
Among the homeless wilds,
Then let me hear thy whispered word
In gentlest accents say:
"I am the living way."

When the perplexed with many things
I know not what to do;
When two opposing duties seem
Both equally in view;
When worry comes with brow of care
And all her nettles sow
Within the garden where should bloom
The lily and the rose;
When night comes with her pirate flag
When bright should beam the day,
Then, Father, show the way.

What am I, Father, in thy sight,
But just a little one,
Whose only hope for life and truth
Is resting in the Son,
And not in work that I have done,
Or aught that I can do,
For all of mine that pleases thee
Thy mercy led me to;
Yet may I safe because I trust;
And joyously can say,
Thou, savior, art my way,

THE HOPE OF SALVATION.

"Well sister mine, what is the result of your thoughts upon our last conversation?"

"The fact is, brother, I am puzzled. When I search the Scriptures, as I have done lately, I cannot find any satisfactory warrant for my opinions about the soul and its reward. But on the other hand, when I read of death-bed triumphs, and think about Uncle's dying hours, I cannot see that I can be wrong. Would God bear such testimony to error? Had you been present there, I doubt whether you would have received your present belief with readiness."

"My dear Ella, if I have reproach upon my conscience at all about the matter, it is that I did not accept the plain statements of God's Word with more readiness, instead of doubting this and questioning that. As to dying scenes, you sent me a most graphic account of the end of uncle Richard, but as I dare not place men's experience above God's revelation, I had to put aside all human considerations. God is truth, so that you must prove whether a thing is true ere you can know whether God approves it. Now the first thing to be shown is this;—is the expiring man, woman, or child in the faith? A firm belief, in no matter what, will carry a person through death's portals—the doubt, the calmness, or the ecstasy severally experienced, being according to the constitution of the individual. Thus it is that we find eminently pious men dying speechless or despairingly, whilst on the other hand we read of pagan Socrates drinking the poison-cup unflinchingly, the Moslem rushing upon destruction in hope of a sensual reward with the houri, or the Jesuits missionary calmly enduring the Indian tortures. I have this complaint to make against all compilations entitled, 'Death-bed triumphs,' that they are one-sided. How did Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, die?"

"All history which I have read bears record that the last day of her life was one of her happiest."

"Yet she was a Roman Catholic, and received her dying consolations from the sacrament and the last offices of the Papal religion. I only mention her as a prominent example; hundreds of cases could be found of Pagan, Papist, Protestant, and even infidel, quiet or triumphant death-bed scenes. I am constrained then, from both testimony and mental philosophy, to let such mortal experiences go for nothing in comparison with the Word of Truth. Far be it from me to say that persons dying under the delusion of their souls going at once to heaven, are lost for ever. Their destiny it is God's prerogative to decide. But I contend that their ideas at such a time cannot weigh anything against God's words. And when His Book tells me that the dying man, whether saint or sinner, sinks into unconsciousness, that he has no more knowledge, love, or power to praise God, what am I to think of the sayings of poor dying mortals, that they are 'going to glory,' except that they are mistaken? Popular hymnology is equally at fault as to proving anything about the state of the dead. The Bible never gives utterance to sentiment of the kind sung on Sunday at your chapel:

Come, ye angels, carry me home;
And lead me walking glorious home;
A- with crystal robe to wear
To dy as an archangels wear!
Performing, with unwearied hands,
A present Savior's high commands.

No, no, my dear Ella, 'man dieth and wasteth away: he giveth up his breath, and where is he?' Till the heavens be no more he shall not awake, nor be raised out of his sleep.' So that the Bible refutes the idea of angels waiting to waft upon their wings that which man hath not, i. e. an immortal ghost. Sister, will you not disabuse your mind of the unscriptural dogmas, and come to the investigation of the truth with untrammelled thoughts?"

"So I do, Alfred. I was rather wishing for an explanation of those circumstances than advancing them as reasons against Scripture. I have been thinking over what you said last time was your hope of heaven, but must confess that I do not well understand wherein it materially differs from mine and others.

"Dear Ella, I thought I had stated the difference plainly; but I will give it to you as a logical proposition. Man has not an immortal soul to be separated from the body at death. Hence it cannot immediately ascend to heaven: Therefore, the Scripturally presented hope must be something very different. And this is the Kingdom of Messiah to be established upon the earth, and attainable through resurrection. This 'hope of the gospel' is however so little known as to be a 'new doctrine' to this age. But how much preferable it is to the heaven of the sects; that essence of the pagan Elysian fields compounded with portions of the Scripture revelation by skilful apostate chemists; but all their science has only made a weak mixture. As in medicine I use nature's simple remedies, so in religion let me have God's pure scheme before all the ecclesiastical drugs in Pagan shops. When I see the Lord holding out to all the righteous, who will believe his word and obey it, the hope of reigning jointly with Christ over the nations, I see a future worthy of God's wisdom in planning and of my efforts in obtaining."

"But is not this a low, sensual idea of heaven? I remember Dr. Burns, the last time he was here, in talking with father, spoke of the millenarian notion as degrading to Christ's dignity. He scoffed at the idea of Jesus coming to reign on this vile earth."

"Have you found any carnal or degrading conception in the passages I gave you to read the other night?"

"I have read but cannot well understand them. They seem to teach a real reign of Christ upon the earth, yet you know they must be taken in a spiritual sense, which I cannot well make out. In fact, I feel like walking in a mist."

"And well you may; though the light of truth will enable you to see your way through it. But you must cast away the shroud of spiritualization or you may as well shut up your Bible. I wish you to ask yourself why that Book should not be taken in its full, free, literal understanding, even as you would any other work. Put away all commentaries, lest you come under the condemnation of the closing paragraph of Revelation?"

"Then you think their mode of explaining the Bible is 'adding to,' 'taking from?'"

"I account it as being both, therefore the greater condemnation. In God's plain statements there is beauty and wisdom, but sermonizings,—aptly called 'skeletons,'—mar or distort these."

"How do you mean, Alfred?"

"Just look at the difference made in the sense of two or three I will quote, 'Jehovah shall be King over all the earth' saith the Scriptures; 'this means that God will be more praised as more of the heathen become converted,' says the sermonizer. 'At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, and all the nations shall be gathered together to the name of the Lord in Jerusalem,'—by which we are to understand an increase of members of churches' is the lying rejoinder. You will hardly hear a sermon without the church being called Zion, and the promises to Israel's metropolis claimed for the various sects. But Zion, the one city which is now ploughed like a field, is to become 'the city of Jehovah-Shammah,' or the dwelling-place of Jehovah—in our Lord's words, 'the city of the Great King;' and the Psalmist exults over it, that 'Beautiful for situation; the joy of the whole earth is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north.' I would like to ask Mr. Phelan, 'where is the north of the church?' and when has it been fulfilled of that holy, that 'the kings of the earth saw it and marvelled; they were troubled and hasted away?' Of whose 'individual experience' can it be truly said,

The sun shall no more go down
Neither shall the moon withdraw herself:
For the Lord shall be thine everlasting light,
And the days of thy mourning shall be ended?'

"But is there not Bible authority for applying the term kingdom to the church? Did not Peter open it at Pentecost?"

"If the church be the kingdom of our Lord, and membership therein the consequent inheritance, where is either the sense or the beauty of the song of the elders, 'Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God * * and hast made us to our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth.' When did the church reign on earth?"

"Never as yet, but you know that 'every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Lord.'"

"Yes, when he comes and reigns 'all nations shall serve him.' But this is very different to the various sects of this age, singly or unitedly, constituting his kingdom."

"But if we are not to believe in a present kingdom how can it be true that at conversion men are said to be translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son?"

"It is not true, dear sister, in that sense. Our translation is to a prospective thing. A better rendering is, 'God hath caused us to change sides for the kingdom of his beloved Son.' A fighting army, not a settled government, is the idea in these words."

"But, Alfred, what do you make of the words of Jesus 'My kingdom is not of this world, else would my servants fight?'"

"Continue the quotation. Ella, 'but now is my kingdom not from hence.' His holy powerful dominion was not to have its origin out of that weak wicked Jewish world which sent the message after him 'we will not have this man to reign over us.' But this is abandoning your previous ground altogether."

"How so, Alfred?"

"If the kingdom of Jesus is not of this world, in the sense you mean of not on the earth, then it cannot be the church, which is in the world. But take the words of Jesus plainly, as referring to origin and time, and all difficulty ceases. It was not to be then, nor out of that effete state, for the God of heaven was to set up a kingdom."

"I see there is not sufficient ground for regarding the church as being Christ's kingdom. But I must confess I cannot well understand your idea yet. Do you mean that we must go back to Jewish notions of an earthly kingdom. I do not think there is in that enough to satisfy our spiritual cravings. Did not Jesus bring in 'a better hope?'"

"My dear sister, Paul was not of your opinion. If you turn to 2 Cor. vi, 10, to vii, 1, you will find that he thought the Jewish prophets gave highest food for spiritual wants. After quoting essentially Israelitish promises of the Divine Fatherhood he says,

'Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.'

The fact is we know of no future but through the teachings of the Old Testament. Jesus in truth 'bought life and immortality to light,' yet they were laid up in the prophetic mine. In the prophets is the diamond,—the apostles are the lapidaries. All salvation is founded upon the Covenant made by God to Abraham, which I told you of before."

"You did; but I should like to hear more, for I cannot well understand the connection."

"Look then at Gen. xii, 7, 'To thy seed will I give this land; xiii, 14-17, 'The land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for the ages' xv., xvii, 4-16, 'As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be the father of many nations; * * and kings shall come out of thee. * * And I will give to thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for a possession for the age, and I will be their God;' xxii. 15-18, 'By myself have I sworn, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice.' Here is the precious stone, but look how bright it shines when Paul the artizan, has polished it. 'Know ye, therefore, that they who are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would JUSTIFY THE NATIONS through faith, preached before the gospel to Abraham, saying, In thee shall all the nations be blessed.

So then they who are of faith, the same are blessed with faithful Abraham. Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one. And to thy seed, who is Christ.' (Gal. iii. 7-9, 16.) 'Cometh this blessing then upon the circumcision, or on the uncircumcision also? for we say that faith was accounted to Abraham for righteousness. For the promise, that he should be Heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.' 'The children of the promise are counted for the seed. (Rom. iv. 9, 13, ix. 8) This was the hope of the promise to which the twelve tribes, continually serving God day and night, hope to come. The grandeur and extent of the salvation contained in these promises I believe we have hardly more than got a glimpse of. This to Abraham is the first promise given, and is the first gospel ever preached. The scope of it is blessing to all nations; it is full of hope for all the race. This is also the gospel of our salvation, for we who have believed as Abraham did and in what was given him to believe, becoming thus the children of his faith, share first and highest in the blessings promised. Ella, what was the 'good confession' witnessed before Pilate?"

"I suppose you mean his assent that he was King of the Jews?"

"That was only the part: 'Thou sayest that I am a king; To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world; that I might bear witness to the truth.'"

"What was the truth which it was the mission of Jesus to proclaim?"

"The gospel of the kingdom was the grand theme of all his preaching, hence we find that the kingdom is that truth. With this good message he commenced his ministrations, and the last command he left with his disciples was that they should preach the glad news to every nation. Seeing that it is of such importance, and that by the belief of the promised blessings of the kingdom we are to obtain salvation, ought we not to earnestly search what this reward is?"

A man who has a strong mind can bear to be insulted, can bear offences, because he is strong. The weak mind snaps and snarls at a little; the strong mind bears it like a rock, and it moveth not, though a thousand breakers dash upon it, and cast their pitiful malice in the spray upon its summit.

The Root of Christianity.

You will doubtless have observed in reading 1 Cor. xiii. that there is an under-lying principle which gives vitality to the whole Christian system, both of a doctrinal and practical nature like as a tree must depend upon its roots for its life. This chapter shows that even should we be gifted with the oratory of men and angels combined, and by it hold our auditors spell-bound as we portray with a silvery tongue the glories of the good time coming, and how it is not the motive which inspires the tongue, it amounts to nothing more than the sounding brass of a trumpet, or a clanging cymbal, which for the time being pleases the ear with its melody.

Should we become gifted students of prophecy, and be able to penetrate the mysteries, and attain a marvelous degree of knowledge, and have faith strong enough to pluck up the everlasting mountains, and have not love we are nothing, and that counts for but little.

Should we be charitably inclined and give all our goods to feed the poor, if love is not the motive which inspires the gift, it profiteth nothing.

Should we meet death by fire, as a martyr, and love is not the motive principle governing us, it will yield no profit.

We may know those who possess this love, because they suffer long, are kind, envy is not in their lives, they are not puffed up, they don't behave in an unseemly manner, they are not always seeking their own benefit, are not soon provoked, they are not always taking account of evil, they have no pleasure in unrighteousness, but do rejoice in the truth, and they will also bear things, and not easily become impatient, but will believe, hope and endure unto the end.

The chapter closes by naming three things which abide. It is certainly refreshing in the midst of this changing transitory state of things to find something that abides, and changes not.

We have faith, which in the sweet by and by will be lost in sight, and hope which has faith for its parent, will be lost in fruition, but love will be intensified, and abide through the endless cycles of eternity.

"God is love," and this divine attribute of his being, permeates and is gloriously manifested in every work of his hand, and is the controlling principle of his government and is shown in his dealings with mankind. It is his purpose to people the new earth with inhabitants in whose heart this divine principle has found an abiding home.

It is the possesser of a pure heart, even the meek and humble follower of Jesus, that has the promise of seeing God, and having an inheritance in the new earth. Unless this principle finds an home with us now, it never will hereafter.

This holy principle awakens in the heart responsive melodies, and breaks forth in transports of adoration and praise, and fills the heart with sweetness and divine harmony, like heavenly music, in union with the Divine Author from whence it flows. It is a consolation which satifies the inward craving of every pure heart, as nothing else can do.

In adversity it is a stay and solace like as the vine with its graceful foliage entwines itself about the sturdy oak and climbs up into the sunshine. So love with its caressing tendrils entwines itself about the Son of God, and lifts its possessor up out of adverse surroundings into the cheering sunshine of God's favor; healing the broken heart, and enables one to look beyond the present, and by faith view the evergreen shore.

As the aroma of the sweet-scented flower is not confined to the garden where it grows, but is taken up by the passing breeze and made to regale the senses of others so the heart filled with divine love, is not confined to itself, but emits an influence which is felt by those with whom they come in contact.

Oh, it is the priceless gem which ever gleams in the crown of the star of Bethlehem, whose luster never fades, but will increase in brilliancy as the endless cycles of eternity succeed each other, never faileth.

W. H. WILSON.

Use a Little Wine.

I believe Paul meant what he said when he told Timothy to "use a little wine for his stomach's sake and often infirmities," but I have no doubt he did not mean fermented wine.

The "fruit of the vine" was employed by Christ to represent his shed blood, but it was to be unfermented. He thus shows that the grape is the best fruit for man, and it is well known that many infirmities of the flesh, especially stomach troubles, are cured by an exclusive diet of grapes. Institutions know as "grape cures" are in existence in this country, and many cures are effected by them. It is true that the adopting of a single article of food is in itself beneficial to those who adhere to it rigidly, but if that one article of food be the grape the benefit is greater and the cure sooner effected.

Wheat bread, the other article used in our communion service, and representing our Savior's broken body, is made from the best vegetable known for man's alimentary needs. We know positively that it was to be unleavened, and we know it was not of the "fine flour" of today. It was no doubt made with all the ingredients of the wheat left in, and science tells us that in the kernel of wheat are all the elements necessary for man's food; nothing is lacking.

Paul was acquainted with the medicinal virtues of the "juice of the grape" and therefore recommended "a little wine" to be taken by Timothy for his ailments. They who cite this instance as an excuse for drinking wine never take into consideration that Paul meant unfermented wine, and that he recommended that only "a little" be taken.

Friendship.

How dear a gem is friendship. It sweetens the bitter cup, and it smooths the thorny path of life. How pleasing the idea, how animating the thought that we are friends. How much should we prize a true friend in whom we may always confide. A true friend whose heart is ready to speak a word of consolation to the afflicted, and whose hand is ready to administer relief without expecting recompense, is to be prized above the sparkling gems of earth. But a false friend is more to be dreaded than an avowed enemy, for we know the design of an enemy is to injure, but a false friend is like a serpent coiled in the grass, lying in ambush for its prey, and its unhappy victim is ensnared before he is aware that danger is near.

Some will be our friends while prosperity blooms along our pathway, then all goes on pleasantly and harmoniously; but when adversity with its chilly blast, sweeps away the flowers of prosperity, and nothing but the recollection of the past remains, then we look around for our friends. Alas! they are all gone—yes, gone when we most needed them.

But to obtain true friends we have a part to act, and must show ourselves friendly to our acquaintances and friends and those with whom we associate. Most of us are strangers, from different parts of the country in a town of strangers, and we make ourselves friendly to obtain friends.

We all have our trials and troubles and when these afflictions are upon us, how alleviating to us it is to have a friend that will sympathize with us, and with kind and consoling words, cheer up the bruised heart. If anything transpires to add happiness to the contented mind, how brightly that spark will kindle when shared with a true and faithful friend to all. If we meet with a stranger, treat that stranger kindly, for we know not what secret sorrow is his. We do not know what painful emotions are throbbing in his bosom.

A mild word or friendly look, or some little act of kindness, may be the means of alleviating much heartfelt sorrow.

Let us not be as strangers, but as friends.

DOVE BROOKOVER.

The Nickel Plate Road runs an excursion to Niagara Falls Aug. 19th.

The brethren and sisters in Christ in Nebraska and elsewhere:

The time has come again to give notice of our annual meeting, which will begin, the Lord willing, Friday Sept. 8, and hold ten days. The meeting will be held at St. Paul, Nebraska. St. Paul is so located as to give every one a chance to attend. Now brethren, how many will commence at once to make arrangements to be present and enjoy ten days of blessed communion with those of like precious faith. Brethren, lay aside the duties of life for a short season and come to the meeting and go home feeling that you have lost nothing, but gained much. Those who have never attended before, come and enjoy a feast in the name of the Lord. Again we say, Come one and all. We need your presence that we may be encouraged by hearing your voices in praise and song. We need your counsel. How much are we interested in the great cause of truth? We show our faith by our works. There may be some brother or sister that cannot leave home, but you can go to some brother or sister that can and say to them, "You go and I will see to your home affairs while you are away." Would that not be brotherly and working for the Master? We must get in earnest. The Lord is coming, soon. Will we be found at work? Do not say you can't come, but put your trust in God.

St. Paul is twenty-two miles north of Grand Island at the junction of the B. & M. and the Union Pacific R. R. You will receive a hearty welcome by the brethren there. All who can, bring tents; and those who cannot will be provided for by the committee. There will be stoves and fuel on the grounds, and pasturage for teams and everything in order for those coming from a distance. For any further information address W. L. Crowe, St. Paul, Nebraska. Again we say, Come and enjoy another good meeting before the Lord comes. Good speakers will be in attendance and an interesting programme issued. Committee,

ALMUS ADAMS,
W. L. CROWE,
RENA GORDON.

The brethren and sisters of the Abrahamic faith of Illinois will meet in conference at Lamark, Ill., Sept. 6, 7 and 8, 1895. An urgent call is made for general attendance, at least that each church in the district will be represented by a delegate to voice the Church in the selection and possible election of an evangelist for the coming year.

J. M. GLOTFELTY, Chairman.

Brothers and sisters in Christ in Iowa, Dear ones in the faith and hope of the gospel:

We are to meet this year at Marshalltown. We want every one who possibly can come to be present at the annual meeting. Your presence at the meeting is needed more this year than ever. If you stay away and all work stops, how sad it will be. We need your counsel, your presence, your help. O do come. Those who have been holding on for so long are almost ready to let go. Won't you come and help us? We placed the meeting this year in August. You told us in June you were too busy. Now, we shall look for you. Shall we be made glad by your presence? Come prepared with bedding to take care of yourselves. Tents will be furnished. PROV. xxvii. 17. Come.

A. J. EICHENBERGER.

The Annual Conference for the State of Indiana will be held at Argos, Indiana, beginning on Friday Sept. 20, 1895. Argos is on the Michigan City branch of the L. E. & W. W. R. R., and Nickel Plate R. R. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Come with a determination to make this meeting a season of rejoicing in the truth. Don't cumber yourselves with unnecessary baggage, if you have a "hobby," little or big please leave it at home, it will keep until you return, but come loaded down with gospel truth filled to overflowing with love to God and your fellowmen, and God will do the rest.

To grow in grace, we must watch as well as pray.

Jesus never tried to make a disciple by argument.

Our hardest battles are those we fight with ourselves.

When Christ enters the heart it must be by the front door.

We can make any kind of hard work easy by doing it for God.

The world owes no man a living who is not willing to work for it.

If we have a heart to give, God will give us the ability to do it.

To close the heart against a brother is to shut the door against God.

Strike at the face of any kind of sin, and you will soon hear vipers hiss.

It is good to pray, but it is better to bring all the tithes into the storehouse.

It is not enough to look upon Christ as He walks. We must walk with him.

Faith rests and waits. Unbelief refuses to be quiet because it has no feeling.

The Christian has too much business on hand when he becomes too busy to pray.

Church fairs are devices to make the goats pay for the pasturage of the sheep.

It will always shorten our prayers wonderfully to first do what God expects.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

Conference Notice.

The Iowa State Conference of the Church of God will be held in Marshalltown, beginning Thursday evening August 15th, and lasting over till Sunday evening the 25th, 1895. Our reasons for place—the most central, and most convenient in the State for railroad for all brethren. At the crossing of the Chicago & North-Western, Iowa Central, and the Great Western or Diagonal Road. The location in the city is on North Third Street opposite the Green House. The street car line starts out just east of the depot and for a nickel will carry you to the ground. Come prepared to tent and to live. Will have tents on the ground, but all who have tents bring them.

As to time, it will be of more leisure than in June, and therefore secure a better attendance. Also crops will then be sufficiently matured to tell of a certainty what can be done for Evangelistic Work. A regular programme will be given out for work. Begin now to arrange to attend the meetings. Leave your hobbies at home and come prepared for a meeting of straight-forward gospel and Bible work. We shall try to make this one of the most interesting meetings we have ever held in Iowa. We expect to be able to secure reduced rates upon all of the railroads in the state for this occasion.

G. M. MYERS, Pres.
O. J. ALLARD, Sec.

The first excursion on the Nickel Plate Road to Niagara Falls will be Aug. 19th. Ask agents for schedule of special train and rates.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Hingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 88 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

The first Niagara Falls Excursion of 1895 will be run over the Nickel Plate Road Aug. 19th. Ask agents for time and rates.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

That Trip To Boston.

Boston excursionists over the Pennsylvania Lines will be carried in the luxurious ease to be expected on "The Standard Railway of America"—the standard in construction, equipment and operation. This merited distinction means that every requirement for comfortable and delightful traveling is provided on these lines. The Parlor, Sleeping and Dining Cars and Coaches are up to date in design and finish. The Pennsylvania is an up-to-date railway system, the foremost in adopting practicable ideas for the conveniences and pleasure of patrons.

Stop-over privileges will enable excursionists to visit places of summer sojourn along the Atlantic Ocean. Long Branch, Cape May, Asbury Park, Atlantic City, Ocean Grove and resorts on the New Jersey Coast are on the Pennsylvania Lines, and may be reached at slight expense from Philidelphia and New York by daily excursions thither during the season. Historic scenes in Philadelphia, including Independence Hall with Old Liberty Bell and numerous interesting relics, the United States Mint, Masonic Temple, Fairmount Park, the cite of the Centennial, may be visited within the stop-over limit.

Returning excursionists may make the trip over different routes to be selected at the time tickets to Boston are obtained. By this arrangement the return journey may be made via the Hudson River, Niagara Falls, and other attractive places. If excursionists wish to reach home in the most expeditious manner, they should obtain tickets with return portions reading over the Pennsylvania Lines. When big crowds break up and the rush for home commences, it should be remembered the Pennsylvania Lines always meet all the requirements and handle passengers expeditiously and satisfactorily.

Excursion tickets to Boston account the Knights Templar Conclave will be sold to all applicants at ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines from Aug. 19th to Aug. 25th, inclusive. One-half the excursion rate will be charged for tickets to be used by children under twelve and over five years of age. Connecting railways will also sell reduced rate tickets to Boston over these lines. Information concerning rates, time of trains and other details will be promptly furnished applicants to nearest Pennsylvania Line ticket agent, or may be obtained by addressing F. VAN DUSEN, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Summer Tourist Rates.

The North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western R'y) is now selling excursion tickets at reduced rates to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Ashland, Bayfield, Marquette, Deadwood, Dakota, Hot Springs, Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou, Salt Lake City, and the lake and mountain resorts of the west and northwest. For rates and full information apply to agents of connecting lines. Illustrated pamphlets, giving full particulars, will be mailed free upon application to W. B. Kniskern, G. P. & T. A., Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago, Ill.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expendi tures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Reduced Rates, Excursions over Pennsylvania Lines During Season of 1895.

Liberal concessions in fare over the Pennsylvania Lines have been granted for numerous events to take place this summer in various part of the United States. In addition to local excursions, tickets at reduced rates will be sold over these lines as given in the following paragraphs. Excursion tickets may be obtained at ticket offices on the Pennsylvania System and will also be sold over this route by connecting railways. Some of the points to which tickets will be sold and dates of sale are as follows:

To Boston, August 19th to 25th, inclusive, account Triennial Conclave Knights Templar. Return limit extended to Oct 3d by special arrangement.

To Louisville Ky., in September for National Encampment, G. A. R. One cent per mile. Reasonable return limit.

The reduced rates over the Pennsylvania Lines will not be restricted to members of the organizations mentioned, but may be taken advantage of by the public generally. Any Pennsylvania Line Ticket or Passenger Agent will furnish desired information concerning rates, time of trains, and other details, to all applicants, or the same may be obtained by addressing J. E. Hanes, Ticket Agent, Plymouth, or F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Penna.

G. A. R. AT LOUISVILLE.

The rate to Louisville, Ky., for the Twenty-ninth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be based on One Cent per Mile from Ticket Stations on the Pennsylvania Lines. Excursion tickets will be sold at that rate September 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th, 1895. The return limit will cover sufficient time for an extended sojourn, and will be ample for side trips. Southern Railways are expected to make special rates to historic places, and to commercial and industrial centers, enabling visitors to see the South at slight expense. Low rates have already been arranged for the Chickamauga National Military Park dedication which takes place shortly after the Encampment at Louisville closes. Excursion tickets to Chattanooga for the dedication will be sold over Pennsylvania Lines Sept. 16th to 19th, inclusive.

Special arrangements may be made by Posts desiring to go in a body, or parties of friends wishing to travel together can be satisfactorily accomodated if they will kindly make their wants known to the undersigned. Valuable information will be cheerfully furnished applicants, and any required aid in shaping details will be promptly extended. It will pay to investigate. C. L. KIMBALL, Ass't Gen'l Passenger Agent, Cleavland, Ohio.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

In an old tree beside our door
A wee bird built a cozy nest,
Where fondest in its soft embrace,
She and the tender brood might rest.

The summer sky was clouded o'er,
A summer breeze stirred all the air,
And soon the rain in torrents fell,
And looking up with anxious care,

We saw the loving mother-bird
Sit calmly, and with outspread wing,
From rushing wind and falling rain,
Each little bird safe sheltering.

Then thought we of those trustful words
That David, Israel's psalmist, sings:
"Till storms are past, my refuge is,
Safe in the shadow of Thy wings."

What comfort to our storm-tossed souls,
What sense of care divine it brings,
To know that we may surely hide
"Under the covert of his wings."

Love the Children of God

It is sometimes said: "Colossal thoughts demand colossal minds." In the above caption is hidden thoughts so sublime and so grand, that the word "colossal" is far from being adequate to measure its magnitude. The finite mind of the flesh, cannot possibly grasp the height, depth, breadth and grandeur of the infinite unless it is first disciplined, and brought in harmony with the infinite.

1 John v. 1-6, reveals in brief how the finite mind can be harmonized with the infinite, and given a grand and noble conception of these things. "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is begotten of God: and whosoever loveth him that begot loveth him also that is begotten of him. Hereby we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and and do his commandments. For this is the love of God that we keep his commandments."

A leading thought contained in the words "the Christ," is found in Matt. ii. 1-6 and a person not perceiving this, cannot believe that "Jesus is the Christ." "Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold wise men from the east came to Jerusalem, saying, where is he that is born King of the Jews?" (or born the Christ) for we saw his star in the east, and are come to worship him. And when Herod the king heard of it, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. And gathering together all the chief priests and scribes of the people, he inquired of them where the Christ should be born." One asks where the "king of the Jews" should be born and the other "the Christ," which are interchangeable phrases of the same import. Note the answer to the question, where "the Christ" should be born. "And they said unto him in Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet. And thou Bethlehem, land of Judah, art in nowise least among the princes of Judah: For out of thee shall come forth a governor, which shall be shepherd of my people Israel." In answer to the question as to where the Christ should be born they were told where the governor of Israel should be born.

Mark xv. 32: "Let the Christ, the king of Israel, come down from the cross."

Luke ii. 11-12: "There is born to you this day in the city of David a Savior, (Jesus) which is Christ the Lord." ("Lord" means ruler, or one in authority.)

This same thought is found in the covenants of promise made into Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, concerning the commonwealth of Israel, and the future blessing of the nations, otherwise called the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation.

"Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is begotten of God."

Another thing in union with this, is "Whosoever loveth him that begot loveth him also that is begotten of him." It is fitting that this mutual bond of affection should exist now, between princes of the royal household,—sons of God, and joint-heirs with Jesus, the Christ, to the empire of earth. It is decreed from on high that knowledge and justice tempered with love will be the guiding star which shall enter into the laws which shall go forth from Zion for the government of the nations. Those who are not familiar with these principles now, will not be prepared to exercise them, when the King of the kings shall sway the scepter of universal empire. This is the day of discipline, trial and preparation, and if we are unsuccessful in exercising these principles now in the government of self, we will not be prepared to exercise them in the government of others in the ages to come. Candidates for further regal authority will have to give evidence that they are capable of ruling others by governing themselves now. Remember, we must be governors now, if we would be rulers hereafter. Simply professing the truths of the gospel will not count for anything if its principles are not lived. This we may term the acorn from which will emerge the sturdy oak, even a character which the stormy blasts of sin can never uproot, but its comeliness and verdure will ever grace the banks of the river of life, on the evergreen shore.

How can we know when we have this specific love toward God and his children? Listen: "Hereby we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and do his commandments." This is the evidence,—"Do his commandments." Now, if after learning the gospel message, you refuse to obey the commandment—"Be baptized," can you truthfully claim you love God, and yet refuse to obey this commandment given through his Son, of whom he said, "Hear ye him!" If you don't love God sufficiently to obey his commandment, you cannot love his obedient children.

Obedience to commands are not burdensome where true love exists. Its delight is to obey, yea, even martyrdom cannot separate between true love and obedience; it overcomes every obstacle in its way.

It also leads to self-sacrifice for the good of others. It prompts its possessor to relieve suffering wherever found. There is not a good work or Divine command that can be found but what true love in the heart will comply with speedily.

To the afflicted and sorrowful love's kind acts and words of cheer and consolation, distill from lips so possessed like dew drops, inspired by gentle love and holy piety, which sink deep down into the stilly depths of the heart, never to be forgotten.

Love linked with faith and hope forms a cord of three-fold strength with which the believer is bound to the Infinite, being a holy bond which can never be severed. Having this assurance, a holy calm in solemn stillness envelops his entire being as he pours out his adoration unto him who is love.

Another effect is that of unity. The responsive love between the Father and the Son is something that is grand to contemplate, culminating in a unity which never can be severed.

And did not our Savior pray for believers "that they may be one, even as we are one; I in them, and thou in me, that they may be perfected into one; that the world may know that thou didst send me, and lovedst them, even as thou lovedst me?" This responsive love between the Father, Son and children, is an evidence to the world that the mission of Jesus was of Divine origin. Did not Jesus say, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another?" The world of unbelievers know well that those who bite and devour each other are not Jesus' disciples. They laugh to scorn a man who professes to be such, and lives an impure life. I was acquainted with an infidel, who would speak ill of Jesus, and yet if he found any one professing to be a Christian, and at the same time living an unholy life, he would laugh him to scorn, and say, "he is no more a Christian than I am." The world know well what should constitute a practical life of a Christian.

Those Christians who have entered into the unity with the Father and Son, lives the holy life the Son lived, while on earth.

The life such live, never casts a shade which will darken the pathway of others, but on the contrary, they radiate a pure light born from above, upon the darkmoral night from which we are about to emerge. They become cheery lights in the home circle, discord gives way to harmony, brothers and sisters delight in each others association, and as affection grows, they become tender toward one another. Husband loves the wife, the wife the husband, the parents the children, and the children the parents, it never fails to produce this result when this heaven-born flame is cultured.

From the home circle it begets love for humanity, and good Samaritan like it feels for others woes, and loves to pour the healing balm into every wounded heart. It meets the sad and afflicted with a face radiant with holy joy, and their presence is like sunshine in the chamber of sadness. And as continued debauchery, vice and crime stamps itself upon the visage, so also the continued presence of holy love in the heart manifests itself in peerless serenity upon faces where God's love reigns supreme.

"'Tis a flower that cannot fade,
A love that never dies,
A light that cannot cast a shade,
A bless that never flies."

"O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee; my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land, where no water is." Psa. lxiii. 1.

Roseate hues now coloring the eastern sky, indicate the early dawn or morning. The sun of the right-eousness is just about to emerge from behind the cloud, and dispel the dark and cheary night of sin. Yes, light is dawning an omen of a better day.

"The morn of knowledge is seen in the clouds,
With prophecies cheering and grand,
That a day-spring shall dawn on the darkness which shrouds
The mind of each priest-ridden land."

"For our skies though thick clouded, yet tell of a day
That shall pour forth its heavenly light;
And sweep the dark shadows of night time away,
In the strength of its luminous might."

From the time the serpent entered Eden's bowers and sowed the seeds of disobedience and falsehood in the minds of our first parents (and perpetuated the same untruth by means of an apostate ministry) ignorance, superstition, sin, sorrow and death, have enveloped the earth like a dismal pall. But all this is about to be relegated to the past because,

"'Tis knowledge and love that will rule the world,
When man to himself shall be true;
And liberty's banner, in grandeur unfurled,
Shall the heart of the nations renew."

Love is the abiding principle in which is lodged the element of success. Whatever is born of love comes to fruition. "Love never faileth." It is a mighty power of attraction, it will unite heart to heart, brothers at variance are united in the sweet bonds of peace. And will ever prevail when

"The splendor and beauty of eras to come
Will dawn like the radiance of morn;
And we dream of that life of whose measureless sum
Men will know in the ages unborn."

The Ascension of Christ.

What a strange experience was this parting scene! "I go away; the Bridegroom shall be taken from you!" said words to loving hearts. But the hour has come; grouped about the Master, hanging on his lips, looking into His eyes, never did He seem so gracious, so lovely as now—how eagerly did they fasten their wondering gaze upon that dear face! Was it a silent, motionless parting? Were there no farewells, no tears, no embraces? None are recorded. But on them He cast benignant looks; over them He lifted hands of blessing. With sorrow and awe blended in intense yearning they waited to catch the latest tones of that charming voice. Then he looked heavenward as if to hear some divine command from the Great Throne. The signal came. Suddenly the air grew radiant, angel wings clove the invisible blue, the seraphic glow upon His countenance grew to an unearthly brightness. What a thrilling moment for all the race. With the pierced hands still uplifted, the pierced feet no longer stood on earth, the mysterious flight skyward is begun. One last look, "a cloud received Him out of their sight." Doubtless the chariots of the cherubim halted for Him just behind that cloud-curtain.

The ascension was a mighty miracle. Science still marvels at it. All bodies within our atmosphere gravitate to the earth. Christ was a man, He possessed a visible, tangible, real personality. Standing erect upon one of the earth's hills, He alone of His race and age suspended the universal law, bade defiance to the mundane centripetal force that bound all others, and without aid from balloon or wings, or skillful aerial vehicle, was wafted away out of the planet, out of the solar system to the Eternal Central Throne. His center of gravity was heaven. The mighty magnet that drew Him thither with such resistless, stupendous power was God. Contravened nature gave place to the interposing supernatural. Secondary force became subordinate to the Creator. Surely it was not hard for Him at whose feet the turbulent sea-waves had crouched in stillness, at whose will the wild winds ceased to blow, and at whose word of command the sheeted dead leaped from the darkness of the tomb, to bridge the deep gulf of the sky, and pass from the foot-stone to the royal seat. To-day, by the ascension, man has a Mediator just where all through the ages he never had one before, viz., on the throne of omnipotence. All hail the risen, ascended Lord, the sinners' friend, mighty to save.

"Out of their sight." "Though ye see Him not." But He is to come again, and the saved church shall "see Him as He is." The first meeting-place "is in the air," just where He vanished from human sight. The Scriptures ever couple the ascension with the descent, the departure with the return, the going to the Father's house with the advent at last to the house of the waiting virgins. Jesus went away; He will surely come back. He went to God; He will one day come from God. He went thither personally; He will return personally. He went visibly; He will return visibly. He went up literally; He will come again literally. He went bodily and corporeally, and the two heavenly messengers said he will "come in like manner." He went up in a cloud; he will return in clouds. He went away while mourning hearts longed to retain his presence; he will return, and countless ones will long to see him. The true Church yearned to hold him with her; she will yearn to have him come back. Our Christianity knows no love for Christ divorced from a love of his appearing. Twice in each and every three chapters of the New Testament is that last grand glorious coming, and its results written of. All prophecies culminate in our Lord's return. All creation groans for it. Not to sigh after the Day of our Lord is a mark of infidelity and apostacy. "His coming," writes Rev. E. P. Marvin, "is the great and blessed hope of this dispensation, the very pole-star of the church." "It is," says Spurgeon, "the day around which our chief hopes must ever center." And we will add: It is the one hope, the only hope. There is no other. Lo, he comes in glory. "And with him all our triumph over the tomb."—D. T. Taylor, in Our Rest.

How The Millennium Is to Come.

People think they see signs of promise in the movement of reform. They think to give the Church a better shape, and the State a better government, and that thus the Millennium will come. I have no confidence in any such hopes. I see more of a promise in the darkest features of the time than in all these pious and patriotic dreams. The world is perhaps more wicked now than it has been since Noah's flood—considering the light it rejects. And yet in this very darkness, I read the promise of coming light. In this very misgiving, desperation, and gloom, I see the argument for the speedy springing forth of glorious and unfading hopes, not as human reason calculates, but as God purposes. I behold in it the rapid winding up of the present dispensation to give place to that better state of things of which the Prophets all have spoken. Statesmen and Churchmen see in it the unmistakable evidences of unprecedented changes, though they widely differ as to what those changes are to be.

I have read somewhere, that when happy changes are contemplated, most people erroneously turn to the quarters of light for the signs of its approach. This has ever been man's mistake when looking for the fulfilment of God's great purposes, and is the mistake of many now. People are looking for the setting up of Christ's Kingdom and the introduction of Millennial glory by reforming and re-baptizing present modes of effort and thought. But so it will not be. God's method of progress is to make darkness the way to light, death the prelude to life, despair the introduction to salvation, and corruption and confusion the road to order and glory. It is not in what seems hopeful, but in what seems gloomy and untoward, that we are to look for the signs of the speedy forthcoming of God's wonder-working goodness. It is the stirring up of dark waters that gives prognostics of the breaking forth of light, and life, and beauty. The bursting glories of Spring come directly out of the bleak Winter. It is from the corrupting seed that we obtain the harvest. The darkest hour is said to be that which immediately precedes the day. The period most hopeful is that when the apparent motives for despondency are most overwhelming. The stress of the controversy between hope and fear always falls upon the eve of triumph. Those dim hours of dismay to the scattered followers of Christ at His crucifixion were but the preludes to the bringing in of light and immortality for man. The bloody persecutions under the Roman emperors which threatened the extinction of Christianity were the immediate precursors of its victory over even the throne of the Cæsars. And so the Scriptures teach that it will be in the ushering in of the great consummation. The sun must darken and the moon withhold her light, and then shall the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in his wings.—Dr. J. Seiss.

How to be Saved.

The instructions of the Holy Spirit always adapt themselves to the specific need and conditions of those to whom they are given. And this is especially true in the directions given to men who are seeeking for salvation. The jailor said, "what must I do to be saved?" The multitude who heard from Peter's mouth at Pentecost, said, "men and brethren, what shall we do?" And Saul, smitten to the earth and arrested in his mad career, cried out "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?"

These questions are all similar, but answers to each of them are different. And why? Does God have different ways of saving men and different conditions of salvation? No. But the questions were asked by different persons, under different circumstances, and in different mental conditions; and hence required different answers.

The Jailor was a heathen; knew nothing of Christ or of God, except that there was some power which guarded Paul and Silas, that could shake the earth and rock the Philippian jail to its foundations; and he desired to avoid the vengeance of that power and be saved. He was not told at first to repent, or to be baptized; for repentance and baptism were things that he knew nothing about. He was simply told to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." And when the Word of God—the Gospel of the Kingdom, the story of Christ's love, and the message of repentance and faith in Him, had been preached to him, and he had penitently embraced the Glad Tidings, he was baptized, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.

The Jews, at Pentecost, heard the Word of God from Peter's lips, and the apostolic testimony pierced their hearts. They said, "What shall we do?" Peter did not tell them to believe, for they already believed what he had said. They had heard the Gospel message, which the jailor had not heard. They had accepted it as truth, and believed that Jesus was the crucified and risen Christ. The direction to them was, "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost" (Acts ii. 38). They were to repent of their wrong in rejecting and crucifying the Lord of Glory. And they publicly were to avow their faith in Christ, who was buried and rose again, by being buried with Him by baptism into death, and being raised again to walk with Him in newness of life.

When Saul of Tarsus inquired, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" the answer was, that he was to go to Damascus, and there be told what he must do. And after he had spent three days in blindness, fasting and prayer, Ananias came to him to tell him the will of God. He did not command him to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, for he had already believed—yes he knew, for his eyes had seen the Lord, and his ears had heard his voice. He did not direct him to repent, for the Lord had already said, "Behold he prayeth." But he said to him, as to a penitent, praying believer, "And now, why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord" (Acts xxii. 16).

The three questions, then, are the same, and the answers are substantially the same; but they adapt themselves to the special needs of each and every individual case. The ignorant Jailor is bidden to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." The believing Jews are commanded to "repent and be baptized;" and the believing, penitent, and prayerful Saul is told to tarry no longer, but to "arise and be baptized," making full confession of his faith in Christ, and of his repentance for his sins; and so escaping from his burden of guilt, wash away his sins, "calling on the name of the Lord.

Reader! Are you ignorant of Christ and His salvation? Read then, the record of his love, and believe on him.

Do you already believe the testimony God has given concerning the birth, the life, the death, the resurrection, the ascension, and the coming reign of the Lord Jesus Christ? Repent, then, and prepare to see his face in peace.

Have you believed the message, and repented of your sins, and offered up your prayer to God; and are you still lingering in sadness and in gloom? If so, "Why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."—George A. Brown, in "Our Rest."

Forever and Everlasting.

Aion, rendered ever, is said by critics to be derived "from aei, always, and on, the present participle of the verb eimi, to be." Aion is sometimes used to denote the recurrence of a thing, as in Mark xv. 8, where Pilate is requested to release a prisoner at the Passover, as he "ever (aei) had done." Aei, then, would seem to denote successive cycles of time; and this being joined to on, would seem to signify a continuation thereof, just as long as the thing to which it is applied endures. Aion and age correspond in some respects, both being capable of expressing limited and unlimited duration. The age of the universe is unending; while the age of an infant may be but of a few minutes' duration. The adjective form of aion is aionios, and is generally translated everlasting; which may mean finite or infinite duration, according as it is used. The continual duration of a thing throughout a definite, or an indefinite period, is everlasting; which is the same in meaning as forever. When a man wills his property to a person and his heirs forever, the forever, in this case, lasts no longer than the heirs; and the impression that if a man is only faithful and sincere it makes no difference what he sows?"

Does it make any difference? Suppose a man should sow couch-grass, thinking that he was going to get timothy-hay—would he? Suppose a man should set out crab apple trees in his orchard, and think he was going to get fall pippins—would he? Suppose a man shall sow the most detestable of all seeds, the Canada thistle, and say that it was wheat, would any amount of botanical sincerity on the part of this fool secure to him a harvest of any thing better than the seed sown?

The Sowing and Reaping.

Here is a man who is sowing what appears to be black ashes. A friend accosts him saying,

"What have you in your bag?"

He learns that it is the hulls of buckwheat—the chaff of old wheat; he says,

"What are you sowing chaff for?"

"Why," the man replies, "I have the impression that if a man is only faithful and sincere it makes no difference what he sows?"

Does it make any difference? Suppose a man should sow couch-grass, thinking that he was going to get timothy-hay—would he? Suppose a man should set out crab apple trees in his orchard, and think he was going to get fall pippins—would he? Suppose a man shall sow the most detestable of all seeds, the Canada thistle, and say that it was wheat, would any amount of botanical sincerity on the part of this fool secure to him a harvest of any thing better than the seed sown?

SOME one has said that the yoke of Christ will not fit a stiff neck.

"TRUTH of any sort is generally disagreeable to the natural man, but especially the truth concerning man's claimless and unentitled condition before God, as a creature under sentence of death."

IN regard to baptism Dean Stanley confessed that for the first thirteen centuries the almost universal practice was that of which we read in the New Testament, and which is the very meaning of the word baptize—that those who were baptized were plunged, submerged, immersed into the water.—and that baptism by sprinkling was rejected by the whole ancient church, as no baptism at all.

SAID a man one day, in an excited manner to a friend who had gently reproved him for being angry, "I tell you it is more than flesh and blood can bear;" that may be, but you profess to be in the spirit; but your spiritual standing does not benefit you much if you cannot stand such trifles without exploding. It will help you to always remember that it was the flesh that cried out so; but flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom.

IT is said that England will soon have another Gibraltar at the straits of Fuca, on the Southern extremity of Vancouver Island. Never has a military undertaking in time of peace been prosecuted with stricter secrecy than the construction of these fortifications. The forts are located somewhere in the bowels of the earth, and the heavy guns will be visible and exposed only in the brief moment required to sight and fire them. Still they learn war the world over, and England seems to be preparing for the final crush of arms on a gigantic scale.

AT a recent conference of Rabbis at Rochester, N. Y., the opinion was promulgated that the Talmud in its entirety is no longer authority for the moral and religious conduct of the Jews. The action was taken for the benefit of Jews in Europe, where Anti-Semitism is endeavoring to prove from certain laws contained in the Talmud in regard to the relation of the Jews and Pagans that Christians are included. They desire to come to the relief of their brethren in Germany by being their mouthpieces, by saying authoritively that their religious and moral conduct is not determined by any law enunciated in past—biblical literature. Religion is life, growth, development. No one age and no one legislative body can determine the conduct or attitude of the believers of all succeeding ages. They say thay draw their inspiration from the Bible and rabbinical literature without considering either a source of absolute authority.

WE recently read an authoritative utterance that said, "In what way, or by what manner of working God changes a soul from evil to good,—how he impregnates the barren rock—the priceless gems and gold—is to the human mind an impenetrable mystery, in all cases alike." For all the wealth and honor of the world we would not exchange places with that man. Highly esteemed as he is, he does not know what God's converting power is; does not know that love is the motive power of the gospel; does not seem to know that he has manifested his love by what he has done for man in the past, is doing for him now, and by what he promises to do for him in the future. Does not seem to realize that the love of God in giving his Son to die on our account, and the love of the Son in dying for us while we were yet sinners, begets love in a few men and women, and in the nature of things these want to be obedient to the God they love; this point being reached conversion is a fact, the change is complete because the affection is transferred. We see no "impenetrable mystery about it; but we see an utter want of faith in the divine statement, that the gospel is God's power for saving all who believe it.

Jews and Spaniards Contrasted.

The Westminster Review says the racial decay of a nation does not necessarily imply the racial decay of the individuals of which it is composed. The Jews, for instance, are probably more vigorous and numerous than at any time during their past history, and have preserved, in a remarkable degree, their racial characteristics. Perhaps the struggle for existence which they have carried on while dispersed among other nations has increased rather than diminished their pristine vigor.

The example of Spain shows how a nation may degenerate; but whether this may be due to the immigration of the most capable individuals at the time of the discovery of America, or to the selective action of the inquisition, whose 340,000 victims were probably among the more advanced thinkers of the nation, it is difficult to decide.

The Tower of Babel.

From a cotemporary we learn that it has been discovered that Nebuchadnezzar reared his temple of Belus on the foundations of the original tower of Babel. An inscription in a cylinder has brought this to light; and the inscription declares that the old tower, on the foundation of which the temple of Belus was built, was begun forty-two generations before the time of Nebuchadnezzar—that is, reckoning between thirty-five and forty years to a generation, as was commonly done about sixteen hundred years before—a date that carries us back to the years when men were scattered over the face of the earth by the confusion of tongues. But we will give the inscription in full. It was deciphered and translated by Oppert, a man of great learning, sent out by the French government in 1857. It is Nebuchadnezzar's own composition apparently:—

"The temple of the seven lights of the earth, planets—the ancient monument of Borsippa was built by an ancient king; since then are reckoned forty-two generations. But he did not reach the summit of it. Men had left it since the days of the flood which confused their language. Earthquakes and thunders had shattered the bricks and thrown down the tiles of the roof. The bricks of the walls were cast down and formed heaps. The Great God Merodach had put it into my heart to build it again. I have not altered the place nor disturbed the foundations. In the month of salvation, on the auspicious day, I pierced the unburnt bricks of the walls and the bricks of the casings with arches. I inscribed the glory of my name on the frieze of arches." This is like rising up of a witness from the dead to attest the truth of the ancient history of the tower of Babel.

Passing Events in the Eastern World.

There seems to be a great political upheaving in England. Might it not be that there is a God back of all this? We are living in grand and awful times, and it looks to us as if the hand of God is getting into position the power that will presently antagonize the great confederacy that is to invade Immanuel's land. Those who have watched the course of events in England for any length of time know the party just gone out of power, is not noted for an aggressive foreign policy. It prides itself upon reforms and internal improvements, in theory, at least. The opposite of this has characterized the Conservative party in the past to such a degree that the European press is speculating on the consequences abroad of Lord Salisbury's return to power; and it seems to be generally conceded that it will not be conducive to the ambitious aims of Russia. The effect of Salisbury's stern demand upon the Sultan for reforms in Armenia, has been to make him yield.

The assassination of the ex-Premier of Bulgaria is believed to have been brought about by the wicked intrigues of Russia, because when in office he was rigid in his use of power against conspirators, opposed the interference of Russia, and strove to have the anatomy of Bulgaria recognized by the great powers.

France and Russia are also said to be intreneging in Abyssynia. That may lead to serious complications with England; and the arrogant demands of the Czar upon Japan are factors which make the present situation a very precarious one; and, as hinted before, we think late happenings in England have been heaven directed because the conservatives are better fitted to act the part assigned to England in the struggles which will end the domination of Gentile powers. We are fully persuaded that Jehovah is marshalling the forces of earth into position for the final conflict, and rejoice to see this purpose ripening fast.

The Wonderful Jew.

Conway Scott writing in Sanitary Record says, "When Moses led the children of Israel out of Egypt, he had the most extraordinary of all social problems to solve; and one that no modern soldier or statesman would ever think of attempting. The Jews were slaves in Egypt, Nineveh and Babylon; the Jew still lives, but where are the descendants of his old masters? The Jew lived and flourished through the whole period of the Persian, the Hellenic and Roman civilization, and watched them one by one expire. The Jew lived through the whole period of the Byzantine Empire, and witnessed the destruction of both; and endured the long misery and persecutions of the Middle ages, and is at this moment as fresh and vigorous as when he emerged from the desert to conquer Canaan.

The method adopted to solve this wonderful problem was masterful in its simplicity. The entire people were removed from contamination of civilization and the impure life of cities to the solitude of the desert and the bracing air of the the mountains, compelling to live for forty years in conformity to the highest sanitary laws. Cleanliness of every kind was vigorously enforced in a manner impossible in modern times. Food and drink were put under careful inspection and nothing impure, unwholesome, or in any way liable to cause disease was allowed to be used. Every case of epidemic disease was isolated, apartments purified, infected bedding burned; and every person in contact with the disease was isolated and purified; and in the treatment of such diseases, in many respects modern sanitary science was anticipated by about thirty centuries. In plain language, the high standard of natural health possessed by the Jewish race in all climates, and through every form of civilization, is altogether owing to the sanitary code, both physical and moral, given them by Moses, and which they have generally lived up to. And history shows that every time they abandoned their law and imitated the people around them, their natural health lessened, and disaster fell upon them. As long as they keep the sanitary laws, they can defy every climate and law through every civilization, and be still the strongest people, physically, and intellectually in the world."

Question Drawer.

To the question of "A Brother" in relation to the "Knowledge of God and of Christ," we suggest that while we must know God and Christ, we are not expected to fully comprehend them. We have neither time nor space for extended remarks on this important subject, but we are convinced that there is a disposition on the part of some to dwell too much, and depend too much, upon knowing what the promises, and facts, and conditions of the gospel are, and too little upon the performance of the duties enjoined. We are aware the system of means instituted by God exacts knowledge, but we also know that it exacts obedience, and this means that neither one will benefit a person without the other. In a word, we hold that to know God and Christ is quite as much to obey them is the knowledge of the facts revealed concerning them. The Master has said, "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire." Matt. vii. 19, 20. Again in the 21st verse he says, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heavens, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in the heavens." See also verses 22, 23 and when to this you add Matt. xvi. 27 you will have abundant proof that no one knows God who does not obey him. It is the works of every man that are rewarded.

For W. L. In answer to the questions regarding the history of the doctrine of the Trinity we submit the following historical notes: "The word Trinity familiar to schools of philosophy, was introduced into Christian literature at the close of the second century." "The origin and development of a Triune Deity is clearly traced to Platonic influences during the third and fourth centuries." "Tertullian first uses the word Trinity in the year 200." "Origen writes against prayers being offered to Christ, 230." "Sabellius teaches Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are three names for the same God." Lactantius writes, "Christ never calls himself God," 310. The Trinitarian doxology, composed and complained of as a novelty, 370, commanded to be sung in the year 520. 600. "The Athenasian creed was commanded to be committed to memory, and in 826 Basil required the clergy to repeat it every Sunday."

For W. N. Yes; we understand the whole human race is divided into two families,—one being the seed of the serpent and the other the seed of the woman, by being in the Christ, and are destined to co-operate with him in crushing the serpent's head.

OBITUARY.

On Wednesday morning July 24, 1895, Joseph Perry peacefully and quietly breathed his last. His critical illness was very brief, but human skill could not stay the destructive inroads of old age or prevent the silent messenger from claiming his own. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon at the residence the place that has been his home for the past thirty-one years, and was conducted by Rev. Hathaway and Rev. Lyman, the remains being laid to rest in the Alden cemetery.

The deceased was born in Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, March 4, 1814, and was therefore 81 years, 4 months and 20 days old at the time of his death. At an early age he removed to Indiana and spent thirty-two years of his life in that state. It was during this period of his life that he first laid hold on the hope contained in the Christian promises, a faith retained through all the remainder of his busy years. He came to Iowa in 1855, arriving at Eldorado on the 12th day of January of that year, and this county has been the scene of his active life. He has been a merchant and a farmer both at Eldora and Alden, active and energetic as age would permit until just the week before his death.

He leaves surviving him, his wife, two daughters, four sons, fourteen grandchildren and three great-grand children to cherish a loving memory and honor his sterling integrity.

He fell as falls the fully ripened grain, his present mission done; he has gone and the green fields and the hills and the trees and the skies he loved so well are now for other eyes to see while his are ready to greet the sunrise of the eternal morning.—Alden Times.

At the home of his Grandmother Junks, in Ft. Smith, Ark., Aug. 1, 1895, Clarence, son of Walter C. and Jennie R. Huff, aged 3 years and 7 months. Teddie as he was called was a bright loving boy. He was staying with his grandmother Junk while his parents were in Houston, Texas. He was suddenly stricken down with scarlet fever. A message was sent them and they arrived only a few hours before his death. It was a sad blow to the bereaved ones, but they sorrow not as those without hope. Although, "Weeping may endure for the night, Joy cometh in the morning." May the time soon come when parting will be o'er, is my prayer.

THE WONDERFUL STONE.

We could not finish the story of the stone in our last lesson: do the children care to know anything more about it? Some of you do; others say they cannot understand. How do we do at school when there are hard places in our studies? Give up? No indeed. We search other books, we ask questions, we think, we go over the task again and again and again until it is mastered. That is the way we must do with the Bible, only we must be a thousand times more in earnest in the study of the Holy Book, than we are in learning our school lessons, if we want to be saved.

How I wish those who cannot understand would ask questions through the paper; it would help us all to learn. Then I should feel more as if I were writing for the children, and would be better able to make the story plain.

Do you suppose Jacob took that wonderful stone to Egypt, when Joseph sent the wagons after him?

The Bible does not say so, but Jacob promised God that the stone should be God's house, and he must have kept it and carried it with him, or it could not have been taken out of Egypt, as we have intimated that it was, nor could it have found a place in the beautiful temple that was afterward built by Solomon for the worship of the Great Creator. We repeat these things so we will not forget. We want them to stay with us all our lives. We can only tack one lesson on to another, and that on to the next one, by repeating something of what has been said before.

Jacob would bequeath the stone to Ephraim-Israel, the younger son of Joseph, because he has the birth-right or the headship of all the tribes, and, having the birth-right, he is the heir and will, for a time, guard and keep the stone.

Title-deeds are precious things when the home burns up, we secure if possible, the deed to the land.

But no such deed as Jacob's stone has ever fallen into the hands of man, not a word was written on it, and yet whoever possesses it, has a right to go and take the land of Palestine and dwell there.

The Israelites carried it with them in their march through the sea.

They had passed the wilderness of Shar, and the bitter waters of Marah that were sweetened with a tree, had rested by the wells under the lovely palm trees of Elim, had eaten of manna in the wilderness of Sin and had pitched their tents at Rephidim where there was no water to drink.

How the people cried when they came there. How they blamed Moses for bringing them out of Egypt, to kill them and their children and their cattle with thirst. It was a hard place. They were sorely tempted. They forgot their God Sensitive. Thankful? Faithful? But Moses turned unto the Lord and asked "what he should do." It was the right place to go. Only the Lord could direct and save "on before the people" is the command. "and take with thee the elders of Israel, and thy rod wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thine hand and go. Behold I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb, and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it that the people may drink." "And Moses did so." Notice the words "Smite the rock," we shall refer to them again.

But travelers show us the place where the Rock was smitten, and the very seams where the water ran down its sides. How then can we prove that it was the stone that that went with them that was struck by Moses?

Because Paul says it was. He tells us that they all drank of the spiritual rock that went with them (margin) and that rock was Christ. Just as they all ate the spiritual meat, so they all drank the spiritual water.

I. Cor. x: 1, 2, 3, 4. We know they ate the manna and that it was a type or picture to the Israelites of a coming Savior.

It pointed them to him who is the true bread from heaven,—who giveth life to the world. And just as the manna was a type of Christ, so was the rock. "That Rock was Christ," or an emblem of Christ.

"smite the rock."—was not Jesus smitten for us. That the waters of salvation might flow from him? Did he not die once upon the tree, that all who come to him might live?

It was at Rephidim that the Israelites fought their first battle with the Amalekites; Joshua was their captain, we shall hear more about him by and by. Moses, Aaron and Hur sat on the top of the hill while battle was going on. Are you reading the story in the Bible? We are in the 17th chapter of Exodus now. When Moses held up his hand, his people were the victors; when he let it fall down, Amalek prevailed.

Did Aaron and Hur give Moses the sacred stone for a seat when his hands became heavy? We think not. The record says "a stone" not "the stone." They held up his hands, and the enemy was driven away and destroyed.

We will skip a great portion of the long journey in that howling wilderness, and go over it some other time. The Israelites got almost to land of Canaan, but they did not believe God, when he said they could go into it and take it away from the wicked people who lived there. So he turned them back, and made them go over the road again. They have got to Kadesh, on their return, but they find no water to drink; Numbers xx. Do you think they will cry this time, and get angry at Moses like they did before? That is just what they do. They wish they had died when their brethren died before the Lord! There was no seed, nor figs nor vines, nor pomegranates, nor any water to drink!

What did the Lord tell Moses to do? To take the rod, and gather the people together, and speak to the rock before them, and they should have water to quench their thirst.

Did Moses obey? We shall see in another lesson.

THE HOPE OF SALVATION.

"That is just what I wish to know, dear Alfred. I want a clear, lucid statement of what is in store, as you make it appear that I am not to go into the spirit-land slave."

"Well then, Ella, dear, listen. In the promise to Abraham you read a land or country; a heir and monarch thereof; a seed to be the means of blessing all nations, and to whom all peoples should be subject; everlasting life, to which must precede resurrection; and a numerous seed filling the position of subjects. This promise was given by Jehovah, to whom belongs the earth and its dominions, therefore he had the right to give it to whom he would. Hence intending to bring about a glorious period of restoration of this revolted province, He set apart 'the glory of all lands,' the chiefest portion of the globe, to be the Empire State, and organized a plan of choosing out governors for the rest. These must be individuals who had, in probation, shown themselves worthy to govern themselves, and to obey their master. And to have all things harmonious it was needful that the state be an example or pattern to the other nations. Upon this basis was built the law of Moses and the kingdom of Israel. But the people disobeyed, and their kings ruled for themselves, hence the dominion was taken away from them. God had covenanted to David that the royalty should remain in his line, and that out of him should come the righteous governor of the nations. This covenant you will find in 2 Sam. vii. There is no doubt but that this is what Isaiah (lv. 3-4,) alludes to as 'the sure mercies of David:

'Hear, and your soul shall live;
And I will make an everlasting covenant with you.
Even the sure mercies of David.
Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people,
A leader and commander to the people.'

You see he makes this the highest good. And the important place it occupies in the plan of salvation may be seen by the significance attached by Jesus to his being the Son of David, (Rev. xxii. 16,)

'I am the root and offspring of David.'

And by Paul, who in Rom. i. opens with:

'Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called an apostle, separated to the gospel of God, (which he had promised afore by his prophets in the Holy Scriptures,) concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, who was made of the seed of David according to the flesh.'

Here, and in 2 Tim. ii. 8, it is connected with the gospel:

'Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel.'"

"I have often wondered why so much stress was laid upon Jesus being David's Son, but I never before heard anything said about it being part of the gospel."

"But you observe now its value in the preaching of the gospel concerning Christ, for his heirship to the throne of David gives him the right to universal sovereignty. To the Christ is irrevocably decded the dominion over all the earth as you find in Psalm ii.

Yet have I set My King upon Zion,
The hill of my holiness.
I will declare the decree:
Jehovah hath said to me,
[illegible] this day have I begotten [illegible]
[illegible] I will give the nations for thine inheritance,
And thy possession the ends of the earth for [illegible]

When God cast off his people, for a time, and expunged the governmental functions of the house of David, the chief of the enterprise must still declare the [illegible] right of the Son of God to [illegible] restoration of his earth. [illegible]

[illegible]

The angel testified to Mary that her son, whom she should name Jesus, should be great, be called the Son of the Highest, and that the Lord God would give to him the throne of his father David. And it was 'for proving by his works his right to this exalted station, that the Nazarene was taken and slain by the Jews and Romans. But though they slew him, God vindicated his appointment by raising him from the dead, and exalting him on his right hand, 'till the times of restitution of all things' be come, and the period when he comes to take his throne and great power. But I think I have said enough to prove the King to be Jesus; let us now turn to the land, his heritage or estate. This we find is the chief of all the earth, a land which the Lord God 'earth for and claims, one flowing with milk and honey,—or rather which did, for it is now desolate, having long enjoyed its sabbaths. You know why?"

"Because the Jews obeyed not the Lord, nor hearkened to his Word. But they will be restored to their land again, and the present wilderness shall bloom as the rose."

"I am glad you believe in the restoration of the dispersed people; but why shall they be restored?"

"I suppose as the people of the Empire State."

"Ah, Ella! that is scarcely fair—to give my own expression in answer. You know my meaning was, what occasion is there for their restoration?"

"I cannot say; I do not remember that I ever heard any reason given but God's pleasure, save that they would turn to the Lord, and then [illegible] would plant them again."

"No, I well believe you have been [illegible] the partial fact, without the reason being assigned. Denying the reign of Christ upon the earth, on the throne of David, over the whole house of Israel, your teachers can see no need, only caprice, that Israel should be restored to the land of their fathers. But when you look at their relation to the King and the land in the promises, you see the imperative need for their restoration to constitute the first dominion or chief nation. Therefore, my dear Ella, as surely as you have seen a Jew so surely shall this kingdom be set up in the land promised to Abraham.

'For thus saith the Lord:
Which giveth the sun for a light by day,
The ordinances of the moon and the stars for a light by night,
Which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar;
The Lord of hosts is his name.
If these ordinances depart from before me, saith the Lord,
Then the seed of Israel also shall cease
From being a nation before me for ever.
Thus saith the Lord:
If heaven above can be measured,
And the foundations of the earth be searched out beneath,
I will also cast off all the seed of Israel,
Jer. xxxi. 35-37.

Being thus so certain to come to pass, the aspiration of the Psalmist remains yet appropriate,

'Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion!
When the Lord bringeth back the captivity of his people,
Jacob shall rejoice and Israel shall be glad.'

And it will yet be known to all the world that

'In Judah is God known:
His name is great in Israel;
In Salem also is his tabernacle,
And his dwelling place in Zion.'

He has promised through his prophet:

'I will restore thy Judges as at the first,
And thy [illegible] as at the beginning:
Afterward thou shalt be called,
The City of Righteousness, the Faithful City;
Zion shall be redeemed with judgment,
And they who return of her with righteousness.

Announcement.

The brothers and sisters in Christ in Nebraska and elsewhere:

The time has come again to give notice of our annual meeting, which will begin, the Lord willing, Friday Sept. 6, and hold ten days. The meeting will be held at St. Paul, Nebraska. St. Paul is so located as to give every one a chance to attend. Now brethren, how many will arrange at once to make arrangements to be present and enjoy ten days of blessed communion with those of like precious faith. Brethren, lay aside the duties of life for a short season and come to the meeting and go home feeling that you have lost nothing, but gained much. Those who have never attended before, come and enjoy a feast in the name of the Lord. Again we say, Come one and all. We need your presence that we may be encouraged by hearing your voices in praise and song. We need your counsel. How much are we interested in the great cause of truth? We show our faith by our works. There may be some brother or sister that cannot leave home, or you can go to some brother or sister that can and say to them, "You go and I will see to your home affairs while you are away." Would that not be brotherly and working for the Master? We must get in earnest. The Lord is coming soon. Will we be found at work? Do not say you can't come, but put your trust in God.

St. Paul is twenty-two miles north of Grand Island at the junction of the B. & M. and the Union Pacific R. R. You will receive a hearty welcome by the brethren there. All who can, bring tents; and those who cannot will be provided for by the committee. There will be stoves and fuel on the grounds, and pasturage for teams and everything in order for those coming from a distance. For any further information address W. L. Crowe, St. Paul, Nebraska. Again we say, Come and enjoy another good meeting before the Lord comes. Good speakers will be in attendance and an interesting programme issued. Committee,

ALMUS ADAMS,
W. L. CROWE,
REXA GORTON.

The brethren and sisters of the Abrahamic faith of Illinois will meet in conference at Lanark, Ill., Sept. 6, 7 and 8, 1895. An urgent call is made for general attendance, at least that each church in the district will be represented by a delegate to voice the Church in the selection and possible election of an evangelist for the coming year.

J. M. GROTHEER, Chairman.

Brothers and sisters in Christ in Iowa, Dear ones in the faith and hope of the gospel:

We are to meet this year at Marshalltown. We want every one who possibly can come to be present at the annual meeting. Your presence at the meeting is needed more this year than ever. If you stay away and all work stops, how sad it will be. We need your counsel, your presence, your help. O do come. Those who have been holding on for so long are almost ready to let go. Won't you come and help us? We placed the meeting this year in August. You told us in June you were too busy. Now, we shall look for you. Shall we be made glad by your presence? Come prepared with bedding to take care of yourselves. Tents will be furnished. Prov. xxvii. 17. Come.

A. J. EYCHANER.

The Annual Conference for the State of Indiana will be held at Argos, Indiana, beginning on Friday Sept. 20, 1895. Argos is on the Michigan City branch of the L. E. & W. W. R. R., and Nickel Plate R. R. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Come with a determination to make this meeting a season of rejoicing in the truth. Don't cumber yourselves with unnecessary baggage, if you have a "hobby," little or big please leave it at home, it will keep until you return, but come loaded down with gospel truth and filled to overflowing with love to God and your fellowmen, and God will do the rest.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill; some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8-page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va. not to this office.

The Nickel Plate Road has compiled a list of country homes along the South Shore of Lake Erie, willing to accommodate summer boarders, and a copy will be mailed to any address by enclosing a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road or to B. F. Horner, Gen'l Passenger Agent. Aug. 31

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

That Trip To Boston.

Boston excursionists over the Pennsylvania Lines will be carried in the luxurious ease to be expected on "The Standard Railway of America" - the standard in construction, equipment and operation. This merited distinction means that every requirement for comfortable and delightful traveling is provided on these lines. The Parlor, Sleeping and Dining Cars and Coaches are up to date in design and finish. The Pennsylvania is an up-to-date railway system. The foremost in adopting practicable ideas for the conveniences and pleasure of patrons.

Stop-over privileges will enable excursionists to visit places of summer sojourn along the Atlantic Ocean. Long Branch, Cape May, Asbury Park, Atlantic City, Ocean Grove and resorts on the New Jersey Coast are on the Pennsylvania lines, and may be reached at slight expense from Philadelphia and New York by daily excursions thither during the season. Historic scenes in Philadelphia, including Independence Hall with Old Liberty Bell and numerous interesting relics, the United States Mint, Masonic Temple, Fairmount Park, the site of the Centennial, may be visited within the stop-over limit.

Returning excursionists may make the trip over different routes to be selected at the time tickets to Boston are obtained. By this arrangement the return journey may be made via the Hudson River, Niagara Falls, and other attractive places. If excursionists wish to reach home in the most expeditious manner, they should obtain tickets with return portions reading over the Pennsylvania Lines. When big crowds break up and the rush for home commences, it should be remembered the Pennsylvania lines always meet all the requirements and handle passengers expeditiously and satisfactorily.

Excursion tickets to Boston account the Knights Templar Conclave will be sold to all applicants at ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines from Aug. 19th to Aug. 25th, inclusive. One-half the excursion rate will be charged for tickets to be used by children under twelve and over five years of age. Connecting railways will also sell reduced rate tickets to Boston over these lines. Information concerning rates, time of trains and other details will be promptly furnished applicants to nearest Pennsylvania Line ticket agent, or may be obtained by addressing F. VAN DUSEN, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Summer Tourist Rates.

The North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western R'y) is now selling excursion tickets at reduced rates to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Ashland, Bayfield, Marquette, Deadwood, Dakota, Hot Springs, Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou, Salt Lake City, and the lake and mountain resorts of the west and northwest. For rates and full information apply to agents of connecting lines. Illustrated pamphlets, giving full particulars, will be mailed free upon application to W. B. Kniskern, G. P. & T. A., Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago, Ill.

Excursion to Niagara Falls Aug. 14th via the Nickel Plate Road.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Reduced Rates.—Excursions over Pennsylvania Lines During Season of 1895.

Liberal concessions in fare over the Pennsylvania lines have been granted for numerous events to take place this summer in various parts of the United States. In addition to local excursions, tickets at reduced rates will be sold over these lines as given in the following paragraphs. Excursion tickets may be obtained at ticket offices on the Pennsylvania System and will also be sold over this route by connecting railways. Some of the points to which tickets will be sold and dates of sale are as follows:

To Louisville Ky., in September for National Encampment, G. A. R. One cent per mile. Reasonable return limit.

The reduced rates over the Pennsylvania Lines will not be restricted to members of the organizations mentioned, but may be taken advantage of by the public generally. Any Pennsylvania Line Ticket or Passenger Agent will furnish desired information concerning rates, time of trains, and other details, to all applicants, or the same may be obtained by addressing J. E. Hanes, Ticket Agent, Plymouth or F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent. Pittsburgh, Penna.

G. A. R. AT LOUISVILLE.

The rate to Louisville, Ky., for the Twenty-ninth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be based on One Cent per Mile from Ticket Stations on the Pennsylvania Lines. Excursion tickets will be sold at that rate September 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th, 1895. The return limit will cover sufficient time for an extended sojourn, and will be ample for side trips. Southern Railways are expected to make special rates to historic places, and to commercial and industrial centers, enabling visitors to see the South at slight expense. Low rates have already been arranged for the Chickamauga National Military Park dedication which takes place shortly after the Encampment at Louisville closes. Excursion tickets to Chattanooga for the dedication will be sold over Pennsylvania Lines Sept. 16th to 19th, inclusive.

Special arrangements may be made by Posts desiring to go in a body, or parties of friends wishing to travel together can be satisfactorily accomodated if they will kindly make their wants known to the undersigned. Valuable information will be cheerfully furnished applicants, and any required aid in shaping details will be promptly extended. It will pay to investigate. C. L. KIMBALL, Ass't Gen'l Passenger Agent, Cleavland, Ohio.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Poetry.

Work and Wait.

[illegible]

"My flesh resting in hope."

My days are in the yellow leaf,
The flowers of life are dead or dying;
Nor fruit nor blossom more is mine,
And I am standing, withering.

"My flesh resting in hope."
The heaven and earth may pass away,
The earth is thine—I rest in mine."

While I can hear spoke a breath had stirred
His dumb grave-clothes, like a mound of sand,
And I can see between the cypress boughs
A crowning star that is the morning star,

I can wait. I hear the night-bird sing,
And the dawn cometh after night to me.
I can wait. I can see the light of day
Forever and forever in the sky.
And never can fail in vain to Me.

A weighing hope I cannot still, I keep
My watch among the withering leaves of life;
While I can hear the wind that kissed the rose
Whose fragrance now is borne on it, and feel
Its dewy coolness on my brow,
And make the spirit of it mine,

Man can but work; God can create.
For they who work, and watch, and wait,
There is a reward through it come late.

I can wait; heaven hears and hears
The heart and thanksgiving in silence
An answer to thy doubt and fear.

He looked, and he! a cloud-dispersed star,
With trailing vapor and flames afar,
Was rushing like a burning star.

And every thorn-bush and plain
Was rising up to meet the rain
That came to reclaim the field with grain.

And on the cloud he saw again
The covenant of God with men,
Bewritten with his rainbow pen:

"Seed-time and harvest shall not fail,
And though the gates of hell assail,
My truth and promise shall prevail."

Original.

PSALM. 72.

73 COM. VER.

1. Asaph's psalm. How good is God to Israel and to the upright in heart.

2. But my feet were in a little of having tottered, my steps within a few of having given out.

3. Because I became envious of the transgressors while beholding the peace of obdurate-sinners.

4. Because there is no denial in their death and there is steadfastness in their scourging;

5. They are not in men's experience of weary-toil and in the midst of men they will not have been scourged.

6. Therefore haughty pride gets control of them; they put on their iniquity and irreverence like an outer-garment.

7. Their iniquity will come out as though from fat; they have passed through in a state of heart:

8. They have purposed and talked in a wicked way; They have talked injustice in respect to that which is high;

9. They have placed their mouth in the heavens and their tongue hath gone through upon the earth.

10. Therefore my laity will return here, and full days will be found in them:

11. And they have said, how doth God know, and is there comprehension in the Most High?

12. Lo these, the obdurate-sinners and those who are flourishing forever (as long as they live isn't it here?) have got possession of riches;

13. And I said, surely in vain have I justified my heart, and washed my hands in acts of acquittal,

14. And been scourged all the day long, and reproof hath been mine in the morning, is it not so?

15. If I had said in this wise, lo I should be faithless to my agreement with the generation of thy sons.

16. And did I undertake to comprehend, this was a weary task in my sight,

17. Until I went into the sanctuary of God, until I understood in respect to the last things: moreover that, because of their deceptive-ness, thou hast made them fall down when they have been lifted up.

18. How have they become in the way of desolation. Suddenly have they been done away; They have perished because of their transgression;

19. Like a dream when one hath awakened, O Lord, thou wilt accept their image naught in thy city:

21. Because my heart hath been made to rejoice and my inmost thought to have been changed.

22. Even I myself had been accounted for naught and did not know, had become brutish in thy estimation.

23. Even though I was constantly in an intimate relation to thee, Thou didst hold my right hand;

24. In thy counsel thou didst guide me, and with glory didst take me to thyself.

25. For what I have is in the heavens and from thee what I have desired upon the earth;

26. My heart hath failed and my flesh. Th. God forever is the God of my heart and my portion.

27. Because those who make themselves to be far from thee will perish; Thou hast destroyed every one who goeth away in harlotry from thee.

28. But it is a good thing for me to cleave unto God, to place my hope in the Lord, that I may have declared all the praises in the gateways of the daughter of Sion.

PSALM 74 (74 COM. VER.)

1. Asaph's (psalm) for understanding. Why hast thou thrust away, O God? Is it final? Why hath thine anger become wrath against sheep of thy pasture?

2. Remember thy synagogue which thou didst acquire of old; the sceptre of thine inheritance which thou didst redeem, this Mount Sion in which thou didst pitch thy tabernacle.

3. Lift up thy hands at length against their acts of haughty-pride, against all that the enemy hath done wickedly unto thy saints.

4. Those who hate thee have even boasted in the midst of thy festival; They have set their ensigns as signs.

5. And have not known that they were in the entrance to above; as though in a forest of trees have they cut their way with axes: the doors thereof at the same time; with battle-ax and hammer have they broken them down:

7. They have burned thy hallowed-place with fire to the ground; they have desecrated the tabernacle for thy name;

8. They have said in their heart, the kindred of them together, Come hither let us cause the festivals of the Lord to cease from off the earth.

9. Our signs we do not see; there is no prophet any more; and he will not recognize us any more.

10. How long, O God, will the enemy reproach? Will the adversary provoke thy name? Unto the end (or utterly)?

11. Why dost thou turn away thy hand, even thy right hand from the midst of thy bosom utterly?

12. But God was our king before an animate-age; He wrought salvation in the midst of the earth;

13. Thou didst control the sea with thy ability: Thou didst break the heads of the dragons upon the water;

14. Thou didst break the heads of the dragon; Thou didst give him to be the food for Ethiopean hilles;

15. Thou didst rend open fountains and torrents; thou didst dry up rivers of Ethan;

16. Thine is the day and thine is the night; Thou didst fit up a sun and a moon;

17. Thou didst create all the boundaries of the earth; Summer and winter thou didst create;

18. Remember this thy generic creation; an enemy hath reproached the Lord, and a fury without sense hath provoked thy name.

19. Do not give to the wild-beasts a soul of thy confession unto them; Do not utterly ignore the souls of thy needy ones;

20. Look on thy covenant, because the darkened places of the earth have been filled with houses of transgressions.

21. May the one who hath been humiliated and put to shame not have been turned away: A beggar and a needy one will praise thy name.

22. Arise O God, justify thy right: Remember how thou hast been reproached all the day long by one without sense;

23. Ignore not the voice of thy supplicants: May the contempt of those who hate thee have a candle constantly unto thee.

PSALM 75 (75 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end: Do not destroy: Asaph's psalm for an ode.

2. We shall confess unto thee, O God, we shall confess and invoke thy name: I shall discourse of all thy wonders.

3. When I shall have attained an appointed time, I shall judge uprightly: (when)

4. The earth had dissolved and all who inhabit it I stand up the pillars thereof. Interlude.

5. I said unto the evaders of law evade not, and to those who were sinning, exalt not your horn.

6. Lift not up your horn on high; Talk not iniquity against God;

7. Whatever it may be whether from outgoings (the east) or settings (the west) or from desolate mountains:

8. Because God is judge: This one he humbleth and that one he exalteth.

9. Because there is a cup in the Lord's hand full of undiluted wine, a mingled potion, and he hath inclined it from this ele to that; but the lees thereof he hath not emptied out; all the obdurate-sinners of the earth will drink them.

10. But I shall be glad forever, I shall exult the God of Jakob; and all the horns of the obdurate-sinners I shall break, and the horns of the justified one will have been lifted up.

PSALM 75 (76 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end: Among hymns; Asaph's psalm: An ode unto the Assurion.

2. Well-known in Judaia is God; in Israel great is his name.

3. And his place hath come to be in peace, and his dwelling-place in Sion.

4. There hath he broken the controlling-powers of the bows, shield and sword and war. Interlude.

5. Thou wilt enlighten wondrously from an age-lasting (eternal?) mountains.

6. All those without understanding in their heart have been disturbed: They have slept their sleep, and all the prominent-men of wealth have found a thing in their hands.

7. At thy rebuke, O God of Jakob, those who mount upon the horses have sunk into slumber:

8. Thou art to be feared and who will withstand thee before thy wrath.

9. Thou didst listen judicially from out the heavens; earth feared and became silent.

10. When God arose in a judicial way to save all the meek in heart. Interlude.

11. Because man's consideration will confess unto thee and a remnant of consideration will keep festival unto thee.

12. May ye have vowed and paid unto the Lord our God: All those round-about him will bring votive-gifts:

13. Unto him who is to be feared and who taketh away the spirits of rulers, to be feared as compared with the kings of the earth.

PSALM 76 (77 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end: For Idithoun: Asaph's psalm.

2. With my voice I cried unto the Lord, and my voice was unto God, and he heeded me;

3. In my day of tribulation I sought out God; with my hands in the night before him and I was not deceived; My soul refused to be comforted;

4. I remembered God and was made to rejoice; I reflected and my spirit became dejected. Interlude.

5. All my enemies had taken my wakefulness by anticipation; I was terrified and did not talk;

6. I reasoned about ancient days and I remembered years of an age, and reflected with my heart I reflected in the night, and I stirred up my spirit:

8. The Lord will not thrust away for the animate-ages will be, and will he not repeat being selected again?

9. Nor cut off his mercy from generation and generation?

10. Or will God ignore being pitiful, or withhold in his wrath his feelings of pity? Interlude.

11. And I said now have I ruled myself; This change is of the right-hand of the Most High.

12. I remembered the works of the Lord; because I shall have recalled thy wonders from the beginning;

13. And I shall meditate on all thy works, and reflect on all thy devices.

14. O God, in the sanctuary is thy way. What God is great as our God?

15. Thou art the God who doeth (is the author of) wonders: thou hast made known thy ability among the lattes:

16. Thou didst redeem thy laity with thy arm, the sons of Jakob and Joseph. Inter ode.

17. Waters saw thee O God, waters saw thee and were afraid, and abysses were terrified,

18. With a fullness of a sound of waters; the clouds gave voice; yea indeed thy bolts go their way through,

19. There's a voice of thy thunder in an circuit; Thy lightning appeared to the inhabited; the earth shook and trembled.

20. In the sea is thy way, and thy paths in many waters; and thy footsteps will not have been apprehended.

21. Thou didst guide thy laity like sheep as it were at the hand of Mouses and Aaron.

COMMENT.

The gist of the 72nd psalm is as indicated in the heading, the goodness of God to Israel in leading him even when unconscious of the established relations, as clearly brought out in the 22nd and 23rd verses. The contrast is drawn between the condition both here and hereafter of the justified and the obdurately wicked. The goodness of God is emphasized even in his preference for Israel. Of course God's predestination is assumed throughout the psalm as a definite and well understood thing and as unquestionably wise and proper. Even the recipient of the blessing does not at first seem to be conscious of the choice and the leading. This sort of reasoning in accord with the numerical significance of the psalm, the 72nd completeness of choice and completeness of acceptance and confession on the part of the recipient Israel as personified in the singer, who is speaking in the spirit of the Christ for the redeemed of humanity.

The 73rd psalm has the heading "For understanding" which I interpret to mean that it is designed to give understanding to the reader in some way of course understanding in spiritual things meant. The number would indicate completeness of some sort not perfection of any sort and being a ten times seven would be conjunctive and emphatic. The 3 or third would indicate a harmony of the first order or a first spiritual perfection of some sort. What do we find as we read? [illegible] to keep the things one gained in [illegible] people as of Israel's declension [illegible] even to the turning [illegible] love-place to the go[illegible] and [illegible] "the desecration of the [illegible] [illegible] Christian [illegible] [illegible] name?" Strange we [illegible] not discerned. But we [illegible] see! There is no prophet any more [illegible] and he will not recognize us any more." Mal. [illegible] Christ [illegible] [illegible] Mal. iii. 17. Ps. lxxiv. 20 verses give us a specimen of sublimity in thought and expression, which is unparalleled in other portions of the Scriptures.

Hints From Dear Lucy.

Every thing which God permits can be made useful. These things which seem most unpleasant and grievous to be borne, may prove blessings be sources of benefit. Especially is the [illegible] of the false friends and evil-speaking with which the people of God are often vexed. From the stinging nettle may be plucked some fragrant flower. "If any one speaks ill of me," says Epictetus, "consider whether he hath truth on his side; and if so, reform thy life, that his censures may not affect thee." Like Anaximander, who, when told that the very boys laughed at his singing, said, "Ay then I must learn to sing better."

If, on the other hand, men are assailed by falsehoods, they need give themselves little concern about it. A good reputation is not to be gained by mere talk. As the proverb says, "You will never make your mouth sweet by saying sugar." There must be some substantial ground on which reputation can rest. Gold is gold, whether on a peasant's brow or in the gutter, and a righteous character retains its excellence whether unveiled on high, or trampled to the earth. And if a man will patiently serve his God, amid the reproaches of his enemies, the shade of slander will blow aside, and reveal the true proportions of the child of God. It may take months, or years; and the stain of lying tongue inflicts may not be blotted out in this world. The perfect vindication of the aspersed may not be accomplished till the judgment day; but sooner or later, God will surely manifest the right, honor the guiltless, and hide the godly in the secret of his position from the strife of tongues, while lying lips are hushed to silence in the dust.

And it is not well for us to fret ourselves because of evil doers, or evil sayers. Conscious stress of innocence is a token of strength; and if the world beholds us keeping steadfast on our way, regardless of the strife of babblers and the smear of slanderers' tongues, they will soon conclude that as we are not disturbed about the flying talk, they certainly have no reason for disquiet. But if we are fretted and chafed at evil reports, and if we spend our time hunting and chasing them, others will interpret our restlessness as a token of weakness or guilt. The policy of masterly inactivity is frequently the best under such circumstances. Lies thrive amid contention, and where one is contradicted, a half dozen more will be told. It is better to do like the Irishman, who, when his brother had "treed" a skunk in a hollow stump, and was preparing for a vigorous onslaught, gathering from some source an idea of the results of such warfare, said "Come away, Jamie, come away! and let the nasty crathur alone. He'll stink himself to death." Many a slanderer, left thus to his own loathsome associations, soon finds his level so low that none will heed his words, or do him honor.

When Plato was told that one had many enemies, who spoke ill of him, he replied, "It is no matter. I will live so that none will believe them." A good life is the best answer to an evil report; and a consistent one is the best protection against the vexing power of a tongue's words. If lies could kill God's servants, they all would have been dead long ago; and if murder could have crushed out God's work, it would have been extinguished in ages and generations past. He who takes the cause of Christ and chooses his reproach, must rest on upon receiving the portion of the master's heritage. "Woe unto you when all men speak well of you; for so did their fathers to the false prophets." "Blessed are ye when men shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my name's sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." No person was ever so foully slandered as the Son of God. They hated him without a cause, and their reproaches against him were perpetual grievance and bitter. And yet when false witnesses awaited him, and multitudes clamored for his blood, "as a lamb before a shearer is dumb so he opened not his mouth."

If, then, men shall say evil of us falsely, we may let it pass unheeded; but if truly, let us reform and profit by their criticisms, whether they be our friends or our foes. When Plato was told that an intimate friend had spoken ill of him, he replied, "I am sure he would not do it if he had not some reason for it." Such a spirit prepares us to gather profit from the reproof of friends, and the reproaches of enemies, to pluck sweetness from the slanderer's sting, and like Sampson of old, gather honey from the carcass of the lion who roared against us to destroy us.

Is It True?

Is it true that God's people are to go to heaven and live eternally, when his word so plainly says, "the meek shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever? See Psa. xxxvii; Prov. ii: 22; x: 30; xi 31; Isa. ix: 20; Matt. v: 5; Rev. v: 10.

Is it true that the wicked are to live in a state of endless suffering and blaspheme God, when the word unmistakably says, "the soul that sinneth it shall die," and that there shall be no more pain, neither sorrow nor crying, for the former things are passed away? Ezek. xviii: 4; Rev. v: 11 13.

Is it true that Christ is the all-powerful Jehovah, when he himself has said that "My Father is greater than I?" John.

Is it true that Christ will never again come to this world when he has said, "I'll go away, I will come again? And that he shall so come as he went away? Personally. See John xiv: 1 4; Acts i; 11.

Is it true that dead men are capable of more wisdom and intelligence than the living, when Solomon says, "the dead know not anything? Eccl. ix: 5 10.

Is it true that mankind live again without a resurrection, when Paul says, "What advantageth it me if the dead rise not, let us eat and drink for to-morrow we die?" 1 Cor. xv.

It is plain, then, that Christ will come again, that the Saints shall inherit the earth, and that the reward will be given when they are raised from the dead at the last trump. There is therefore an object in his coming, and in the resurrection.—H. V. Reed.

Many people regard the Bible as an old ruin. They think there may be some chambers in it which might be made habitable if it were worth the while, but they take it as a young heir takes his estate, who says: "I shall build me a modern house to live in, but I'll keep the old castle as a ruin; and so they have some scientific or literary house to live in, and look upon the Bible as a romantic ruin of the past.

EUROPE sentenced herself to fifteen hundred years of priestcraft and restored paganism, the result forgetting the lessons of primitive Christianity.

REV. JOHN FOORE has decided to leave Kansas and go to Tempe, Arizona, where he will make his home. He will preach near that place the first Sunday in September.

BISHOP HAMPDEN says "The notion of the separate existence of the soul has so incorporated itself with theology that we are apt at this day to regard a belief in it as essential to orthodox doctrine. I cannot, however, help viewing this popular belief as a remnant of scholasticism. I feel assured that the truth of the resurrection does not rest on such an assumption."

"I AM returned unto Zion, and will in the midst of Jerusalem: and Jerusalem shall be a city of truth, and the mountain of the Lord of hosts the holy mountain. There shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, and every man with his staff in his hand for very age: and the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof. And I will save my people from the east country, and from the west country; and I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem." So speaks the God of Abraham in the 8th of Zechariah, of Zion as it will be." And it is in vivid contrast with what the Sunday Companion says about Jerusalem now: "It says there are no lecture rooms, or places of amusements, no street bands, no minstrels, no newspapers, no printing presses, no bookstores, no cheerfulness, no life; no one sings, dances, or laughs in Jerusalem, and even the children do not play."

in his lectures on Hebrew Poetry, p. 78, says "That which struck their senses they delineated in their descriptions: We find there no exact account, no explicit mention of immortal spirits." A very significant testimony! This testimony is the more important, since the Bishop considered that the immortality of the soul, as a disembodied existence, was a doctrine known to, and acknowledged by the prophets; and he accounts for their uniform silence on this subject, "Because they had no clear idea or perception by which they might explain where or in what manner it existed; and they were not possessed of that subtility of language which enables men to speak with plausibility on subjects abstruse and remote from the apprehension of the senses, and to cover their ignorance with learned disputations. The condition, the form, the habitation of departed spirits were therefore concealed from the Hebrews, equally with the rest of mankind. Nor did revelation afford them the smallest assistance on this subject."

The learned Bishop acknowledges that the writings of the prophets contains "no explicit mention of immortal spirits,"—that they never alluded to disembodied spiritual existence, and that revelation did not afford them the smallest assistance on this subject." Ought not he to have explained the reason why he thought it was the doctrine of the prophets? What other source of information had he? By what process did the Bishop arrive at this conclusion? The sacred writers said nothing about immortal spirits, therefore they believed in them; strange logic that? Ought not the negative premise to be connected with a negative inference, so as to read, "that since the sacred writers have said nothing about the doctrine, the probability is that they knew nothing about it? Besides when they refer to the departed are not their thoughts directed downward—not upwards? Do they not point to the grave as the residence of dead loved ones?

F. Max Muller.

The eminent Philologist, in an article on the Immortality of the Soul, in the New York Morning Advertiser says we possess no more materials for the satisfactory treatment of this problem than did the sages of Egypt, Palestine, India, Persia and Greece, and therefore we are not likely to see further than they, or our arguments if only to be more explicit or more persuasive than Socrates, Plato or Paul. He speaks of "holy books that have much to say respecting the nature, origin and destiny of the soul, and books if anything more can be said to or against its immortality, since it is that most of such profound learning and research should begin with the assumption that more less what theology styles his soul, and endows it with faculties which, to all intents and purposes constitute it the man proper. Starting with this unwarrantable assumption it is no wonder they ask, "shall we ever know anything about the soul after the death of the body?" They sit at the feet of heathen mythology and seem utterly unable to get out from under its influence. Why do they not study man,—they find him for themselves? And as they must admit that the inventor and builder and operator of a machine knows more about it than any one else, why do they not take their problems to the Great Being who formed man, ask him of what material he was formed, and what the purpose for which he was formed, and what function of his organs, and the tenure of his existence? The fact is, men of scientific attainments are trying to get along without taking God into their confidence. They bend every energy to show their independence of him as a rule and even when compelled to acknowledge themselves baffled, their pride and conceit forbid them to ask counsel of God. But it is quite evident in this case that Muller caters to popular opinion somewhat before daring to speak scientifically upon the soul. After this he goes on to show that all philosophy must in the end become a philosophy of language. To understand the Old Testament we must learn Hebrew; to appreciate Shakespear we must know English, and to understand something about the soul we must be somewhat acquainted with the language of philosophy. Before we say the soul is or is not immortal, we must say what we mean by the word soul. Before we use it and reason about it we ought to try to find out whence the word came to us and how it first arose. Words for soul have been at first words for the visible or tangible wind, or the breath issuing from the mouth. They became gradually divested of their visible attributes till they were brought to mean the vital breath, or something striving within us,—something of which breath was the visible sign, and when this breath of life also had been discovered as something accidental, something that comes and goes, then, what remained—that which was not breath or anima, but of which anima, as living breath formed only an attribute, was singled out and signed by its own name, whether psyche, or thymos, or soul or anus, all having meant originally breathing or commotion. He said, too, that "our knowledge by means of words,—that we know not even a stone, tree or animal; that our whole world as really known—that is conceived by us—is the creation of language,—many words are certainly imperfect and misleading. The words for soul have played us many tricks. A man speaks of his soul, but who or what the possessor of a soul could be, we ask in vain. The soul may be said to possess the ego—not the ego the soul. It is difficult to frame a word for soul. The best name I know of is the Sanscrit name atman, which means self. This atman is not the ego. It is far behind it, and while the ego has a beginning and an end and is the result of circumstances, the atman is not, but is and always will be itself only. We must accept this atman. This self or the soul as something of which we know that it is." Then the learned man calls this a most marvelous concep. of our whole mind, for the soul being that which is, is at the same time that without which nothing else can be. It is that in which our body, breath, life, heart, minds and intellect reside; in which in fact we live and move and have our beings."

It is true the great philologist mentions Paul in connection with Plato as of equal authority, but soon shows his preference for the latter, and other heathen philosophers who had to grope their way dimly without a ray of divine light. So it is not surprising to find him asserting his belief at the end of his article, that the souls toward which he looks drawn in this life, are the very souls whom he knew and loved in a former life, and that the souls that rebel now here, are the souls that earned his disapproval. He says this is old wisdom, for thousands of years ago an Indian sage when parting from his wife, told her in plain words, "We do not love the husband in the husband, nor the wife in the wife, nor the children in the children. What we love in them, what we truly love in everything, is the eternal atman, the immortal self," and then our great author closes by saying, "and as we should add, the immortal God, for the immortal self and the immortal God must become." This last remark is in line with a statement that antedates the Indian sage, "Ye shall be as gods." Truly orthodoxy must be reduced to great straits when they have to press into service such defenders of the foundation of its system as Max Muller.

The Harvest Feast.

"Three times in the year shall all thy males appear before the Lord." was a law to Israel. It was a law which, like all other of God's rules, advantaged the Jew. For though God places the glory of his own name in the forefront when he reasons concerning his acts and purposes, we are also taught that God's glory is man's good. There is to speak reverently, no selfishness in Jehovah's self-love. He is the center of all good, and so every thing which is God-ward is good-ward for all who lie within the circle or current of such tending. Hence Israel could cry "Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name; And deliver us, and purge away our sins, for thy name's sake." Psa. lxxix. 9. He was the head and heart of their commonwealth, and, so long as they abode in him, they had perfect health, and all the pleasures of the same, socially politically, and religiously. Everything, therefore, that he prescribed for his own pleasure would be the best possible experience for the individual atoms of the Israelitish body "And the Lord commanded us to do all these statutes, to fear the Lord our God, for our good always, that he might preserve us alive, as it is at this day." Deut. vi. 24.

Some men have reasoned as though God's law was a heavy burden enslaving the people. But on the contrary "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes: the fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever: the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honey-comb. Moreover by them is thy servant warned; in keeping of them is great reward." Psa. xix. 7-11. Such would be the estimation of every true-hearted (or "inward") Jew, and so would they account the obligations of the law in such cases as this, of having to appear before the Lord. It was a high honor done to them. The Mighty God, Lord of heaven and earth, was their King. To present themselves before him was therefore a greater privilege than for us to be summoned to the presence of an earthly monarch. If it is so honorable to be presented at court," how much greater the honor to appear before the Lord. And so it was esteemed. "Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple." Psa. lxv. 4.

The occasions on which they had this privilege were from the nature of the case festivals, i. e.,

1. The feast of unleavened bread.
2. The feast of first-fruits.
3. The feast of tabernacles.

Of this last and greatest it is that we propose to treat.

The seventh month was made particularly the Lord's month. The first day was the sabbath, or day of blowing the trumpets, a memorial of the Lord's promised help. The sounding of the silver trumpets would be a means of reaching Israel to "have faith in God," for the Lord had connected a promise therewith. Num. x. 9, 10. This day was a holiday. Then, on the tenth, was the Day of Atonement, a solemn sabbath of confession and humiliation before God. In the following week, or five days after their reconciliation for the sin of the year, began the fifteenth day) the week of chief festivity, the holiday week.

This was the Israelitish Harvest Home, the crowning of the year. Seven weeks before they had the Feast of Pentecost or the First-fruits, when they had plucked the ripening corn and fruit, and brought it to the palace of Jehovah their King, as the tribute or the fee to the Lord of the land. "Thou shalt take of all the first of all the fruit of the earth, which thou shalt bring of thy land that the Lord thy God giveth thee, and shalt put it in a basket, and shalt go unto the place which the Lord thy God shall choose to place his name there. And thou shalt go unto the priest that shall be in those days, and say unto him, 'I profess this day unto the Lord thy God, that I am come unto the country which the Lord sware unto our fathers for to give us.' And the priests shall take the basket out of thine hand, and set it down before the altar of the Lord thy God." In this action and speech there was a plain testimony of an understanding faith, as well as a recognition of the divine Lordship. Still more so was it in the second address, which combined gratitude with duty. "And thou shalt speak and say before the Lord thy God, 'A Syrian ready to perish was my father, and he went down into Egypt, and sojourned with a few, and became there a nation, great, mighty and populous: and the Egyptians evil entreated us, and afflicted us and laid upon us hard bondage: and when he cried unto the Lord God of our fathers, the Lord heard our voice, and looked on our afflictions, and our labor, and our oppression: and the Lord brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand, and with an out stretched arm, and with great terribleness, and with signs, and with wonders: and he hath brought us into this place, and hath given us this land, a land that floweth with milk and honey. And now, behold, I have brought the first-fruits of the land, which thou, O Lord, hast given me.' And thou shalt set it before the Lord thy God: and worship before the Lord thy God: and thou shalt rejoice in every good thing which the Lord thy God hath given unto thee, and unto thine house, thou and the Levite, and the stranger that is among you." Deut. xxvi. 2-11.

But now had arrived the time for the holiday. The corn was cut and housed, the grapes were trodden and bottled—the raisins, figs, citrons, pomegranates, were dried and stored. After toil comes rest; and no better rest can be found than the rest of God, the rest of joy and gratitude to the Giver of all good, when work is done. Surely it is such rest as this "which remains for the people of God." Heb. iv. 9. Not a millenary sabbath, but the Harvest Sabbath of completed work, when all the toiling creation will have ingathered its crop all saved and safe.

The Lord is the fountain of all joy; apart from him is no pleasure. The excitements of revels are joyless—the laughter of fools. Depraved minds seem to get some titillation from drunkenness, wantonings, and such like, as we all have seen when our festive jaunts have been marred by the presence of men whose only idea of a holiday trip was sottish boozing. How wide apart from this is real pleasure. To experience this the foundation must be laid in Divine worship. The "seven days' solemn feast to the Lord" would be the essence of joyful emotion. So the Captain of Israel's salvation prescribed at the first. "Thou shalt observe the feast of tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in thy corn and thy wine: and thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless and the widow, that are within thy gates. Seven days shalt thou keep a solemn feast unto the Lord thy God in the place which the Lord shall choose; because the Lord thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and all works of thine hands therefore thou shalt surely rejoice." Deut. xvi. 13-15. And so also the penitent-returned Judah experienced it in the great day of their law-reading. Neh. viii. 9-18. "Nehemiah, Ezra the priest, and the Levites that taught the people, said, 'This day is holy unto the Lord your God; mourn not, nor weep.' For all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law. Then he said unto them, 'Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared: for this day is holy unto our Lord: neither be ye sorry; for the joy of the Lord is your strength.' So the Levites stilled all the people, saying, 'Hold your peace for the day is holy: neither be ye grieved.' And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared unto them. And on the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even to understand the words of the law. And they found written in the law which the Lord had commanded by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in booths in the feast of the seventh month. And that they should publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem saying, 'Go forth unto the mount, and fetch olive branches, and myrtle branches, and palm branches, and pine and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written.' So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themselves booths, every one upon the roof of his house, and in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim. And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity made booths, and sat under the booths: for since the days of Joshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the children of Israel done so. And there was very great gladness. Also day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he read in the book of the law of God. And they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was a solemn assembly, according unto the manner."

This worship of the Lord the King would like all his other regulations, conduct to more than one means of profit. The health of body and mind would be wondrously benefited by this picnic feast. We go for a few days at times to the seaside for the good of our health, and, perhaps, after a short expensive sojourn, come back wearied and sick. Our pleasure has mostly been marred by wet weather, by fashion's senseless demand, by crowded inconveniences. But Israel's week of rest was of another order. All the land had a holiday at one time. This saved all the distractions of mind as to how the work was getting on in the master's absence. Then there was no fear about the weather—it was certain to be fine. No expense for lodgings all lodged alike in the open air. This bivouac in the open field, or on the house-top, would be a wondrously pleasant change. How passing fair would be Jerusalem then! The brick and stone would seem to have budded and blossomed, and shot forth branches, so crowned and wreathed would every wall appear; and street and square would have a gala dress, from the serried ranks of summer-houses planted throughout them. All green or brown, and fragrant with the health-giving scent of pine, myrtle, palm, olive, and cedar.

If we read those wonderful marching songs or psalms (cxxi.-cxxxiv.) we can form some idea of the people as they went up to keep these feasts. Some of them have a minor tone of sorrow in their music, befitting the Fasts of the Atonement, and the like, but most of them are to the firm note of the faith, or of the trumpet key of experienced joy. The songs of a nation are the interpreters of its character, as well as the educatory means of development. With far greater spirit stirring power than the "National Anthem." "Auld Lang Syne," &c., would.

"O, how good when they visit each other,
Let us accept the Lord's kind invite,
And not be slack within thy walls to be meeken."

or,

"Behold how good and pleasant a thing it is For brethren to dwell together in unity."

have moved the hearts of Israel's men and boys, women and children, as these days came round, and they made holidays thus.

But health and pleasure are only part of the good. The brotherhood of the nation would be greatly promoted the citizen would meet and welcome his country cousins, friends or strangers. A common bond of interest would unite all the people; especially so in view of the purpose of this festivity, as the Lord's rent day. The tenant was come to give an account of his farm, and how he paid the rent to the Lord's Receivers—the Levite, the stranger, the orphan and the widow. "When thou hast made an end of tithing all tithes of thine increase the third year, which is the year of tithing, and hast given it unto the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, that they may eat within thy gates, and be filled; then thou shalt say unto the Lord thy God, 'I have brought away the hallowed thing out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the stranger, to the fatherless, and to the widow, according to all thy commandments which thou hast commanded me: I have not transgressed thy commandments, neither have I forgotten them: I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away thereof for any unclean use, nor given thereof for the dead: but I have hearkened to the voice of the Lord my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me. Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest unto our fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey.'" Deut. xxvi. 12-15. Better than thousands of compulsory poor's rates would be the crop-tithings thus spent and accounted for. The re-introduction of the feast of harvest indicates the end of this mischievous imposition. When the maintenance of the poor will be again as then, charged upon the produce of the land, doubly blessed will be this ailment, the giver receiving the larger share of pleasure, in heart-warmth and kindness, even as the word of the Lord Jesus says—"It is more blessed to give than to receive."

This feast ministered to all the highest and noblest part of human nature. We see how it promoted free health and strength, kept alive hospitable and social love and kindness. But it reached deeper still. We are familiar with what the Scriptures teach us about faith and its outspringing emotion; and this feast gave opening for it in many ways, specially in that trust in God's Word which led them to leave their homes, and go up to where the feast was kept, without fear of evil or danger to what they left behind. The confessions they had to make also taught and promoted a faith in God's promises to the nation: those promises which are the groundwork of our salvation.

God be thanked for his recorded comfort concerning these blessed institutions, for he has promised their restoration, not only in Israel, but to be shared by all the nations of the earth. For it is written, "Every one who is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem, shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles." Zech. xiv. 16. This is the key-note to a whole train of blessings. For if there be this feast, then there follows that the kingdom of the Lord extends over these nations, that they are being blessed in Abraham and his seed, that they are become of the brotherhood of nations, worshippers of the One God (Mal. i. 11,) partakers in the peace of a united religion and pure language (Zeph. iii. 9); and an almost endless train of good things to come involved in these general statements.

Prophecy Fulfilled in the Destruction of the Papyrus.

"The paper reeds by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks, and everything sown by the brooks, shall wither, be driven away, and be no more." Isa. xix. 7.

Never had prophecy greater circumstances of improbability to overcome, and never was prediction more completely fulfilled. The indispensable papyrus in the time of Isaiah flourished throughout the whole of the Thebaid, the Heptanomis, and Delta, as the three divisions of ancient Egypt were named. Of its utility no European reader can form an adequate idea. Stringent laws were passed for its protection and cultivation, and from its first appearance to maturity, the papyrus was considered to be under the especial care of local deities. It was planted, tended, and cut, with an almost religious ceremonial. Adaptable for various uses, not only paper, cloth, and brushes, but the roughest and most delicate manufactures, were produced from it alike. Sails, cordage, and baskets for shipping, sandals, hats, skirts, carpets, chairs, and seats for domestic service were made of it. Men and animals fed upon the tender shoots. A syrup was obtained and medicine extracted from it. It formed the cradle of the Nubian baby; it decorated the canopy of Pharaoh's throne; it was scattered in processions through the streets; it was painted on the houses; it was wrought in granite on the temples. The Egyptian ladies twined the living blossoms in their hair, or wore it in chains around their necks as an amulet. Princes, priests, and peasants offered it on the altar in commemoration of the dead. The papyrus was the plaything of the child, and the sceptre of the god, the glory of the country, the staple of its commerce, and the hieroglyphic emblem of its name. By withholding the supply of the papyrus, Ptolmy Philadelphus, was enabled to repress the formation of a rival library by the Pergamean kings; while by opening the markets of the Delta, the poetry of Greece and the Philosophy of Rome were transmitted throughout the whole of the then known world. Alas for the permanance of mundane glories! thirty centuries of oppression, superstition, and neglect have dried up the artificial lakes in which the plant was cultivated. Rush after rush has been cut down to warm an Arab's bath or litter a Pasha's horse, and no successors have been planted. The hot wind of the south and the sands of the desert have exterminated the lovely paper rush in the empire of the Pharaohs, and there is not a single indigenous papyrus in the whole of Egypt proper. A stream in Sicily and the marshes of Merom in Palestine alone contain the nearly extinct vegetable; and in the conservatories of London, Sion, and Kew, England actually possess more living papyri than can be found from Syene to Alexandria.

Cheap Excursions to the West.

Bountiful harvests are reported from all sections of the west and northwest, and an exceptionally favorable opportunity for home-seekers and those desiring a change of location is offered by the series of low-rate excursions which have been arranged by the North-Western Line. Tickets for these excursions, with favorable time limits, will be sold on August 29, Sept. 10 and 24 to points in Northern Wisconsin, Michigan, Northwestern Iowa, Western Minnesota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and a large number of other points. POETRY.

If We Had But a Day.

We should fill the hours with the sweetest things
If we had but a day;
We would drink alone at the purest springs
In our upward way;
We should love with a life-time's love in an hour
If the hours were few;
We should rest, and not for dreams, but for fresher power,
To be and to do.

We should guide our wayward or weary will
By the clearest light;
We should keep our eyes on the heavenly hills
If they lay in sight;
We should trample the pride and the discontent
Beneath our feet;
We should take whatever a good God sent,
With a trust complete.

We should waste no moments in weak regret
If the day were but one;
If what we remember and what we forget
Went out with the sun,
We should be from our entanglements set free,
To work or to pray;
And to be what the Father would have us be,
If we had but a day.

"Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart."

THE HOPE OF SALVATION.

"I cannot myself make a plain history of them all. But I get something like the following order: at the advent of the Redeemer who cometh to deliver Jerusalem in her last extremity, his feet tread the Mount of Olives, the same from which he ascended, (not one on another planet,) which mountain shrinks from his touch, and by a great earthquake is cleft into two equal portions. After his revelation to the people of Jerusalem, who mourn with a great lamentation when they see the wounded hands and side, which they and their fathers pierced, he prepares to go forth to war against the rebellious nations. In this Judah is his war-horse and battle-axe. And awful will be the going forth of judgment; our God will truly then become a consuming fire. But ere this takes place the ensign will have been lifted up, and the trumpet blown for the gathering together of the remainder of Judah, who will be brought by certain of the nations as an acceptable peace offering to the Lord. And the other ten tribes shall be gathered out of every country wherein they have been scattered, and with mighty signs and wonders, overtaxing those of the first exode from Egypt, be brought into the wilderness of the people, there to undergo discipline; after which they shall be joined with Judah, and shall become one kingdom again in the Land. After the subjugation of the Gentile nations by the armies of God, a new universal law shall go forth from Jerusalem, as foretold by several prophets. A temple shall be built, such as never was yet seen; for a precise description of which see the last few chapters of Ezekiel. Mark the terms in which the prophets speak of this important edifice:

"I will fill this house with glory,
Saith the Lord of hosts:
The silver is mine, and the gold is mine,
Saith the Lord of hosts;
The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former,
Saith the Lord of hosts;
And in this place will I give peace,
Saith the Lord of hosts."
Haggai ii. 7-9.

"The glory of Lebanon shall come to thee,
The fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together,
To beautify the place of my sanctuary;
And I will make the place of my feet glorious."
Isaiah lx. 13.

The Son greater than Solomon shall also have his palace, as well as his temple.

"Son of man, the place of my throne,
And the place of the soles of my feet,
Where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel forever."
Ezekiel xliii. 7.

So precise are the delineations laid down by the last prophet that we have been able to construct a plan of this new temple, which I will show you some day. In it will be the restored ritual service of sacrifice and burnt offering; and there shall be again a Levitical priesthood, a choir, sabbaths, jubilees, etc. To this temple shall all nations go up periodically, even as the Jews aforetime went up to Jerusalem. For

"It shall come to pass in the last days:
The mountain of the Lord's house shall be established
In the top of the mountains,
And shall be exalted above the hills:
And all nations shall flow to it.
And many people shall go and say,
Come ye, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord,
To the house of the God of Jacob;
And he will teach us his ways;
And we will walk in his paths:
For out of Zion shall go forth the law,
And the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.
And he shall judge among the nations,
And shall rebuke many people;
And they shall beat their swords into plowshares,
And their spears into pruning hooks;
Nation shall not lift up sword against nation,
Neither shall they learn war any more.
O house of Jacob, come ye
And let us walk in the light of the Lord."
Isaiah ii. 2-5.

The feast of Tabernacles, that grand Israelitish Picnic, will be made universal, for we read in the close of Zechariah's prophecy, "And it shall come to pass, everyone who is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of Hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles."

How eloquent of hope is the pithy statement of Daniel, "The kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Oh for the coming of the time when the Prince of Peace initiates and establishes an age of peace, love, joy, and righteousness. Even a part in the new temple is worth a life of suffering. Of it far more than of the former temple can the devout worshiper say: 'A day in thy courts is better than a thousand (elsewhere). I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than dwell in the tents of wickedness.' Hear the Psalmist's description of the triumphant inauguration:—

"Lift up your heads, oh ye gates!
And be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors!
And the King of glory shall come in!
Who is this King of glory?
The Lord, strong and mighty,
The Lord, mighty in battle.

Lift up your heads, oh ye gates!
Even lift up, ye everlasting doors;
And the King of glory shall come in!
Who is the King of glory?
The Lord of hosts,
He is the King of glory.'"

"Beautiful! it is splendid poetry; I had scarcely thought there was any so grand in the Bible, Alfred."

"Yes, it is a majestic language, but how much more resplendent the event. I can fancy a countless throng in procession, with banners, with ensigns, with the panoply of victors returned from the war; led by the heralds, the musicians, the priests, the central figure being the Monarch with the star-gem'd crown, surrounded by his brother generals. I see this grand company entering, on the opening of the golden gates, into the crystal porch, and debouching into the courts inlaid with all manner of precious stones and with walls of cedar overlaid with exquisite embossings of gold; whilst the dignitaries march onward through the inner porches into the sanctuary itself. If we can be enraptured by the sweet harmonies of our ordinary sacred music, what will be the ecstasy of the temple oratorio, Ella, dear Ella, imagination fails to picture the glories of that period; how poor then are words! You moon shines with a silvery lustre, but the 'moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and in glory before his ancients.' 'The wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.' This is evidently a literal lustre which shall radiate from the bodies of the perfected just ones; for when Jesus showed his three disciples at the transfiguration, what the coming of the Son of Man in his kingdom would be, 'his face shone as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.' And we are to have our incorruptible bodies like his,—'bear the image of the heavenly,'—'when he appears we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.'"

"Dear Alfred, all this is beautiful, very beautiful, and I can understand it; but are you certain that it must be taken literally, for I find the Apostle speaks of the kingdom being 'righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.'"

"My dear sister, it is self-evident that Paul is here speaking in a rhetorical figure. The subject being meats and drinks, he avers that the faith in the kingdom of God produces not a strictness in these observances, but that 'righteousness, joy, and peace in the Holy Spirit,' are the results of its free exercise. Equally pointless are the usual quotations resorted to by opponents of God's will, such as, 'My kingdom is not of this world,' an undeniable truth, even as his disciples were not of that world. Jesus, his disciples and his kingdom were all alike not of the world, but he and they were on the earth, and so will his kingdom be. And the man must be a strange reasoner who would venture to say the kingdom was 'within' the unrighteous Pharisees. I have I think already sufficiently provided the literality of the passages affirming the kingdom and its location on the earth. The last chapter of Ezekiel describing the re-arrangement of the Tribes in the Land, is sufficient to choke such orthodoxy as Dr. Burns's and Mr. Phelps's. And it is enough to complete the execution of their malefactor, spiritualization, to require them to show us what the 47th chapter of the same prophet means,—the river issuing from under the threshold, the fruits on its banks, the fish and fishermen, and the salt places. Commentators are glad to pass this over with words which just amount to 'it means something, but we are unable to determine what.'"

"When will this kingdom be established, brother."

"It cannot be long before, but the exact period we know not. This is enough for us that 'our redemption draweth nigh,' and is nearer than 'when we first believed.' Whilst patiently waiting for it, we can join in the apostle's prayer, 'Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.' We have already received a warning that it is very nigh, for the voice is heard, 'Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he who watcheth and keepeth his garments.' You hear the sound of a passing railway train? It and the telegraph are Daniel's signal that the times of Gentile supremacy are well nigh run out, and with their closing the Lord descends; but ere then I hope to go forth and meet him in the air, and celebrate the marriage of the Lamb in heaven."

"I thought you had been proving we should not ascend into, or have anything to do with heaven."

"You mistake there; I find the prophet declaring that 'the heaven is the Lord's, but the earth hath he given the children of men,' which constrains me to believe, that the theatre of man's performance is on this globe. And the wisest man confirms it in saying, that 'the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth, much more than ungodly;' but nowhere are we told that we cannot leave it. The Apostle tells us that we who are alive at the coming shall be caught up in the clouds together with the resurrected saints, 'to meet the Lord in the air,' but not to remain there, for we shall return with him, and like the Statesman-prophet, 'stand in our lot at the end of the days.'"

"I remember Mr. Phelan quoting this passage in Thessalonians and several others, such as, 'there be some standing here who shall not taste death till they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom,' and 'this generation shall not pass away till all these things be fulfilled,' in a sermon about the coming of Christ at the destruction of Jerusalem."

"But from the testimonies of the prophets I have given you, you will easily perceive that the destruction of Jerusalem was not the setting up of the kingdom."

"Yet there are many passages which imply two comings of the Lord: how can you reconcile them, Alfred?"

OUR CHILDREN.

The "Goodest" Mother.

Evening was falling cold and dark.
And people hurried along the way
As if they were longing soon to mark
Their own home candles' cheering ray.

Before me toiled in the whirling wind
A woman with bundles great and small,
And after her tugged, a step behind,
The bundle she loved the best of all.

A dear little rosy-ped boy,
With rosy cheeks and a jacket blue,
Laughing and chattering, full of joy
At Dear's—but he said I call you true.

"You are the goodest mother that ever was!
And you are dear as the forest birds;
And I'm sure the glad song I got last time
Is better than most of the lovely words.

Perhaps the woman had worked all day
Washing or scrubbing; perhaps she sewed;
That life for her was an uphill road.

It here was comfort, children, dear!
Think what a comfort you might give
To the very best friend you can have here
The mother dear, in whose home you live

If once in a while you'd step and say,
In talk or play, for a moment's pause,
And tell her in sweet and winning way,
"You're the goodest mother that ever was."

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea, No 29.

THE WONDERFUL STONE.

We are in the 20th chapter of Numbers. The Israelites are at Kadesh, in the desert of Zin. Dr. Wm. Smith, says this place is not Kadesh Barnea, marked on our maps, as situated on the border of Edom, but another point, not far from the Red Sea, close to Shur. Miriam, the sister of Moses, who watched over him when a babe in his little reed-coffin by the Nile, died at Kadish.

But we want to know whether Moses obeyed the Lord or not, when he told him to "Speak to the stone, that it might "give forth its water."

He took the rod, as the Lord had commanded him, and he and Aaron gathered the people together.

But, for once, Moses was out of patience with the Israelites, they had tried him so many times, and he said in a naughty way, "Hear, now ye rebels, must we fetch you water out out of this rock? And Moses lifted up his hand, and with his rod, he smote the rock twice; and the water came forth abundantly, and the congregation drank, and their beasts also."

How do we know that Moses did wrong, both he and Aaron? Read the 12th verse. They had not believed the Lord, that water would come from the rock at their word, and their smiting it showed that they did not believe.

For this sin they were both to die before entering Canaan.

Why was it wrong to smite the Rock at Kadesh;—it had been smitten at Horeb?

Because it was an emblem of the smitten Savior from whom the waters of salvation were to flow. To be a true picture of him, it must be smitten but once. The dear Redeemer, by whose stripes we are healed, died once for all; ever after, the thirsty one must ask of him, the water that can quench the thirst forever.

The stone was a holy thing. God had made it holy. He would not have it trifled with. He would not have it made light of, nor treated as though it were but a common stone, for wherever it went his presence was to be—there, his people might call upon him and he would answer them.

It was death to pollute holy things. Num. xviii: 32. God wants us to treat them with reverence, that we may learn thereby to reverence him and to reverence his son; Moses did not speak reverently, and—he disobeyed God. To disobey is to rebel: Num. xxvii: 14—1 Sam. xv: 22, 23.

For their sin, Aaron died and was buried on Mount Hor, and Moses was told to "go up on Mt. Nebo, and die there," Num. xx: 23 20.

It makes us feel sad to think about it. But we too must die before reaching the Canaan of rest, we can look over and see its beauties, but we cannot enter in, till the resurrection morning comes and the dead are raised. Then we shall all go in together, and Moses and Aaron will be there. They did not for their sin lose the life that is to come. Will this lesson help us to treat sacred things with reverence? We hope so.

The house of God, the ordinances of the church, the minister, the songs, the prayers, the Bible, the day of rest, must all be thought of as God's things, and must be treated accordingly. To speak of them in a profane way, is to speak in a profane way of the dear God who gave them to us.

What a miracle-stone, it was that we have been talking about!

You haven't thought it over, have you? It was not larger than the seat of a large chair. There were iron rings set in each end. Through these staves could be slipped to carry it by. But it seems like an impossible thing, that water could be made to come from such a stone, and more impossible that enough should come from it to give drink to such a great army of people, and not only to them, but also to their cattle, their goats, and their sheep? It does seem so.

But everything about the march from Egypt to Canaan was a miracle. Would any one now dare undertake to go over the same road with a million human beings, and have no food along to sustain them? Could they live in that "terrible, howling wilderness" for forty years, when for three days at a time, no water could be found?

It is no harder to believe that God could cause water to flow from a stone, than it is to believe that he could rain bread from heaven.

True there is still something that answers the description of manna, to be found in the desert, but Mr. John Monroe Gibson in his "Mosaic Era" says, "the entire production of a whole year, would not have served the Israelites for a single day;" so although the manna, may be the production of a desert shrub, the great increase in its quantity the withholding of it on the sabbath day and the unfailing supply during so many years, would make it one of the most wonderful miracles on record in the Bible.

But the Hebrew word "sela" or rock in the passages about the stone that Moses struck at Rephidim, means a high cliff;—how are we to explain this? I do not know. I can only answer, in the words of Paul, "they drank of that spiritual rock that went with them, and that Rock was Christ."

How could they drink of the rock that went with them, unless the water actually flowed from it?

The Lord stood upon the rock, or cliff in Horeb, Ex. xvii. 6, and Moses smote the rock;—was it the rock of Horeb that was struck, or was it Jacob's stone? It could not have been Horeb's rock, for that rock did not go with them to satisfy their thirst in all their desert wanderings. And at Kadesh, it is said, "Speak ye unto the rock before their eyes, and it shall give forth his water;"—as if it were a thing that had occurred before, and would be certain to occur again. Christ is with his people always, even unto the end of the world, giving to all nations the waters of life. It is no harder to believe that a stone could give water enough to save the Israelites, than it is that Jesus can save an elect church, and an exceeding great multitude that no man can number from the dust of the earth.

The best authenticated Jewish traditions affirm that the stone or rock that was smitten by Moses, was carried about by the Israelites through all their wilderness wanderings. And the very fact of its being said by Jacob of Joseph, "from thence is the stone of Israel," proves that there was a real stone, that was both an emblem of Ephraim—Israel, as the Savior's of men; and of Christ who was to give the means of salvation to a lost race.

In our next lesson we will look up references to the rock, and will show how often God is called "our rock," and the dear Savior "the head-stone of the corner."

NOTE 1.

Mr. John Monro Gibson says, "it was the same Kadesh," and that the best writers are inclined to favor this view. I would think it the same place from the reading of the 14 and 16 verses of Num. xx., though the wilderness of Zion, is also called Kadesh. Num. xxxiii. 36, 37; xxxiv. 3.

Threatens the Turk.

LONDON, Aug. 15. Lord Rosebery, in reference today the queen's speech, asked what measures were intended respecting China and wanted details of the recent massacres. The ex-premier also expressed himself as being certain that the marquis of Salisbury thought it as necessary as did the late government to obtain guarantees from the sultan of Turkey against a recurrence of the brutal atrocities in Armenia.

The marquis of Salisbury, in replying to this, said:

"There is every reason to believe that the Chinese government is sincerely desirous of punishing the perpetrators of the outrage and those who connived at it. Should any lukewarmness become discernible it will become our duty to supply its defect. With respect to Armenia, we have accepted the policy which our predecessors initiated, and our efforts will be directed to obtaining an adequate guaranty for the carrying out of reform. We have received the most loyal support from both France and Russia. The permanence of the sultan's rule is involved in the conduct he pursues. If the cries of misery continue the sultan must realize that Europe will become weary of appeals and the fictitious strength which the powers have given the empire will fail it. The sultan will make a calamitous mistake if he refuses to accept the advice of the European powers."

Lord Salisbury wished the sultan to remember that his independence was of a very special kind. It was the creature of an agreement, and Europe, which conferred upon Turkey a factitious stability, had long been uneasy as to the moral burden which its joint action involved. It feared that it might be upholding a mechanism which does not work for human happiness and progress, but rather tended to perpetuate the antagonism of creed and race which had so long been the curse of the Turkish provinces.

"How long the present state of things can continue," the prime minister proceeded, "I confess appears to me more doubtful than it did twenty years ago." The advice he was tendering, he said, was the advice of a party most friendly to Turkey in a friendly nation, the neglect of which will expose his dominions to dangers which no treaties and no sympathy will prevent being fatal in the long run to the empire he rules.

The above clipping from the Chicago Daily Record, will be of interest to students of prophecy

The time draws very near when the Gentile power which treads down the Holy Land must release his grip. His allotted time is running out, and therefore cannot continue. It is a significant indication as to what awaits the Turkish Empire, when we quote the British Prime Minister as saying: "The Sultan must realize that Europe will become weary of appeals, and the fictitious strength which the powers have given the empire will fail it. The Sultan will make a calamitous mistake if he refuses to accept the advice of the European powers."

Watch! everything is moving right along in a marvelous manner. Who is ready for the angelic reapers?

W. H. WILSON.

Zeal without knowledge is like unconfined fire. Fire in a stove is a servant for good, and a spring of household happiness, but let it escape, and it devours the building and burns up the occupants. Thus, zealous ignorammuses harm instead of help a cause.

Civilization can go no farther than the heart faiths of the people. It is the embodiment of the morals of a people. Liberty and virtue are like Siamese twins: they die together.

MARRIED.

At the home of Mrs. Sarah Chaplin, on South Michigan Street, Plymouth Ind., Aug. 18th, 1895, by Elder John L. Wince, Mr. Jones C. Miller of Franklin Co., Kansas, and Mrs. Rachel Taber of Plymouth, Marshall Co., Indiana.

TO MR. AND MRS. MILLER.

All holy joy shall cluster round the wedded pair.
While we leave the God of heaven doth condescend to share:
And it shall be a sweet, a blessed place of rest,
A type of that dear Eden home that waiteth all the blest.
Our faith shall bind with firmer chain the hearts
That toil together for the heavenly lands,
And love bath deeper springs, where prayer
Is mingled unions, till all the heavenly air.

S. ROXANA WINCH.

OBITUARY.

Died at the home of his parents near Celina, Ind., infant son of Brother and Sister Cayner, and grandson of Brother and Sister John Boyd. He was five months and three days old. Funeral was preached by the writer to quite a large congregation; words of comfort were given from Mark x. 14. "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not;" also Jer. xxxi. 15, 17, "Thy children shall come again from the land of the enemy."

J. S. HATCH.

A Giant Bridge.

A giant undertaking, the bridging over of Polk's Strait, separating the Island of Ceylon from the mainland of India, is seriously proposed by the Ceylon Government. The strait is forty-one miles broad at its narrowest point, double the width of the English Channel, but is very shallow, in some places only six feet deep. The islands, reefs, and channels in it have been recently surveyed, and the cost of works, extending over sixty-one miles, including the Pambam Channel and the Adam's Bridge reef, is estimated at 28,000,000 rupees. The ends will be connected by 145 miles of railroad with Columbo, the great harbor of Ceylon, on the one side, and by ninety miles of road with Madura, the nearest point of the Indian railroad system, on the other. If narrow gauge is used this can be done for 11,000,000 rupees more.

Christ is Coming.

All things indicate that our Savior is coming soon. Is the reader ready? If not, what excuse could be given? Has there not been ample time to prepare; and if opportunities already enjoyed have not been improved, where is the evidence that any additional light would receive more attention? There is much danger that such will be found at last with no oil in their lamps when the Bridegroom cometh. It is a perilous hour for careless souls. Many are sleeping at ease, unaware of the dangers that surround them. Let those who are awake, cry aloud, and spare not. It is too late to make a compromise with this wicked world. Let all the friends of Jesus come out from it and be separate.

Work-day Christianity.

The Bible allows no slovenliness in business. Christianity encourages invention, promotes refinement, suggests method, insists upon order, promptness, regularity, good humor, good manners, and good living. The resources of the earth are abundant for all. If manual labor were made a part of education—an essential in every school and college curriculum—the world would be brighter and cheerier for the change. It is because labor has been damned out as toil for a livelihood—underpaid, overtaxed, unfashioned, that so many toilers are worn, and weary, and forced to be illiterate and melancholy; whereas, if their work and position were properly rewarded, they would be strong, intelectual, religious and happy, and contented with their lot.

Christian graces are like perfumes; the more they are pressed, the sweeter they smell. Like stars that shine brightest in the dark; like trees that are shaken, the deeper root they take, the more fruit they bear.

...VAL.

...brethern and sisters in Christ in Nebraska and elsewhere:

The time has come again to give notice of our annual meeting, which will begin, the Lord willing, Friday Sept. 6, and hold ten days. The meeting will be held at St. Paul, Nebraska. St. Paul is so located as to give every one a chance to attend. Now brethren, how many will commence at once to make arrangements to be present and enjoy ten days of blessed communion with those of like precious faith. Brethren, lay aside the duties of life for a short season and come to the meeting and go home feeling that you have lost nothing, but gained much. Those who have never attended before, come and enjoy a feast in the name of the Lord. Again we say, Come one and all. We need your presence that we may be encouraged by hearing your voices in praise and song. We need your counsel. How much are we interested in the great cause of truth? We show our faith by our works. There may be some brother or sister that cannot leave home, but you can go to some brother or sister that can and say to them, "You go and I will see to your home affairs while you are away." Would that not be brotherly and working for the Master? We must get in earnest. The Lord is coming soon. Will we be found at work? Do not say you can't come, but put your trust in God.

St. Paul is twenty-two miles north of Grand Island at the junction of the B. & M. and the Union Pacific R. R. You will receive a hearty welcome by the brethren there. All who can, bring tents: and those who cannot will be provided for by the committee. There will be stoves and fuel on the grounds, and pasturage for teams and everything in order for those coming from a distance. For any further information address W. L. Crowe, St. Paul, Nebraska. Again we say, Come and enjoy another good meeting before the Lord comes. Good speakers will be in attendance and an interesting programme issued. Committee,

ALMÓN ADAMS,
W. L. CROWE,
RENA GORDON.

The brethren and sisters of the Abrahamic faith of Illinois will meet in conference at Lunark, Ill., Sept. 6, 7 and 8, 1895. An urgent call is made for general attendance, at least that each church in the district will be represented by a delegate to voice the Church in the selection and possible election of an evangelist for the coming year.

J. M. GLOTFELTY, Chairman.

Brothers and sisters in Christ in Iowa, Dear ones in the faith and hope of the gospel:

We are to meet this year at Marshalltown. We want every one who possibly can come to be present at the annual meeting. Your presence at the meeting is needed more this year than ever. If you stay away and all work stops, how sad it will be. We need your counsel, your presence, your help. O do come. Those who have been holding on for so long are almost ready to let go. Won't you come and help us? We placed the meeting this year in August. You told us in June you were too busy. Now, we shall look for you. Shall we be made glad by your presence? Come prepared with bedding to take care of yourselves. Tents will be furnished. Prov. xxvii. 17. Come.

A. J. EYCHANER.

The Annual Conference for the State of Indiana will be held at Argos, Indiana, beginning on Friday Sept. 20, 1895. Argos is on the Michigan City branch of the L. E. & W. W. R. R., and Nickel Plate R. R. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Come with a determination to make this meeting a season of refreshing in the truth. Don't cumber yourselves with unnecessary baggage, if you have a "hobby," little or big please leave it at home, it will keep until you return, but come loaded down with gospel truth and filled to overflowing with love to God and your fellowmen, and God will do the rest.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a preacher of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Pinkerwood, Plymouth, Ind.

PLEASE write short articles. I does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, as required, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Reduced Rates—Excursions over Pennsylvania Lines During Season of 1895.

Liberal concessions in fare over the Pennsylvania Lines have been granted for numerous events to take place this summer in various parts of the United States. In addition to local excursions, tickets at reduced rates will be sold over these lines as given in the following paragraphs. Excursion tickets may be obtained at ticket offices on the Pennsylvania System and will also be sold over this route by connecting railways. Some of the points to which tickets will be sold and dates of sale are as follows:

To Louisville Ky., in September for National Encampment, G. A. R. One cent per mile Reasonable return limit.

The reduced rates over the Pennsylvania Lines will not be restricted to members of the organizations mentioned, but may be taken advantage of by the public generally. Any Pennsylvania Line Ticket or Passenger Agent will furnish desired information concerning rates, time of trains, and other details, to all applicants, or the same may be obtained by addressing J. E. Haines, Ticket Agent, Plymouth or F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Penna.

G. A. R. AT LOUISVILLE.

The rate to Louisville, Ky., for the Twenty-ninth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be based on One Cent per Mile from Ticket Stations on the Pennsylvania Lines. Excursion tickets will be sold at that rate September 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th, 1895. The return limit will cover sufficient time for an extended sojourn, and will be ample for side trips. Southern Railways are expected to make special rates to historic places, and to commercial and industrial centers, enabling visitors to see the South at slight expense. Low rates have already been arranged for the Chickamauga National Military Park dedication which takes place shortly after the Encampment at Louisville closes. Excursion tickets to Chattanooga for the dedication will be sold over Pennsylvania Lines Sept. 10th to 16th, inclusive.

Special arrangements may be made by Posts desiring to go in a body, or parties of friends wishing to travel together can be satisfactorily accomodated if they will kindly make their wants known to the undersigned. Valuable information will be cheerfully furnished applicants, and any required aid in shaping details will be promptly extended. It will pay to investigate. C. L. IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

Poetry.

SUPPLICATION.

Kind Father, keep us near to thee, we pray.
And by thy power and mercy ever.
From hidden snares and dangers of the way
Our souls deliver.

The pitfalls in our path we cannot see:
Without thy aid our feet must stumble.
We have no strength or wisdom but from thee—
May we be humble.

Cleanse us, O Lord, from sins and secret faults.
Turn off from our perceptions hidden.
Give us deliverance from unholy thoughts
That come unbidden.

If from the path of truth and right we stray.
For here we ever walk in weakness,
Oh! lead us back into the narrow way.
And grant forgiveness.

We would be in that place where thou canst bless—
Thou dwellest with the meek and lowly.
We would be clothed with Jesus' righteousness,
And pure and holy.

May we be ever busy, Lord, for thee.
In this thy "day of preparation,"
And many souls be brought through us to see
Thy great salvation.

Nor let the tempter from our work dissuade.
The' beseechingly we labor yearly.
That what we say hath oft been better said,
Yet we know surely.

That none can do our work; and if for thee
'Tis done in love, 'tis ill be accepted.
Not e'en "a cup of water" giv'n, will be
By thee rejected.

Then, Lord, be with us, and our labors bless,
And strengthen every weak endeavor.
May we behold thy fairest last in peace,
And share thy favor.

—E. J. Johnson.

PSALM. 77.

78 COM. VER.

1. Asaph's (psalm) for understanding. Heed my law, O my laity; Incline your ear unto the oracular-words of my mouth.

2. I shall open my mouth in parables; I shall utter problems (things that have been problems probably meant) from a beginning;

3. All that we have heard and comprehended, and all that our fathers have discoursed to us.

4. They were not hidden from their offspring unto another generation, as they were announcing the praises of the Lord and his able-acts of rule and his wonders which he had done.

5. And he stood up an instrument of testimony in Jakob and he disposed a law in Israel, which he enjoined on our fathers that they might make it known to their sons,

6. So that another generation, sons who were to be born, might know and arise and declare them to their sons,

7. That they might put their hope in God, and not ignore the doings of God and might seek out his commandments;

8. That they might not become as their fathers a perverse and embittering generation, a generation that did not become upright in their heart and whose spirit did not trust in God.

9. Sons of Ephraim who stretch the bow and hurl turned back in a day of war:

10. They did not watch to guard the covenant of God and in his law they did not will to go their way.

11. And they ignored his beneficent acts and his wonders which he had shown them,

12. Wonders which he had caused in the sight of their fathers, in a land of Aiguptos on the plain of Tanis,

13. He rent apart a sea, and led them through; He stood waters like a wine-skin, as it were,

14. And he guided them by day with a cloud and all the night long with an illumination of fire.

15. He rent asunder a rock in a wilderness and watered them as it were with a vast abyss;

16. And he led out water out of a rock and led waters down like rivers as it were.

17. And they repeated sinning against him; They embittered the Most High in a place without water,

18. And put God to the proof in their hearts by asking food for their souls;

19. And they talked against God and said, God will not be able, will he, to prepare a table in a wilderness?

20. When he had smitten a rock and waters had flowed out, and torrents had gushed down; He will not be able to give bread also, will he? or make ready a table for his laity?

21. Therefore the Lord hearkened and cast it up and fire was kindled in Jakob, and wrath went up against Israel;

22. Because they did not put faith in God nor hope in his instrumental-salvation;

23. And he enjoined on clouds above and opened doors of the heavens;

24. And rained on them manna to eat and gave them bread of the heavens;

25. Man ate angels' bread; a supply of food to satiety he sent unto them.

26. He took away notos (the south wind) from out the heavens, and led Liba, (the south-east wind) in his ability to sway things, upon them;

27. And he rained flesh upon them like dust as it were, and winged flying things like sand of the sea as it were;

28. And they fell into the midst of their camp around their tent-habitations;

29. And they ate and were exceedingly filled, and their inordinate-desire he brought unto them.

30. They did not stay themselves from their inordinate-desire; while their food (eating lit.) was still in their mouth,

31. God's wrath even arose against them, and he slew them with their fat things, and bound hand and foot Israel's elect ones.

32. With all these (experiences) they were still sinning and did not put faith in his wonders;

33. And their days were leaving off in inutility and their years with haste.

34. Whenever he was slaying them they were seeking him and turning and going early in the morning unto God;

35. And they remembered that God was their responsive-helper and the Most High God their Redeemer.

36. And they loved him with their mouth and with their tongue they lied to him;

37. But their heart was not upright in relation to him nor did they trust in his covenant.

38. He is pitiful though and will be favorable to their sins; and will not destroy; and will abound in turning away his anger, and will not let his wrath flame out;

39. And hath remembered that they are flesh, a spirit (breath) that goeth its way and doth not return,

40. Many a time did they embitter him in the wilderness; they provoked him to wrath in a land without water;

41. And they turned and made a test of God, and the sanctified one of Israel they provoked.

42. They did not remember his hand in the day when he redeemed them out of the hand of the one afflicting them:

43. How he disposed his signs in Aiguptos and his prodigies on a plain of Tanis;

44. And changed their rivers into blood and their cisterns so that they could not drink:

45. How he sent out unto them a dog-flea-pest and it devoured them, and a frog-pest and it destroyed them;

46. And how he gave their fruit unto a creeping-locust-pest and the results of their toil to the flying-locust;

47. How he slew their vine with hail and their sycamore trees with the frost: And how he gave their domestic-animals to hail, and their personal-property to the fire:

48. How he sent unto them the wrath of his anger, anger and wrath and tribulation sent through (the agency of) wicked angels:

49. How he made a pathway for his wrath and did not spare their souls from death; and enclosed their domestic-animals in death;

50. And smote every first-born in a land of Aiguptos, a first-fruits of their painful toil in the habitations of Cham; (Ham)

51. And how he took away his laity like sheep as it were and led them like a flock in a wilderness;

52. And guided them in hope and how they did not become cowardly, and a sea covered their enemies:

53. And how he led them unto a mountain of his sanctification, this mountain which his right hand had acquired;

54. And how he cast out nations from before their face, and gave them to inherit with a measuring-line of allotment, and caused the tribes of Israel to pitch their tents in their habitations;

55. And how they tried and embittered the Most High God, and did not watch to guard his testimonies;

56. And how they turned back and became truce-breakers even as their fathers were, changed themselves into a twisted bow.

57. And embittered him on their hills, and provoked him to zeal with their idols;

58. How God heard and overlooked it and greatly despised Israel;

59. And thrust away the tabernacle of Selom, his tabernacle which he had pitched among men;

60. And how he gave up their strength to captivity and their beauty to the hand of an enemy;

61. And how he shut up their laity to the sword; and overlooked his inheritance;

62. Devoured their young men with fire, and their virgins did not sorrow;

63. How their priests fell with the sword and their widows would not lament;

64. And how the Lord awoke as doth the sleeper and as doth an able man who hath been drunken with wine;

65. And smote his enemies to the rear, gave them up to the age-lasting reproach:

66. How he thrust away the sceptre of Joseph and choose not the tribe of Ephraim;

67. And did choose the tribe of Jouda, Mount Sion which he loved;

68. And how he built his sanctuary like a unicorn as it were, founded it in the earth forever;

69. And how he built his sanctuary like a unicorn as it were, founded it in the earth forever;

70. And choose out David his bond-servant, and took him up from out the flocks of the sheep:

71. Took him from behind those who were bringing forth, to shepherd Jakob his bond-servant, and Israel his inheritance:

72. And how he shepherded them in the guilelessness of his heart, and guided them in the understanding of his hands.

PSALM 78 (79 COM. VER.)

1. Asaph's psalm. O God, nations have come into thine inheritance; they have polluted thine inner sanctuary; they have made Hierousalem a hut for a watchman of vineyards;

2. They have made the dead bodies of thy bond-servants food for the flying things of the heavens, the flesh of thy holy ones food for the wild-beasts of the earth:

3. They have poured out their blood like water round about Hierousalem, and there was no one to bury.

4. We have become a reproach to our neighbors, a mockery and a jest for those round about us.

5. How long, O Lord? Wilt thou have continued wrathful unto the end? Will thy zeal have flamed out like fire?

6. Pour out thy wrath on nations that do not know thee, and kingdoms upon which thy name hath not been invoked.

7. Because they have devoured Jakob and his place have they made desolate.

8. Do not remember our ancient transgressions; May thy feelings of pity have speedily overtaken us, because we have become beggared exceedingly.

9. Respond to our cry for help, O God our Savior, for the sake of the glory of thy name.

10. May they never have said among the nations, where is their God? And may the requital of the blood of the bond-servants that hath been shed, have become known unto the nations in the sight of our eyes.

11. May the sighing of those bound hand and foot have come in before thee, according to the majesty of thy arm to save the sons of those who have been put to death.

12. Repay to our neighbors sevenfold into their bosom the reproach with which they have reproached thee, O Lord.

13. For we are thy laity and sheep of thy pasture; In return will we confess unto thee for the age (forever?) unto generation and generation will we declare thy praise.

PSALM 79 (80 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; For those who will have become alienated, Asaph's instrumental-testimony; a psalm for the Assurion (Assyrian).

2. O thou, who shepherdest Israel attend; O thou who dost guide Joseph like sheep as it were; O thou who art seated above the Cheroubim, manifest thyself:

3. In the sight of Ephraim and Benemin and Manasse; Awake thy ability to rule, and come to save us.

4. O God, turn unto us and manifest thy face and we shall have been saved.

5. O Lord God of the hosts, how long art thou going to be wrathful at the votive-prayer of thy bond-servant?

6. Thou art morseling out to us bread of tears and giving us to drink with tears in measure.

7. Thou hast made us an object of gainsaying unto our neighbors and our enemies have mocked at us.

8. O Lord God of the Hosts, turn unto us and manifest thy face and we shall have been saved. Interlude.

9. A vine from out Aiguptos thou didst transfer; thou didst cast out nations and plant it:

10. Thou didst make a way before, and didst plant its roots and the land was filled.

11. Its shadow covered mountains, and its crepers cedars of God:

12. It extended its branches unto a sea and its offshoots to a river.

13. Why didst thou tear down its hedge, and all those who go their way are gathering its vintage.

14. Swine from out the forest have polluted it, and the solitary wild-beast hath fed it down.

15. O God of the Hosts, turn forsooth, look from out the heavens and see and take an oversight of this vine;

16. And restore that which thy right hand hath planted; and (look) upon a son of man whom thou hast controlled for thyself.

17. It (the vine) hath been burned with fire and dug up; at the rebuke of thy face they perish;

18. Let thy hand come to be upon a man of thy right hand and upon a Son of Man whom thou hast controlled for thyself;

19. And we will not stand away from thee; and thou wilt make us to live, and thy name will we invoke.

20. O Lord God of the Hosts turn unto us and manifest thy face and we shall have been saved.

PSALM 80 (81 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; Concerning the wine-presses; Asaph's psalm.

2. Be ye glad in God our responsive-helper; Alala unto the God of Jakob.

3. Take psalm and give tympanum, psaltry of pleasing sound with cithara;

4. Sound with new-moon trumpet on a truly-significant day of our feast.

5. Because it is a commandment for Israel and God's verdict for Jakob;

6. Instrumental-testimony in Joseph did he appoint it, when he went out of a land of Aiguptos.

7. A tongue which he did not comprehend he heard;

7. His back he stood away from exactions of tribute; His hands had done bond-service in the basket,

8. In tribulation thou didst invoke me and I delivered thee: I hearkened to thee in the concealment of a cyclone I proved thee at a water of gainsaying. Interlude.

9. Mayest thou have heard, my laity, and I will talk to thee; Israel, and I will go through the testimony for thee; If thou shalt hearken unto me.

10. There will be no recent god in thee nor wilt thou bow in homage to an alien god.

11. For I am the Lord thy God who led thee up out of a land of Aiguptos: Make wide thy mouth and I will fill it.

12. And my laity did not hearken to my voice and Israel did not heed me;

13. And I sent them out according to the devices of their heart; they will go their way in their own devices.

14. If my laity had hearkened unto me, if Israel had gone their way in my ways;

15. In no respect would I have humbled their enemies, and upon those who were afflicting them would I have laid my hand.

16. The enemies of the Lord lied to him, and their appointed-time will be unto the age;

17. And he morseled out to them from the fat of wheat, and with honey out of a rock he full-fed them.

COMMENT.

The 77th psalm, being a ten times seven and a seven we would expect it to especially emphasize the hair, the completeness of it as an instrumentality to accomplish that for which it was instituted and we so find this to be the burden of this psalm. The number I should have said perhaps would indicate completeness of some sort and as law is everywhere throughout the Scriptures—God's law I mean taught as the par excellence of completeness, we might expect law here to be the topic. It has generally been argued by those who have made a study of numbers at all that 7 indicates perfection. But this is a mistake. For the law although a perfect or complete instrumentality "perfected nothing." The 8 is the perfection number, as indicated in music for instance, an eighth being a full and perfect chord. There are but seven notes it is true, but it is only by recombining the seven notes that we get harmony and tune or music. The magnifying of the law as an instrumentality in the hand of God for a beneficent purpose naturally suggests such passages as "What subserveth the law then?" It was a child-leader to lead us to "Christ" and so the Messianic import of this psalm becomes apparent and Christ as the higher instrumentality as "the right-hand of God" and as "the man of his right hand" appears like the original text of a restored palimpsest.

The 78th psalm true to its numerical significance opens with the enumeration of specific prophecies fulfilled or completed even to the utter desolation of "Jakob's place." With the 8th verse begins the prayer for pity and the confession of absolute beggary, the appeal to the glory of God's name and the majesty of his arm to save, and requital on the obdurate enemies of his people, his laity and the sheep of his pasture." The psalm closes with a resurrectional hope that they will yet declare his praise unto generation and generation.

The 79th psalm according to its number should be a consummation of some sort, and we learn from the heading that it is a consummation of testimony, "instrumental-testimony for those who will have become alienated"—"for the Assurion"—that is for God's particular laity. For we are at once reminded of the other oracular word, "My father was an Assurion and went down into Egypt." It is a succint review of the salient points in the experience of God's people up to the 16th verse which is a prayer for restoration and that God should "look upon a son of man whom thou hast controlled for thyself" a passage of special Messianic import as is the last clause of the 18th verse also with that which precedes it "a man of thy right hand" namely. Note the significance of the clause of the 16th verse "and thou wilt make us to live, and thy name will we invoke."

The 80th psalm if true to its number should be in some way significant of redemption and resurrectional victory and triumph. Observe that it has a part of the same heading as the 8th psalm namely "Concerning the wine-presses" a singular coincidence if nothing more. But a careful student of prophecy and the Levitical types will see a great deal more than a coincidence. Compare the thought and the subject-matter of the two psalms and observe the wonderful progressive harmony of the major chords of redemption—full octaves of God's beneficent purpose—the accompaniament of "tympanum, psaltry and Cithara"—the "trumpet" sounding "a truly significant day of our feast"—"the alala" of victory "the instrumental-testimony"—and the gist of it given in review—the belief of a lie and the resultant apostasy the first or old covenant apostasy of course—and the final glorious promise in the last clause of the 16th verse (a double-octave by the way)—"and their appointed time will be unto the age."

Read the psalm in this light and see if you do not get some new thoughts of redemption out of it.

The Bible Indestructible.

"I was dining," said the late Rev. Walter Buchanan, "some time ago, with a literary party at old Mr. Abercromby's of Tullibody, (the father of Sir Ralph Abercromby, who was slain in Egypt,) and we spent the evening together. A gentleman present put a question which puzzled the whole company. It was this: 'Supposing all the New Testaments in the world had been destroyed at the end of the third century, could the contents have been recovered from the writings of the first three centuries?' The question was novel to all, and no one even hazarded a guess in answer to the inquiry.

"About two months after this meeting I received an invitation to breakfast with Lord Hailes, (Sir David Dalrymple.) Next morning during breakfast he asked me if I recollected the curious question about the possibility of recovering the contents of the New Testament from the writings of the first three centuries. I replied, 'I remember it well, and have thought of it often without being able to form any opinion or conjecture on the subject.'

"'Well,' said Lord Hailes, 'that question quite accorded with the turn or taste of my antiquarian mind. On returning home, as I knew I had all the writers of those centuries, I began immediately to collect them, that I might set to work as soon as possible.' Pointing to a table covered with papers, he said: 'there have I been busy for these two months, searching for chapters half chapters, and sentences of the New Testament, and have marked out what I have found of it, so that any person may examine and see for himself. I have actually discovered the whole New Testament, except seven or eleven verses, I forget which: which satisfies me I could discover them also.' 'Now,' he added, 'here was a way in which God concealed or hid the treasures of his Word, that Julian, the apostate emperor and other enemies of Christ who wished to extirpate the Gospel from the world, never would have thought of; and though they had, they never could have effected their destruction."

The incident and the result to which it led must be deeply interesting to the Christian reader. A stronger confirmation of the integrity of the sacred text—its freedom from interpolation or corruption—could not well be imagined. And it also furnishes a most valuable testimony to the diligent study of the Word of God which prevailed in the early church; a testimony which painfully contrasts with the ignorance of Bible truth which exists wherever Romanism has directly or indirectly succeeded in stamping the Holy volume as a proscribed book.—Our Own Fireside.

Clinching a Sermon.

I heard a sermon once from a venerable itinerant preacher on benevolence. I thought the effort very lean, but one thing impressed me a little. "Go," said he, "and do something after I have done preaching. Have it to say when I come back four weeks hence, that you have done something, and my word and God's word for it you will be a better and happier man." I knew a poor widow living on the edge of some woods about a mile from my home, her husband had been dead two or three years, and with three helpless little girls she had a hard conflict with poverty. I had often spoke kindly to her, and thought my duty ended when the words were uttered; but when the sermon of the old white-headed preacher was done, the resolution was formed to go and do something.

Next day I visited my cellar, and measured out a bushel of potatoes, a bushel of apples, and a variety of other things, and having put them in a wagon, started for the cottage of the widow. A load of wood for which I paid three dollars, preceded me.

An hour's drive brought both loads in front of the house, and when my explanation was given there were wet eyes and warmer hearts in both parties. The widow wept for joy, and the children joined in, while I, finding my feelings to much for my strength, had to give way also to tears. The act was one that gave me a new spiritual start; and when the preacher came back I thought the discourse one of the most eloquent I had ever listened to. The change was in myself not in him or in his preachings.

Charge them that are rich in this world that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy.

The moral strength of a church depends on the character of its members and not on the number of its adherents

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION addresses the fact "restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a strict belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as prerequisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

M. JOBLIN, Corresponding Editor.
PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEP. 4, 1895.

The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

THE greatest and most dangerous enemies to Christ are those who pretend to be his friends, but are not faithful to his doctrines.

UP to date the attempted subjugation of Cuba has cost Spain about $20,000,000; and 30,000 cavalry are to be landed at the island before the 20th of September.

A DESPATCH from London, Aug. 20 says the navy estimates provide for 88,850 men—5,450 over the estimates of last year; and it is proposed to expend more than $23,000,000 on the construction of ships, and $3,000,000 on armaments. They are preparing for war.

THE destiny of the wicked is plainly set forth by the Spirit in Malachi:—"Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble and the day that cometh shall burn them up, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Mal. iv. 1.

A TELEGRAM from Niagara Falls on the 26th inst. says that after five years of work and the expenditure of over 3,000,000, Niagara has finally been harnessed, and the power generated by the 5000 horse-power dynamos, are now sending out the electricity for commercial use. The power from the power-house is sent over copper cables laid in a conduit to the aluminum works, and everything worked perfectly.

MR. GLADSTONE in reply to Madame Novikoff, the author of a little work entitled "Christ or Moses," says:—I have myself been a good deal engaged latterly in examining the questions of a future state and have had occasion to touch more or less upon Jewish opinion. The subject is very interesting, but is also large and complex. . . . Speaking of the creeds he says:—"After the period when they were framed, Christian opinion came gradually, I believe, to found itself upon, an assumption due to Greek philosophy, and especially to Plato, namely, that of the natural immortality of the human soul. And this opinion (which I am not much inclined to accept) supplies us, so to speak, with spectacles through which we look back upon the Hebrew ideas conveyed in the Old Testament. Another view of the matter is that man was not naturally immortal, but immortalizable. That had he not sinned, he would have attained regularly to immortality; but after eating of the tree of knowledge he was prevented, as the text informs us, from feeding on the tree of life, and the subject of his immortality was thrown into vague and obscure distance."

The Question Drawer.

"Mr. Joblin will you oblige me by stating clearly if there are positively any signs that the coming of Christ is near?" WM. M.

There must be such signs, or otherwise the words of Christ in the 21st of Luke would be without meaning. He said "when ye see these things come to pass, then know that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." You can refer to the chapter for yourself and ascertain what the "these things" are, in detail, including distress of nations and perplexity, and consequent heart-failings in view of what would be the condition of things. These are often notable signs in various parts of the Scriptures, and are to be recognizable in the state of affairs among men and nations just prior to the appearing of Christ, several of which we will notice.

1. The general state of preparedness for war amongst the nations of earth. We have proof of this in the 3rd chapter of Joel:—"Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles; prepare war; wake up the mighty men—beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears—the day of the Lord is near. Also Rev. xvi. 14, 15,—"Gather them together to the war of the great day of God Almighty—"Behold I come as a thief."

2. A great increase of knowledge of all sorts, and great travelling facilities. See Dan. xii. 4 where the prophet is told to seal the book, even to the time of the end; "Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased."

3. Decline of the Turkish Empire preparatory to the return of Israel to their land. We understand that that power has done most of the treading down of Jerusalem, and we rejoice to know that its tread, through outside influence is getting lighter and lighter, and the beginning of the return of Israel is a fact. We understand that Rev. xvi. 12 indicates this down treading power. Read it, and then turn to Dan. xi. 40, 41 and read that at the time of the end. . . . the king of the North shall come against him like a whirlwind with chariots and with horsemen and with many ships, and he shall enter into the countries and shall overthrow and pass over. He shall enter also in the glorious land (now occupied by Turkey.)

4. Recovery of Palestine from the desolations of many generations is a notable sign, that something is about to happen on a magnificent scale. It has been clearly marked out for our benefit in the 33rd chapter of Ezekiel. "In the latter years, thou (the Great Northern Invader) shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel which have been always waste, but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them. . . . the land of unwalled villages," etc.

5. The disappearance of the Pope's coercive power over Christendom, and the consumption of his dominion is another remarkable sign. Of the priest-monarch of the Roman system symbolized by the Little Horn with eyes on the Roman beast seen by Daniel in vision we read, "And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High and think to change times and laws, and they shall be given into his hand for time, times-and-a-half, (literally 1260 days standing for years) but the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion to consume and destroy it unto the end. Dan. vii. 25, 26. In Rev. xiii. 5 we read, "There was given him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies, and power was given unto him to make war forty and two months" 42 times 30 equals 1260 days or years. His time has run out; he is stripped of his power. There are many more, but for the present these must suffice.

For proof that this is the time when these signs are to be looked for, consider first, They belong to the time of the end. Dan. xi. 40. The time of the end has been appointed Dan. viii. 19. The end in the case is the end of certain days. Dan. xii. 13. The days represent years. Eek. iv. 6. The years represented in this case have expired, viz. the 1260 years of Papal ascendancy dating from A. D. 606, and the 2418 years of Israel's down-treading, dating from the uprise of the Persian power—see vision of the ram and goat Daniel viii. Therefore we are in the time of the end, and are justified in looking for the appointed signs of our Lord's return, and they are all fully developed before the eyes of such as are able to discern. There are Finger Post notes heed them.

It Was Predicted.

Ages ago that "darkness should cover the earth, and gross darkness the people." Isa. lx. 2. The verse preceding this prophecy shows that the darkness referred to would exist in the closing days of Gentile times; and further, that the profound darkness of that time is the motive of the prayer, "Arise" [addressed to Zion] "Arise, shine, for thy light cometh, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." Then follows the reason, "For behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people, and Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising." This certainly locates the gross darkness. The very time boasted of as being the most progressive age of the world is characterized by the spirit as one of gross darkness. It must not be supposed that there is a conflict between prophecy and existing facts. Prophecy also anticipated the intellectual activity the result of which is now boasted of. More than 500 years before Daniel the Spirit said that at the time of the end "many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased." The conclusion is inevitable that the time of the end is to be at once dark and light. This means that in the worlds of literature, mechanics, science and arts there will be light, but in things pertaining to God and truth and righteousness the grossest darkness will prevail. To every student of the prophetic Word it is evident that the world is in just that predicament now. And if the Son of Man when here in poverty and weakness and suffering could upbraid the Pharisees of his age, for not discerning the signs of the times, how much more could he upbraid the Pharisees of this age, for not discerning that the time is near for his return from the far country?

The Jewish Pharisees were blinded by the traditions of men, and so were unable to recognize the fact that their Messiah had to come first as "the Lamb of God to take away the sin of the world," and second, as "the Lion of the tribe of Judah," to oust those in possession of his inheritance. The Scriptures tell us that a veil is over their hearts which will remain until they turn to the Lord, which is still future, for the spirit in Paul says "Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles may come in. And so all Israel shall be saved; as it is written, "There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn ungodliness from Jacob." Rom. ii. 25, 26.

There are thousands upon thousands of Gentiles, who like the Jewish Pharisees believe themselves to be the servants of God, while making void the Word of God by traditions. Some of them say the "Son of God will never demean himself by setting his foot upon this accursed earth again, far less come here to dwell forever," thus ignoring the fact that God has promised to give a portion of it to his Son, and ultimately, in answer to his request, "the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession." Psa. ii. 8. He who cursed the earth for Adam's sake (Gen. iii. 17) will remove it for the second Adam's sake—the Lord Jesus Christ, for we read, "there shall be no more curse." Rev. xxii. 3.

Gentile Pharisees of our times believe that he who came in weakness and lowliness was the one spoken of by the prophet Isaiah as the despised and rejected of men; and that Zech. ix. 9. was literally fulfilled in him, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O of Jerusalem, behold THY King cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon the colt the foal of an ass." They admit that he literally rode into Jerusalem upon an ass amid the hosannas of thousands. But just as the Jews will not recognize this lowly one as their King, neither will Gentile religionists. They overlook all the glorious truths written in the prophets concerning him as the heir to David's throne and kingdom, who is to establish it with judgment and justice.

The Jews will only recognize in the Messiah of the prophets "Judah's Lion. Professing Gentiles will only recognize him as God's Lamb. The Jews have no Savior to redeem them from death and make them eligible to live and reign in an everlasting kingdom,—and Gentiles claim him as their Savior, and in a restricted sense accept him as their Life-Giver,—Life-Giver to the Body,—but what would they do with the life after they received it? Where could they spend it? To enjoy a life that would never end it is necessary to have an everlasting home. Has any everlasting home been offered to man? Or, has it been left for men to speculate and wonder, and wrangle about? Supposing that we are writing for those who believe the Bible to be God's book, and that it reveals God's plan and purposes in revelation to man and earth,—we ask:—Has not God promised to set up a world-wide and everlasting kingdom by his glorified Son? Has he not shown us that all such are joint-heirs with the only begotten Son? Has he not said by Jesus that the meek shall inherit the earth? Has he not said by Daniel that the kingdom the saints shall possess forever, even forever and ever, is to be under the whole heaven. Dan. vii. 27? Has he not said to us that the good news of that coming kingdom is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it? If so, we submit that a gospel without the kingdom, is another gospel, and yet not another, but a perversion of the gospel Christ preached, and therefore as powerless to save as was the half gospel believed by the Jews.

Reader, the Lord is coming again as he said he would; coming in power and glory instead of weakness; and will inherit Judah his portion in the Holy Land, and choose Jerusalem again. Zech. ii. 12. And the words of the Spirit will apply to you if you do not heed the abundance of divine testimony. Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?" 1 Cor. i. 20? It is tradition of kingdoms in hearts, church kingdoms, kingdoms beyond the bounds of time and space," and so forth, that will be made so supremely foolish as to cause men to say when the kingdom has been set up, "Surely our fathers have inherited lies and things wherein is no profit." Jer. xvi. 19.

OUR CHILDREN.

Only Wait.

Can you tell me how the many petals grow
In a rosebow where the clouds of the rainbow rest?
Where the east winds rise and the west winds blow?

Do you know the word of the robin's song?
Can you tell, when the wild birds skim along,
Whether the notes are right or wrong?

Can you follow the snowflake as it flies?
Can you tell me how the mist of the morning rises?
Or the green leaf crimsons before it dies?

If you cannot fathom these simple things,
If your thought drops down when it tries its wings,
So near the earth, and no answer brings;

Is it strange that you do not understand
The wonderful things that God has planned
For the life in the undiscovered land?

The robin's song you may not translate,
Nor the time in the open book of fate;
But the truth is there if you only wait.

If you only wait, faint heart, you'll find
The missing thread, and can unwind
All that divinity designed

For us to know. Sometime you'll say
I see God's plan: I can trace his way.
You will understand, some day, some day.

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea.—No. 30.

GOD—OUR ROCK.
THE REDEEMER—A ROCK.

Have you read the 32nd of Deuteronomy? You will like it; it is a grand chapter, look at the verses that talk of God, as a Rock,—are they not beautiful?

"He is the Rock," Moses says, "his work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment, a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he." We trust men who are always truthful; we look up to and rest in those in whose lives, we can find no fault; we have so much confidence in them that we feel towards them much as if they were a Rock. How much more then, can we feel in this way towards the ever-living God! He makes no mistakes, he is always right, always just, there can no sin be found in him, well may he be called "Our Rock," "the Rock of Israel's salvation," "the Rock that begat them."

He is our Rock, because he is the one from whom sprang all the wonderful things that are going to save us,—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, the nation of Israel, the blessed Bible, the dear Savior, the coming kingdom. He is the beginning, the foundation of it all.

Is it any wonder that he chose a rock to be not only a symbol of himself, but also of Jesus, of the saints, and of the kingdom? There is strength in a rock, It makes a good hiding place when foes pursue; it is a shelter from storm and from heat. David often spoke of God as a rock, as a fortress, a high tower, a shield.—But now, before we go on to where the Redeemer is called a Rock, we will look at the 105th Psalm. It is a review in song of many of the studies that we have gone over.

Read the 41st verse.—"He opened the rock, and the waters gushed out, they ran in the dry places like a river," and in the 78th Psalm—"He clave the rocks in the wilderness, and gave them drink as out of great depths. He brought streams also out of the rock and caused waters to run down like rivers."

The dust of the idol calf, that Aaron made was cast into the brook that descended out of the mount at Horeb. But you say, "all these passages look as if the water came from the rocky steeps of the mountain sides?" So they do. And if it were not for the way Paul talks, we should think as most travelers do, that this was the case.

But they could not drink of a stone that "went with them," if the water did not gush out of that very stone. And if the water came from the mountain rocks, there would have been more than one stone smitten, when only one was needed to make a picture of Christ.

If God could give bread, where there is not a spear of grass, nor a bird, nor any green tree, he could give the precious, cooling drink, the one was a miracle, the other must be.

Nehemiah connects the bread and the water. Neh. ix. 15, 20.

But are there no other references to the stone? Yes, references that even little ones can see must make the wondrous rock, a type of Jesus. We will look at some of them before long.

You have read about the beautiful temple that Solomon built, have you not? King David got the stones all ready for it before he died. "onyx stones, and stones to be set, glistering stones, and of divers colors, and all manner of precious stones, and marble stones in abundance." God's spirit gave him the pattern of it all. These stones in that temple of the olden time, are a type of those who love and follow Jesus, who are being built into another house. Shall we read the 2nd chapter of St. Peter together? I cannot copy it all for you, it would take to much space in the paper, but you will see that he calls us "lively stones," and Jesus, "a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God and precious."

It takes a great many stones to to build a large church, so it will take a great many good people to build that holy temple in which God, through his spirit is to dwell. And in all great buildings there is always one stone that is honored above all the rest. Great crowds of men and women come together to see it put in its place. Valuable papers are hidden it and there is speech making and great rejoicing.

So there is one stone in God's house of good people that is more precious than all the rest,—it is our dear Savior; he is "the head of the corner." To him it is given to be the head over all things to the church." He will be set far above all kings and presidents and czars in the world to come. Eph. i: 21-22. We shall be kings but he, will be "King of kings."

What does "disallowed" mean? Thrown aside, rejected. David, in Psalm cxix:22 refers to a stone, that would be refused. He says, "The stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner." God, told him how it would be. Tradition says, that Jacob's stone was brought and laid among the other stones that were to find a place in the temple. It was not a pretty stone, and there seemed to be no place for it. So there it lay, "a refused stone". The workman stumbled over it and bruised themselves and were angry at it. "It was a rock of offence." But by and by a stone was lacking, there was no head, corner stone, the "refused" one was tried, and lo! it was a perfect fit!

Jesus refers to this in Matt. xxi. 42. Mark xii: 10, Luke xx. 17, and applies it all to himself.

Just as the workmen had rejected and stumbled over the temple-headstone, so had the Jews, or Judah, stumbled over him. They killed the dear Son of God and cast him out of the vineyard.

For this dreadful sin God's kingdom was taken from them and given to the people of Israel.

They, are now the missionaries of the world, bringing forth in some measure the fruits of the kingdom,—builders, as the Jews once were, not of a typical temple, but of the real temple of holy people, that is to last for all eternity.

There are a great many naughty people among them, just as there was in the olden days, but God is using even these in his work. Isn't it strange? They are doing the digging, making the railways etc. Their gold is helping, but they do not know it.

OBITUARY.

Died at the home of her daughter Mrs. Loretta Parks of Albion, Wisconsin, after a short illness of two days of blood poison caused by insection of the kidney, Mrs. Catharine Southwick, aged 79 years, 3 months and 16 days. She was born in Brookfield, Madison County, New York. At the age of three years she with her parents moved to Alfred, Allegheny Co., New York. Was married to Isaac P. Millard, Jan. 14, 1836. In 1842, while Wisconsin was yet a territory she with her husband set out in a covered wagon for the far west as it was called at that time. They finally settled in the town of Albion, Dane Co., Wisconsin, and for fifty-three years she has been a resident of that immediate vicinity. She was the mother of twelve children, seven of whom are living. In 1864 while the war cloud darkened our land her husband enlisted in his country's service, was taken a prisoner and died a prisoner in 1865. He had started to be exchanged but died before reaching the Union line. When very young, a mere child, she devoted herself to the Master's service and for forty years has been in the Abrahamic faith. Her declining years have been passed very happily and peacefully. Her Bible and RESTITUTION were her constant companions, God's promises her theme. The funeral services were held in the M. E. Church in Edgerton, Monday 15, Elder W. W. Woodside officiating taking for his text Phil. i. 21. For to me to live is Christ and to die is gain. Her remains were followed to their last resting place by six of her children and a large concourse of relatives and friends.

Died on the 10th day of January, 1895, at his residence near Lancaster, Atchison Co., Kansas, in the 66th year of his age, Bro. Peter Buckels. Bro. Buckels was born in Kingstree, Williamsburg Co., South Carolina. He came to Kansas in the early days of the Territory and married Miss Elsie Miller of Brown Co., Kansas, who survives him. Of this union were born ten children, seven of whom are living, four daughters married and two daughters and one son unmarried.

Bro. and Sister Buckels gave their assent to the doctrine of life only in Christ, and the gospel of the kingdom of God, early in the seventies and were immersed in that faith. Bro. Buckels was of an independent turn of mind and was ready to accept truth at the cost of popularity if need be.

He was sick for many months and was a great sufferer, but most of the time was able to get up. He read a great deal during his sickness. His last reading was THE RESTITUTION on the day before he took fatally worse. I was intimately acquainted with him for several years and many pleasant hours have I spent under his roof; but he has gone to his long home and the mourners go about the street. The writer gave a discourse to his memory on June 30th (last), the 66th anniversary of his birth, to a large and attentive audience, subject, "Reaurrection." It is hoped that some seed fell in good ground.

"Trust him for a way when there is no way, for light when there is no light, for all things when you have nothing, for joy when there is only sorrow, for life when you are in the midst of death; thus you will find at last that faith is not only righteousness, but life and joy and peace."

Pray Daily, for Daily Needs.

"Lord, for to-morrow and its needs
I do not pray:
Keep me, my God, from stain of sin
Just for to-day.

Let me both diligently work
And duly pray:
Let me be kind in word and deed
Just for to-day.

Let me be slow to urge my will,
Prompt to obey;
Help me to mortify my flesh
Just for to-day.

Let me no rong or idle word
Unthinking say:
Set Thou a seal upon my lips
Just for to-day.

Let me in season, Lord, be grave,
In season gay;
Let me be faithful to thy grace
Just for to-day.

So for to-morrow and its needs
I do not pray;
But keep me, guide, love me, Lord,
Just for to-day."

My Visit.

The happiest days of my life I have spent visiting, and trying in my weak way to preach the gospel of the kingdom to my friends in Brown County, Minnesota. It was a source of great enjoyment to see those dear ones that I had not seen for years, and to find them believing so many of the precious truths of the gospel of the kingdom of God. But O when the parting time came, when by the duties we owe to friends at home we were compelled to say good by, and leave aged father and others shedding tears. We then stepped on board of Nahum's chariot and was wafted to our own quiet home and find all well. When we meditate on these scenes we are made to proclaim. O for the time when parting will be no more, when God will wipe all tears from the eyes of the faithful ones. Then let me say to the scattered ones be faithful and may we come from east, west, north and south and set down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God is our prayer. Amen.

REPORT.

To the Household of Faith:

I suppose it is in order that I should let you know what we are doing in this part of the vineyard. We according to previous arrangements met July 28, 1895, and organized with a membership of twelve, elected one elder, two deacons, one clerk, and took the Lord's Supper in commemoration of his death. 1 Cor. ii. 26. For the present we will meet every third first day to commemerate our Lord's death. Call ourselves the Church of God at Linden, Okla., Territory.

M. L. ADAMS, Elder.

QUESTION.

Will Brother W. H. Wilson tell an earnest enquirer, through the columns of THE RESTITUTION whether our Savior's example as given in John xiii. (feet washing) is a command which should be observed in connection with the Lord's Supper.

A. J. CHAPLIN.

Remember the Nickel Plate Road has authorized low rate Home-Seekers excursions to points in the West, North-West and South-west on Sept. 10th and 24th. Enquire of agents for particulars.

Union with Christ is not only inward, secret and vital, but it is also outward, practical and visible. The roots of the tree are out of sight, but the branches are in sight and the fruit cannot be hid.

The Nickel Plate Road offers a splendid opportunity for visiting the West, North-west and South-west by authorizing excursion rates to points in that territory on Sept. 10th and 24th. Ask agents for further information.

Truths of the Bible expressed in tropes and symbols are like nuts, whose delicious and wholesome kernels are frequently hidden from the eater by shells not easily cracked.

Agents of the Nickel Plate Road are in possession of information which will enable them to quote special excursion rates to points in the North-west, West, South-west, and South for tickets sold during Sept. and Oct. Further information may be secured by applying to local agents of that popular low-rate Line.

The Noble Nature.

It is not growing like a tree
In bulk, doth make man better be;
Or standing long an oak three hundred year,
To fall a log at last, dry, bald, and sere:
A lily of a day
Is fairer far in May.

Although it fall and die that night,
It was the plant and flower of light.
In small proportions, we just beauty see:
And in short measures, life may perfect be.

THE HOPE OF SALVATION.

"In the Greek there are different words translated 'the appearing,' and 'the coming,' which in English should rather be the 'nearness' and the 'presence' or 'manifestation.' The way in which these are used in relation to the second advent lead us to conclude that the Lord descends into the air, gathers his saints, and continues there it may be hours, days, or years, ere he comes in the epiphany or brightness of the great day of God Almighty. This does not make two comings, but one in two stages. If a monarch visits a city, and whilst he is some miles off the civic functionaries go forth to meet him, and they halt for some time before returning in a cavalcade, does it make two visits?"

"No."

"Likewise but one, and that a final coming is mentioned as to take place,' for we never hear of Christ afterward leaving the earth."

"What? not when it is burnt up? I think you are forgetting the destruction of the world, Alfred."

"I do not know of a destruction of the globe, which is what you mean by the world, I suppose Ella, so that I cannot forget it. I have Peter's testimony that the earth and the works therein shall be burnt up, (but not destroyed;) and that they are 'reserved to fire against the day of judgment, and the perdition of ungodly men,' but this does not conflict with the duration of the reign on earth. The first judgment precedes the establishment of the kingdom."

"Where are you told there will be two judgments?"

"My dear Ella, in God's dealings with the world there is nothing unique; every event has its mate. Read Rev. xix. and xx., if you wish proof. I could give you many more, but these will suffice. As I was saying, after the first judgment succeeds the reign of the martyrs for 1000 years with Christ; after which the Adversary is loosed; and then the second judgment. The righteous dead are granted entrance into the eternal state; whilst the wicked are cast out, and consigned to the 'second death.' During the ensuing conflagration there will be the antitype of the ark, the righteous being preserved in the Land of Abraham, (the second Goshen,) whilst fire is purging the earth of all uncleanliness. When the heavens and the earth are constituted anew and eternal, that 'city which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God;' which Abraham looked for, even New Jerusalem, 'shall descend out of heaven, from God, as a bride adorned, for her husband.' Read Rev. xxi. for the description of that handiwork of God,—I could not in mine own language give any description of it. If the Preparatory Age is so grand and glorious, as the few prophetic testimonies I have quoted indicate, what must the Eternal be? So beautiful indeed will be the New Earth, as to be counted worthy of the dwelling place and throne of God being upon it!"

"How long does Jesus reign then?"

"For ever! You heard me read age and age-everlasting, in place of ever, which I think is a better rendering of the Greek words aion and aionion; but yet the reign of Jesus will be eternal. For it has the positive statements concerning it that of 'his kingdom there shall be no end.' After he has subdued all things under his feet, he, 'the Son, will deliver up the kingdom to the Father, that God may become all in all:' but he still retains the sceptre, jointly with his Father. In the millennial age God's majesty is recognized through Christ (even as his first advent was the manifestation in the flesh of God's character,) hence we find the triumphant rejoicings of the sanctified and redeemed worded, 'Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ.' (Mark this, that not till then is our salvation accomplished). And well has the Lord's Anointed deserved the Empire: for he endured the extremity of ignominy rather than leave any thing wanting to the salvation of his co-heirs. Why, Ella, the very death of Christ proves the future kingdom. 'Now, if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him: knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more.' 'In Christ shall all be made alive.... Christ, the first-fruits, afterwards they who are his, at his coming: then the end. (i. e. the remainder of the saved race,) when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God:.... for he must reign till he have put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy which shall be destroyed is death.' If then the principal object of the reign of Jesus is the destruction of death, is it presumptuous to say that there can be no future but through resurrection? Everlasting life and the kingdom are so related that if man had an immortal principle within him, there would have been no need for Christ to have died to ensure him immortality. The argument is double-edged; if Christ died that the Covenant blessings might be confirmed, does it not prove that man has no undying essence, but is subject to death, from which he must be delivered ere he can attain eternal existence? Again, do not our Lord's words, 'In my Father's house there are many mansions; I go to prepare a place for you.... I will come again, and receive you to myself; that where I am ye may be also,' imply that his ascension was needful for the preparation of our home. But why should he have died, and what need was there for his going to heaven, if man's spirits had always been enjoying the felicity of a celestial reward from the time of the death of Abel?"

"I see the bearing of your argument, and it certainly is a strong one. But you speak of the resurrection as being the peculiar reward of the righteous, whereas I understand that all, both saints and sinners, shall be raised. What becomes of the wicked?"

"My dear Ella, Paul puts resurrection from among the dead as a privilege and hope. He was willing to undergo any suffering if by any such means he might attain to the resurrection out from among the dead.' Which shows that the resurrection of believers is distinct from that of mankind as a race. Jesus states the two resurrections plainly in John v. 25-29: 'I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of Man. Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation.' From this you see that all will be raised, but the wicked who stand before the bar shall (not be sent into unending torments, but) be consigned to the damnation, i. e. be 'burnt up,' consumed as the fat of rams,' 'into smoke shall they pass away.' But we have not time to discuss their fate; leave them to it; for my sister I hope will be of the class of the redeemed who shall stand when the Messenger of the Covenant appeareth."

"So hope I too, my brother. I begin to see that it must be life through Christ, or nothing; and I must say that the hope of reward, as you present it, appears more satisfactory and consistent with God and his works than the popular one. But I want more help and enlightenment, Alfred, which you must give me."

"Oh Ella, darling sister, I thank my God that he has so soon given me fruits of my labor in your conviction. It is ever the case that 'he who doeth truth cometh to the light,' and I can, like Paul, 'give thanks because God hath chosen you to salvation through the sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth; whereunto he called you by my gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.' I bless him for making me his instrument in preaching the good news to you, but do not be led to trust in flesh, for vain is the help of man. You can always claim my assistance, but I would have you rather be guided by the immutable Word of God. And this you must the more be ready to do for I must return to town tomorrow, the Lord willing. Oh, Ella dear, may our hearts ever beat in unison, and we be locked together in the one faith, even as we are now in fraternal embrace."

"Heaven would be no heaven unless we both shared it, my own brother. But if I believe the glad tidings of the kingdom, what more is required?"

"You remember what I said about repentance? To accept the gospel is evidence of a changed mind, it needs then the obedience of the Faith. You know that unless a woman take upon herself the name of the object of her affection in a legal manner, she has no claim upon his estate. So with Christ, who has instituted immersion as the form of our taking upon us his name. Abraham is the heir of the world; Christ is his Seed, and by law the Heritor of the Abrahamic blessings. How then is the Gentile to obtain an inheritance in the promise of life for the age of the ages? By the beautiful and simple process of adoption. The peculiar or higher blessings of that covenant being a question of faith, not descent, they who have like faith, and obey it, are adopted into the Abrahamic Sonship. Paul's logic is superior to mine, and therefore hear him: 'Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been immersed into Christ have put on Christ. . . And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.' After this introduction into the heirship, a holy walk and conversation unspotted from the world, must be the 'working out of our own salvation with fear and trembling.' The Christian-Life is a training school for the Kingship, for 'he who ruleth among men must be just, ruling in the fear of the Lord; and he shall be as the light of the morning when the sun riseth,—a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain.'"

"But is not the baptism we received when infants sufficient, Alfred?"

"Were we immersed, Ella?"

"We were sprinkled with water, which is accounted equivalent for children."

"But we did not go 'down into the water,' sister. And even if we had it were nothing. How can the sprinkling of an unconscious, unconsenting, infant be Christian baptism? No, Ella, it is he 'who believeth the gospel, AND is immersed, who shall be saved.' Nor is this asking too much. 'He who saith, I know God, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar:' and, on the other hand, 'he who loveth God will keep his commands.' If it behoved the Spotless One to receive the water burial, and thus 'fulfil all righteousness,' how much more needful must it be for us."

"I see now the beautiful connection of faith and obedience. Your definition and metaphor of the marriage law is good, for the Church is the Bride of Christ."

"Yes, but the simile is not mine. Christ is the Way, the Truth, and the Life; he who entereth in by the Door is of the true fold. Obedience to the ordinances of God, and the practice of pure and undefiled religion, is our duty ere we can be made 'meet for inheritance of the saints in light.' Having in view the crown of life and the effulgence of the resurrected body, we can enter into the beauty of Paul's confidence, so different from the doubting 'I hope I am a believer,' and 'I trust I am a child of God,' so much in vogue among professing Christians. Contrast them with the Apostle's 'I know in whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day.' If it could be proved, which is not the case, that our faith lacks ecstasy of feeling, it is more than counterbalanced by firm unbounded confidence. With Job we can say, 'I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand in the latter day upon the earth. And though after my skin worms destroy this body yet in my flesh, shall I see God.' Being the same as the elders', our faith is the substance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen.' And this assurance is consolatory under every adverse experience. When I go forth amongst men, and view the pride, avarice, and oppression on the one hand, and the vice, ignorance, and hatred on the other, the need for an Age of restitution is made manifest; and I long the more earnestly for the going forth of the law from Zion, which shall make equity and love the order of things. Oh for that blessed privilege of being accounted worthy to be a prince who shall decree judgment, under the King reigning in righteousness:—Oh for that period when, as a royal priest, I may lead up my people to 'Zion, the perfection of beauty,' to the Lord's holy mount, that they may be joyful in his House of Prayer. Who would not strive to come under the benediction, 'Blessed and holy is he who hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign a thousand years.' When that is instituted, then will be heard the triumphant pæan, 'The kingdoms of this world are become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of his Anointed, and he shall reign forever and ever.' What think you then, Ella: if we have to descend into the silent tomb, is there not a hope of glory at the early awakening enough to satisfy all our wishes?"

"There need be no better heaven that I can see, Alfred, and I must make it my earnest endeavor to attain thereto. I wish you were not going leave me just now, for I want much more instruction in the way of truth, and delays are dangerous."

"My dear sister, I leave you in the Word of God a better tutor than I can be. I will, however, give you a few books to read which will be useful to you in so far as they may be able to set forth the teachings of the Bible. I call them my Faith school-books. You must read diligently, and it will not be long before I return."

"I hope it will not, dear Alfred, for I am anxious to arrive at the truth of the matter. Since you so aroused my attention I have began a careful study of the Bible, instead of reading a particular portion as is the usual plan. But you know, brother, that we are all dependent upon human sympathy and help, and I think the Scriptures recognize the principle, somewhere, 'how shall they hear without a preacher?'"

"I know that man seeks counsel from man, and it is well that it is so. And therefore I wish you would try and induce cousin Edith to study with you; for I find already the reaction of the mental excitement which you remember I expected would result."

Self Inflicted Burdens.

As we are now living in the extreme end of the times of the Gentiles, when every one needs to be especially watchful, that they may be prepared to meet the coming King, it is sad to see men traveling about the country, distracting the minds of weaker ones, teaching that they should observe the seventh day Sabbath, according to the Mosaic law. It is a burden that none are able to keep. I never saw a single person who has taken that yoke upon their necks that has been able to carry it.

Peter had to meet this question of keeping the law of Moses, in the early church. He said: "Why tempt ye God, that ye should put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?"

To my mind, it is time the people were warned and placed on their guard against seventh day Sabbath preachers who substitute "the law," for the gospel, or in fact make the law the gospel. Any one can see that this is so by referring to the Sabbath Advocate of March 26. D. M. Spencer is there reported as saying: "Look for his text the 6th verse (Rom. i.) 'For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek? Showed that the same gospel saves us all: it is the power of God, and the power of God is the law." Then, according to this, no one can be saved apart from "the law," it being of itself God's power unto salvation.

Contrast this with Acts xiii. 39: "Through this man (Jesus) is proclaimed unto you remission of sins; and by him every one that believeth is justified from all things, from which he could not be justified by the law of Moses." Which of the two do you believe?

Paul says in Gal. ii. "A man is not justified by the works of the law."

"By the works of the law no flesh shall be justified."

"If righteousness is through the law then Christ died for naught."

"Righteousness is through the law," if "the power of God (unto salvation) is the law," as we have quoted from the above named paper. Paul says if it is, then "Christ died for naught."

Don't you see that this "law" business is adverse to the first principles of a saving faith. No one can deny but that the Sabbath is one of "the works of the law," and one of "the works" upon which they suspend salvation.

Paul was very much opposed to this Sabbatarian law business, he says, in Gal. iv. speaking of the law: "How turn ye back again to the weak and beggarly rudiments, where unto ye desire to be in bondage over again? Ye observe days, and months' and seasons and years. I am afraid of you lest by any means I have bestowed labor upon you in vain." This observing of "days, and months, and seasons and years," certainly covers all the Sabbaths of the Mosaic law. The "desire to be in bondage over again," made Paul feel as though his labor among them was "vain." And still they desire to go back to the observance of "days" etc., and be justified by observing some of these "works of the law."

Paul in Gal. v. 4; makes it equivalent to apostacy to trust in the law. He says: "Ye who are severed from Christ, ye would be justified by the law; ye are fallen away from grace."

Compare this with the quotation from the Advocate: "Showed that the same gospel saves us all: it is the power of God, and the power of God is the law."

One of the reasons God gave Israel why they should observe the Sabbath, was that he has delivered them from the bondage of Egypt. "Therefore (for this reason) the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath." This reason does not apply to the Gentiles, they were never in Egyptian bondage. It is far from legitimate reasoning to select our precepts of a general character from Corinthians, James, Peter, the seven churches of Asia, etc., and argue that if the reason given Israel why they should observe the Sabbath, is not applicable to Gentiles, who never were in Egyptian bondage, these precepts addressed to individuals and churches is only applicable to the parties addressed. Bible students should know better than indulge in such specious reasoning, seeing there are Bible reasons why these precepts are applicable generally, as for instance: "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches," etc.

There are plenty of precepts given Israel, in the Mosaic law, that are only applicable to that people, and only during the time the Mosaic law was in force. Jesus says: "ye have heard that it was said, thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy: but I say unto you love your enemies." "Ye have heard that it was said, an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth: but I say unto you, resist not him that is evil." "Again, ye have heard that it was said to them of old time, thou shalt not forswear thyself, but perform unto the Lord thine oaths; but I say unto you, swear not at all." The sabbath was one of those local precepts, and the reason given shows it, because the Lord delivered them from Egyptian bondage.

If it was designed to continue through the Christian dispensation, why don't the New Testament say so? There is not a single command to keep it, and no rebuke for breaking it, save where the Jews accused Jesus and his disciples of breaking it. Strange isn't it, if "the power of God (unto salvation) is the law" as Sabbatarians say. And strange again, if the Apostle Paul who was taught specially by the Lord Jesus by revelation, should say: "Ye are severed from Christ, ye who would be justified by the law." 'Ye are fallen away from grace." And is it not passing strange that if "righteousness is through the law then Christ died for naught." That is it accomplished nothing. If Israel's Sabbaths were to continue, why did God say to Hosea, that he would cause "her Sabbaths" "to cease," and not perform his word. Sabbatarians don't seem to believe he would do as he said. What is the matter? Can't you believe him?

If Israel's Sabbaths were to continue how could the Holy Spirit through Paul, say: Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a feast day or a new moon or a Sabbath day: which are a shadow of things to come?" That is one of the troubles of our day, people love to chase shadows, and no matter how fast they run, they can never catch their shadow. When that which the Sabbath shadowed is accomplished, what more do you want of it? Let the shadow go.

How can Sabbatarians say: "the same gospel saves us all; it is the power of God, and the power of God is the law," when Paul said: "Christ is the end of the law unto righteousness to every one that believeth?"

When we have come to the "end of the law," what more do you want of it?"

Don't bind a "yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear," especially when "ye are severed from Christ, ye who would be justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace."

W. H. WILSON.

Time for the Communion.

I agree with Bro. Wilson, that there is no positive law concerning time, and that it would be unwise to stir up any strife on the question. But suppose some of the brethren think and act otherwise, then what will we do? Surely Father's children by faith, should all be in harmony, especially when they come to the Lord's table to commune with the Lord and each other. And this is the time and place where the beautiful language of David is especially appropriate, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." And to be otherwise is to come under the very serious charge of the Apostle when he says to the brethren of Corinth, "For ye are yet carnal; for whereas there is among you envying and strife and divisions, are ye not carnal and walk as men?" Then as there is no positive law as to time, as all must admit, then we should naturally feel that there was latitude and liberty in the time part of this impressive duty. If this is not so, pray tell me the difference between the spirit of the law and that of the gospel. The law was very exact in all its requirements, so much so that it was in fact a burden, and a yoke of bondage, while the gospel so far as the small details of duty, as to how, when, time and place in contrast is a system of liberty, "a law of liberty." And Paul would say to us as he did to the Galatian brethren, "Ye have been called unto liberty, only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another." And again—"Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." And now for us to attempt to go back under that rigid law of bondage to get the time of the Jewish Passover, and hitch it on to the Lord's Supper, a purely gospel institution, is to say the least, to repeat the folly of our Galatian brethren, and to exhibit the realities and facts of our Master's unique Parable, when he says that men do not put a new patch on an old garment, or new wine into an old bottle. And then again, if we turn back into Egypt in search of the Jewish Passover time, that we may know when to come to the Lord's table, we must necessarily observe days and moons and times and years," and then Paul would say, "I am afraid of you lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain." And more than this, my experience and observations have taught me that it is very difficult if not impossible for us to determine, even with all our moon observations, and calculations, the exact time now, answering to the time of the Jewish Passover. And as there is no positive law on time for this gospel institution, we must necessarily go back under the pale shadow of the moon and copy after that obsolete Passover law, that met its fulfillment in Christ, or let go our annual Passover time, which will we do? You will take notice brethren, that the Master was just as careful about the where as the when, in keeping the Passover. On the evening of the fourteenth of the first Jewish month, in the city of Jerusalem he kept the Jewish Passover with his disciples, then he gave them this new communion institution in advance of his death, which was designed as the reminder of his death, as Paul says—"For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." Then as Christ did not die on the night of the Passover, our exact annual time if we could hit on it, could only correspond and memorialize the event of that eventful night, but not his death, so there is great danger in our losing the real design of this sacred institution, "Let us be careful brethren, that in our haste we do not make waste." I agree again with my Brother, that the weight of the example is in favor of the first day of the week. Acts xx. 7, leans strongly in that direction, and it is useless to try to get around it my brethren with the plea of a common meal. Paul and his companion was at Philippi at the time of the Passover and unleavened bread. Then they sailed out and reached Troas in five days, met the brethren that were waiting there, where we abode seven days. "And on the first day of the week we having assembled to break bread." Now I submit brethren, that it is entirely unreasonable to believe, that these inspired servants of God would forget to make mention of the love feast and communion season enjoyed with the brethren at Philippi some ten or twelve days previous, if such had been true, and in lieu of this, put on record for our consolation, that we met on the first day of the week to eat a common meal. Believe this, you who can. Then the record says, "And having come up and broken bread and tasting it." 11 verse Dia. Then as the good brother says, "As there is no specific law saying it must only be done once a week, "neither is there any that it must be done every week." So much the more as ye see the day approaching might find support from Acts ii. 42. And they were constantly attending to the teaching of the apostles, and to the contribution, and to the breaking of the loaf, and to the prayers. Dia. I know it is easier to say haphazzard, than it is to surmount the difficulties on the other hand, and also, that this word haphazzard has no weight in it, but is harmless in view of the liberty we have in Christ Jesus. It is not the time we are to commemorate but the event. Paul says, "For as often as you may eat this bread and drink this cup, you declare the death of the Lord till he come." Dia. Then a proper appreciation of the sacred event and worthiness on our part are the essential points for us to look after.

Submitted to the brethren in the love of truth, peace and harmony.

Uncovering of the Roof.

"And they came unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four. And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay." Mark ii. 3, 4.

The following remarks from a very excellent work throw considerable light on this interesting incident:

"In genuine Arab houses no bedsteads are used, and consequently no rooms are set apart expressly for bedrooms. Matresses are spread anywhere, in the various rooms and courts, or on the terraces, according to the season or to the convenience of the moment; and the beds and bedding are rolled up and put away in recesses made for them. Thus, with a pretty good stock of mattresses and lehaffs, a large number of guests may be entertained at a moment's notice. The room was well ventilated by two large square openings, near the ceiling, opposite to each other, one being just over the door, and the other over the recess for the mattresses. This sort of bed could easily have been carried away by the sick man of Capernaum; and if the houses of Capernaum were built like most of the present day in the towns of Palestine, the uncovering of the roof referred to in the fourth verse of the same chapter, admits of an easy explanation. The inner court of the house is usually more spacious than any of the surrounding rooms, and often there are platforms or benches of stone on each side, spread with carpets and cushions, used as divans during the day and as sleeping places at night. To such a court Christ may have retreated when the crowd increased. We may imagine him there, with the wondering people around him, and the crafty and scornful scribes seated near on the divan—all sheltered from the hot sun by a kind of matting or canvas, supported on a trellis work of tree-branches and planks, more or less secure. When the sick man was carried by his friends to the house where Christ was preaching, 'they could not come nigh to him for the press,' so they very naturally went on to the terrace or house-top, and 'uncovered the roof' of the court: that is, they removed the matting which covered it, and then they 'broke up' the trellis work and let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay. If an ordinary house-top had been broken up, the wooden beams, and masses of earth and stone of which it is composed would, in falling have endangered the lives of those below."

PLEASE write short articles. I does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill: some brother, but put lovesalve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

Announcement.

The brothers and sisters in Christ in Nebraska and elsewhere:

The time has come again to give notice of our annual meeting, which will begin, the Lord willing, Friday Sept. 6, and hold ten days. The meeting will be held at St. Paul, Nebraska. St. Paul is so located as to give every one a chance to attend. Now brethren, how many will commence at once to make arrangements to be present and enjoy ten days of blessed communion with those of like precious faith. Brethren, lay aside the duties of life for a short season and come to the meeting and go home feeling that you have lost nothing, but gained much. Those who have never attended before, come and enjoy a feast in the name of the Lord. Again we say, Come one and all. We need your presence that we may be encouraged by hearing your voices in praise and song. We need your counsel. How much are we interested in the good cause of truth? We show our faith by our works. There may be some brother or sister that cannot leave home, but you can go to some brother or sister that can and say to them, "You go and I will see to your home affairs while you are away." Would that not be brotherly and working for the Master? We must get in earnest. The Lord is coming soon. Will we be found at work? Do not say you can't come, but put your trust in God.

St. Paul is twenty-two miles north of Grand Island at the junction of the B. & M. and the Union Pacific R. R. You will receive a hearty welcome by the brethren there. All who can, bring tents; and those who cannot will be provided for by the committee. There will be stoves and fuel on the grounds, and pasturage for teams and everything in order for those coming from a distance. For any further information address W. L. Crowe, St. Paul, Nebraska. Again we say, Come and enjoy another good meeting before the Lord comes. Good speakers will be in attendance and an interesting programme issued. Committee,

ALMUS ADAMS,
W. L. CROWE,
RENA GORDON.

The brethren and sisters of the Abrahamic faith of Illinois will meet in conference at Lanark, Ill., Sept. 6, 7 and 8, 1895. An urgent call is made for general attendance, at least that each church in the district will be represented by a delegate to voice the Church in the selection and possible election of an evangelist for the coming year.

J. M. GLOTFELTY, Chairman.

The Annual Conference for the State of Indiana will be held at Argos, Indiana, beginning on Friday Sept. 20, 1895. Argos is on the Michigan City branch of the L. E. & W. W. R. R., and Nickel Plate R. R. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Come with a determination to make this meeting a season of rejoicing in the truth. Don't cumber yourselves with unnecessary baggage, if you have a "hobby," little or big please leave it at home, it will keep until you return, but come loaded down with gospel truth and filled to overflowing with love to God and your fellowmen, and God will do the rest.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec.

The Northwest Conference of the Church of God will be held at the Lake Shore school house, six miles north of Vancouver, Wash., beginning Friday evening Sept. 20th and holding over the following Sunday Sept. 22, 1895. All brethren and sisters from a distance are cordially invited to come. If any one wishes to come who has no means of conveyance, come to Vancouver and inquire for N. Secrest feed store which is on Main Street. Teams will meet you there to convey you to Lake Shore where the brethren will welcome all who may come. Preaching by Brothers Prosser, Groat, Skeels and others. We hope to have another good meeting. It is the best enjoyment many of us have in this life, so come all that can and help to make this our annual conference as interesting as possible. Yours in hope of eternal life.

MARIE THURSELL, Sec.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

G. A. R. AT LOUISVILLE.

The rate to Louisville, Ky., for the Twenty-ninth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be based on One Cent per Mile from Ticket Stations on the Pennsylvania Lines. Excursion tickets will be sold at that rate September 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th, 1895. The return limit will cover sufficient time for an extended sojourn, and will be ample for side trips. Southern Railways are expected to make special rates to historic places, and to commercial and industrial centers, enabling visitors to see the South at slight expense. Low rates have already been arranged for the Chickamauga National Military Park dedication which takes place shortly after the Encampment at Louisville closes. Excursion tickets to Chattanooga for the dedication will be sold over Pennsylvania Lines Sept. 16th to 19th, inclusive.

Special arrangements may be made by Posts desiring to go in a body, or parties of friends wishing to travel together can be satisfactorily accomodated if they will kindly make their wants known to the undersigned. Valuable information will be cheerfully furnished applicants, and any required aid in shaping details will be promptly extended. It will pay to investigate. C. L. KIMBALL, Ass't Gen'l Passenger Agent, Cleavland, Ohio.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 11, 1895. NO. 34.

Poetry.

"My Candle Will Soon Be Out."

The hour was late, and the night was dark,
The blast was severely keen;
While, wrapped in gloom, in a dismal room,
A woman at work was seen.
And as she plied her needle, she eyed
Her glimmer with anxious doubt;
And, faint and sick, said, "I must be quick,
My candle will soon be out."

O man of God! by the burial clod,
Which soon may be turned for thee;
By life's brief stay, by the judgment day,
By time, by eternity,
With every nerve thy Redeemer serve,
And spend not a day without
Striving to win precious souls from sin,
For thy candle will soon be out.

Thy Master's course, till he reached the cross,
Was one of incessant toil;
He bore thy woes, he subdued thy foes,
That thou mightest share thy spoil.
To do God's will, his law to fulfill,
He constantly went about;
With every power he improved each hour,
As his candle would soon be out.

Be stirred my soul, thou art near thy goal,
Time flies on the swiftest wing;
Work while 'tis day, and in every way
Thy powers into action bring.
Let my life be bright as a shining light,
My spirit like Christ's, devout;
My days are few, there is much to do,
My candle will soon be out.

O sinner! think of the feeble link
Which holds thee above the grave;
If that should snap—oh, woeful mishap—
No power thy soul could save.
Hell is the end to which sinners tend,
And short is the longest route;
Weigh well thy fate, ere it be too late,
The candle will soon be out.

Whate'er you be, you will shortly see
The Judge of the earth appear.
Now, now be wise, for the dread assize,
The day of the Lord, is near.
To fix your fate in a changeless state,
The Lord will descend with a shout;
O seek his face in this day of grace,
For your candle will soon be out.

News from Jerusalem. No. 4.

Our Jerusalem Colony now visiting in Chicago, are in constant communication with fellow members in the Holy City. Tidings come to them of an encouraging nature. God is marvelously fulfilling his Prophetic Word.

They received a bounteous rain on the 9th of June, something that never occurred since the banishment of Israel, and some say never occurred during the entire history of that people. God has given therein according to his promise, and with it has come the blessings of a bounteous harvests.

You will doubtless remember the report with regard to the fruitfulness of the country brought by the two spies before Israel entered the land under Joshua. The same fertility under the blessing of God, is now returning to the land. Mrs. Whitney tells us that they have just such bunches of grapes now as the spies brought with them from Eschol, and that the orange export from Joppa is simply immense.

She mentioned an interesting incident while exhibiting a photograph of the Jewish wailing place of the temple site. Visitors place a nail between the stones, and then claim that they own a nail in the temple wall. In connection with this she read to us Ezra ix. 8: "And now for a little space grace hath been showed from the Lord our God, to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us a nail in his holy place, that our God may lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage." They feel it a pleasure to own "a nail in his holy place," as expressed in the language to "give us a little reviving in our bondage."

Mr. Eliahu says much news published in papers with regard to Jerusalem is unreliable. He referred to a lengthy article published in Harper's Weekly, in which the writer claimed there was an entire absence of things which go to make up a modern European city. The writer claimed that Jerusalem had no papers, no printing presses, no concert halls, no dances, no brass bands, and no beer gardens, etc.

Mr. Eliahu says they have papers, and also printing presses, concert halls, lecture rooms, brass bands, and he says to my sorrow I say we have beer gardens also. The members of this colony are a thoroughly reliable people, and news from them can be received as unquestionably truthful.

They expect soon to return to the Holy Land, when I expect from time to time to receive news from them. In giving this news, they don't do it for money, nor that any one else should make money by it, but that God may be glorified, and the truth told.

Myself and family recently enjoyed a visit from these people at our home in Austin, Ill., when they took tea with us, and together spent an enjoyable evening in conversation about matters relating to Jerusalem and the Holy Land. They exhibited to us some more of those interesting relics so intimately interwoven with the history of Israel. They showed us some reed pipes which shepherd lads play upon as they watch their flock graze upon the green hills and vales of Palestine. This carried us back to the time when David, as a little shepherd lad watched his flocks, as these boys do, and perhaps played upon these same reed pipes? and afterward became the sweet poet and singer of Israel. What an astonishment it must have been to the prophet, when all the probably splendid sons of Jesse were passed by, and to outward appearances an insignificant shepherd lad was chosen to be anointed King of Israel? This teaches us the lesson that God does not look upon the comely appearance of the person, but to the pure in heart.

They also showed us a sling one of these boys made from wool taken from the sheep. These boys become quite expert in the use of the sling. David at the time he was a shepherd became skillful with the sling, and it was from one of these he made the proud Goliah who defied the armies of the living God, bite the dust.

They also exhibited to us a model of the mill stones by which the women grind wheat for bread, and in this connection gave us an insight into the domestic life of these people. How forcibly it reminded us of the Savior's words, two women shall be grinding at the mill, one shall be taken and the other left. The separating time hasteth greatly. May God grant that none of us may be "left." Watch self.

We have to thank them for the gift of a model of a plow used in that country. This reminded us of the happy time when the plowman should overtake the reaper, and the mountains drop down sweet wine.

We received also a clay model of the tomb showing the rolling stone. Who shall roll us away the stone?

We also received some nuts or beans such as Jacob sent to Esau, when he wanted to make friends with his brother.

My wife being fond of floral culture was presented with a card of natural flowers gathered in this Holy City, pressed and arranged in artistic style upon a card. She was also given flower seed and a bulb of the lillie species, which she has planted. If the bloom of these shall smile upon us, may we be reminded of the time when streams shall break forth in the wilderness and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. There is a glorious time coming, when all nature will clothe the earth with beauty, and the heart of man made glad, in these gifts of a generous Creator.

Mrs. Spafford recently addressed the Chicago Church taking for her topic "The Root of Christianity." This root is found clearly exemplified in 1 Cor. xiii., where the principle of love is shown must be the vitalizing power of faith, and found in every element of Christian work and practice, that is acceptable to God, which in its work results in producing a unity. It unites every member of the Household of Faith who acts upon this principle, in sweet bonds of affection that nothing can sever. The Father and Son being in that unity, so all loving children are united in the same holy compact. Oh, what a glorious union! Do you belong to it, dear reader? How much better is the above explanation of unity, than the nonsensical jargon of trinitarians who insist that it requires three gods to make one, and make the grand unity of John xvii., begin and end with that?

As we see from news from the Holy Land that all that prophets of old have predicted is nearing culmination, I am deeply impressed with the necessity that believers should strive more and more to live a holy and pure life. Are we sure that we can appear before the Savior in confidence? Let us each examine our own heart in this matter. We are perfectly sure that we have no more time to waste on follies. We need to improve every moment as it flies. I have studied the prophetic Word a great deal, and these are honest conclusions I have arrived at from that study, and nearly every fellow student arrives at the same conclusion. "Oh! I long for the time that the future shall see,
When the underchief shown shall have bars into day;
And men, from his tyrants forever set free,
Shall have swept superstition and priest-craft away."

PSALM. 81.

82 COM. VER.

1. Asaph's psalm. God standeth in a synagogue of gods—and in their midst he judgeth gods discriminatively.

2. How long are ye going to judge unjustly and take the faces of obdurate-sinners?

3. Judge ye the orphan and the beggar (God's poor); justify the lowly and the needy:

4. Deliver the needy, and snatch the beggar out of the hand of the obdurate-sinner.

5. They have not comprehended nor understood; they are going their way through in darkness; all the foundations of the earth will have been shaken.

6. I have said ye were all sons of a Most High:

7. But ye are dying-judicially like men as it were, and falling like one of the rulers.

8. Arise, O God, judge the earth, because thou wilt inherit among all the nations.

PSALM 82 (83 COM. VER.)

1. Asaph's ode for a psalm.

2. O God, who will have been likened unto thee: Do not be silent nor show propitiation, O God;

3. Because lo, thine enemies have resounded and those who hate thee have exalted their head,

4. They have expressed a vilainous opinion of thy laity and have taken counsel against thy saints.

5. They have said, Come, let us utterly, destroy them from being a nation, and the name of Israel shall no longer be remembered.

6. Because they have counseled together in unanimity of mind, they have covenanted against thy covenant.

7. Namely the tents of the Idonmians and the Ismaelites, Moab and the Agarenians,

8. Gebal and Ammon and Amalek and other tribes with the dwellers of Tura (Tyre).

9. Yea indeed, Assour also hath entered into alliance with them and hath intervened for the sons of Lot. Interlude.

10. Mayest thou have done to them as unto Madiam and Seisara, as unto Jabein in the valley of Keison.

11. They were destroyed in Aendor, they became as it were dung for the earth;

12. Dispose of their rulers as thou didst of Oreb and Zeb and Zebee and Salmana, all their rulers,

13. Who said, let us inherit for ourselves the altar of God.

14. O my God, make them a wheel as it were; a reed before the face of the wind.

15. Just as fire will flame through a forest, as a flame will devastate mountains,

16. Even so wilt thou pursue after them with thy cyclone and in thy wrath wilt thou terrify them:

17. Fill their faces with dishonor, and they will seek thy name, O Lord,

18. May they have been put to shame and terrified unto the age of the age (is it forever here?) and may they have been confounded and lost.

19. And may they have comprehended that thy name is Lord, that thou alone art Most High over all the earth.

PSALM 83 (84 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; Concerning the wine-presses; For the sons of Kore, a psalm.

2. How beloved are thy tabernacles, O Lord of the hosts,

3. My soul longeth and fainteth for the courts of the Lord; My heart and my flesh have been made glad in a living God.

4. Yea indeed, a sparrow hath found a house for herself and a dove a nest for herself where she can place her own young thine altars namely, O Lord of the hosts, my King and my God.

5. Blessed-happy are they who take up their abode in thy house; For the ages of the ages will they praise thee. Interlude.

6. Blessed-happy is the man whose interventional-help is from thee, O Lord; steps-upward hath he covenanted with his heart,

7. In the valley of the lamentation in the place which he hath appointed. Yea indeed, the lawgiver will give blessings.

8. They will go their way from ability to ability; The God of the gods will have appeared in Sion.

9. O Lord God of hosts, hear my votive-prayer, may the God of Jakob have lent his ear. Interlude.

10. See O God our protector, and look upon the face of thy Christ (Anointed).

11. Because better is a day in thy courts than thousands; I would rather be scorned in the house of God than take up my abode in the tents of obdurate-sinners.

12. Because the Lord loveth mercy and truth; God will give you grace and glory. The Lord will not deprive of the good things those who go their way in guilelessness.

13. O Lord of the hosts, blessed-happy is the man who hopeth in thee.

PSALM 84 (85 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; For the sons of Kore; a psalm.

2. Thou art satisfied, O Lord, with land; thou hast turned back the captivity of Jakob;

3. Thou hast remitted their transgressions to thy laity; thou hast covered all their sins. Interlude.

4. Thou hast caused all thy wrath to cease; Thou hast turned away from the wrath of thine anger.

5. Turn unto us O God of our instrumentalities to save, and turn away thine anger from us.

6. Thou will not be wrathful with us forever wilt thou, or extend thy wrath from generation to generation?

7. O God, thou wilt turn unto us and make us to live, and thy laity will have rejoiced in thee.

8. Show unto us, O Lord, thy mercy and give unto us thy instrumental-salvation.

9. I shall hear what the Lord God will say in me (in the use of him as a mouth-piece), because he will talk peace unto his laity and unto his holy ones and unto those who turn their heart unto him.

10. Yea, nigh unto those who fear him is his instrumental-salvation to pitch the tabernacle of his glory in our land (or earth).

11. Mercy and truth have met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other:

12. Truth hath sprung up from out the earth, and righteousness hath stooped down from out the heavens.

13. Yea indeed, the Lord will give useful-goodness, and our land (or earth) will yield its fruit.

14. Righteousness will go in its way before him and direct his steps into a way.

PSALM 85 (86 COM. VER.)

1. David's votive-prayer. Incline thine ear, O Lord, and hearken unto me, because I am a beggar and a needy one, am I.

2. Watch to guard my soul, because I am a holy one; save thy bond-servant, O God, who hopeth in thee.

3. Have mercy on me, O Lord, because unto thee shall I have cried all the day long.

4. Rejoice the soul of thy bond-servant, because unto thee have I lifted up my soul.

5. Because thou, O Lord, art useful-good and forbearing and very merciful unto all those who invoke thee.

6. Mark well my votive-prayer, O Lord, and heed the voice of my supplication.

7. In my day of tribulation did I cry unto thee, because thou hast hearkened unto me.

8. There is no one like unto thee among gods, O Lord, and there is not according to thy works.

9. All the nations which thou hast created will come and worship (do homage) before thee, O Lord, and will glory thy name.

10. Because great art thou and one who doeth wonders: Thou art the only great God.

11. Guide me, O Lord, in thy way, and I shall go my way in thy truth; May my heart have rejoiced in fearing thy name.

12. I shall (or will) confess unto thee, O Lord my God, with all my heart, and glorify my name forever.

13. Because thy mercy toward me is great and thou hast snatched my soul out of a lowest Hades (grave).

14. O God evaders of law arose against me and a synagogue of controlling ones sought my soul, and did not set thee before their eyes,

15. And thou, O Lord God, art pitiful and merciful, forbearing and very merciful and truthful.

16. Look upon me and have mercy upon me; give thy controlling-power to thy house-servant (born in the house) and save the son of thy house-maid.

17. Cause a sign in relation to me for good, and may those who hate me have seen and been put to shame, because thou O Lord, hast succored and helped me.

PSALM 86 (87 COM. VER.)

1. For the sons of Kore; a psalm for an ode. His foundations are on the sacred mountains.

2. The Lord loveth the gateways of Sion more than all habitations of Jakob.

3. He hath spoken glorious things concerning thee, thou city of God. Interlude.

4. I shall have remembered Hrnab and those of Babulon who know me; and lo other tribes and Turos (Tyre) and a laity of Aithiopeans, these have been born there.

5. Mother Sion will man say, and man hath been born therein, and the Most High hath founded her.

6. The Lord will discourse in Scripture of laities and these rulers who have been born therein. Interlude. The dwelling in thee is as it were of all those who rejoice.

COMMENT.

The 81st psalm, as its number would indicate is a resurrectional psalm at least so far as one person is concerned and this one is Christ, as appears in the 9th or last verse. The word here translated "arise" is "ministent" Christ himself quotes from this psalm in justification of his assuming to be "a Son of God" when they take up stones to stone him for blasphemy for making this claim, quoting the first clause of the sixth verse and adding "the Scriptures cannot be broken." The fifth verse is as it were a divine soliloquy and a prophecy. The first four verses divine instruction in righteousness. The whole psalm is a wonderfully significant oracular word, and singularly tampered with both in the Com. Ver. and R. V.

The 82nd psalm is also by number a resurrectional and being a "two" is significant of the attitude of the ekklesia expressing judgment on the enemies of their God. In doing this of course a succinct review is given of the specific sins of these enemies both against the Most High and his laity Israel in the restricted sense, and being an "ode" it is properly expressive of Israel's judgment as a nation upon the sins of these other nations here enumerated. The final assertion of God's Lordship is the prayer and "great consummation" of the 10th verse, with which the psalm closes appropriately too in its numerical import.

The 83rd psalm is also "a resurrectional" with the same general heading as the eighth "Unto the end; Concerning the wine-presses; For the sons of Kore" (the temple choir). The authorship is not given; But the "ear-marks" of style etc. are David's. The psalm opens with the expression of spiritual longings for the promised glory and rest that awaits his people. The resurrectional import begins to be apparent in the 6th verse grows stronger in the 7th and culminates in the promised presence in the 8th. The 9th and 10th is a votive-prayer of Israel for God's Anointed. The 11th and 12th a prayer of praise. The last clause of the 12th and 13th verse prophetic-teaching. The psalm is and always has been a comforting assurance to the faithful in the Christian Church.

The 84th psalm we would expect from the number to emphasize resurrectional-judgment, and this becomes evident in the 2nd verse, "Thou art satisfied, O Lord with thy land; Thou hast turned back the captivity of Jakob." The 3d, 4th and 5th verses make this still more evident. The 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th verses are a votive-prayer of God's people for this blessing seen in vision just before. Observe the "Instrumental-Salvation" emphasized in the 8th verse. Again the same in the 10th verse. Notice the wonderfully beautiful figures in the 11th and 12 verses used to express the coming glory. The 13th and 14th verses are very significant in the way of prophetic teaching and the whole psalm as we intimated at the outset treats of righteous judgment and the blessedness that will attend it; but necessarily a post-resurrectional consequence of redemption.

The 85th psalm is David's votive-prayer offered in the spirit of Christ and is an epitome of the Christ's experience in his great work of redemption. Being a "fifth" the minor strain runs through it though the key is a major octave and resurrectional in its import of coming victory and glory as brought out in the 10th verse. Notice the contrast between this psalm and the next, the 86th in this regard. Numerically the 86th is a full-major and observe the march of triumphant assurance running through it from first to last. Not a halting-step to the clash of the 6th verse following the interlude of instrumental preparation for its

A wonderful psalm in its prophetic assurance is the 88th one of Israel's "odes" of national glory that they refused to sing in Babylon, when taunted by their oppressors. "Sing us one of your odes now."

CHAS. GARDNER.

The Restitution.

THE RESURRECTION and restoration the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a scriptural baptism of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Selected.

The Temple of Diana.

Whatever contains information respecting persons or places mentioned in the New Testament, and especially in connection with the life of our blessed Savior or the personal labours of the Apostles, can hardly fail to interest the Christian reader. The temple of Diana at Ephesus has an important connection with the history of Paul.

This temple was built, as Pliny says on a soft foundation, to guard aginst earthquakes. The foundation, therefore, was laid in a swamp; wool and charcoal were interposed to absorb the wet, and the arches form a subtetranean labyrinth, in which the water stagnates; all which is at the present day. The superstructure bears all the evidence of an edifice which was destroyed eight times and took two hundred and eighty years in building. It now consists of several walls of immense blocks of marble, the front of which is perforated with small cavities, into which were sunk the shanks of the brass and silver plates, with which the walls were faced. In several places where the walls have fallen they have exposed cornices and mouldings of a former edifice against which the newer walls have been built up.

Some of the vast porphyry pillars which formed the front portico still lie prostrate before it; but others were brought by Constantine to his new city, Constantinople. The heathen temple was dilapidated to build the Christian church Santa Sophia, in which these pillars have again become the great support of a anti-Christian edifice. But the most interesting circumstance of this building to me is the great illustration it gives to the Acts of the Apostles. Here is the place where St. Paul excited the commotion among the silver and brass-smiths, who worked for the temple, and over the way was the theater, into which the people rushed carrying with them Gaius and Aristarches, Paul's companions. Hence they got a view of the magnificent front of the temple, which they pointed out as that "which all Asia worshipped," and in their enthusiasm they cried out, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!"

Lord Bacon said: "There is no comparison between that which we may lose by not trying, and by not succeeding; since by not trying we throw away the chance of an immense good, and by not succeeding we only incur the loss of a little human labor."

It has been well said, "Life for God consists in doing the right before us in a godly spirit, with humble fidelity to God." This needs repetition frequently in a world just now somewhat given to reaching over the duty right before us to find some great thing to be done.

The time to come is no more ours than the time past.

☛ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

THE Asiatic Plague is making heavy inroads among the Japanese; but they are making plans for naval extension on a gigantic scale.

A COUNSEL for naval defense is to be established in England on the retirement of the Duke of Cambridge, so as to concentrate all the forces of the admiralty and war office. They see trouble ahead.

IT seems that Lord Salisbury's demand on Turkey for reforms in Armenia are so imperative that the Sultan has appealed to France and Russia to use their influence with England to modify her demands.

THE Irishmen in America have started a new movement looking toward the complete independence of that unhappy country. Since the overthrow of the Liberal government in England they see no hope except from a physical attack. With this object in view an era of agitation has been inaugurated.

CHEER up, writing ones; every move upon the political chess board tends to confirm the outline of God's purposes we have embraced. We must be ever on the outlook. Passing events are becoming intensely interesting to God's adopted children. The Lord may soon call for those who are his. To be ready is the great desideratum.

RUSSIA has caused quite a ripple throughout Europe by a present of 80,000 modern rifles, 15,000,000 cartridges, rapid-fire guns, and ammunition to Montenegro. In some quarters the Czar's action is looked upon as a menace to the peace of Europe, and that Russia intends to complete Montenegro's preparations for war by the time she herself is ready for action. A diplomat of high standing in an interview has said that while he did not believe war was imminent, he thought it more of a possibility now than at any time during the last six years.

POPE Pius VII. in his bull, in 1816 denounced the Bible Society and expressed himself "shocked" by the circulation of the Scriptures, which he characterized as a most crafty device, by which the very foundations of religion are undermined;" "a pestilence" which it behooved "to remedy and abolish," "a defilement of the faith, eminently dangerous to souls." In America Satolli, the papal legate tells the people to "go forward bearing in one hand the book of Christian truth—the Bible, and in the other the constitution of the United States. In Roman Catholic countries the Word of God is still a forbidden book!

THE famous protest of the German princes at Spires, April 12, 1529 was as follows: "There is no sure doctrine but such as is conformable to the Word of God.' 'The Lord forbids the teaching of any other doctrine.' 'Each text of the Holy Scriptures ought to be explained by other and clearer texts.' This Holy Book is in all things necessary for the Christian, easy of understanding, and calculated to scatter the darkness; we are resolved, with the grace of God, to maintain the pure and exclusive preaching of his only Word, such as is contained in the Biblical books of the Old and New Testaments, without adding anything thereto that may be contrary to it. The Word is the only truth; it is the sure rule of all doctrine and of all life, and can never fail or deceive us. He who builds on this foundation shall stand against all the powers of hell, whilst all the human vanities that are set up against it shall fall before the face of God."

Looking for the Spirit of Christ.

Rev. A. A. Knight of the Euclid Avenue Disciple Church, Cleveland, said yesterday, (Sept. 1,) "The attitude of society today, is a looking for the coming of Christ, and his coming is the need of labor. The early disciples were looking for the coming of the personal Christ, while the world of today is looking for the coming of the spirit of Christ in all its various institutions."

A singular utterance surely. Is it true? It is ours to us that society is looking for the spirit of Christ to come. What do they want with a spirit they are wholly hostile to? Does not the Scripture which says those who have not the spirit of Christ are none of his, teach that men are responsible for the spirits absence? What folly to say society is looking for the Spirit of Christ to come into all the various institutions, when neither Christ nor God is in all their thoughts! Society and the world are one, and the speaker ought to know that the world is arranged against God and his Son. Suppose it were true that society was looking for the Spirit of Christ to come, is society wiser than the early disciples whom he admits looked for his personal coming? They heard him say, "If I go away I will come again," and heard the men in white say, This same Jesus shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." What else could they look for, but a personal coming? Has society received a private dispatch announcing a change of the divine programme? Has the Blessed Lord tired of speaking to the members of his body, and made a confident of the world. Think of the Rev. Gentleman speaking of the expectation of early Disciples, and then those of the world, or society as if all stood upon the same level and had equal grounds for their hope, one personal, and the other spiritual! Wonder if society has ever considered what would become of it, if the spirit of Christ should come and pervade all its institutions! How much of Jehovah's Purpose in regard to man and earth does he understand who mixes things up after this fashion? Did the speaker never read Jesus comparison of Noah's age with that of the age when he comes again? If not, he had better do so if he would know the truth regarding the expectations of society.

The Religious Status.

Dr. Wharton, in his address of welcome to the National Baptist Young Peoples Union Association at Baltimore July 18th, speaking of the condition of the Baptists said, "Westminister buries her people under the aisles of the church: we are content to have our dead sit in the pews. Life is what we want, and life more abundantly for which Jesus came into this world."

This last sentence was doubtless truer than the doctor realized. Life more abundantly is precisely what they need; but what follows proves that he understood religious fervor and zeal to be the life Jesus came to impart, instead of an unending existence beyond death and the grave. He appeals to his audience after this fashion: "Young men and women, go stand in the valley of dry bones and prophecy unto them while you beseech heaven to breathe upon the lifeless ones. Your energy, young people, is what is needed. The salt has lost its savor, the lights has well nigh gone out. We look to you, God bless you, to seize the flag now falling from the nerveless grasp of the feeble, flattering church, and rush forth to conflict and to victory."

The truth will out at times; the foregoing describes the religious status of one of the great bodies who have been promising to convert the world. And now, when iniquity rolls down our streets as never before, and the rural districts, where we have been accustomed to find simpler and purer lives, seem to vie with crowded cities for supremacy in every diabolical crime, yes; at such a juncture as this, the church, so called, is utterly useless, and the only recourse is to an outside organization of young people. If after all the boasting and promising they cannot begin to stem the tide of iniquity, and find the members slumbering on as if there was nothing the matter, they do not discover somewhat of Jehovah's programme in reference to man and earth, and that they have set aside God's converting and saving power, it must be that they are abandoned to the belief of lies (2 Thess. ii. 11, 12) so that condemnation may overtake them. Foster's History of this particular body shows that they once held vital truth-Gospel truth-but they are now one with apostate christendom, having no faith in the kingdom God offers, no use for a resurrection to life by Jesus, and utterly ignorant of God's law of pardon, or else rejectors of it. No wonder they are dead. They have starved to death spiritually while bread of life is freely offered.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

As we are told in the first chapter of Romans that the gospel of Christ is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth," it must be very essential to know what that gospel is! In Matt. iv. 23 we read that "Christ went about all Galilee, preaching the Gospel;" and in Mark xvi. 15 that he commanded his disciples to "go into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," which clearly shows that it is something necessary to be believed. What then, is the gospel? It must be something of vast importance because Christ in the 16th of Mark says, "He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be condemned." Did he not say (Luke iv. 43) "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also, for therefore am I sent?" Did he not style this the gospel of the kingdom in Matt. ix. 35, and Mark i. 14? Here, then, we have the answer to the important question as to what the gospel is:—"The glad tidings of the kingdom of God." Luke viii. 1. We find full particulars about this kingdom in the prophets, particularly in Daniel. We are told in chapter ii. 44 "that the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed;" and in the 18th verse of the 7th chapter, that "the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom for ever even forever and ever." Furthermore, we are told at the 27th verse that this kingdom shall be under the whole heaven." Is it not clear, then, that this kingdom shall be on the earth? And is not Daniel in perfect harmony with Jeremiah, who says, (chap. iii. 17) "They shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord?" and with Isaiah, who declares chapter xxiv. 23, "The Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem?" And with Zechariah, chap. xiv. 9, where he testifies to the same truth in these words, "The Lord shall be king over all the earth."

And who that has given the subject the attention it deserves, can deny that the whole tenor of Scripture teaching is that the meek shall inherit the earth, Matt. v. 5; Psa. xxxvii. 11? And that "The kingdoms of this world (not some other world), are to become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever? Rev. xi. 15. Whoever will glance over the New Testament teaching on this subject will find it thoroughly interwoven with the same doctrine. For instance we find Christ himself exhorting his disciples, to "Seek first, the kingdom of God and his righteousness," Matt. vi. 33: and he taught them to pray for its coming, Matt. vi. 10, saying, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." And in Rev. v. 10 we have the redeemed out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nation, represented as singing a new song, saying, "Thou hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth."

The kingdom of God is not now in existence, for the Nobleman who went away to the far country to receive for himself a kingdom, (Luke xix. 12) has not yet returned. When he comes, the promise made through Mary, (Luke i. 32) will be fully realized, "And the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Oh, what a glorious time that will be, when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Is. xi. 9. Then the Lord shall go forth out of Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem," Micah iv. 2, "and the Lord of Hosts shall reign before his ancients gloriously." Is. xxiv. 23.

We are every day pained to see thousands spending their money for that which is not bread—bread of life we mean—trusting in the dreams and speculations of men as mortal and fallible as themselves, and hoping for what has never been promised. Would to God they could be induced to take the references given above and examine the context of each, and see if anything but what the words say, can be the Spirit's meaning. We are thinking of some very dear to us who feel all the time upon chaff and husks and neglect the pure wheat. Would to God they could realize the true position of those who are aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers to the covenants of promise. They may see the fearful words of the Spirit which depict the position or conditions of all such by reference to Ephesians ii. 12. They are without hope and without God in the world. Would to God this Scripture may clear the mental vision of some self deluded ones sufficiently to enable them to get the God-idea of Rom. x. 17, that "faith cometh by hearing the Word of God." This is said only of saving, or justifying faith: and the Word of God necessary to justifying faith is that containing the covenants of promise made to Abraham and other fathers of the Hebrew nation. If Eph. ii. 12 be read in connection with Rom. x. 17 this conclusion will not be avoided by any intelligent and honest mind. People can exercise faith in what they please, of course, but only the belief of what God covenants to give, is reckoned to man for righteousness, Have faith in God.

A Bold Step.

The Cleveland papers of Aug. 28, contained nearly a column article with a large, displayed head, saying, "A Bold step! Bars let down by a Disciple Church. Several persons received into membership without Baptism by immersion. Opposing Views held by communicants at the same Table," etc. It was well put. It was a bold step, in one sense. At first a feeling of surprise and regret stole over us; but this soon passed off. The impression that it was backward progress gave place to the idea that it was all right. Forty years ago the followers of Alexander Campbell were a Bible searching people, and they were a terror to average members of other denominations because they seemed to realize that God had really spoken to us in the language of men and intended us to understand that he meant what the words indicated. The result was that they came very near to getting the God-idea on several important points that others were terribly befogged upon, and waged an aggressive warfare against them.

One of these points was, Baptism for remission of sins. They held that baptism meant immersion in water,—a burial. As this act of obedience was held to be in order to remission of past sin,—it practically isolated them from all the popular churches, and doubtless had to suffer somewhat for their temerity. In course of time, however they used more discretion, and did not press their peculiar tenets quite so hard; and by and by their ministers were occasionally found on platforms with those of other denominations; and at other times Disciples would call upon these unpardoned, (because not immersed) ministers to offer prayer, and would seem to say that perhaps after all, the Lord has pardoned them without consulting them, or that peradventure he may occasionally suspend the published law of pardon, and so the wall of partition was gradually removed, and they were no longer under the religious ban.

When we thought of all this, we concluded it was well to let down the remaining bar. If unbaptized preachers were considered Christians why could not any others. We feel rather glad that this step has been taken, because Jesus said the gospel of the kingdom should be preached, and that believers of that gospel should be baptized,—and then they would be saved. But although God had for ages been promising to set up a kingdom on this earth, that should destroy all human governments and stand forever; and be inherited by his saints, the Disciples rejected all this divine testimony and accepted only the three facts of the death, burial and resurrection of Christ as the gospel. True, these facts are essential parts of the gospel of the kingdom, because they exhibit the means of obtaining life after death to enable men to inherit the kingdom promised. They reject the kingdom and therefore the life would be of no account to them if they could obtain it.

The point is clearly made, then, baptism was of no account to these disciples because they had not believed the gospel of the kingdom which makes men fit subjects for baptism. And not being fit subjects for baptism their sins were not remitted when that act was performed. They were baptized into the Disciple church instead of into the sin-covering name of Jesus. Nor is this all that makes them ineligible for baptism. Christ says that he came that we may have life, says "Because I live, ye shall live also," speaking to his disciples. Suppose one of those addressed had said to him that he was immortal and would live as long as God lived, in any event, would Christ force an everliving nature upon one who would thus rob him of the honor of bringing life and immortality to light: and denying that he was the resurrection and the life? No, indeed: it is those who believe in him that he promises to raise up to the everlasting life at the last day. No one who claims to be immortal by nature believes in Jesus. To believe in him is to believe in him as the way way to life; and the life, and the very embodiment of the Truth of God. Not to accept him as their life is to reject him as the Savior, for we repeat his words: "I am come, that they might have life."

But even this is not all the mutilation of the gospel they are guilty of. Nothing is plainer revealed than the fact that the church is Christ's body; and that every member of his body is a joint-heir with him to the kingdom of God. "Fear not little flock," said Jesus, "it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." And says James, "Hearken my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and the heirs of the kingdom which he has promised to them that love him?" And does not Jesus again say in the 25th of Matt. that when he comes in power and great glory and seats himself upon his throne, that he will say to these rich in faith ones, "Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world?" He certainly did. And yet in the face of all this and a hundred times more testimony, the Disciples say the Church is the kingdom—so practically saying that the church is to inherit the church—is to inherit itself. This is too ridiculous a thing to be tolerated in temporal matters, but it is readily swallowed by those who feed on the traditions which have supplanted and nullified the gospel of the kingdom.

It is not such a bold thing after all for them to admit members without immersion,—immersion to be of virtue must follow faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God as well as of Jesus Anointed. As the gospel they teach is a mutilated gospel, baptism is of no avail. They adopted the ordinance which belongs to the gospel of Christ and left the gospel out. We hold that the Disciples, or their founder, established a system of their own, and have a right to modify it whenever it seems to them to have outlived its usefulness, or they want a change. The serious part of it is, however, that while they make these changes themselves they delude the people by palming off this changeable system as that of God's instead of their own.

Correction.

Since the notice of the Northwest Conference of Oregon and Washington was sent for publication different arrangements have been made. It is thought best to have said conference on the 18, 19, and 20th of Oct., instead of Sept., as stated before, which will be the Friday before the third Sunday, at Lake Shore, as before stated.

Editor Restitution:

After some 25 years of labor and toil, with many sorrows and many seasons of rejoicing, I will at last say farewell to one and all. I regret it very much that we will have to part, perhaps never more to meet on this side of the resurrection. Paul said to the brethren at Troas, that he had kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you from house and taught you publicly also." I am now going to Tempe, Arizona, bound in the spirit, not knowing the things that may befall me. None of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I may win Christ, and finish my course with joy, and complete the work that the Lord hath for me to do. To you among whom I have been preaching the kingdom of God, and shall see my face no more, wherefore I take you to record this day that I am pure from the blood of all men, for I have not shunned to declare the whole counsel of God. Take heed, therefore unto yourselves and to all the flock over the which the Holy Spirit hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departure shall grievous wolves enter in among you not sparing the flock. Also of your ownselves shall men arise, speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them. Therefore, watch! Brethren I commend you to God and the Word of his grace which is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among the sanctified. I have coveted no man's silver or gold, and those hands have ministered unto my necessities. I hope that my labor has not been in vain and that many of my congregations may be precious jewels in the kingdom.

My meetings were growing better all the time, and especially where they take THE RESTITUTION. We have taken it through all its changes, and with it and my Bible and the glorious hope of the soon coming kingdom of God, I take courage and press on. Since Feb. 20, I have traveled over 6800 miles, preached 82 sermons and baptized 55 souls into the all-saving name of Christ. Give God the glory. I ask the brethren to get some one else more able than I to preach for you. Do not let the truth suffer. Be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil for we wrestle not not against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore, take unto you the whole armor of God that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Above all taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked, and take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the spirit which is the Word of God. Praying always with all prayer and supplication for all saints, and for me that utterance may be given unto me that I may open my mouth boldly to make known the glorious news of the coming kingdom.

Finally, brethren, farewell, be perfect, be of good cheer and of one mind, live in peace and the Lord of peace be with you. Remember me in all your prayers.

Yours in hope.

JOHN FOGER.

To the Household of Faith:

What a privilege through the dear RESTITUTION to hear from scattered ones, and share in the joys and sorrows of those of like precious faith. I can say with Bro. M. L. Adams, "It does me good to read the many letters from our family, and I too would love to hear from all." The expression "our family" shows our relation, "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise," precious promise, heirs of salvation, children of Abraham, and soon to sit down in the kingdom with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the ancient worthies, together with those now sleeping in death's cold embrace, whose hearts were once united with ours in earnest work for the Master's cause. Oh, what a hope is ours, that lifts the burden from breaking-hearts, and looks beyond this dark vale of tears, piercing the narrow beds of our sleeping saints, and bids them rise. Glorious consummation may it soon come.

Yes, the good letters do us good. One S. V. Grim writes, "I too am trying to walk the narrow way." We are all trying to walk the narrow way, and can we not all with this writer exclaim, "O! for a closer walk with God," and, "we must first know what sort of creatures we must be," before "we can bring our bodies under subjection." And then we need the helping hand of our brother, admonish means to advise. Are we not so anxious to be right that we are grateful to the brother or sister who loves us well enough to advise us when they think we are doing wrong? "The righteous love rebuke," "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom?" We fear in our weakness we will fail to see the necessary thing to do, or leave undone. We need to join hands and heart, and in our united band press on.

In this little letter of Bro. S. V. Grim's in which there are so many things calculated to stir up our pure minds by way of remembrance, he says, "We must cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. This will put away the use of tobacco, I pray the Church of God to quit it, and be a clean vessel for the Master's use when he comes." O, my brother and sister, can we not give heed to this earnest admonition? It is not because we do not use tobacco that we are so anxious for you to leave it off, but because it is injuring the cause. What do you think an infidel once said, when he saw a professor smoking on the street, "Look at that man he claims to belong to the Church of God, and smoking on the street." Now, my dear brother, you can not blame us as long as we love you, for beseeching you to leave off this expensive, injurious, unbecoming habit of smoking and chewing. I clip the following from the Ohio Inquirer, which shows that it is not approved of by scholars: "Quite a stir has been caused among the students of the Ohio Wesleyan University by a decided movement against the use of tobacco on the part of the faculty of the institution. Of late several classes have at the recitation hour been subjected to a most unusual dissertation upon the evils incident to the use of the weed, and in some classes the matter has been carried so far as to sent the ladies by themselves, as far removed from the boys as possible."

Bro. Gamble is right, Tobacco and its stains would not look well on those beautiful streets. No, no, I am sure we are not mistaken, for it looks dreadfully on the flagstone walks of our present cities. Bro. Gamble has given us his experience with good suggestions as to what to do with the money. One good brother suggests to those who have trouble to quit, frequent bathing, and two or three good sweats.

We quote the following from the Kansas City Star: "The young czarina of Russia declines to smoke like the majority of ladies in Russia. She has requested her ladies in waiting, to not come near her if there is any flavor of tobacco about their clothes. * * * The crown princess of Roumania is having the greatest difficulty at the Roumanian court, where ladies of highest rank smoke not only cigarettes, but cigars, and even chew tobacco. The crown princess, however, insists upon having her own way, and she has forbidden her maids of honor, and every lady in attendance upon her to use tobacco in any shape, the penalty being dismissal from the court." O, may we not be dismissed from the court of our great Leader for anything that is now defiling our bodies. There are many things we do that are now destroying the temple of God. Then let us before it is everlastingly to late help one another to become strong in the Lord.

"In thee, our God, we live and move,
And for thy bounties rich and free;
We offer now our grateful love,
And pledge our lives and all to thee.
May all we say and all we do,
But show our high and holy aim.
To keep the heavenly prize in view.
And glorify thy gracious name."

POETRY.

God Bless You.

How sweetly fall these simple words
Upon the human heart,
When friends long bound by strongest ties,
Are doomed by fate to part.
How softly press the hand of those
Who true in love serve you,
And send responsive beats to soul,
In breathing out, "God bless you!"

"God bless you!" "Ah, long months ago
I heard the mournful phrase,
When one whom I in childhood loved,
Went from my dreamy gaze.
And blinding tears fall thick and fast
As memory my longest treasure,
While deep'ns of the heart bring back
The farewell prayer, "God bless you!"

How mother seeming forth her boy
To wage untried and new,
In pure and studied stately speech,
Now manner and adieu,
Yet softly sue between her sobs,
When ever misfortunes pass you,
Come to thy mother, boy, come back!"
Then softly sighs, "God bless you!"

"God bless," tells more of expressed love
Than volumes without number;
For it is thus our trust in Him
Whose eyelids never slumber.
It is in parting no long speech,
Dare not at in studied measure;
It only asks the dear old words,
So sweet, so real, "God bless you!"

BY JOHN WILSON.

"Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart."

A LOVING GOD.

"I must give it up, Ella; I am miserable. What to do I know not. I enjoyed religion once, but that passed away; then you come and show me that I have been wrong altogether,—not had the true hope, and what not,—and worst of all I cannot gainsay what you declare. Indeed, I must confess that if there be truth in the Bible, then what you say is true,—but it makes me miserable. I cannot now rejoice in hope of a heaven at death, and the Kingdom does not satisfy my wants. I doubt not men like Alfred could exultingly rejoice in the prospect of reigning as kings on the earth, but I feel a need of something more. It may be that it is not the Reward in which anything is lacking. If I could draw a proper simile it might be thus expressed: The scheme of salvation according to this book you have read to me is the beautiful yet colorless statue. So that with having lost a warm false faith, and there being nothing in a cold true one to entice me, I am doubt-tossed, and well nigh weary of life. What shall I do? What must I do?

"Not that, dear Edith, not that; you must not despair. I understand your feeling, for though I can and do rejoice in Israel's hope, I have an unsatisfied longing for something more. You would describe my state, as viewing an unfinished picture but unable to discern what should be added. I wish Alfred were here; I am sure he would help us both."

"I believe he would, and it is only my knowledge of his disposition to thoroughly investigate before he accepts which made me willing to listen to you. But this gives me no ease; if he is rejoicing I am despairing. The more I read the greater do my sins appear to separate me from the Pure, Incorruptible Jehovah. Eternal life is for the sanctified, and I feel myself still a sinner."

"And I am too ignorant myself in this matter to point out a way of escape. I will write to Alfred if he does not come home soon."

"Do you know why he went away, cousin?"

"He did not say."

"Poor Alfred! I suspect it is a cloud over his prospects in life which called him away. I heard that Mr. Roberts threatens to discharge him if he does not give up his heretical opinions,"

"My noble brother! I did not know that, whilst assisting me in the path of life, his own temporal way was being hedged up, May God reward him."

"My dear sister, I am but an unprofitable servant of His; I have done but that which it was my duty to do."

"Oh, Alfred, when did you return?—how we have been wishing for you."

"I came soon after you had left the house, and was told I should find you here. And why has my presence been so earnestly desired?"

"Cousin, have you succeeded in your purpose?"

"Never mind that at present: my question, girls?"

"Edith is well nigh despairing, Alfred; she can find no consolation from either old or new doctrines, and I thought that as you predicted her depression, you might be able to relieve her."

"You have had some unusual excitement; who has been terrifying you, Edith?"

"However can you know, cousin?"

"If I am to be physician, my patient must not cross-question me. How I know is easy to tell; my blithe cousin must have her mind very much excited, or she would not be so feverish. Who?"

"I will tell you, brother. The sermon last night was what we might call groans from the bottomless pit; and to-day our class-leader visited us."

"I understand now, and Edith was unwell when she went; her nerves more needed the soothing of music than the rasp of the pulpit file. Poor cousin! and whilst so unnerved, I presume the leader made her fear that she was backsliding, was on the high road to hell, and what not?"

"He certainly intimated that if we believe any other gospel than he had, our future portion would be anything but comfortable."

"Who is your class-leader?"

"Thomas Verity."

"And such a blind, ditch-wending leader, caused Edith's perturbation?"

"It was not the man, but what he said, Alfred, which, if it be true, makes out a poor case for me. I have sought salvation through believing in the atoneing blood of Jesus; and now that my faith fails me what am I to do?"

"Begin at the right end: believe and accept the Gospel, Edith."

"That I have done before—I mean not yours, but Paul's."

"Mine and Paul's being one, what is it you mean by the distinction?"

"You know Paul says he declared the Gospel to the Corinthians in preaching how that Christ died."

"Did Jesus preach the Gospel, cousin?"

"Most certainly he did as you well know."

"I do but I know this also that so far from proclaiming salvation through the merits of his death, he only alluded to the crucifixion in obscure words."

"Then, if this is not the Gospel what did the Apostle mean?"

"I think if you read again you will see that Paul is not here saying what the gospel is, but reminding them of what there was involved in what he had preached before. The central truth of his good news was a resurrected living Christ. Some denied a resurrection to come, which he showed was contrary to the gospel of their salvation. The words 'first of all' should be 'among the first things,' for if you turn to Acts xviii. 4, 5, and xvii. 2, 3, you will see that Paul did not preach the death of Jesus for sin 'first of all,' but showed that the Christ must needs have suffered and risen again: and not till he had convincingly demonstrated this from the prophets did he apply it, and prove that this Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah."

"I see this alters the sense materially. But if the death of Christ was not the Gospel theme, it held a very important position in the scheme of salvation."

"That I certainly grant you; but what?"

"Nay, cousin, that is what I wish to know from you; I am the pupil."

"And so am I, Edith; therefore let us all go to the feet of our safe instructor—the Word of Truth—and learn there. But what proposition would you take to your teacher, on which you would require his exegesis. Remember how our schoolmaster insisted on our reasoning by method."

"I—well—oh! I understand your meaning now. I would submit this: God is a being of infinite holiness: man has broken His law and thus committed an infinite offence against Him; and he, being a mortal, cannot by after repentance wash away his awful guilt: has not the Divine Son, then, who partakes of his attributes, to propitiate His violated law, and make the atonement of which the mortal was incapable, endured the wrath of his justice in the man's stead? and is not the man forgiven and held as clean by the merits of the Son being imputed to his account? I think this is a logical statement for the purpose you mention."

"Very well put indeed, Edith, but the argument is faulty in that the predicates are unsound. Granting the postulate, that, God is a being of infinite purity,' yet the consequence contains a fallacy, which renders the whole argument nugatory. The sophism is this, that the finite being can commit an infinite sin, worthy of eternal punishment. This is unjust; a blow is only a blow, against whomsoever directed: and God's principle is according to deeds (not persons or ranks.) He will repay.' Does the Almighty pervert justice? Never. 'Justice and judgement are the habitation of His throne: mercy and truth shall go before His face.'"

"What says the Apostle, Alfred: 'Is God unrighteous who taketh vengeance?'"

"Upon whom, Edith? only on the wicked and impenitent. by these he is 'provoked (not angry as in our version) every day,' and eventually will become to them 'a consuming fire.' Let men say as they list 'the ways of God are equal,' and thus He was proclaimed to Moses as 'the Lord God,

'Merciful and gracious, long suffering, and abundant in mercy' and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity, transgression and sin.'

Which is yet perfectly consonant with the character of a being 'Who will by no means clear the guilty.' It is now as ever that 'the soul which sinneth it shall die,' but 'he who doeth these things (of righteousness) shall live in them.' Now to the second proposition,—that 'man has broken His law, and thus committed an infinite offence against Him,'—I have already taken exception, so far as regards the extent. Nor can I agree with the next item,—that he being a mortal cannot by after repentance wash away his awful guilt.' Man has broken God's law, and so suffers the penalty, which is death. Now if Jesus, by giving an equivalent, satisfied justice, why yet am I accounted amenable to death? Does not our mortal condition prove that justice can never be averted by substitution?"

"But that is not the right position, Alfred. It was for our moral guilt, the thoughts, words, and deeds done against God for which our Lord paid the penalty."

"And it is just these for which he could give no satisfaction, Edith. How could he have taken these upon him 1800 years before they were committed? You contend for man's being a free agent but this strikes at the very root of his liberty of action. If Jesus did bear these why are they accounted sinful? and, again, by whatever kind of reasoning can our being punished for doing them be defended as right? If he bore the anguish of them on the cross, and we are again punished for them, what kind of justice can we call that which thus twice exacts the penalty?"

"But, Alfred, are we at liberty to thus question any of God's dealings? We must not sit in judgement on the Almighty."

"We may not, Edith, but this is not a case of that kind. I am questioning man's teachings concerning God's justice, and shewing them to be opposed to his own immutable laws. 'To punish the just is not good,' 'And he who condemneth the just is an abomination to the Lord,' says Solomon. No, no, Ella, I dare not arraign God, but I must 'reason together' with Him, and so find out how merciful he is."

"But I think you scarcely state the exact bearings of the case, brother. I always understood that Jesus Christ took our guilt upon himself, and we are free as regards God, but shall be saved or condemned for accepting or rejecting the pardon His Son has to bestow."

"Now you completely shift the case, Ella: by this setting-forth our service is no longer due to God but to Christ."

"Well it is only another aspect of the same being."

"Allow me to say no. But we will leave our Trinitarian questions as foreign to our argument. This is the feature I wish you to look at in all its naked deformity: so called orthodoxy asserts that God punished His Son as a satisfaction for sin, and yet we pay the penalty. No shift of sin's character, or transgression's object, can alter this."

"But is there not something else than death, brother, to which we are liable?"

"Ah, Ella dear, I thought you would be puzzled in the maze of your false reasonings. You are holding a tenet to which there is no sequence for you, as a believer in the total mortality of man: that Christ bore a penalty to save you from a punishment you have not to undergo,—that is, eternal torments in hell. There is nothing else propounded as cause for such substitutionary vengeance. But mark another little matter, which I hope will forever disgust you with that doctrine. If Jesus did bear the punishment man is said to be amenable to, and this be eternal torments, then he is now enduring them, and we can have no life. Either he must bear the punishment or the law is evaded, not satisfied. An awful dilemma, is it not?"

"But, Alfred, Mr. P. spoke last evening about 'every sin we have committed increasing the agony of Christ's sufferings;' and he told us if we 'were to live holier than Enoch for the future, yet our past sins would weigh us down to hell.' That we were 'already too filthy for God's clean mansion,' and many other like speeches. Though I do not agree with all he said, yet I think the Scriptures teach something of this, and it made me very unsettled in mind."

"Can you tell me whereabouts in his plan of salvation Mr. Phelan would place penitence: such, I mean as that of the Psalmist?

'Have mercy upon me, O God,
According to thy loving-kindness:
According to the multitude of Thy tender mercies.
Blot out my transgressions;
Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity,
And cleanse me from my sin.
For I acknowledge my transgressions;
And my sin is ever before me.
Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean:
Wash me and I shall be whiter than snow.
Make me to hear joy and gladness;
That the bones Thou hast broken may rejoice.
Hide thy face from my sins,
And blot out all mine iniquities.
Create in me a clean heart, O God
And renew a right spirit within me.
The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit.
A broken and a contrite heart, O God,
thou wilt not despise.'

And what niche has he for those considerations of God,s infinitude of mercy because of human infirmity, in which David trusted?

'The Lord is merciful and gracious,
Slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy.
He will not always chide;
Neither will he keep his anger forever.
He hath not dealt with us after our sins;
Nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.
For as the heaven is high above the earth,
So great is His mercy towards them that fear Him.
As far as the east is from the west,
So far hath he removed our transgressions from us.
Like as a father pitieth his children,
So the Lord pitieth them that fear him.
For he knoweth our frame,
He remembereth that we are dust.
Man's days are as grass:
As a flower of the field so he flourisheth,
For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone,
And the place thereof shall know it no more.
But the mercy of the Lord
Is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear Him.
And his righteousness to children's children;
To such as keep his covenant.
And to those that remember His commandments to do them.'"

"I never saw those in this light before, Alfred. They certainly dont agree with Mr. Verity's ideas."

"In the service of the gospel there is a place and a call for the best talents a man can bring,—learning, eloquence, common sense, devotion,—but in none of those dwells the power to cleave hard hearts, to soften stubborn wills, to awaken dead souls. Only God can reach and save by his own Spirit. He must be in and behind both messenger and message, or nothing will come of devoted and intelligent service."

Principals, like fruit, should not be plucked until ripe.

OUR CHILDREN.

Baby's Compliment.

His father and mother were both away,
And baby and I had been friends all day;
Many and gay were the games we played;
Baby ordered and I obeyed—
We cared not at all for the rainy sky.
We built us a block-house three feet high;
We threw pine knots on the nursery fire
And watched the flames mount higher and higher
We [illegible] impossible tasks;
We looked at the pictures in all the books;
We ran in "tag" till his cheeks were red,
And his curls were tangled about his head.
So when the twilight was closing down
Over the fields and woodland brown,
And Nurse declared we must say good-night,
He clung to me—oh! in the soft twilight,
He trampled not down with his rough little feet,
He climbed on my lap and kissed me sweet,
And as he whispered from all my knee,
"You'd make a good mother," said baby to me.

I have had compliments now and then,
From grown up women and gowned up men.
Some were commonplace, some were new,
Never was one of them sung so true,
Never has one seemed half so real,
Baby compared me to his ideal.

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea,—No. 31.

A PUZZLING QUESTION.

MORE ABOUT THE STONE.

Jesus said in the parable of the householder, Matt. xxi. 44, "Whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken, but on whomsoever it shall fall it will grind him to powder." Was it a puzzle to you how a stone could be placed so it could be stone of stumbling, and yet be in danger of falling on you at the same time? It has puzzled wise men to solve the difficulty. They could see that Jesus referred to "the rejected stone," and tried to fix it up, (Professor Bush says) by supposing it set up against the corner of the temple as a buttress to protect it. But that would not make it "a refused stone" nor "a Rock of offence." So we must think of it as we did in our last lesson—as a stone lying on the ground, brought there by God's direction, and yet, not believed in, by the workmen. Building men who fell over it, and seeming to be of no account, but found at last to be the one stone, without which the building could not be finished—the keystone of the arch—the capping-stone of the pyramid. And the different positions of Jesus are just like this stone. Jesus was born a lowly child in a manger, the son of a carpenter. The people of Israel had looked for fifteen hundred years for the blessed Messiah to come and save them. But they expected him to appear as a great king, dressed in splendid clothes, with plenty of silver and gold, and a great army to make of their nation the most notable people on earth. How could they accept of a man who went about with lowly fishermen, having no wealth, no power, nor home? They stumbled over him, just as over a stone, and were broken in pieces as a nation. They fell in unbelief. When the rejected stone was on the ground one might be "dashed in pieces," who fell on it from any great height, but place it on the top of a building, and let it fall on a passer-by, would it not crush him to atoms? I wonder if any of the temple-workmen did fall on "the rejected stone," or if, when putting it in place they let it fall on one of their number? We do not know, but we do know that Jesus the lowly, rejected Savior, was the cause of the breaking up of the Jewish nation, and that by and by he will be placed where his mighty arm will destroy all who oppose him.

The word "broken" in the text at the head of our lesson, means "dashed in pieces;" the clause "grind him to powder" signifies "give him to be winnowed by the winds." Wicked governments and wicked people will be like dust, and like chaff before the power of the king, who is to be seated on Mount Zion. See 1st and 2nd Psa. and think of the fan, the floor, the wheat and the chaff.

But Isaiah talks of "a foundation stone," and Jesus of a Rock, on which our house must be built. Yes, and cannot Jesus be a foundation stone and a headstone too? He can occupy one position and then the other. He is a foundation stone to us now, if we hear his sayings and do them. Building our characters day by day according to his words, is building upon the Rock. It is setting our feet upon the coming kingdom, it is making our heirship sure to the blessed coming Canaan.

You must not forget the mighty mountain-ladder, that Jacob's pillow became in his dream. Jesus is "the headstone of the corner," because his kingdom is to absorb all other kingdoms. A little stone at first cut out of the mountains,—a little people called out and fenced off from all other people,—it becomes a great mountain and fills the whole earth! Who would have thought of such a thing, when God told Abraham to leave his own land and go to another land? Yet from Abraham comes the saved and the saving nation,—from that nation comes the Savior, and the greater part of earth's future rulers! O children! how glad we are that our Redeemer is such a Rock as this! Our hope is in him, "All other ground is sinking sand." In him,—baptized into his name—and living aright, we are built into a temple that can never be shaken down. God's kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion one that shall not pass away. But we said when we began writing about the wonderful stone that it has had, and will yet have a great deal to do with the destiny of Israel. Can you see how? I think you can. Israel was the people of the stone; the kingdom that is coming will be the stone kingdom, and Jesus the headstone of it all. But where is the stone now, that has through all these years been picturing to us the Christ and his kingdom? Has it been lost? Do you care to know more about it? It is a curious story and you do not have to believe it. Yet it is well enough to learn about curious things, whether we conclude them to be true or not. Dean Stanley was a great man, but he wanted to know the story of the stone. In England there is a great chair upon which the kings and queens are crowned. It has a stone seat. There has been rings in the ends of the stone, as if it had been carried from place to place. There is a crack in it that almost rent it in two; "as if it had been struck by a more than mortal hand." It has been in the British Islands 2470 years; 800 years of this time it has been in England. It was brought to Ireland first—some say by the prophet Jeremiah. It then went to Scotland, and thence to England. All these centuries it has been called "Jacob's pillow." The English people would fight like tigers, rather than give it up. An Irish rhyme says of it,

"Unless the fates be faithless grown,
And prophets' voice be vain,
Where e'er is found the sacred stone
The wanderer's race shall reign."

Jacob's stone was certainly a title-deed to the land of Canaan. He willed it to his children, and in an especial manner to Joseph, whose sons were to be the heads of the tribes. All the tribes are to be brought back to their own land. Ezekiel xxxvii. 16, 17, 20, 21, 22. Then all the tribes must be found. If the stone is an heirloom, where are the heirs? The Plymouth Democrat of last week has an article that makes us think more than ever that the heirs of the stone have come to light. It is about what the English people have been doing in South Africa. It says, that "the British flag is the emblem of authority over the greater portion of 1,800,000 square miles of that country, and that whenever that standard has been planted, evidences of civilization have at once become manifest," "Where there was but a desert waste ten years ago, there is now a city of 50,000 people." The English-speaking people are conquering the world just as the Irish rhyme says they will who possess the stone.

This is "the day of the Lord's preparation." Can you find such a text in the Bible? If there is "a day of preparation," there must be a people preparing for his coming. The English-speaking people are doing this great work as a nation. They are giving the Bible to people of all lands. They are teaching the poor heathen of island and continent to know the glory of the great God. And it is from their ranks that come the watchers for the Advent—those who are warning others of a nearing day of judgment. You, dear children, are helping in this work, if you are doing what you can to spread the truth. Keep your eyes open. Read about what the nations of earth are doing in this world. It is only so that you can watch. But we must go back to Sinai. The story of the stone has been a long one. Have you learned anything while we have been talking about it? I hope you have.

AUNTIE WILSON.

OBITUARY.

THOMPSON.—Lettie Irene Thompson, youngest daughter of A. C. and Jennie Thompson, died at the home of her parents near Plymouth, Ind., Sept., 4, 1895, aged 2 years and 14 days.

Little Lettie was born Aug. 21, 1893, and was very bright for only two years old, the joy of the household, and is greatly missed by all.

She was the grandchild of Bro. W. D. Thompson, one of the members of our Board of Directors. Her sickness was of but a few hours duration, she being taken with a spasm about 7:00 o'clock in the evening and dying three hours later. Funeral services were held Sept., 6, Elder Rothenberger officiating, after which she was laid away in the silent grave, there to await till called by the herald angels. May we each live pure lives and so meet her again on the other side where sickness and death will be nevermore.

Announcement.

The quarterly conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will convene (D. V.) at Watson, Allegan Co. Michigan, Friday evening Oct. 4, 1895, and continue over the following Sunday.

Those coming on the Indiana railroad, will stop off at Martin, teams will be waiting for trains at 12:58 from the south, 3:05 from the north Friday and Saturday.

There will be a good speaker to preach the word.

All of like precious faith are cordially invited by the brethren at Watson.

Let as many as can attend this conference, it will do you all good, and it may be the last opportunity that some of us may have, life is so uncertain.

Let us remember the words of Paul, Heb. 10, 25. "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together at the manner of some is; but exhorting one another, and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."

EMMA JACKMAN, Sec'y.

The most awful thought that comes to a man sometimes, is the thought of a soul that he injured years ago, and that he cannot touch and cannot help. His own life is under better influence; his own life is uplifted; but where is the man, where is the woman, to whom he did harm years ago? God save us from that! It would be hopeless if it had not the infinite hope in the endless love of God to fall back upon.—Phillips Brooks.

The use of grace attracts more; faith gives a man the knowledge of the truths of Christianity. But from whence do this use of grace and this faith proceed, but even from grace itself? The less belief, respect, and relish one has for these truths, the more one deserves to be deprived of them. One divine gift prepares us for another; he who, by a holy kind of usury, improves them for his Master, enriches himself.—Quesnel.

Excursion rates are offered to Cleveland Sept. 10th to 12th via the Nickel Plate Road, account Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons and Grand Council Royal and Select Masons.—sep 12.

We are not our own; we are bought with a price; and nothing short of an unreserved surrender of self-interest to God's interest in humanity is moral or just, not be self-sacrificing in other's service is justice. To be unloving, even to the unlovable, is to be ungodly.—Rev. Geo. D. Herron.

Remember the Nickel Plate Road has authorized low rate Home-Seekers excursions to points in the West, North-West and South-west on Sept. 10th and 24th. Enquire of agents for particulars.

Success depends on God; aggression is our duty.

A Word about Union.

The following extract, from the "Prophetic Times," contains some good common sense, which we commend to the attention of those who would sacrifice the truth for the sake of peace, union, and numbers.

"There is an old story, upon which some seem to lay more stress than on the parables of Jesus, which tells of a philosophic father teaching his sons the strength of union, by showing them how easy it is to break a bundle of sticks, taking them one by one, and how difficult taking them all together. Had the venerable gentleman bound up fire with his sticks, he might have shown also the dangerous unwisdom of union where the elements are not homogeneous. Had he exhibited a Roman prisoner chained to a dead carcass, he might have shown the still further lesson of the disability and pestilential horribleness of some unions.

"The Bible also tells of a union-furor which prevailed among men in a very early period of the world's history, when 'the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair, and they took them wives of all which they chose.' We do not read, however, that the result was particularly advantageous. Giants, indeed, were produced by the coalition, but judgement came upon its heels, and all the 'mighty men' and 'men of renown' were drowned from the face of the earth.

"The mingling of that which is of God with that which is of man, is a special form of evil, to which people are quite too prone; and it is a very effective engine in Satan's hands, for marring the truth and destroying souls. It may often wear the appearance of something very desirable and promising. It may look like success, triumph, and augmented efficiency, but in reality it is surrender, compromise, and defeat. Satan's first effort to frustrate the purpose of God was to kill the holy seed; when that failed he tried peaceful synthesis and unseemly unions, in which he was much more successful. From this it would appear, that union, if not of the proper sort is worse than murder.

"It is one of the vices of our day and country, that men are ready to compromise and sacrifice almost anything, just for the convenience, grandeur, and supposed strength of union. It matters not how truth suffers, and the Church's testimony is obscured, only that people are united, and dwell in peace, and appear in grand combinations, in which the worst are on the same level with the best, ignoring all distinctions. And, it sometimes happens, that the most antagonistic the more readily unite to put out of the way troublesome truth. Herod and Pilate unite when the Christ is to be crucified.

We have no hesitation to say, that much of the blatent unionism of our day is thoroughly anti-Christian. That which the true man of God is bound to maintain above all things is, the truth—the truth at all costs. If there can be union in the maintenance of the pure and undamaged truth, so much the better, and such union should be sought and promoted; but union on any other conditions, is immoral, and not of God. The miserable expediancy which views union as the chief end, and seeks union first, union last, and union all the time—union in the truth if convenient, otherwise union on half truth, or union on no distinct truth at all, only so there is union,—is simply the old story over, by which the devil involved the world in the condemnation of God.

Inspiration says, 'the wisdom which is from above is first pure then peaceable.' The implication is, that the wisdom which puts 'peaceable' first, and teaches us to purchase peace and union at the expense of pureness in faith and testimony, is not 'from above,' but from beneath. Oh, but union is so beautiful—so pleasant—so heavenly! Yes, so were 'the daughters of men,' but they did not satisfy God, nor yet keep off the ugly judgement which followed. Peace is a good thing, but it dare not be bought at the expense of God's truth, or at the sacrifice of fidelity in the preaching and confession of that truth. Otherwise, peace is not peace, but a lie, and a devouring sword."

Knowledge is Peace.

Let the believer live near to God; let him maintian a conscience void of offence toward both God and man; and, unlike the tides which ebb and flow—now full, and anon leaving a waste of sand behind—this peace would be as persistant as it is precious. For what says the Lord? "Thy peace shall be like a river," no pool—shallow pool ruffled by every breath that winter turns to ice and summer drought to mud; but a river, sparkling flowing, ever full and ever flowing, growing deeper, broader, calmer the farther it goes; the nearer to its rest in the ocean. Justified by faith, not by frames or feelings—that shift like a weather-vane, with every shift of the wind, but by the firm, and finished, and accepted, and approved righteousness of Jesus, we have peace with God. And therefore aisle, as he looks forward to an hour of death and the day of judgement, to say, "It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth?"—the believer's heart is the home of peace—a peace that, passing understanding, has God for its author, faith for its source, and God for its dwelling.

Home-Seekers Excursion During Sept. and Oct.

Agents of the Nickel Plate Road will be pleased to furnish, upon application, complete information relative to these excursions. Bear in mind the elegantly equipped through trains via the Popular Route.

He that cannot forgive others breaks the bridge over which he must pass himself—for every man has need to be forgiven.

Agents of the Nickel Plate Road are in possession of information which will enable them to quote special excursion rates to points in the North-west, West, South-west, and South for tickets sold during Sept. and Oct. Further information may be secured by applying to local agents of that popular low-rate Line.

The man who inquires, "What may I know?" already knows something; while the man who says, "I don't want to know," is generally a know-nothing.

The Nickel Plate Road offers a splendid opportunity for visiting the West, North-west and South-west by authorizing excursion rates to points in that territory on Sept. 10th and 24th. Ask agents for further information.

The way to avoid great faults, is to beware of less.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Poetry.

Things That Never Die.

The pure, the bright, the beautiful,
That stirred our hearts in youth;
The impulse of a wordless prayer,
The dream of love and truth;
The longings after something lost,
The spirit's yearning cry,
The strivings after better hopes—
These things shall never die.

The cordial hand stretched forth to aid,
A word in sorrow's hour,
The kindly look, the tear of grief,
That fell for others' woe;
The sympathy that knows no chill,
The pitying heart that sighs,
When man to man is all in all—
These things shall never die.

The memory of a clasping hand,
The pressure of a kiss,
The happy words in love's first hour,
That make up love's first bliss;
Hope, anchoring, and hanging faith,
And duty true on high;
These hands have clasped, these lips have met
These things shall never die.

The cruel and the bitter word,
That wounded as it fell,
The chilling want of sympathy,
We feel, but cannot tell;
The hard repulse that chills the heart,
Whose hopes are bounding high,
In an unfeeling world kept
These things can never die.

Let nothing pass, for every hand
Must find some work to do;
Lose not a chance to waken love,
Be firm, and just, and true;
So shall a light that cannot fade
Beam on thee from on high,
And angel voices say to thee,
"These things shall never die!"

Original.

PSALM 87.
88 COM. VER.

1. An ode for a psalm for the sons of Kore: Unto the end; To give an answer concerning the way of mercy to be learned; For understanding; Aiman the Israelite's (psalm).

2. O Lord God of my salvation, by day have I cried and in the night in thy sight.

3. May my votive-prayer have come into thy presence: incline thine ear unto my supplication, O Lord.

4. Because my soul hath been filled with evils and my life (zoe) hath drawn nigh to hades, (the grave)

5. I have been accounted with those who go down into a pit; I have become as it were a man who hath no responsive helper.

6. Among dead men a freeman; like wounded ones, cast away, who lie down to sleep in a grave, of whom there is no longer any remembrance, and who have been thrust away by thy hand.

7. They placed me in a lowest pit, in darkness and a shadow of death.

8. Mine anger became fixed against me, and thou didst lead all thy billows over me. Interlude.

9. Thou didst cause all my acquaintances to be far from me; they made me an abomination to themselves; I was given up and did not go my way out.

10. Mine eyes became weak with wretchedness; and I cried unto them all the day long; I stretched forth my hands unto thee.

11. Not to the dead will thou do wonders, will thou? Or will physicians arise and confess unto thee?

12. No one will discourse of thy mercy in the grave and of thy truth in their loss will they?

13. Thy wonders will not have been known in the darkness will they? Nor thy righteousness in a land that hath been ignored?

14. And I cried unto thee O Lord, and in the morning my votive-prayer will reach thee.

15. Why O Lord dost thou thrust away my votive-prayer, why dost thou turn away thy face from me?

16. I am a beggar and in toil from my youth, and when exalted I became humbled and without resource.

17. Thine acts of wrath have come upon me and fears of thee have terrified me.

18. They have encompassed me like water as it were; all the day long have they constrained me likewise.

19. Thou hast caused my friend and my acquaintances to be far from me on account of my wretchedness.

PSALM 88 (89 COM. VER.)

1. For understanding: Aithan the Israelite's. (psalm)

2. Thy mercies, O Lord, will I sing forever (is it forever here?) unto generation and generation will I declare thy truth with my mouth.

3. Because thou hast said, Forever will mercy have been built, in heaven will thy truth have been prepared.

4. I have made a covenant with my elect ones: I have sworn unto David my bond servant.

5. Unto the age will I make ready thy seed, and I will build the throne unto generation and generation. Interlude.

6. Heaven will confess thy wonders, O Lord, and thy truth in a church of saints.

7. Because who in clouds will have been likened unto the Lord and who among sons of God will have been likened unto the Lord?

8. The God is One magnified in a council of sanctified ones, great and to be feared above all those round about him.

9. O Lord God of the hosts who is like unto thee? Able art thou, O Lord, and thy truths round about thee.

10. Thou dost sway as sole Lord the controling power of the sea, and the leaping of its waves thou dost tame.

11. Thou hast humbled a haughty one like a wounded man as it were, and with the arm of thine ability hast thou scattered thine enemies.

12. Thine are the heavens and thine is the earth; the inhabited and the fulness thereof hast thou founded.

13. The north and west thou didst colonize. Thabor and Ermon in thy name will be glad.

14. Thine arm is with ability to rule: May thy hand have controlled, thy right hand have been uplifted.

15. Righteousness and judgment are a preparation of thy throne: Mercy and truth will go their way before thy face.

16. Blessed-happy the laity that knoweth the alala of victory: O Lord, in the light of thy face will they go their way.

17. And in thy name will they be glad all the day long, and in thy righteousness will they have been exalted.

18. Because the boast of their ability art thou, and in thy satisfaction will our horn have been exalted.

19. Because the Lord's intevening help is ours, and that of the Saint of Israel our King.

20. Then didst thou talk in vision-way unto thy sons, and thou didst say, I have placed responsive-help upon an able one, I have exalted an elect one from my laity.

21. I have found David my bond-servant: with sacred mercy have I annointed him.

22. For my hand will intervene along with him and my arm will strengthen him.

23. An enemy will find no profit in him; and a son of transgression will not repeat doing evil to him.

24. And I will cut down his enemies from before his face, and those who hate him I will turn back.

25. And my truth and my mercy will be with him, and in my name will his horn have been exalted.

26. And I will place his hand on a sea, and on rivers his right hand.

27. He will invoke me, as follows: My Father art thou, my God and an intervening helper of my salvation. (Salvation in the abstract here).

28. And I will make him a first-born (first-brought-forth one) high as compared with the kings of the earth.

29. Forever (or unto the age) will I watch to guard my mercy for him and my covenant with him is reliable.

30. And I will place (or dispose) his seed unto the age of the age, and his throne as the days of the heaven.

31. If his sons forsake my law, and do not go their way in my judicial orderings.

32. If they desecrate my statutes and do not watch to guard my commandments,

33. I will take an oversight of their transgressions with a sceptre, and of their sins with scourges.

34. But my mercy I will not drive away from him, nor will I do wrong unto my truth.

35. Nor will I desecrate my covenant, and the words that go their way out through my lips I will not set aside.

36. Once for all have I sworn unto my saint; I will not lie to David.

37. His seed will abide unto the age (or forever) and his throne as the sun in my sight.

38. And as the moon that hath been readjusted forever (or unto an age) and is the faithful witness in the heavens. Interlude.

39. But thou hast thrust away, thine anointed; (Christ).

40. Thou hast turned down the covenant of thy bond-servant, thou hast allowed his sanctuary to be desecrated to the ground.

41. Thou hast torn down all the hedges thereof; thou hast made cowardice its fortification.

42. All who pass along the highway have plundered him. He has become a reproach to his neighbors.

43. Thou hast exalted the right-hand of his enemies; thou hast caused all his enemies to rejoice.

44. Thou hast turned away the responsive-help from his sword, and thou hast not intervened for him in the battle.

45. Thou hast abrogated him from purification, his throne hast thou cast down to the ground.

46. Thou hast diminished the days of his throne; thou hast poured down shame upon him. Interlude.

47. How long O Lord; Unto the end? Will thy wrath have flamed on like fire as it were?

48. Remember what my hypostasis (being) is: For not in vain didst thou generate all the sons of men, didst thou?

49. What man is there who will live and not see death, will deliver his soul from out the hand of hades? (the grave) Interlude.

50. Where are thy ancient mercies, O Lord, which thou didst swear unto David in thy truth?

51. Remember, O Lord the reproache of thy bond-servants the reproach of many nations which I have endured in my bosom.

52. With which thine enemies, O Lord, have reproached, the changed-condition of thy annointed with which they have reproached.

53. The Lord be praised forever. May it have become so, may it have become so. (generally translated Amen, Amen.)

PSALM 89 (90 COM. VER.)

1. A votive-prayer of Moses a man of God.

O Lord, thou hast become our refuge in generation and generation.

2. Before the mountains came to pass and the earth was moulded and the inhabited (came to pass understood) and from the animate-age unto the animate-age art thou.

3. Do not turn man away into humiliation; and thou hast said may ye have returned ye sons of men.

4. Because a thousand years in thine eyes are as it were the yesterday that hath passed and a watch-period in a night.

5. Their years will be accounted naught, may the morning have come like young verdure as it were;

6. May the morning have flowered and come, may the evening have fallen away; may it have hardened and grown dry.

7. Because we have left off in thy wrath and in thine anger have we been terrified.

8. Thou hast placed our transgressions before thee; our animate-age is in the illumination of thy face.

9. Because all our days have left off, and in thy wrath have we left off; our years have practised care like a spider;

10. The days of our years in them there are seventy years; and if they be in special powers they are eighty years, and the surplus of them is weariness and pain; because physical weakness hath come upon us and we will have been treated as children.

11. Who will comprehend the controling-power of thy wrath and how to be numbered away from the fear or thine anger?

12. Make known thy right hand in this wise and those who have been chastened in their heart with wisdom.

13. Turn, O Lord, How long? and afford consolation to thy bond-servants.

14. We have been filled with thy mercy in the morning, and we have been made glad and rejoiced: In all our days may we have rejoiced.

15. In return for the days during which thou hast humbled us, the years in which we have known evils.

16. And look upon the bond-servants and upon thy works, and guide their sons.

17. And let the splendor of the Lord our God be upon us, and make upright the works of our hands for us.

COMMENT.

The 87th psalm begins as an 8th and end as a 7th according to its number and true to its numerical signification, holds forth "the hope" of mercy as something to be learned, and we learn from the heading that it is "For understanding that is to give understanding. But from the 4th verse on to the close we learn that the way to learn must be through suffering and humilintion even unto death if necessary which brings out the full significance of the 7th or completeness of some sort and here of course it is the completeness of human endurance. This lesson becomes the n. t. e. of the later gospel, but must have have seemed a great mystery to the old covenant saints before the coming of Christ.

As collateral teaching we are reminded of the passage in John's Apocalypse, "Hereunto (that is death) is the patient endurance of the saints." Observe the completeness of the trial as stated in the 7th verse, (also numerically correct) "They have placed me in a lowest pit, in darkness and a shadow of death."

Again observe the contrast of joy and rejoicing which comes with the next psalm the 88th a major octave of resurrectional hope," "mercy built forever" "Heaven will confess thy wonders and thy truth in a church of saints" the humiliation a thing of the past. "the forever covenant" "thine the heavens and thine the earth, the inhabited and the fullness thereof hast thou founded." "The north and west thou didst control; Thabor and Ermon in thy name will be glad."

"And in thy satisfaction will our horn have been exalted."

"Blessed-happy the laity that knoweth the alala of victory."

"I have exalted an elect one from among my laity, I have found David my bond-servant; with sacred mercy have I annointed him."

"And my truth and my mercy will be with him and in my name will his horn have been exalted."

"He will invoke me as follows: My Father art thou, my God and an intervening-helper of my salvation: and I will make him a first born, high as compared with the kings of the earth: "Forever will I watch to guard my mercy for him and my covenant with him is reliable: And I will place his seed unto the age of the age and his throne as days of the heavens.

His seed will abide unto the age (or forever) and his throne as the sun in my sight."

Are not all these Messianic prophecies clear in the light of the new covenant? The closing picture from the 36th verse to the 53rd or close of the psalm is the darkest hour before dawn, but hope and faith still triumphant, and saying "How long O Lord?" "The Lord be praised forever."

The 89th psalm, we learn from the heading is "a votive-prayer of Moses "a man of God" and true to its number starts out with a full assurrance of hope based upon what God had been in the past and the immutability of his character and being. Observe in the 18th verse of the preceeding psalm what man's being (hypostasis) is defined in an oracular way to be, in contrast with that of God as here stated.

As a nine we should expect a consummation of some sort to be emphasized in this psalm. We find it fully brought out in the seventh verse and amplified in the 9th verse, both verses being true to their number. The force of the predominant 8th chord appears in the 14th verse even, a double 7th "We have been filled with thy mercy in the morning, and we have been make glad and rejoiced. In all our days may we have rejoiced." The whole psalm is an appropriate mediatorial petition pitched to the key of the Messianic eighth, though the tune is a 9th.

Hidden Things Revealed.

There are certain things mentioned in connection with the mission and work of the church, as hidden, but it is as clearly revealed that these hidden things shall be made manifest in the proper place and at the proper time. Says our Lord, "That which I have told ye in secret, publish ye upon the house-tops." And it is further stated that there is nothing hidden but what shall be brought to light. "Secret things belong to our Lord," says Moses, "but those things which are revealed belong to us."

The Kingdom of Heaven is compared unto leaven hid in three measures of meal until all is leavened. By this we are to understand that the principles and persons connected with the new dispensation are to remain incognito until the day of the manifestation of the king and the commencement of his reign. The elements, or the leaven, will then be prepared to carry forward the work of the kingdom age. Now the leaven is being prepared for the measures of the world, and that leaven shall change the conditions of terrestrial affairs and bring all things into subjection to the kingdom and love of Christ. Again, the life of the Christian is represented as now "hid with Christ in God." In this we are taught that the time of immortality has not yet arrived, nor will it arrive until the life-giver returns and makes manifest the incorruptible crown of glory. Christ is now hidden from view. When he shall appear or come from his hiding place in God, we shall receive all that is implied in the promise of the crown of life. It is stated among the promises to those who overcome, that certain ones shall partake of the hidden manna. By going back to the types we learn that this food was peculiar to the wilderness-life during the forty years sojourn of Israel. The "hidden manna" is the bread of Christ, which has been given to nourish the church during her seclusion for the forty-two prophetic months from the face of the serpent. Says Jesus, "Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead, but he that shall eat of the bread that I shall give him shall never die," or literally from the Greek, "shall not die forever." Christ is that bread, and the word which he left for his disciples is sweeter than honey, and more precious than gold. The true disciples find nourishment in the words of Christ and partake of it as the living bread which came down from heaven. This word of life becomes the "hidden manna" to those who are hungering for righteousness. These fortastes of the heavenly manna are enjoyed even now in life's wilderness, but will be enjoyed in their fullness when the overcomer shall share the hospitalities of the King, when the table is spread and the marriage feast shall have come. Who would strive to overcome that he may eat of the "hidden manna" in the day of earth's glory?

Again, the kingdom of heaven is compared to "a treasure hid in a field." That merchant who is wise sells all that he hath that he may gain those treasures now hid away from the world, but which shall be made precious in the time of reward.

In the light of these Scriptural proofs there is much beauty attached to the hidden things of the Divine word. God's saints are now hidden in death, even as Job says, "O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret until thy wrath be passed; that thou wouldst appoint me a set time and remember me." The grave is a hidden place for the dead, their life is hid with Christ in God, and when the jewels arise to shine as the stars, the morning of rest will come, and the blessings now hidden shall come.

But there is another hiding time. Those who have rejected the King, and walked in the way of sin will call for rocks, and mountains to hide them from the face of the lamb. Then the hidden things of dishonesty will come to light, and the wickedness of man shall be exposed. Solemn thought! Who would not become covered with the righteousness of Christ in order to share in that age of reunion, of peace and magnificent victories? —H. P. R. in Our Rest.

In the World, but not of the World.

"The world," is an expression frequently made use of by Jesus and the apostolic writers, and is referred by them to the class who are yet out of Christ, and who are blindly groping in the darkness of their own fleshly thinkings. The policy of the world being thus dictated, is necessarily antagonistic to that which is Divine.

The world boasts of its own abilities, and glories in its wonderful achievements. It has conceived hundreds of plans for its own salvation from sin and its consequences. It has organized a legion of societies, all looking towards the healing of the world's sores, and the eradication of the many evils afflicting it. Occasionally it gets at variance with itself upon the "great questions of the day," and being unable to settle its differences amicably, an appeal to the sword is made, which after all settles no principle of right and wrong, but only reveals the strength or weakness of the contending parties. Right does not alway accompany might. Thus the world has been struggling for nigh six thousand years, and has sacrificed millions of souls, and enormous sums of money in its vain efforts to restore order to society. Itself made up of conflicting elements, which are incapable of self-control, it is impossible that rest or peace should ensue. Then again, the greatest curse resting upon it is DEATH—an enemy so powerful that even the combined effort of the world to overthrow it must result in utter failure. How apparent it is therefore, that unless a mightier hand was extended for salvation, the whole world must perish. Realizing this, the good Father above interposed in its behalf. His own beloved Son he gave for the life of the world. Out of this vast world he is now taking a people for his name. But the principles of faith and practice which belong to this chosen class are so foreign to those which belong to the world, that a wide chasm is made that cannot be passed over.

Those who are separated from the world are described as being no longer of the world, although they may be in it. To be of it is to be a joint participant of its vanities, its plans, its hopes, its thousand and one vagaries for the redemption of man, its follies, its animal desires and its pride, but all such will surely perish at last, for the world and its fashion will pass away forever.

The Apostle Paul realized that we could not avoid coming in contact with the world (1 Cor. v. 9, 10) but according to Christ's teaching, whilst it is impossible but that we shall be in the world for a time, yet we need not be of it. We may sojourn in it as strangers and pilgrims but avoid citizenship. We can shine as lights in the midst of its darkness. We can disseminate the truths of Christ and exhibit his teaching in our lives, and perchance some may be drawn toward him who has saved us. In this way we can be "living epistles, read and known of all men." As "children of light" we can attract the attention of those who are "of the night" and perhaps a ray of sunshine may find its way into the dark chambers of their worldly minds and result in their deliverance. Who knows?

But all this remember, is contingent upon our remaining aloof from the world. The moment we form a partnership with it, or give it a share in our affections, that moment our power for good is lost. The world is quick in its perceptions, and can readily discern between those who firmly resist its proffered caresses, and those who yield to them. The former it will learn to hate, but the latter it will love. And "the love of the world is enmity against God," says John. It is impossible therefore to love both God and the world. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him" (1 John ii. 15). This is plain language, no one need mistake it, and it is highly important for us to test ourselves by the standard given.

As we value our life, our Lord, our hope of an inheritance, in the Kingdom of God, let us keep ourselves "unspotted from the world" (Jas. i. 27). Failure here will be fatal. And do not forget that the world offers many present inducements for us to fraternize with it. These must be all put aside, and a firm stand maintained on the side of truth and righteousness. —W.

Whoever ties his boat to a sinking ship will go down; and whoever links himself with wrong is sure, eventually, to encounter overthrow. There may be tempor.", prosperity, but there will be final defeat; there may be present success, but there will be eternal ruin. Hence they consult their wisdom and their safety, who cling to the right at whatever cost; not through stubbornness of will, but through steadfastness of faith and honesty of conscience.

Weakness, linked to God, is all-conquering.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 18, 1895. NO. 35.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked (eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and holy life as essential for final salvation.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

ON Sunday Sept., 15th, three more were added to the church at Plymouth. Brother Wance baptizing them into the All-saving name of Christ. And so, while so many are going the way of wickedness and sin, a few are willing to accept the blessed Master. May they never regret the step taken and finally with all the redeemed share the blessing of eternal life.

THE correspondent who enquired where he could find in Luther's works the paragraph "Commencing, I permit the Pope articles of faith for himself and his faithful —such as the soul is the substantial form of the human body the soul is immortal, with all those monstrous opinions to be found in the Roman dunghill of decretals," etc., is informed that it is found in Luther's Works, Vol. ii. folio 107, Wittemberg, 1562.

A CORRESPONDENT in a letter to a cotemporary dated at Jerusalem, July 24, 1895, says:—The Turkish-Jewish subjects are building a new city near where I am writing. It seems like magic to see all the nice tiled houses built where four years ago not one building was seen. One Jew has been building a house which will shelter one hundred families. Crops are good and the market is full of vegetables and fruits of all kinds, and they are very cheap.

THE Indiana State Conference convenes this week at Argos. The friends there will make you welcome, and are desirous of a large attendance. Officers for the ensuing year will be elected, and other matters of interest to the cause of Christ, will be talked over and acted upon. Brother Joblin, Brother and Sister Woodward, and other ministers are expected to be present to tell the "Good News" to those who are already rejoicing in hope, and also to entreat others to come and taste of the good things which God deals out to all those who love and obey him. Come in the "unity of the Spirit, in the bond of peace," and God will add his blessing.

MRS. L. J. Hanson Caird, a spiritualist medium, now located at Lake Brady, is said to be employed by the Board of Trade, at her home in Chicago, to predict the rise and fall of stocks. It is not generally known that this Board, said to control the commercial world, depends upon a clairvoyant in basing its produce speculation; but this statement is going the rounds of the press. This is quite an advance from messages from dead grandmothers and grandfathers, and uncles, aunts and cousins. But it is strange that spirits should allow themselves to be roped into so nefarious a business. What a pity they cannot employ their wonderful powers in some respectable calling.

"PAUL the apostle says, "To us there is one God. It is his Son, the Messiah who will shortly appear,—the sleeping saints will be raised, and immortalized, and together rule the world in righteousness for one thousand years; all antagonists will be destroyed, Israel established in Palestine, and the knowledge of the Lord cause to cover the whole earth. After the millennium the earth will become a heavenly Paradise. Whoever hears the outline of God's purpose and wills to, may come and secure a share of the exceeding riches of God's favor by believing the Gospel of the Kingdom, accepting Christ as the way, the truth and the life, and immersion in water and living godly. If the truth be rejected, there is hope of life for no one, while mercy lingers come."

FROM a human standpoint the religious outlook is a dark one, indeed. Every year and we might almost say every month it is harder to persuade folks to believe and obey the truth. Tens of thousands of professors all around us have scarcely any use for the Bible. They profess to have, but they have not. They have a sort of veneration for it as it lies upon the shelf, but open and read it and the truth will come out; they do not believe what it says, and think they can construe it as they please. In our private work in families we are finding obstruction after obstruction. No sooner do religious neighbors learn of our visits, than they crowd around and ridicule the idea that just so and so must be believed,—and that pardon can only be obtained by just believing and repenting, and being baptized,—and the idea of not going to heaven when they die is simply horrid, and the idea of lying in the grave abominable. If this does not have the desired effect the minister is called to frown down the whole thing. This together with abounding iniquity make it more and more difficult to reach people with the life imparting Word; but there is our bright phase—this very condition of things assures us that the night is far spent, the day is at hand; this, together with the fact that we do snatch now and then one as a brand from the burning, encourages us to continue to witness and leave results with God. We are in a period when the injunction to exhort one another daily, and so much the more as we see the day approaching is imperative. We must remember that no man liveth to himself. Our influence is for good or bad. God help us all who have named the name to adorn the doctrine of Christ.

Clerical Blindness.

"Paul caught up into Paradise," was the subject of discourse at M. E. Church on Euclid Avenue, Sept. 1st, by Rev. A. R. Chapman. In the course of his sermon Mr. Chapman said:—It is supposed that the apostle was actually dead, and that God gave him this marvelous experience and then restored him to life that he might fulfill the work of his apostleship the better prepared thereafter by this special revelation."

In all the realm of thought outside of religion, we doubt if such stupidity would be tolerated. The Bible says "the dead know not anything," and yet this leader of the people represents God as making a special revelation to a dead man. In the light of the divine statement just quoted that were an utter impossibility. Paul, if dead would know nothing—have no revelation. But Paul says he knew a man, etc., and if he himself was that man, then of a surety he was not dead. Think of it! It is said something was revealed to him while dead, and then he was restored to life. God being true as above, he would be none the wiser after restored to life. The lie comes in somewhere; who tells it? Of course the Reverend gentleman does not mean to contradict God, but he does it all the same.

We were forgetting that he said "It is supposed that he was dead." Well, suppose he was not dead, then what? Would'nt it spoil that "excellent" sermon? Paul would have to do the work of an apostle the best way he could without that revelation would he not? And how would the poor fellow prove the separate existence of the soul if he was not dead? The preacher does not treat the matter as a supposition, after saying "It is supposed; "he treats it as a fact when he says, "Evidently each one experience had a very impressive effect upon his mind and heart, confirming his faith in the truth of religion. After it, he could never doubt the independent existence of the soul. This is a libel on the man who said he declared the whole counsel of God and yet said nothing about the separate existences of the soul. We hold his silence about it is prima facia evidence that he did doubt the separate existence of the soul although he had a revelation, and the lawful inference is that he was not dead. It is a libel on the man who was pre-eminently a man of faith, to say of him, after it, (the revelation) he could never doubt the independent existence of the soul. It is a libel to speak thus of the man who makes twenty-five distinct statements with regard to the destiny of the wicked without the least reference to a separate existence of a part of man called soul: but every passage imports their utter extinction, dissolution, extermination. Eight times he says they perish,—Death is used to express their destiny seven times,—nine times they are spoken of as being destroyed,—once as devoured by fire, and once as burned. This is the truth or Paul would not have taught it.

Two days after listening to our last Sunday evening lecture, we were visited by a theological student, who was raised a Catholic, and whose parents believed for him when a baby, and who was baptized, by pouring (for the remission of sins we suppose that he might after commit.) Having come to years of maturity he abandoned the Mother Church, and united with the Congregational Church, for whose ministry he is now preparing. He said the Congregationalists accepted him on his infant baptism by Catholics. He had evidently come to show us the error of our way in insisting that only buried with Christ was baptism, and that act united to Christ only those who believed the Gospel of the Kingdom, which he saw, if true, left him on the outside. He was also anxious to let us know (?) that the breath infused into Adam was the never-dying soul,—and also to inform us of a certain parable concerning a rich man and a Lazarus, which we happened to have heard of before several times. We have talked with a good many religionists, but we never met with one who so recklessly set aside divine statements, and substituted human assertions. And yet, he is about to become a minister, not knowing as far as we could discover, one saving truth. We urged him to first believe the gospel, repent and be baptized into Christ.

After a long, earnest, and learned investigation of the subject, a Cleveland clergyman announced last Sunday that the devil made himself and the editor of the paper making the announcement, ironically remarks, that "considering the ability and success generally credited to him in his line of operations, it must be admitted that he has good reasons for being proud of his workmanship. But it is to be feared that if the clergy succeed in putting this idea into the devils head, he will become conceited and encouraged, and be more active than ever. This flattery way put him up to an outburst of mischief that will make a great deal of trouble, and burden the clergy with extra work trying to counteract his fresh activity.

Is it any wonder that the people en masse are discrediting the Scriptures, when their teachers go in the face of the plainest statements. The trouble is, the devil on their hands is not the Bible devil; and hence the trouble to account for him. Paul says there is but ONE GOD, THE FATHER OUT OF WHOM ARE ALL THINGS. Can the statement of the Rev. gentleman be harmonized with the divine statement? No! this assertion contradicts Paul's. If there were a being in the universe who could make himself and endow himself with life that would survive thousands of years, and suffer no loss of vigor, and who could operate upon 1,500,000,000 of people at one time in all parts of the earth, who knows what else he created? How does the creation of poor puny man who can only be in one place at a time, and even that for only a very few years; and only knows that he learns through his senses—how does he compare with this theological self-made devil? Away with the blasphemous assertion that there are two Creators. Away with the slanderous claim that the devil of orthodoxy out-ranks him who is the first-born of every creature.

The Rev. Harris Cooley, whose Cedar Avenue Disciple Church receives members without immersion who have been sprinkled or poured upon, says "the real question is whether the immersed are Christians. We, in our church feel (yea feel) that the question of baptism is a question between the individual and Christ. We are to help people to follow Christ, though they follow him differently from us. . . . . There is no doubt that the tendency among the denominations is to be more tolerant of others belief."

If the gentleman has decided that men and women can become Christians without believing and then being baptized into Christ he ought at least to explain the process. And when he talk's about their feelings in regard to those who aim to get around the plainest commands of Christ, he ought to credit the flesh with those feelings, only fleshly feeling would set aside divine instruction in order to swell their numbers. We wonder the man is not ashamed to be guided by feeling when he professes to be a mouth-piece for God! And then the tolerant tendency is spoken of. We would like to know what the toleration of men has to do with God's conditions of salvation? The gentleman evidently likes to drift with the current. And the attempt to conceal their declension under the pretext of helping others follow Christ, though they follow him differently is too transparent altogether. How can sanction of disobedience be helping them to follow Christ.

OUR CHILDREN.

"Forbid Them Not."

There is no sweeter story told
In all the Blessed Book,
Than how the Lord within his arms
The little children took.

We love him for the tender touch
That made the leper whole,
And for the wondrous words that healed
The timid, sin-sick soul.

But closer to his loving self
Our human hearts are brought,
When for the little children's sake
Jesus exercised spell is wrought.

For their young eyes his sorrowing face
A smile of gladness wore,
A smile that for his little ones
It weareth evermore.

The voice that silenced priest and scribe
For them grew low and sweet;
And still for them his gentle lips
The loving word repeat.

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea,—No. 32.

APPEARANCE OF THE COUNTRY ALONG THE WAY TO SINAI.

Do my young readers want to pause long enough in our lessons to take a good look at the country through which the children of Israel passed in their journey to Sinai?

A good map will be needed. Those of you who are studying the Senior Sunday School Quarterly, of Wilde & Co. Boston, Mass, for July, August and Sept, will have just such a map before you. You can see the two great roads marked, out, that people generally traveled when they wanted to go to Canaan, —the Way of Shur, that terminated at Hebron, (built you will remember before Zoan, in Egypt) and the way of the Red Sea, starting from the Northern point of the Gulf of Suez and passing Elath on the Gulf of Akabah. You must know about these roads, or you cannot understand our lessons. You would imagine that the Way of the Red Sea, led along] by the coast line of the Gulf of Suez, would you not? One would think so from the name of the road, but he must remember that both the Gulfs, Suez and Akaba, are but arms of the Red Sea, and that a highway connecting them would naturally be named, The Way of the Red Sea. Get your school Atlases, compare the map of Arabia, with the little map in the Quarterly. Do you see that little, pointed portion of land in the north-western part of Arabia, at the head of the Sea? That is the country that we are studying now. It seems very small, but in its desolate solitudes were wrought a part of the work, that is to help towards building God's Kingdom for eternity.

The children of Israel were led about in these wildernesses for forty years, to humble them, and to prove them and to know what was in their heart, whether they would keep his commandments or not. He humbled them, and suffered them to hunger, and feed them with manna, that he might make them know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord, doth man live. We must all cross the desert before we can get into Canaan.

In the way of trial must it be proved, whether we will keep God's commandments or not, we two must be humbled, must hunger, must drink of the waters of Marah.

God will not leave us. In showing us ourselves, and our weakness, he will be revealing himself; and we shall be happy, and happier in learning to lean wholly upon him.

Egypt, with its beauty and treasures, was to the children of Israel what the world is to us. You can see this very plainly as we go on. What a contrast there was between the beautiful and fruitful land of Rameses, bright with waving grasses, pleasant grain-fields, gay flowers, shadowy palms and acacia groves: and the bareness and silence and heat of the desert road! Plenty to eat, and sweet, cool waters behind, but nothing before, save rocks and drifting sands! Can they, will they endure? Will faith buoy them up and hope bare them on, till they are safe in the promised land? Will they keep the thought of the coming Christ in their minds trusting that God, through him, will save them with an everlasting salvation?

It was the only way whereby they could endure: it is the only way whereby we can be upborne. The loveliness of Canaan, must outshine the grandeur of Egypt, the treasure of promise must outweigh all the hardships that are to be borne before reaching the end of the race.

God is not cruel because he takes us over a stony path, to the kingdom. The master who leads a willing band to golden mines of Colorado, Africa, or Australia is not called a hard man because of the hardness of the way he must take them. They expect to face heat and cold and storm, to climb rocky steeps, to have poor fare, to meet enemies.

They love the Master because he guides them safely, and shares with them in his riches when the gold-fields are reached.

And the love is mutual. So it is with us and God. We look at the end to be gained and rejoice in the love that leads us there. Look again at the map in your quarterlies—you will see that the children of Israel journeyed northward till they had almost reached the land of the Philistines, and that when God turned them southward, "Gaza and its neighboring cities in Canaan were still garrisoned by Egyptian forces," Canaan was under Egyptian rule, for Joseph had gathered up the money of Canaan as well as that of Egypt. Gen. xlvii. 14 15. But they were not to go through the way of the land of the Philistines. Slaves that have just been freed are not fit for war. The combined armies of Egypt, Philistia and Canaan would have frightened them into a return to their oppressors. Canaan was near by the northern routes, but the way and time of God's choosing was the only way and time for their deliverance. Young converts would like to take the way of the Philistines, for Canaan is just in sight at the start; but they, like Israel, must be brought where the desert, the mountains of Attaka, the sea and the armies of Satan will shut them in, that they may learn to put their trust in God alone. But we are across the sea. A ride of two or three hours brings us to a cluster of seven springs, called Ayun Mousa, or the wells of Moses. They are on high ground. The water in most of it is too brackish to drink. It is a bright spot; standing by the springs we can see all over the country. The date-palm, the feathery tamarisk, the pomegranite and the apricot grow here. Leaving this sunny oasis, we strike out in a southeasterly direction over an immense plain of yellow sand, where there is scarcely a shrub or tree to cheer the eye. The great mountain wall of Jabel at Tih, is on our left. the sea, on our right. Some of you have seen our beautiful Alleghanies and the Rocky Mountain ranges crowned with singing pines; and cannot imagine how bleak these towering elevations look beneath that scorching sun. Sometimes we pass dry water courses, and bits of table-land that have the semblance of pyramids, and towers and tables; go by small hillocks formed of pebbles and great bowlders, reaching Ain Hawara, or the bitter well of Marah about noon on the third day. This well is forty or fifty miles from the wells of Moses, "The fountain is only one or two feet deep." The water tastes like Glauber Salts. I should not like to drink it, and no earthly being knows how to sweeten the nasty stuff. There is no branch, nor leaf, nor berry that can do it now. Only the Lord could point out the tree that would take away the dreadful taste from the waters, and it is only he who can sweeten the cup of sorrow, only he who can heal. We come next to Wady Ghurundel, or Elim, where the hosts of Israel encamped among the palm-trees, and Acacia thickets. There are few palm trees left, and the acacia is disappearing, leaving Elim, we pass what the Arabs call the Baths of Pharaoh—a warm spring that runs out from the base of mountain cliffs. The country becomes broken now into wild and rough and dreary hills. Sometimes we hear the croak of a raven, or the hoarse voice of the hyena, but never the song of a bird. At Wady Useit there are a few trees and some saltish water. Just beyond by the sea is another camping spot, and the wilderness of sin where the manna fell, and the people were fed with quails. But we must stop now and rest; we are too weary to go on.

Dear Restitution:

This is my first attempt to write to THE RESTITUTION. I am a little girl 10 years old, I go to the country church, I have one grandma sleeping in Jesus. I am trying to be a good girl so as to be saved when Jesus comes. Mrs. Randolph is our Sunday school teacher. My grandpa speaks every second Sunday. T. E. Adams was with us last week. Hope to meet you in the kingdom when Jesus comes.

MAUDE BROWN.

Dear Restitution:

We have written before that Bro. Foore had delivered his farewell sermon, but since that time he has been with us again, and had a grand and glorious meeting. During the week twenty-three were buried by baptism. We regret very much to loose such a faithful brother who has led so many into the light of the gospel. May God bless him as he leaves us to go to his Western field of labor and our prayers will be that he may ever be found faithful and obtain the crown that is laid up for them that overcometh.

"Every soul he has led to the foot the of cross,
Every Lamb he has brought to the fold,
Will be kept as bright jewels his crown to adorn,
In that beautiful city of gold."

Yours in hope of the soon coming kingdom.

LILLIE & NELLIE SEBRIGHT.

Dear Restitution:

As the Lord has prolonged my life up to this present time, I find it is time to review my subscription as I cannot do without the paper as it is all the gospel I have outside of the Bible. I love to read the letters from the dear brothers and sisters of the one precious faith. I can say with the Psalmist, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God." Psalm xlii. 1. This is my joy and hope of the soon coming blessed Redeemer, and call this poor, lonely one from a world of sin and sorrow, to behold my dear Savior and to be like him. John says, "For we shall see him as he is." This blessed hope gave me comfort in my dark hours of sorrow, knowing that soon, very soon, this trembleous body will be laid away with the hope of a glorious immortality in the first resurrection. I can say "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

I kindly ask Brother W. H. Wilson to give me some light on 2 Cor. v. 1, as it is a question often asked me, and oblige yours, in love.

J. CAUSDALE.

To the Household of Faith:

They that loved the Lord spake often one to another, therefore, I give in my testimony on the Lord's side. I can truly say that I am still striving to gain an abundant entrance into the Kingdom of God soon to be established upon the earth, made new at the coming of Christ. I do so love to read the good letters from others and I thought that some might like to hear from a poor lonely sister, isolated from those of like precious faith. O, how I would like to hear a good gospel sermon. If there are any preaching brethren passing through here I would like to have them stop and speak to this people that never heard the good news of the coming kingdom. I mean if the Lord prospers we will send for a preacher this winter when evenings get longer.

Many thanks to Brother Underwood for sending our much loved paper to me, it is a great comfort to me, and its pages are well read through. Now brothers and sisters let us hear from all that have not written. It is cheering to the isolated ones. Let us all try and do our duty in all things and keep ourselves unspotted from the world in these last days of sin and all kinds of wickedness. Let us run the whole Christian race so we may gain a crown at the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, is the prayer of your sister.

Will some of the brethren explain the 18th to 20th verses of 1 Peter iii. and oblige.

MRS. W. J. BEEBE.

Editor Restitution:

Dear brothers and sisters and all the readers of the Dear RESTITUTION, I will once more try and say a few words. I thought before when I wrote, probably that would be the last, but by the Lord's will I will write again. I read so many dear letters, and they do my heart good to read them for they show us that there are lots of us in the one faith. I pray we may all hold out faithful and be overcomers. It has been over 30 years since I was baptized into the Abrahamic faith and I want to hold out faithful to the end. I am 82 years old and my health is very poor and I hardly ever go to church. We have four here but THE RESTITUTION is my church. I read so many pieces from my dear old friends. I am so thankful for THE RESTITUTION, I have taken it ever since it was published. I will close for this time. Your sister in Christ, waiting for the Kingdom.

MRS. ELIZABETH PLEMMER.

Dear Sisters and Brothers in the faith:

During the past month, we have had the pleasure of hearing the gospel preached in this part of Missouri by Brother Almus Adams, his wife came with him, and Bro. T. E. Adams, of Kansas, was with us one night. Meeting was held just six miles south-east of Liberty, had good interest and six were baptized. Brother Adam's time was short and he had to close the meeting to meet another appointment. When he came here to Thornton, the Methodists had stretched a tent that would hold eight hundred people, and began their meeting on the 12th of July, the time set for our meeting. Brother Adams preached a few sermons and closed the meeting. We had a little meeting all to ourselves. God said, "where two or three are gathered together in my name there I am in their midst." People flocked to the tent to enjoy themselves and be with the crowd. The time has come when people will wander from the truth paying heed to false doctrine. Brother Adams thought it all for the best to close the meeting that work might be needed elsewhere. From here he went to Connor, Kansas, preached six sermons and baptized three men. From there he went to Randolph, a little village a mile and a half from here, and preached two sermons. Seed was sown that may yield a fruitful harvest. Brother Adams is a man of knowledge and wisdom, and has such a plain, simple way of expressing his thoughts that even a child could understand the Bible. He is well thought of in this country and the brethren always look forward for his return. We express our gratitude to the board for their kindness and hope they will continue to let him come to Missouri at least once a year. The harvest is great but the laborers are few. Bro. Adams and wife started for their home in Nebraska on the 24th. They will surely be among the ones that God will say to, "Well done." If any of the sisters or brothers should be passing through Kansas City, stop off and make us a visit. We would be pleased to meet ones of like faith but the saddest is to say good bye. O! let us just throw aside the veil and look unto the city of the New Jerusalem, where will be no sad farewell.

Vindication.

Truth cannot die! She may, for years,
Be trampled on by slander's feet;
Lie buried in a sea of tears,
And wear the garb of base deceit:
Yet, she will rise however deep
The sun may dip his burning prow
In accidental seas, he'll sweep
The mist again from Orient's brow.

Truth cannot die! Cold prison walls
May shut her in from air and light;
And none may hear her plaintive calls
For trial at the bar of Right:
Yet she will triumph. Virtue's tears,
Her swallowed up by thirsty sand,
Will undermine the massive piers,
And snap the bolts like giant's hand.

Truth cannot die! Her heart may breathe
Each arrow sped from Envy's bow;
And, helpless, reeking hands may wreathe
Her brow with cypress steeped in woe;
Yet she will live—the grain of corn
Lies dormant in old Winter's womb,
But, in the lap of Spring, 'tis born,
Adorned with crown of gorgeous bloom.

Truth cannot die! In dark-ene tombs
She may, for centuries, sleep on;
While twilight deepens into gloom,
And Hope, despairing, cry, "she's gone."
Yet, she'll awake, some easter morn,
With armor bright and gleaming sword;
She must prevail. Jehovah's throne
Is resting on her plighted word.

BY JOHN WILSON.

"Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart."

A LOVING GOD

"These are only two out of very many which testify of God's absolute just mercy. But let us return to Edith's logic, from which we are straying. If, as I have shown, Justice could not take a substitute, then Jesus could not suffer instead of man. Nor is there need for him to do so, because God's character and dealings forbid it. He does not hold man 'guilty of an infinite offence,' hence He can permit the repentant to come to him, and by penitence wash away his guilt. In truth, a change of mind, (including a belief in the promises of God,) and reformation,—the true meaning of repentance, as I told you Ella,—is God's only requisite for reconciliation, as Ezekiel (xviii.) grandly shews.

'The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him. But if the wicked will turn from all his sins, which he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live he shall not die. All his transgressions that he hath committed they shall not be mentioned unto him: in his righteousness that he hath done he shall live. Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God: and not that he should return from his ways, and live? Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive. Because he considereth, and turneth away from all his transgressions that he hath committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die. Yet saith the house of Israel, the way of the Lord is not equal. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal? Therefore I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord God. Repent and turn from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin. Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit for why will ye die, O house of Israel? For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn and live ye.'

But had we not better postpone our conversation, Edith, for I see you are suffering from headache?"

"No, cousin, oblige me by going on awhile: I am not worse than before; and I wish to have my mind eased upon this matter."

"At least, then, lie down on the couch. Annie, my child, come here and sit on my knee. And now tell me, darling, what mamma said when you ate the green fruit she had forbidden you?"

"But I am not to be scolded for them, Alfred."

"I am not going to scold, love I only want to know what she did."

"Why, when she knew, she looked so sorry, and did not kiss me that day. But when I told her how sorry I was for doing so naughty, she said I was punished enough because they made me sick, and so she would not say anything more about them, only told me not to grieve her any more. Why do you want to know?"

"I will tell you sometime, if you do not find out. And you will not do so again then, Annie?"

"Oh! no, brother, I should not like to grieve mamma, she would be so sorry."

"There, Ella and Edith, you have your answer. In like manner is God's forgiveness after confession and forsaking of sins. 'If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive our sins, and to cleans us from all unrighteousness.' Here is his own precedent, that reformation is all his justice requires for the offence against Himself. Death's sickness must be endured, like Annie's as the result of transgression. Annie if mamma had punished Ella because you did wrong, would it have made you better when you were sick?"

"Oh, brother Alfred, what a silly question: mamma would'nt have done."

"A child's true verdict upon the popular reasoning. If then, girls, substitutionary punishment had availed nothing in this little instance, could it in the other? This is answered by both reason and experience, for men die daily, proveing the truth of James' assertion that the wages of sin are—death.' Hence if we would not die forever it is needful that we be cleansed, washed, 'made free from sin.' But granting for argument's sake, that Christ did die in place of man, how is it of use to him?"

"His merits are imputed to the sinners account."

"Grant this, and what then can you say against the papist's doctrine of supererogation? Nothing; for the premises being admitted, he can build extra-righteousness on this, just as Mariolatry is erected upon immortal-soulism. What the Word says upon substitution and imputation is easily discerned. Look at Ex. xxxiii. 30, 32, 33. Moses pleads in one of Israel's cases of high treason,

'Oh, this people have sinned a great sin.
Yet now, if Thou wilt, forgive their sin—
And if not, blot me, I pray Thee, out of Thy Book which thou hast written.'

But clear and explicit comes forth the answer—He will neither punish the innocent with the guilty nor in his stead.—His words being,

'Whoever hath sinned against Me,
Him will I blot out of My Book.'

And nothing is imputed to man but his own good works, counting faith as the first of these.

'Therefore it was imputed to him (Abraham) for righteousness. Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead.'"

"So I see; but in the next verses it speaks of Jesus as being 'delivered for our offences.'"

"Yes, 'and raised for our justification.' 'For' cannot therefore mean 'instead of,' as in that case his resurrection would be to prevent our justification. Strange though it be, it is upon this proposition 'for' that the most of the dogma is built, and this you see is not a right usage for it is a secondary application of the word which is exalted into the primary meaning. I wonder how Mr. P. would like us to insist upon this rendering in Heb. vi. 20."

"But, Alfred, there are passages which in other words give the substitutionary meaning to the word. For instance the 53rd chapter of Isaiah."

"My dear sister, do not forget the fourth rule of your composition lessons;—not to take the secondary sense of any word till you find the primary inapplicable. Hence, where you cannot read 'for' in relation to cause you may render it 'instead of.' But you will not be reduced to its necessity in the chapter you mention.

'Surely he has borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows.'

But how? Turn to Matt. viii. 16, 17.

'They brought unto him many that were possessed with demons: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sickness."

You see that he suffers not as a victim but a companion; that he took them away from us, not suffered their burden in our stead—

'He was wounded because of our transgressions.
Bruised because of our iniquities;
The chastisement of our peace was upon him.
And with his bruises we are healed.'

And if this is applicable to us we ought the more to loathe those sins. But mark, who is speaking; not the sinner but the Seer.

'Because of the transgression of my people was he stricken,' is a sorrowful confession, the fact of which is fully proclaimed by the records of that 'transgression.' Acts iii. 13-15, 26; John i. 11. The 'peace' which made their Messiah suffer was their concord with other nations, in a way forbidden by their law. They did not retain their national holiness i. e. separateness, but making alliances with the heathen brought about such a state of things that their Messiah was slain by the joint action of their rulers and the Romans. If you read Ezra ix, it will show what nature of 'peace' the prophet speaks of. It is evidently national and social, not spiritual peace with God, the chastisement of which came unmeritedly upon their Messiah.

Thus hath the Lord 'made the iniquity of (them) all to meet upon him.' But will you notice that there is no word of the people escaping the chastisement which also fell on Messiah. And history records that they suffered its full measure."

"I must say that this new argument of yours is not wanting in appearance, but does not the Apostle quote the 5th verse and apply it generally—'Who was delivered for our offences.' And how are the Jews 'healed by his stripes? I thought they had been their curse."

"The blood they imprecated has followed them; but if it had washed away sin, how could it have been a cause for vengeance, and the whole of 'judicial satisfaction' he stigmatized as a foul murder? But because God 'will not contend forever' even the murder of the Prince of Life shall be forgiven them, when in sorrow of heart they again nationally confess thier great sin, crying 'Our fathers have done wickedly and rebelled against Thee.' And doubtless this chapter is the text of the 'great lamentation,' even as the 12th of the same book is of the rejoicing. Why are the 52nd and 54th chapters acknowledged as relating to the 'day of the Lord,' and the 53rd not? I think the chapter or subject begins properly in lii: 13, and I wish you to mark the 14th verse especially; and read the reference to it by John (xii. 37 to 41,) particularly that phrase, 'when he saw his glory.' Read also Zech. xii. 10 to 14, xiii. 1, with Rom. xi. 12, 15, 23 25, 27. Now tell me whether it is only a specious argument, as you have been thinking? As to the other matter I do not see that the Apostle is making a quotation at all."

"You must not be offended my dear brother, because I thought that 'avoiding Scylla you had fallen into Charybdis.' But I really did think that you were trying to make it accord with your belief, not your belief with the Word. I am now, however disposed to grant its application to Judah's time of repentance, but yet I think it was also a general reference."

"Yes, general, not individual; though even in this latter case it in no way inculcates vicarious sacrifice. Had not his life been 'made an offering because of sin' he had not 'seen seed' but now 'by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous,' 'Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe we shall also live with him.' It was needful are a Savior could effect the salvation of men, that he partake with them of nature; hence 'He made him sin on our account, who knew no sin.'"

False Christs.

"Among interesting foreign exchanges is the Literary Digest by Dauskeren of Copenhagen. From it we translated the subjoined singular yet historical data of the many false messiahs that have appeared since the year 130. The compilation is one based upon historical sources and therefore reliable.

Simeon, surnamed Bar-Cochba (son of a star) appeared in the reign of Hadrian, A. D. 130. He claimed to carry out the prophecy of Balaam. He conquered Jerusalem in 130, but was slain in 135.

Moses Cretensis came in the reign of Theodosius the younger in 434 A. D. He pretended to be a second Moses, and that he was sent to deliver the Jews of Crete He was soon unmasked, but escaped ere he could be punished.

Dunnan next followed during the Justinian reign A. D. 520. He, too, was called Moses. But the Ethiopian general, Elesbaan, caught him and caused him to be decapitated.

One Julian was set up as king by the Jews and Samaritans and was regarded as the messiah. This happened under the rebellion under the Justinian reign in 529. He was captured and beheaded.

Serenus appeared about 721 in Spain and secured a large following.

The twelfth century produced quite a number of false messiahs. Thus in 1137 one hails from France. In 1138 one appears in Persia and in Spain another came in 1157. Many of the Jews followed them.

In the year 1167 Daniel Alruf (Alray) came upon the scene at Fez. He persecuted the Jews unmercifully, but soon met an ignominious death. Benjamen Disraeli took this character for his theme in his Alray being a base pretender.

A false savior appeared about that time in Arabia who claimed to perform miracles. The king demanded proof of his abilities. The prophet retorted "that he might cut off his head and that he would come to life again." He was so beheaded, but he never came to life again.

About 1170 a false messiah appeared among the Jews beyond the Euphrates. As proof of his messiahship he claimed that he had been cured in one night from the leprosy.

Again another messiah appeared in Persia in 1174. He caused his followers to be greatly persecuted.

The cabilist David Almassu next followed in Moravia in 1176. One of his freaks was that he could make himself invisible. He was soon apprehended, put to death, and the Jews had to pay heavy taxes on his account.

Persia was again afflicted with a pretended savior in 1109 by a man named David el David. He was a magician and a man of learning. He conspired against the king, who caused him to be captured and beheaded. Many Jews who were his followers were sorely punished on his account.

Ismael Sophus was a Spanish messiah. In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries the craze seems to have abated. Some of the cabalists asserted that the exact time for the appearance of the real messiah should take place in 1368, yet none came. Abraham Abrabanel later on fixed the date as 1502. But even now no more candidates came.

With the opening of the sixteenth century messiahs again began to appear. The German rabbi, Asher Lammlein, caused much enthusiasm in Austria, causing many Jews and Christians to believe that he was the messiah. He promised to lead them under the banner "King of the Jews" into the Holy Land. He died suddenly. His followers then scattered.

During the eventful reign of Charles V. David Reuben appeared and claimed to be sent to lead the Jews to Palestine. He gained favor at court and was even received with distinction by the Pope Clement VIII. He was joined by Solomon Molchoffa, a Portuguese apostate Christian, who became the prophet of the movement. When later these two attempted to convert the emperor they were at once taken prisoners. David escaped with his life, while Solomon was burned at the stake.

In 1665 a false messiah appeared in the West Indies. He was quite successful among the Portuguese Jews. He promised to destroy Rome and overthrow antichrist and the Turkish empire.

In the low countries in 1024 a false messiah appeared. He created a great commotion, but his name is not known.

The most successful of all the false messiahs was Sabbathai Zebi, who took advantage of the peculiar expectations which in 1059 seemed to possess mankind like an epidemic. Rumor from the east told of great multitudes who from unknown parts marched to Arabia. They were supposed to be the lost ten tribes. From Arabia they were said to have sailed for Scotland, "with sails and cordage of silk." The sailors were reported speaking Hebrew and on the sails was this motto: "The twelve tribes of Israel." Zebi claimed to be the king of the kings of the earth and said that these events were signs of his coming. The Turkish government seized him as a dangerous agitator. To save his life, as he thought, he turned Mohammedan. He was finally beheaded. Zebi's influence lasts to this day.

Rabbi Mordecai, a German Jew, appeared in 1682 and succeeded in imposing himself on many. After he was unmasked as an imposter he fled from Italy to Poland.

Among the more remarkable imposters was a man named Frank, subsequently known as Baron Frank, said to have been a relative of the Russian emperor. He arose in the middle of the eighteenth century and propagated a new creed. A sect which he originated still exists in Poland. Zebi had largely influenced his career. His daughter led the followers after his death.

Jakuthiel, king of Israel, better known as Moses Chayim Luzzatto, next appeared in 1744 at Amsterdam, while Ari Schocher appeared at Siena, Both claimed to be miracle-workers. The first was a learned man. The latter was waylaid and put to death.

Jakuthiel, king of Israel, was the last imposter heard of in Europe and proved to be of the same caliber as those previously mentioned. He came in 1872. In Berlin he addressed the Jewish congregation. His text was, "Not with power nor with force, but with my spirit, says the Lord Zabaoth." His diplomatic note to the porte demanding a peaceful cession of Palestine was ridiculed. He disappeared as silently as he came."

Since the false christ of 1872, very many false christs and Elijahs and "women clothed with the sun," have appeared. There is one located at Rockford, Ill., who runs a licentious heaven. There is also another abomination in Chicago, run by Dr. Teed, who is the son of a woman named Beekman, who obtained a large following under the claim of being "the woman clothed with the sun." There are also others who do not claim to be Christ, but who profess to have Divine power to heal disease, which are equally deceptive. There is one in Chicago, who will have to stand trial in the courts on forty charges. Divine power never failed to cure disease, when exercised by Christ and his disciples, but there are too many dead people shipped from this man's houses under the cover of night, to believe that the cures of diseases he does effect, are accomplished by anything but by human means. Bear in mind this, there is never any failure in divine power.

John says: "Beloved, Believe not every spirit, but prove the spirits, (persons) whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world." John shows that all this will finally culminate in the appearance of "the antichrist, whereof ye heard that it cometh." John tells how you may know him, he says: "This is the antichrist, even he that denieth the Father and the Son."

Paul describes him as a blasphemous infidel, he says: "The man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition, he that opposes and exalts himself against all that is called God or that is worshiped; so that he sitteth in the temple of God, setting himself forth as God."

We read in Revelation: "He opened his mouth for blasphemies against God, to blaspheme his name."

This is also the description of the little horn of Dan. vii. 28: "He shall speak great words against the Most High." Also of the willful king in Dan. xi. 36: "He shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every God, and shall speak marvelous things against the God of gods." Any one may see by comparing the above quotations that they are all descriptive of the same person, and also that he has no reverence for any god. This cannot fit popery, because they do profess to reverence both God and Jesus, but this person "denieth the Father and the Son."

This infidel antichrist is yet to arise, he will make a seven years' covenant with the Jews, and prove faithless in three and a half years, and take away the daily sacrifice he restored to the Jews, and from that time he will set up an abomination that will last a thousand two hundred and ninety literal days, (see Dan. xii. 7-13,) and at the end of the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days, (45 days more) Daniel shall stand in his lot, and at this time, the true Christ will put an end to all false christs, and reign forever.

Conference Report.

Report of conference held at Lanark, Ill., Sept. 6th, 7th, 8th according to call. On Friday evening we were privileged to listen to Bro. A. J. Eychaner from the good words which were formerly spoken by our Master. Saturday forenoon was taken up by the brethren and sisters in speaking words of cheer to each other of the blessed King to come,—in fact it amounted to a feast. At 11 A. M. Bro. Eychaner again spoke to the brethren on the necessity of being strong in the faith—putting on the whole armor of God. Saturday afternoon reports were heard from the churches for the past year, and requests for an evangelist for the coming year seemed almost unanimous. On a vote for choice Bro. D. M. Hudder received a majority. Plum River and Spring Valley not making a decided answer, asking a little more time, may join in one in order that they may have preaching once in four weeks at one Point. Saturday night and Sunday was taken up by attentive listeners and some eager searchers after the truth, which ended in the obedience of one young man, Rathburn from Hillsdale, Ill., and Cora Neatheny of Lanark, Ill., by putting on Christ by baptism. Sunday night Bro. Baker of Cedar Rapids, addressed the brethren on the importance of holding fast and living true lives. This ended one of the blessed feasts priviledged to the brethren of the one faith, looking for the glorious appearance of our Master.

Bro. Eychaner was called away during the forenoon to preach a funeral about fifteen miles in the country, but returned in time to fill his appointment at 3 P. M. on Sunday afternoon, returning to his work in Iowa on Sunday night.

J. M. GLOFFELTY.

OBITUARY.

Died Sept. 2, 1895, Elwyn, the beloved, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Brady, after only a few days of untold suffering of erysipelas. He calmly breathed away his life Monday noon, surrounded by family and friends. All that human aid could do could not loosen the cruel pang of death. He received Christian Immersion in youth and died a noble young man of only 22 years, 8 months, and 14 days.

His life is worthy of imitation and praise; he was highly spoken of in social circles and loved by his many friends.

His future was a promising one, with no visable shadow to mar his anticipations, having spent the past winter in the college of Winfield, Kans., and would soon have entered for the second year course but alas, death came too soon. After funeral service in the M. E. Church, Tuesday, he was peacefully and sadly laid away in the Oxford cemetery, to share in the great roll call of eternity. He is the first severed link of the once happy family, and leaves parents, one brother and five sisters to mourn the loss of their loved one.

But the aching hearts and tear dimmed eyes will be made glad when all shall meet and clasp glad hands in the glorious regeneration.

O think dear ones, all shall be blest,
And friends again shall meet;
For God, who pities man, hath shown,
A blessing for the eyes that weep.

His bright smile shall fall again.
The eyes that now overflows with tears;
These weary hours of woe and pain.
Are promises of happy years.

For God will mark each sorrowing day,
And number every secret tear.
And the restitution's long age of bliss shall pay
For all we have to suffer here.

A. J. DAVIS.

Died at his home in Circleville, Ind., Joseph T. Stewart, at the age of 32 years, of consumption. He leaves a wife and one little boy about 15 months old. Also many friends and the church of which he was a member. He was immersed about one year ago by the writer. He was well versed in Bible, and quoted more Bible during his sickness than any person that I ever was acquainted with, and he sang the songs he had learned as long as he could sing which was up to within a few hours of his death. Funeral by the writer. Words of comfort was given from many passages of Scripture on the coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead and then he was laid away to rest untill the Master comes.

J. S. HATCH.

Moses Miller was born in the town of Chester, Mass., January 8th, 1800, and died August, 24th, 1895, at the home of his son and only child Oliver L. Miller, with whom he has lived for some years in Swan Creek township, Fulton county, Ohio, aged 86 years, 7 months and 16 days.

Our brother moved to Wellingington, Ohio, some 50 years ago and was for some years a member of the Congregational Church at that place. He came to Fulton county some 28 years ago and having heard the Gospel of the kingdom preached by the late Brother Jas. Watkins and his own brother, the late, Ephriam Miller, and he became obedient to the faith, and in 1872 was baptized into Christ. He has since led a consistent Christian life. His hope was based upon the promise made of God unto the Fathers. He was ever ready to speak concerning the kingdom of God, and in private to contend earnestly for the faith once for all delivered to the saints. His work is done, he has finished his course. He has for some time suffered with rheumatism in the hip and kidney trouble. In March of this year he had a fall from the effects of which he never recovered but gradually wasted away suffering great pain, but he has gone to his grave at a full age like a shock of corn fully ripe. He was laid away in the Baker cemetery on Tuesday Aug. 27th to await the summons of the Life Giver. As there was no one of our faith to preach, Elder F. M. Gibbs, of the Disciple Church preached the funeral sermon from Hebrews 12-1 2. We sorrow not as those that have no hope but can truely say:

How blest the righteous when he dies,
When sinks a weary soul to rest.
How mildly beams the closing eyes
How gently heave the expiring breast.

Life's duty done as sinks the clay
Back to its God the spirit flies.
While heaven and earth combine to say,
How blest the righteous when he dies.

May he who holds the keys of death soon come and open the graves where his beloved sleep. Then we shall be satisfied when we awake with his likeness.

THOS. MERIDEW.

Christ expects his brehtren to cooperate with divine agencies, and walk through the world, blessing and being blessed. Then "thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward. Then shalt thou call, and the Lord shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am.' The truth cherished in the heart will shed a heavenly fragrance to those on the outside. Let us individually cultivate the precious plant of love that we may work effectually for souls that are ready to perish.

...PERANCE.

At The Bar.

"Who speaks for this man?" From the great white Throne,
Veiled in its roseate clouds the voice came forth;
Before it stood a parted soul alone,
And rolling east and west, and south and north,
The mighty accents summoned quick and dead:
"Who speaks for this man, o'er his doom be said?"

Shivering he listened, for his earthly life
Had passed in chill, unmoved calm away;
He brought no glory to his daily strife,
No wreath of fame, or genius' fiery ray;
Weak, base, ungifted, quiet and obscure,
Born in the shadow, dying 'mid the poor.

Lo, from the solemn concourse hushed and dim,
The widows' prayer, the orphans' blessing rose;
The struggler told of trouble shared by him
The lonely of clearest hours and softened woes;
And like a chorus spoke the crushed and sad,
"He gave us all he could, and what he had."

And little words of loving kindness said,
And tender thoughts, and help in time of need,
Sprang up like leaves by soft Spring showers fed,
In some waste corner; sown by chance-dropping seed;
In grateful wonder heard the neediest soul,
Such trifles gathered to so blest a whole.

O ye, by circumstances' strong fetters bound,
The stone so little, and the bond so frail,
Do but the best ye can for all around;
Let sympathy be true, nor courage fail;
Winning among your neighbors your and work
Some witness at your trial hour to speak.

The Sin of It.

No age of the world has poured more light upon the ills to which flesh is heir than the present. Not the least of these ills, either for the time and thought already given or for the attention it justly deserves, is the evil of intemperence. There is a quickening of interest in all the land in the drunkard. What shall be done with him? Can he be saved? Temperance has the best and perhaps the dullest of speakers; meetings are held under every variety of control—in school-houses and churches and hotels; in woods and by the sea. Cures of every kind are being advocated for gain by any number of medical experts, but one most important fact is constantly overlooked: drunkenness is sin.

Speakers bring tears in painting the squalor of the drunkard's home, the woe grimed into the faces of women and children, or the awful horrors or delirium. Such efforts turn the mind wholly upon the fruits of the drinking. The result is emotional pity for the drunkard, and often indeed a mere maudlin sympathy is generated. We say "maudlin," for it is not grounded on the cause of the mischief, and winks at the real element of harm in the matter. The truth is, this course steers you away from the sin itself to its consequences, and practically your powder is wasted.

Is it a sin for a man to shake who has the chills? Is it a sin for a man to limp who has a broken leg? Is it a sin for a man to stagger whose brain is reeling with poison? The consequences are God's terrible protest against the crime. Do you say the man is diseased? True: the brain is diseased and the will is diseased, and the whole being is diseased; but the disease itself, root and branch, is the fruit of sin. The man stood erect, body and will alike under the control of the "I," the inner king. He was at ease. Now that body, with its nerves and thirst, is his worst enemy. Now that will is a force, but in the direction of greater sin. Now the "inner king" is himself captive in his own capital—a slave to appetite.

Whatever else we do, we cannot treat this man successfully while we shut our eyes to his sin. This drinking habit, with all that it involves, is top, bottom, and both sides a moral problem. The nineteenth century, with its many cures and its plethora of wisdom, must, after all, go back to the permanent text-book of temperance, the Bible. Unconditional surrender to God, body, soul, and spirit, first; then, abstain from this form of evil. No one can invent a stronger prohibition than God has given. Look not on the wine.—National Temperance Advocate.

Announcement.

Home-Seekers Excursion During Sept. and Oct.

Agents of the Nickel Plate Road will be pleased to furnish, upon application, complete information relative to these excursions. Bear in mind the elegantly equipped through trains via the Popular Route.

As workmen are moved to be diligent in service when they hear their master's footfall, so, doubtless, saints are quickened in their devotion when they are conscious that he whom they worship is drawing near. He has gone away to the Father for awhile, and so he has left us alone in this world, but he said "I will come again and receive you unto myself," and we are confident that he will keep his word.—Rev. Charles H. Spurdeon.

Agents of the Nickel Plate Road are in possession of information which will enable them to quote special excursion rates to points in the North-west, West, South-west, and South for tickets sold during Sept. and Oct. Further information may be secured by applying to local agents of that popular low-rate Line.

When I first set out in the ministry, I began to preach in a very plain, boyish spirit, the glorious gospel of Christ. I had the prospect of worldly advantages before me, but I willingly gave them up for the sake of the truth, and I considered being made an instrument of converting one soul, the richest preferment upon earth.—Hill.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Dingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Please write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill: some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one treated the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 25, 1895. NO. 36.

Poetry.

Who is my Brother?

We are quick to see the ill we are heir to Share the blame;
We can think for other's shame but how could our deed end will?
We can talk with begin thing, we can sing a pleading song.
But we close and clasp the hands that are lifted to be still.

Is it right, O thou, and thou, juggler with the art of speech?
Shall we only rhyme and teach, with a calm judicial brow?
Nay! the sacrifice for all, platted thorn-
and cup of gall.
Till injustice yield to love, and we all like brothers live!

—James Buckham.

Reckon the Profit.

"For what doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and forfeit his life? For what should a man give in exchange for his life?" Mark viii. 36, 37.

The above may truly be styled a common sense question, even should we disassociate it from every other consideration, and apply it to this life alone. We have frequently noticed what are styled long-headed business men, who haven't time to stop and compute the profit as suggested by the above question, until forced to do so, being prostrated by a ruined physical system, having so long violated the laws of their being in their mad rush for wealth.

To gain this end, everything is sacrificed, he has no time to enjoy the society of his family, or consider his domestic relations, he has not even time to eat; at noon he rushes off to a restaurant and dispatches his meal as rapidly as possible, and then off to business again. He begrudges the time spent in sleep, and encroaches upon that as much as nature will allow. Oftentimes their nervous tension is such, that it is difficult to obtain natural sleep. I was acquainted with one of these men who made a contract with another man who possessed magnetic influence to go every day, and put him to sleep. He has no time to consider the life to come, as a neighbor of ours said he had no time to go to church, that is set entirely on one side. He gains wealth, he gains also ill-health, and gains a painful life of misery because of a ruined physical system, and he gains a premature grave, and loses the life to come. Reckon the profit, what has he gained? "What doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and forfeit his life?" Which is the greatest the profit or the loss?

In this chase for money, moral questions are set a side as is illustrated by the following, clipped from the "Chicago Daily Record:"

At the time of President Arthur's death a number of Chicago people went to New York to attend the funeral, and among this number were Judge Gresham, (late Secretary of State) and Mr. Lincoln. Upon the journey eastward several of the party fell to discussing a certain questionable measure which was at that time before the Illinois legislature at Springfield, and in the course of the discussion, surprise and regret were expressed by one or another member of the party that Lawyer—of Chicago had gone to Springfield and joined the lobby in advocacy of the questionable measure referred to. Thereupon there ensued an argument as to the propriety of an attorney's serving a client without regard to the justice or the dishonesty of that client's cause. Mr. Lincoln took up the cudgel quite briefly in defense of the proposition that a lawyer, so long as he was paid for his services, was justified in advocating an unrighteous cause; with reference to the particular affair at Springfield Mr. Lincoln saw no wrong in the part played by the attorney therein, since the attorney represented the interests of a corporation for pay and was wholly justified in so doing, even though the cause which he advocated was prejudicial to the interests of the public.

Judge Gresham sat in the seat just ahead of the party engaged in this discussion, and it was observed that he grew restless under the argument made by Lincoln. Finally he turned about in his seat and facing Lincoln he said sternly: "Young man, I knew your father well and I loved him dearly. He never would have expressed the sentiments I have just heard you express and I am shocked to know that it is Abraham Lincoln's son who has advocated that which, if generally approved and practiced, would speedily result in the demoralization of public and private morals. Whatever your sentiments upon this subject may be I advise you, when tempted hereafter to utter them, to remember that you are Abraham Lincoln's son and to keep silent."

Mr. Lincoln made no answer to this reproof, but the scene was one which none of the many others who witnessed it has never forgotten."

Think of it, a man in high life like Abraham Lincoln's son saying: "so long as he was paid for his services, was justified in advocating an unrighteous cause." Money justifies anything in their eyes. Reckon the profit and loss and what do we find? We may find that he gains wealth, but looses both this life and the life to come, and thus looses the opportunity to enjoy the wealth he has gained. Hence even his gain becomes loss, all on account of the methods used to obtain wealth.

"What shall a man give in exchange for his life?" Those who gain as it were "the whole world," pay dearly for it, he gives a great deal of labor, worry and anxiety, besides this life and the life to come in exchange for it, and after having gained the same, so soon slips from his grasp. "For what is a man profitted if he gain the whole world, and lose or forfeit his own-self?" Luke ix. 25.

"What shall a man give in exchange for his life?" That is, what are you willing to give in exchange for the life to come? Are you willing to give this life with all its possibilities? It is seldom at this day that anyone is required to part with his or her physical life for the life to come, but it is not to be withheld in case it should become necessary.

But in any case the service of our life is required. Service according to the talent we have, is required of every one, there is not a single person exempt. There is not an individual but what can perform some service for the Master, and every one will be judged according to the use made of the talent possessed. Are you willing to bear testimony for him, both by word and life? Are you ashamed to confess him everywhere? If so, remember what Jesus says: "For whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in his own glory, and of the Father, and of the holy angels."

"Every one who shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God: but he that denieth me in the presence of men, shall be denied in the presence of the angels of God." How does the case stand with us?

Have we reckoned the profit to be gained by service rendered God, and contrasted it with what is to be gained by service to self and the world? If not, let us do so, and act as wise men and women should do in this sinful generation.

W. H. WILSON.

PSALM 90.
91 COM. VER.

1. David's praise for an ode. The one who dwelleth in the responsive-help of the Most High will have encamped in the shelter of the God of the heavens:

2. He will say unto the Lord, my intervening helper art thou and my refuge, my God; I will hope in him.

3. Because he will deliver thee out of the snare of the hunters and from a troublesome world;

4. With his back will he shelter thee and beneath his wings wilt thou hope; With shield will his truth encompass thee;

5. Thou wilt not have been afraid of a fear by night and of a dart that flieth by day,

6. Of a thing that goeth its way through in darkness, of a casualty or a midday demon.

7. A thousand will fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right-hand: but unto thee it will not draw nigh,

8. Moreover with thine eyes wilt thou contemplate and thou wilt see a requital of obdurate-sinners;

9. Because thou, O Lord, art my hope; the Most High hast thou made my refuge.

10. Evils will not come unto thee and a scourge will not draw nigh thy habitation:

11. Because on his angels will he enjoin concerning thee, that they watch to guard thee in all thy ways;

12. And upon hands will they bear thee up, lest perchance thou smite thy foot against a stone.

13. Thou wilt tread upon asp and basalisk, and thou wilt tread down lion and dragon.

14. Because in me hath he hoped and I will deliver him; I will shelter him, because he knoweth (hath comprehended) my name.

15. He will invoke me and I shall hearken to him; with him am I in tribulation, and I shall deliver him and glorify him,

16. With length of days shall I fill (satisfy) him, and I shall shew him my instrumental-salvation.

PSALM 91 (92 COM. VER.)

1. A psalm for an ode for the day of the sabbatic-observance (rite or period).

2. It is a good thing to confess unto the Lord, and to exalt the strain unto thy name, O thou Most High;

3. To declare thy mercy in the morning and thy truth at night,

4. With ten-stringed psaltry accompanying an ode with cithera;

5. Because thou hast made me to rejoice, O Lord, in thy creation, and in the works of thy hands I shall be glad.

6. How have thy works been magnified, O Lord; Thy thoughts have become very deep.

7. A man without sense will not comprehend and a man without understanding will not understand them.

8. When the obdurate-sinners have sprung up like grass as it were, and all those who are engaged in the transgression have peeped through, would that they might have perished unto the age of the age.

9. But thou, O Most High, art forever, O Lord.

10. Because lo, thine enemies will perish, and those who engage in the transgression will have been scattered,

11. And my horn will have been exalted like a unicorn's, and my old age will be in plenteous (lit. fat) mercy.

12. And mine eye hath looked upon mine enemies, and mine ear will listen unto those who have withstood me, who are doing wickedly unto me.

13. A justified one will flower out like a palm-tree as it were, like the cedar, that will have been enlarged on the Libanus (the Lebanon range of mountains).

14. Those who have been planted in the house of the Lord, in the courts of our God will flower out;

15. Then will they have been enlarged in a fertile old-age, and they will enjoy,

16. Having declared that the Lord my God is upright, and that there is no iniquity in him.

PSALM 92 (93 COM. VER.)

1. For the day of the pro-sabbath (or the sabbatic period) when the earth hath been inhabited; David's praise for an ode. The Lord hath asserted kingship (or his royalty): he hath clothed himself with propriety; The Lord hath clothed himself with ability and girded himself: yea forsooth he hath stayed up the inhabited (earth) that will not have been shaken:

2. Thy throne is ready from then on: From the animate-age art thou.

3. The rivers, O Lord, have lifted up, the rivers have lifted up their voices,

4. With voices of many waters; wondrous are the billows of the sea; wondrous is the Lord among high ones.

5. Thy testimony hath been assured exceedingly;

6. Sanctification becometh thy house, O Lord, unto a length of days.

PSALM 93 (94 COM. VER.)

1. David's psalm for a fourth of a sabbatic-period.

2. A God who will requite a Lord, the God who will requite hath spoken openly.

3. How long will obdurate-sinners, O Lord, how long will obdurate-sinners boast?

4. How long will they utter and talk iniquity, will all those engaged in the transgression talk?

5. They have humbled thy laity, O Lord, and thine inheritance have they afflicted:

6. Widow and orphan have they slain and proselyte have they murdered:

7. And they have said, The Lord will not see, nor will the God of Jakob understand.

8. Understood forsooth ye among the laity who are without sense, and may ye perchance who are without savor have become thoughtful.

9. Doth not he who planted the ear hear? or he who moulded the eye see minutely?

10. Will not he who chasteneth nations convict? He who teacheth man the way to comprehend?

11. The Lord comprehendeth the thoughts (or reasonings) of men, that they are without utility.

12. Blessed-happy the man whom thou, O Lord, shalt chasten and whom thou shalt teach from out thy law.

13. To calm him from wicked days, until thou mayest dig a pit for the obdurate-sinner,

14. Because the Lord will not thrust away his laity and will not utterly give over his inheritance.

15. Until righteousness shall return in a judicial-way, and all the upright in heart have it. Interlude.

16. Who will stand up for me against those who do wickedly and who will stand beside and along with me against those who are engaged in the transgression?

17. If the Lord had not been my responsive-helper, my soul had shortly sojourned in hades (the grave).

18. If I said my foot hath slipped, thy mercy, O Lord, responded to my cry.

19. O Lord, according to the multitude of my woes in my heart, thy consolations have loved my soul.

20. Shall a throne of transgression be associated with or beside thee, one that fabricateth toil by decree?

21. They will hunt for a justified one's soul and innocent blood will they condemn.

22. And the Lord hath become my refuge, and my God a responsive-helper of my hope.

23. And he will repay them their transgression and their wickedness: The Lord our God will make them to vanish away.

PSALM 94 (95 COM. VER.)

1. David's praise for an ode. Come, let us be glad in the Lord; let us alala unto God our Saviour.

2. Let us come before his face with confession, and let us alala unto him with psalms;

3. Because our God is a great Lord, and a great King over all the gods:

4. Because the Lord will not thrust away his laity; because in his hand are all the ends of the earth, and the heights of his mountains;

5. Because his is the sea and he made it, and the dry (land) his hands moulded.

6. Come, let us worship and fall down before him, and lament before the Lord who created us.

7. Because he is our God and we are a laity of his pasture and sheep of his hand.

8. Today if ye will hear his voice harden not your hearts, as in the embitterment in the day of the trial in the wilderness,

9. When your fathers tried me and proved and saw my works;

10. Forty years long was I annoyed with that generation, and I said they do always err in their heart, and have not comprehended my ways.

11. As I swore in my wrath they shall not enter into my final-rest. (katapausis)

COMENT.

The 90th psalm as we would expect from the number is a consummation of consummations and as a prophetic teaching depicts a blissful state "devoutly to be wished for" and a hope of hopes "for those who fear God and watch to keep his commandments." Observe the 9th verse fully brings out the Messianic import of the whole psalm, "Because thou O Lord art my hope" is addressed to Christ as "our Lord" and not to "the God Omnipotent" or "the Most High," as is brought out clearly in the next clause of the same verse which says "The Most High hast thou made thy refuge." The 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th and 15th verses have all been interpreted in apostolic teachings for us as Messianic and personally applicable only to the Christ himself. Of course all who become partakers of the Christ-life are included by implication in the promises of the 16th verse which is a resurrectional in its numerical import like the 8th verse also of this psalm "With thine eyes moreover wilt thou contemplate and thou wilt see a requital of obdurate-sinners." When? is the natural query raised here. This will be a judgment scene will it not? "Now it remaineth for all men once to die and after that a judgment." It must be in time then after resurrection and judgment when the saint is in a state of glory, is it not?

The 91st psalm is also an "ode" but an ode of "confession" while the 90th was an "ode of praise" distinctively stated in the heading. The heading of the 91st states that this ode is designed for the day of the sabbatic (something). What? Is it the regularly recurring Jewish seventh day observance? I think not. It was probably a regularly recurring day of the Levitical service during the year, which was typical of the great reality still in the future of the coming kingdom of the Christ, and is the great confessional of the royal priesthood of the new creation as appears in the 5th verse, "Because thou hast made me to rejoice, O Lord, in thy creation and in the works of thy hands I shall be glad." The same thought amplified in the 6th and 7th verses. The exaltation to judicial-rule becomes apparent in the 12th verse. The glory and the joy of salvation becomes more and more apparent in the 13th and 14th verses and on to the end.

The 90th psalm was a consummation and also conjunctive in its import. The 91st is the first step after the conjunction nine series full and one on the new—the judicial assertion of the new royalty under God and the confession of his uprightness as the Creator.

The 92nd psalm as we learn from the heading is also "an ode of praise" that David is the author and that it was designed for an appropriate praise-offering to be sung on a day known in the Levitical service as "the Pro-sabbath" or as it is called in the gospels "the Preparation day" or the day preceding "the great day" of the Pascha. What did this day and ceremony prefigure in the new creation? Can we not learn possibly from the burden of this psalm? This day in the actual experience of the Christ was the day of his crucifixion and death and burial. The preceding day was the day of actual trial and condemnation of the innocent for the guilty, "and with his stripe have we been healed." So we found the 91st psalm appropriate for this day as announcing the condemnation of the obdurately wicked who are held responsible for the necessity of this divine offering and sacrifice. But the 92nd psalm we find to be a pean of praise of triumphant victory, which is just what Calvary assures us of "Royalty" is asserted, "the throne is ready." "The rivers" and "billows" here are rivers and billows of peoples saved. "The Lord among high ones" is "our Lord" "exalted above authorities and official-powers in heaven and upon the earth," with "a name above every name, etc." "Thy testimony hath been assured exceedingly." Whose? The testimony of "the Faithful Witness," is it not?

"Sanctification becometh thy house, O Lord, unto a length of days." Whose house? God's house" is it not? "over which Christ as a Son" is made Lord, "our Lord" is it not? So true to its number we have in this "ode" the prophetic consummation of God's sonship in a house.

The 93rd psalm is also according to its heading David's psalm and "for a fourth of a sabbatic-period." What "fourth?" I think a so-called fourth day" of "the new creation." It is a prophetic assertion and teaching of the exaltation of judgment and requital." "Be thou exalted thou who judgest the earth: Pay in the way of requital unto the arrogant." Consummate in this. "For a fourth" day—that is a day of judgment. A third as a first harmonic in the assertion of the law of righteousness in this new period or order of things. Messianic because Christ is the judge by God's decree.

The 94th psalm has the heading "David's praise for an ode" and is one of "confession," "praise" and triumphant "alala." It is prophetic of judgment having been asserted or consummated. Because our God is a great Lord and a great king over all the gods"—"Because in his hand are all the ends of the earth, and the heights of his mountains." The repentance and lamentation of Israel has come and the restoration to favor and consequent true worship and acknowledgement of past sin. "The remnant" has finally come back, but with the vitality of the Christ "seed" the restoration proves to be as Paul argues of "all Israel."

"And ye will comprehend that I am Lord, when I have opened your graves to lead up my laity out of their graves." Hesaias xxxvii. 13 also 11th verse, "And the Lord talked with me saying, Son of Man, These bones are the whole house of Israel." Moreover "the promises and gracious gifts of God are without change of purpose."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

Judge Not.

How often it is the case that people are too apt to judge one another of wrong motives. It seems to be human nature to think evil of others than good, and not unfrequently some little trifling thing, dwelled upon and magnified, will result in smirching the good name of some innocent one who is not aware that they have done anything to cause offense.

In this surging tide of selfish desires there are few burden-bearers, few that know the trials and troubles that oppress there fellow men, and few that care to know. It is a sad, sad plight, to be in but nevertheless true, and not only true of the world, of which we could expect nothing more of, but, bitter truth, the church is also contaminated with this same spirit of selfish purposes. What can be done when those that claim to be followers of Christ, are judging one another, and setting at naught one another?

Paul asks the question. "Why dost thou judge thy brother, and why dost thou set at naught thy brother? Know ye not that we must all stand before the judgement bar of God, and there render an account for our deeds?" Would it not be well if instead of judging each other and rendering our decisions, we enquire into the case of the erring one. It may be he is staggering along with burdens almost too great to bear, and in the discouragement of life has almost fainted by the way-side. Where are the good Samaritans, to lend the helping hand? We see many who censure, many who laud his faults and shortcomings, but where are the comforting ones, to reach out the helping hand to assist him in escaping the dark abyss, toward which his frail craft is speeding? Child of God, is it possible you have forgotten your mission? Throw out the life line, help the strugling ones. A kind word will do more to assist him than all the sharp words you in your indignation could heap upon him. Be gentle and patient. Remember the Scripture says that if any of you do err from the truth and one convert him, let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death and shall hide a multitude of sins. Would we not rejoice to know in that great day that we had been the means of saving a soul from death. Let us be more diligent in seeking to rescue the perishing instead of pushing them farther out and away, from the light house of divine truth.

LYDIA CHAPLIN.

"Serve the Lord with gladness," said the psalmist (Psa. 100: 2.) some serve him gladly, some serve him sadly. Those who serve him sadly do not know him. Their conversation is not complete....See the man who serves God with gladness: hither and thither he is tossed and buffeted like a ship on a troubled sea. But that is but the surface; in his heart dwells an abiding peace—he accepts God's will and serves him gladly. The thing is to have a natural life. Take a bird, for instance. It lives naturally and sings—it cant help singing. He who serves God gladly cannot help singing. He is a hallelujah canary inside, a bird of paradise.—Gen. Wm. Booth.

The saint whose crown of glory shines brightest in men's memories is the man who "rises on stepping stones of his dead self to higher things," the man who has been knocked down many times in conflict with evil, but who has scrambled to his feet and continued to struggle, however weakly.—Christian Register.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

MILLIONS upon millions are walking in the vanity of their mind, having the understanding darkened. They lift up their souls to a God of their own imagination.—burn incense to vanity, and worship molten Gods," (dollars, half dollars and quarters and dimes). Jer. xviii. 15; x. 15.

WISDOM must be daily applied to and obeyed, for she says: "Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye children; for blessed are they that keep my ways. Hear instruction and be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of doors; for whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain favor of the Lord." Prov. viii. 32.

MERCY must be shown to the poor, and their cause advocated, for it is written: "Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord shall deliver him in time of trouble. The Lord will preserve him and keep him alive; and he shall be blessed upon the earth." Psa. xli. 1. This is the preservation we poor mortals need,—eternal life in incorruptible bodies; and the spirit declares that the character referred to will experience it on earth, not in heaven.

READER, are you desirous of living eternally upon this earth with Christ and all the adopted children of God, when sin and sorrow and death shall have passed away? If so you must believe the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, be immersed for the remission of past sins,—and then, God being your Father, with his help you must strive to live righteously to the end of life's journey, and a crown of life that fadeth not away will be yours when Jesus comes.

FAILURE to discern God's dispensational arrangements is one great source of the perversion of his truth. Almost every one labors under the impression that this is a remedial dispensation, and all the hopes of the most devout religionists center in the system of means now in force. Nothing could be farther from the truth. This is a preparatory and testing time; a time in which people who hear the joyful sound are prepared by trial of faith, and the perfecting of their moral and spiritual character with a view to endowment with power from on high, that, in association with Christ, they may be able to put down all the authorities and powers of evil which curse the world.

ONE by one human expedients to redeem the world prove abortive. Every days experience proves the truth of the divine record,—that nothing short of the strong hand of omnipotence will put down social and political wrongs. Those whose privilege it is to understand the outline of Jehovah's purpose knows right well that nothing short of the presence and power of their Lord and Master, the Christ of God, will be able to cope with and destroy all the wicked and malicious intelligencies of these days and bring back the race to God. The announcement that the "kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our God and of his Christ," presents us with the only solution of our social problems. That will be a kingdom in which purity and peace and love prevail, and in which the character of Christ will be impressed upon every institution, and his power invested in all those exalted to reign with him over the nations of earth.

MANY a bewildered man asks where he has come from? and why he has come at all, and where he is going to? He asks for the key of knowledge, but no one seems to know where it can be found, although there are plenty ready to give advice; and in justice to them we say they give advice they have taken themselves. Some have taken Darwin's works; others have taken Strau's works, and still others, Bradlaugh's or Ingersoll's works. Each class adduces evidences of its own peculiar theory, although destructive of each other. And so the anxious enquirer may read author after author till he has all the world's wisdom that he can hold, but he knows only what the others think of man's origin and destiny, and for the life of him cannot decide what is the truth. Oh, man, turn to the Bible, that purports to be the book of God; read it with the same earnestness that you have read the philosophy of the day, and the problem of human life and destiny will be solved; and the solution will satisfy you.—you will no more be tossed about,—no more bewildered.

The Bible.

We hope to keep these stray verses agoing,—they are full of excellent advice given in the right spirit:

"Study it carefully,
Think of it prayerfully,
Deep in the heart let its pure precepts dwell.
Slight not its history,
Ponder its mystery.
Some can't see peace it has fondly or well.

Accept the glad tidings,
The warnings and chidings,
Found in this volume of heavenly love;
With faith that's unfailing,
And love all prevailing,
Trust in it's promise of life evermore.

With fervent devotion,
And thankful emotion,
Hear the blest welcome, respond to its call;
Life's purest oblation,
The heart's adoration,
Give to the Savior who died for us all.

May this message of love,
From Jehovah above,
To all nations and kindreds be given,
Then the consecrated shall raise
Joyous anthems of praise,
Hallelujah! on earth and in heaven."

AT a Wesleyan Methodist Missionary society meeting some time since a sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Horton, in which we are told "he gave an able exposition of the 2nd Psalm, showing that it was the duty of the churches to take part in winning the heathen for the Master's inheritance." It is hard to know how he read that Psalm. We find nothing in it about winning the heathen for the Master's inheritance. And we have the benefit of an infallible comment upon this. Scripture in Heb. i. 6. It clearly shows that it is when God bringeth again the first begotten into the world that he will say I have set my King upon my holy hill of Zion," and for the asking will give him the nations for his inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession. It will be seen that God his Father makes a promise of this as a gift; and the fact that the Son will have to break them (the nations) to pieces like a potter's vessel, shows how wide of the truth the gentleman's "able exposition" is. Only utter ignorance of God's revealed purpose would permit such perversions of the Scriptures.

WE regard it as our duty, in view of the lateness of the hour to warn all who have named the name of Christ against the corrupting ones who with the doctrines of the kingdom of God and of life only in Christ in their heads, yet practically obliterate the line which divides the servants of God from the servants of flesh and sin, and reduce the truth to soulless propositions. These are no doubt well satisfied with themselves,—think themselves rich, and increased in goods, and needing nothing,—not knowing that they are wretched and poor, and miserable, and blind and naked and unfortunately they inspire others with the same sentiment whenever listened to. "Oh, ye that fear God and desire his salvation, Be up and doing! Rise, and run the race,—and let the sparkling life-blood of the Spirit's teaching circulate with godly vigor through your mental framework." The adversary has many shapes, and many approaches to the child of God. He may be barred out in one place, but get in at another. And it is impossible to scare him off in the form of doctrinal imbecility, and nurse him in the form of the unregenerate old man of the flesh. Oh, be on the watch."

The Lord our Righteousness.

Jesus is the Lord our righteousness. God has sent him to bless us, in turning away every one of us from our iniquities," (Acts iii. 39) and such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth." Psa. xxxvii. 22. The characters to be thus favored by him are particularly defined by him in his preaching: "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted; Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth; Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall see God. Blessed are the peacemakers,—for they shall be called the children of God. Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Matt. v. "Blessed are they that hear the Word and keep it." Luke xi. 28. "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching." Luke xii. 37. "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." John xx. 29. Blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me." Matt. xi. 6. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they might have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Rev xxii. 14. Thus saith the Lord: "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is." Jer. xvii. 7. "Blessed are all they that wait for him." Is. xxx. 18. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life." Jas. i. 12. "Blessed is the man whom thou chooseth and causeth to approach unto thee." Psa. lxv. 4. This selection is made in Christ by the Word, Eph. i. 4; Jas. i. 18, and, as the chosen are led by the spirit of God; and of such it is said, "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful, but his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in the law doth he meditate day and night. He will be like a flourishing tree with unfading leaves and always prosper. Psa. i. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part (or lot) in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." Rev. xx. 6.

The above words of the spirit contain many blessings for those whose taste has not been vitiated, and whose power of assimilation has not been impaired.

OUR CHILDREN.

What To Guard.

Guard well your lips, my little lad,
Lest out of them should stray
An angry word, profane or bad,
When things go wrong in play.

Guard well your actions, live for him
Who oft was tempted too,
But never yielded once to sin
As other children do.

Guard well your heart, for snares are set
To draw your love away.
Look never back, but onward press
To gain the victory.

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea,—No. 33.

THE MOUNTAIN ROAD.

We left the Israelites in the wilderness of Sin, not far from the sea. A mixed multitude had come out of Egypt with them. They were not the wise people of God. These men soon tired of the manna. They remembered the good fish of the river Nile, and wondered "who would give them flesh to eat?" They talked just as if God could not do such a thing in the desert. They made the Israelites dissatisfied, bringing up the "cucumbers and melons, and leeks and garlicks," of Egypt, until they cried and wished they had died by the flesh pots that were left behind. Even Moses seemed to think it a very improbable thing, when God said he would give 600,000 footman and their families, flesh to suffice for a whole month. But he did it; the wind brought the quails, and the people feasted. What a dreadful plague followed! We must not look back when we start for Canaan. The food that God gives us on our wilderness journey must satisfy us; it is all that we need. We have been riding over the sandy plain for several hours;—where are we now? Close to the mountain ranges. We must enter them. Here is the opening, or pass. It is narrow, but very beautiful. You would think it had been cut out by the hand of man it is so smooth and level. The Arabs call it Babel (or gate) of Wady Sheilal. The lovely defile grows still more narrow as we go on, up, up from the sea. Beyond is Wady Baderah and our pathway is rough and toilsome. Do you like to climb it? What curious colors flash from the mountain sides on either hand! We amuse ourselves by trying to count them. Another staircase! Yes, and in going up it we pass a deep gorge, called Wady Maghara, or "The Valley of the Cave." Here once were copper mines. The workmen have left strange pictures and inscriptions on the tablets of the mountain sides. They could write their story in pictures just as you do in words.

We have entered Wady Mukatteb, or "the Written Valley," and have left Wady Baderah far behind. The lofty heights of the Sinaitic range rise around us, and on the smooth sandstone and granite, are hundreds of inscriptions. Such curious letters you never saw. They look more like figures than letters. And what rude pictures! A baby could do almost as well. I can make out a beetle, a hare and a camel among the drawings given of them in Mr. D. A. Randall's book, entitled "Egypt, Sinai and the Holy Land." He is helping me to tell you about these strange things though he does not know it. How we wish we could read these writings on the rocks and tell who wrote them and when. No one knows. It may have been the Israelites. Here is a Bedouin graveyard. It is in a little valley. The country grows wilder as we go on. We almost tremble with fear of the terrible rocks around us. A Bedouin shepherd boy is watering a flock of goats not far from our road. He belongs to the Tawara tribes. We could not travel this road without one of his people for a guide. They claim all the country south of the Jebel el Raha and Jebel et Tih mountains, though some of them live in other parts of the Peninsula. The Bedouins are the children of Ishmael. They are thieves and robbers, but the Tawara Bedouins are not as bad, Mr. Randall says, as their brethren of the eastern plains. While in their country you might leave your coat or satchel on a stone by the roadside for a month, and it would not be touched. You wonder how they live? Each family has a few sheep or goats, and a camel or a donkey. They sell grindstones and charcoal. They take these on the backs of camels to Suez. Sometimes they sell a kid or a lamb. I suppose they buy grain for bread with the money.

Do you know what a Wady is? It is a valley with a river-bed passing through it. These river-beds are dry in summer. They carry off the winter torrents. We have come into a Wady now. It is called Wady Fieran. It has a stream of sweet cool water. Here was Dophkah, one of the camping places of Israel. What a lovely grove of date-palms, and fruit trees all in bloom. Birds too are singing at night, insects and bats flutter around our candles. And here are some gardens. The Bedouins can raise something after all. Twenty or thirty of their tents are scattered around. How glad we are of the fresh, cool water, and our camels are gladder than we. All the drinking we have used on our journey was brought from the Nile. It is old and we are tired of it. Dophkah? Then the next station would be Alush, and after that would come Rephidim, where there was no water to drink, our large Bible atlas so places it, but Mr. Randall thinks it hard to fix the site. We shall not quarrel with him. Mt. Serbal is not far away. Amalek fought with Israel at Rephidim. Can you remember the names of the principal stopping places? Marah? Elim? The Sea? The wilderness of Sin? Dophkah? Alush? Rephidim?

At the head of Wade Fieran, there are two roads that lead to Sinai,—Wady Sheik, the longer one that the Israelites took, and Wady Soolah, the shorter. How high the mountains are, and of what strange colors! We can find granite and porphyry, and sandstone, and chalk, and white clay, and yellow sand. It is an awful looking place, with its bluffs and glens and ravines and bowlders.

We eat our dinner under an acacia tree. It looks like our locust. The Arabs call it "Sont." Did we tell you that the precious frankincense and shittim wood that the Bible talks about, are said to have come from this tree? We see juniper plants;—the people call them Retem, or wild broom. Elijah slept under the juniper when he ran away from Ahab and Jezebel. They grow "low and thick and scrubby and have white blossoms." And yonder is the hyssop, used in sprinkling the passover, and the Tamarisk tree that produces the manna of commerce. An insect stings the twigs and branches, and the manna comes out in shining drops. It looks like gum, it is sweet, and melts by the fire. But this is not the manna that God's people ate. That manna was said to rain from heaven, and on the day of rest none fell. Ex. xvi. 14, etc. The manna from the Tamarisk is used for medicine and not for food, and is only produced for a few weeks in a year,—that described in Exodus fell the whole year round, for a period of forty years.

We are up high now, and the nights are cold and frosty. We leave Wady Soolah, and enter a narrow defile, called the Windy Pass, and make another ascent through a wilder region than any of us ever saw. What a rough stairway it is; our camels can hardly climb it. At last we are at the top of "the mountain wall," and enter a widening valley, ride for two hours up a rocky ravine and come out into an open plain, at the farther end of which is the Mount of God. From Suez to Sinai it is one hundred and twenty miles. We are in the Plain Rahah, or Plain of Rest, where it is supposed that the Israelites encamped while God was talking with Moses, and while the tabernacle was being built. I wish I could show you a drawing of the valley and the mountains. The northern mountain is Horeb, the southern one Sinia. Wadies run all around the mountains and these Wadies themselves are shut in by mountain walls, a sanctuary indeed!

In Exodus iii. 1, it is said that Moses "came to the Mountain of God, even to Horeb," and here it was that he saw the burning brush and heard the voice of God, bidding him go to the rescue of his people. It was also promised him, that when he had brought the Israelites ont of Egypt, they should serve God upon that very mountain. Again it says, that "the Lord gave Moses at Mount Sinai two tables of stone." Horeb and Sinai are names applied to the same mountain. The mountain rises a thousand feet before it is divided; one peak is called Horeb, and the other Sinai. Moses may have ascended sometimes one part of the mountain and again the other part. We are ready now to take up our new lessons. But we have enjoyed our journey, though it has taken many days to accomplish it, nine at least from the time we crossed the sea.

AUNTIE WINGS.

We have seen it mentioned as a wonder, by old Puritan writers, that certain fish live in the salt sea, and yet their flesh is not salt. We have met with far greater singularities in the spiritual world, namely men who live in a sea of grace, and yet are not gracious.—C. H. Spurgeon.

REVIEW.

[Review of J. L. Martin's lecture on the Millennium from "Lectures on the Apocalypse."]

After quoting the 4th, 5th and 8th verses of Rev. xx, J. L. Martin says: "Will Christ be here on earth during the thousand years?" He says, not not in person, that he will rule by his agents. But what does the Bible say? "To the law and to the testimony if they speak not according to this Word, it is because there is no light in them." Isaiah viii. 20.

The angel in speaking of Christ, said: "He shall be great, and he shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Luke i. 32. This says Christ shall sit on David's throne. Where was David's throne? Settle that, and we will know where Christ is to reign, for he is to reign on his father David's throne. David reigned in Jerusalem thirty-three years, 1 Kings ii. 11. He never reigned in heaven, for Peter says he did not ascend into heaven. Acts ii. 34. Peter also tells us Christ is to sit on David's throne. Acts ii. 30. Christ is to rebuild the throne of David that is in ruins. Acts xv. 16; Amos ix. 11.

Our Savior ascended into heaven from Mount Olive, and the angels said he should come in like manner as he went into heaven. Acts i. 11. And in Zech. xiv. 4. we are told that his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives. This is speaking of his second coming, for in the fifth verse it says, "The Lord my God shall come and all the saints with thee." Other Scripture might be quoted, but this is enough to prove to any one that our Savior will be here and all the saints with him.

On page 283 J. L. Martin says, "If he were to come before I die, Why, then I have no promise of having a part in the first resurrection." Paul tells us that the righteous ones who are living at the time of Christ's coming shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. 1 Cor. xv. 51, 52. "And we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them (the resurrected ones) in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air." 1 Thess. iv. 17. Surely such teachers as J. L. Martin are blind, and if the blind lead the blind both will fall into the ditch. J. L. Martin says on page 283, "It is just as well to be with Jesus some other place as here." Perhaps this would be true if our Savior had promised to take his people to some other place. But there is no such promise, and as he does not try to prove by the Bible that there is; only makes assertions, which are worthless without Bible testimony.

Christ says, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. Rev. iii. 21. Christ's throne is to be on Mount Zion in Jerusalem—David's throne rebuilt—and the saints are to be the subordinate rulers in the kingdom of God.

"But the meek shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace." Psalms xxxvii. 11, and this inheritance shall be forever. v. 18. Read all the chapter, also Matt. v. 5; Proverbs ii. 21, 22; x. 25, 30; Isa. xxxiii. 20, 24; also xxxv.; li. 11; lxv. 17, 24. And the redeemed sing, "We shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 9, 10. On page 284 of Lectures on the Apocalypse, J. L. Martin asks, "Would it be possible for Satan to deceive the human family when Christ is on the earth and had been for a thousand years?"

"Yes; the Bible plainly teaches that Satan will deceive a part of the human family at the end of the thousand years' reign." Rev. xx. 7, 9.

Next he tries to make it appear that there is not room enough for Christ, the angels—and he quotes, "The Lord will come in the glory of his Father and all the holy angels with him—and the saints in this "little world" and also those living at that time. Perhaps he forgets this, for later, on page 323-4 he says the new Jerusalem will be fifteen hundred miles square, and fifteen hundred miles high. He estimates the number of human beings from the beginning down to the end of the millennial age—7000 ye are to be twenty-one hundred billions. Then he says he multiplied that by two hundred, and supposed there might be two hundred worlds like this, and three billions dying every century. He says there would be room for them and one-third of the city be left for streets and pleasure grounds. If this be true, how could he doubt, there being room on the earth for Christ, the resurrected saints, and those living on the earth when our Savior comes. I do not understand the Bible to teach that the angels will dwell on the earth. Neither is there any thing said about inhabitants of other worlds, if there be other worlds with inhabitants coming here to receive their inheritance. The new Jerusalem will be on earth after the earth is renewed and purified; after the wicked have been destroyed. The throne of God and the Lamb is to be in that city. Christ will come and establish his kingdom and reign on David's throne for one thousand years, then comes the general resurrection, the first resurrection having taken place at Christ's second coming; and after the general resurrection and the destruction of the wicked Christ delivers up the kingdom to the Father. "For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. xv. 25, 26. All the wicked are to be destroyed by the second death, after that there will be "No more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things have passed away." Rev. xxi. 4.

At that time the earth will be inhabited by righteous people, there will be no sin on the earth, not one sinner left to defile this fair domain. All will be peace and harmony, no trouble of any kind. And this fair earth in its purified state will be the home of the redeemed throughout the eternal agee.

POETRY.

Only Trust Him.

Psalm xxxiv. 8.

Trust in the Loving One, Jesus, thy friend,
Who seeth thee always, and loves to the end.

Trust in the Dying One, atonement for sin;
Its wealth be his bestow, thy debt he has paid.

Trust in the risen One, mighty to save;
For he will destroy both death and the grave.

Trust the Ascended One, seated on high;
Approach to the Father alone we draw nigh.

Trust in the living One, never can thee
Separate from him who was dead, but now liveth ever.

Trust in the Coming One, coming for those
Who with him in glory safe home shall rest.

Trust the Reigning One, never to fail;
Trust, love, and praise him, that is All in All.

BY JOHN WILSON.

"Right is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart."

A LOVING GOD

"Well, Alfred, as you can so easily put to flight all our objections, will you please state why Christ did die, if not as an atonement."

"I will try, Edith,—or rather the Scriptures shall present their view of the atonement. For do not mistake me: I fully believe that Jesus did die as an atonement. Only I attach a Bible meaning to the word. In the first place, Christ came imaging the character of the unapproachable God. Please read the passages I mention. Heb. i. 3." "Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high." "John i. 14." "And the word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." "Col. i. 14." "In whom we have redemption through his blood, and the forgiveness of sin. Who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature: for by him were all things created."

"Thus he is the Medium or Mediator of blessing, for 'it pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell.' In showing forth that holy character, he persevered unto death, 'striving against sin,' and leaving us 'an, example that we should walk in his steps.' 1 Pet. iii. 17, 18; Heb. xii. 2, 3, 4. His whole life mirrored the love his Father had to his rebel subjects, and as His Son he strove to win them back to their allegiance. He did not come proclaiming a wrathful God. No, his key-note was 'God so loved the world that he gave (to it) His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have ETERNAL LIFE. For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved.' He came to men who were under sentence of death, making them the offer of rescue from that prison house, and re-instation in more than pristine rank. To each who had condemned himself to death he gave the opportunity of regaining life by a belief and obedience to his message, that is, to the tidings of the kingdom blessings. And he wins some weary and heavy laden ones in the rebel camp, to accept that promised rest. Gentler than a parent's voice is the tone of his pleadings: he shows that 'the Lord is good to all and his tender mercies are over all his work.' A loving mother, when her child has offended her, withholds her caresses, but looks on with pity at the struggle of pride in its mind, longs for it to come confess its fault; and its 'Mamma forgive me,' speedily brings her arms around it, and she seals its reconciliation with her kisses. And is not he who originated those feelings susceptible of like? Yea,

'Like as a father pitieth his children,
So the Lord pitieth those who fear Him.'

"I have always felt more pleasure in thinking of God as a Father than as a Judge. But then he is also embodied Justice, so that we must not look at one phase of his character to the exclusion of the other."

"You are right in this, Ella. But these two attributes of his are not opposed. I think the depth of the beauty of the comparison just quoted, 'like as a father pitieth' is in the fact that the father is also the judge of the house. A mother's love is sometimes foolish in its confusion of right and wrong. We have cause to be grateful to God for both our parents being wise and good. But you know that when dear father was alive we always knew every action was just, and we never hesitated to obey his word, because we felt it sprang from love to us."

"True, Alfred."

"And God being the highest standard of Fatherhood and justice, his tender forbearing love will be as boundless as his own self. Consequently, all the estrangement betwixt man and the Lord must be the sinner's fault. And I think this is beautifully exhibited in the dramatic language of Isaiah lvii.

JEHOVAH'S PROPHET:—

'Behold, the Lord' hand is not shortened, that it cannot save;
Neither His ear heavy, that it cannot hear:
But your iniquities have separated between you and your God,
And your sins have hid his face from you,
that he will not hear.
For your hands are defiled with blood,
And your fingers with iniquity;
Your lips have spoken lies. . . .
The way of peace they know not;
And there is no judgment in their goings:
They have made crooked paths for them-selves:
Whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace.'

THE REPENTANT PEOPLE:—

'Therefore is equity far from us; neither doth justice overtake us:
We look for light, but behold darkness;
For brightness, but we walk in obscurity.
We stumble at mid-day, as in the twilight:
We are in profound darkness, as the dead.
We look for judgment, and there is none;
For salvation, and it is far distant from us.
For our trespasses are multiplied before Thee.
And our sins testify against us;
And our transgressions cleave fast to us;
And our iniquities we acknowledge, (consisting as they do)
In rebelling and lying against Jehovah.
And turning backward from following our God.'"

"How do you come to find out these poetic features of the Bible Alfred."

By preferring to use a paragraph Bible instead of our hateful hacked-up versed version. But this is a disgression, sister. Let us turn to our consideration of the character of God so far as it relates to the mission of His Son. 'He is pitiful and of tender mercy.' Listen how he pleads, 'I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee.' And can our response be anything else than 'Draw me, I will follow after Thee.' With more than any human monarch's love, 'whilst we were enemies,' He held forth the offer of reconciliation. Not as your hymn has it—

'My God is reconciled,
His pardoning voice I hear.'

is Paul's averment. 'God hath reconciled us to Himself;' or, 'God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself;' and he continues by entreating 'Be ye reconciled to God.' It is 'we have received the atonement,' for so the word should be understood. It meant reconciliation, or making two at one again, when our Bible was translated. You will find a number of such uses of the word in Shakespere. The Father's action was 'making peace through the blood of his (Christ's) cross, by him to reconcile all things to Himself, . . . and we, who sometime were alienated and enemies. . . . he now hath reconciled in the body of his flesh through death.' 'God commendeth his love toward us in that whilst we were yet sinners, Christ died on our account: much more then, being justified by his blood (its manifestation having the effect upon our consciences to make us hate sin) we shall be saved by his life.' But what question were you about to ask, Edith?"

"I did not wish to interrupt you, cousin, but as you have asked me I may say that there is still something I am not satisfied about. Jesus himself said 'it behoved Christ to suffer' and again 'he must needs have suffered.' And that passage you quoted from 1 Cor. v. 'He hath made him sin for us who knew no sin. I have been told should be 'a sin-offering for us.' Now it seems to me that there is throughout all these and others an idea of a substitutionary relationship of the death of Christ."

"You are right in this, my dear cousin. That Christ was in some mystic way our substitute I would never question. It is his death being substitutionary punishment which I regard as unscriptural and opposed to the revelation of God's character. Doubtless there in the spiritual arcana causes for it being 'expedient that one man should die for the people' and 'for the whole world.' But whilst all these esoteric reasons are not revealed to us, sufficient is made plain for us to know that punishment is not one of them."

"What then would you consider are the plainly taught reasons for its behoving Jesus to suffer?"

"Chiefly, I think, the need of a sympathy twixt the Redeemer and the saved. 'It became God, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings.' The discipline of suffering is a wonderful ordinance of Divine and natural law, which I doubt not will be understood by us in the kingdom, to gain which, we 'must suffer with Christ' even as he suffered with us. This community of the Christ with the race, as Captain, Priest and Victim, is largely brought out in Hebrews. This you can search out at leisure. But I want you to reflect upon this fact. Peter, speaking upon the suffering of Christ for us as exemplary to us, lays down this axiom, that 'he who hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin.' Now if Jesus, who did no sin, had yet to suffer in the flesh, there must be some singularly purifying virtue pertaining to suffering."

"I shall have to think this over, Alfred. I suppose you understand Peter's words about Jesus bearing our sins in his own body on the tree in the same sense."

"Somewhat. Of course it could not be our sins of commission he bore, but the results of sins not his own. His power of participation in the sufferings caused by sin seem to have been much like those which a mesmerist sometimes feels. The diseases and pains become his own by sympathy. So that it may have been physically the case that when he took our sickness and bore our infirmities, he took them from us to bear them himself. To the same law it may be due that by his stripes we are healed. But leaving this theorizing, we have the testimony that 'he was made in all things like to his brethren that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God.' Christ Himself passed the ordeal of temptation, trial, and death, (Heb. ii. 10,) which very experience of his is a surety of a coming reward. He is now constituted our Advocate (Pleader) in the High Court, not to implore forgiveness of sin, but as the Medium or Intercessor through whom we may present our petitions for blessings. He is our Propitiation: God hath sent him as the Mercy-Seat wherefrom we may be propitiated, our enmity overcome.

When his blood-love touches our hearts we come to the Father confessing in words that which the Mercy-Seat in the Mosaic economy taught; 'We are sinful, we cast ourselves upon thy mercy: let the sun of righteousness rise upon us; and make our life-obedience arise as a sweet incense evermore.' Oh how beautiful must have been the teaching of the ceremonial service to any one who could interpret it like the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews. But what think you now of Christ?"

"I felt as though I heard sweet-breathing music, brother."

"And I feel it as cool water when thirst-parched, cousin; I wish I had heard it long ago. Yet there are some passages which you have not explained. I do not mean that they necessarily teach expiation, for I scarcely see how it can be maintained in face of the logic of Scripture which you bring, but I should wish an explanation of them to see how far they are reconcilable with your doctrine. 'Ye are bought with a price.' 'Without shedding of blood there is no remission.' 'Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us.' 'Christ our Passover, slain for us.'"

"My dear sister and cousin, I am glad that you so far see and feel the truth I am contending for; explanatory labor will be much easier and pleasanter. As regards your difficulties I will, with your permission, take them the last first. When the passover can be found to have anything to do with sin, then we can look for a teaching of expiation therein; but til that is discovered we must be content to regard the Paschal Lamb as commemorative of the deliverance from bondage, and the introduction of a new dispensation. So Christ is our passover in being both emblem of God's mercy, and introducer of the new covenant. The law, from the curse of which Christ hath redeemed us, you are aware is that of Moses, so that another saying of the apostle shall set forth my reply. 'Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances which was against us. . . . he took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross.' This was another and a higher design than individual salvation, even the admission of the Gentiles into the covenant blessings. The Law of Sinai had stood in the way of this purpose, hence by suffering its curse he obtained the right to remove it. By taking this away, and introducing the broad platform of faith as the title to life, he 'broke down the middle wall of partition' between Jew and Gentile, and the latter, who aforetime were 'aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers to the covenants of promise, are made nigh by the blood of Christ.' This introduces another grand broad topic, the nature and extent of the Saviour's relation to the world at large. I differ from such as Mr. P. as widely as the poles. For I believe that Jesus not only died for the sins of the whole world but for the earth and animal creation."

"Whatever can you mean, Alfred?"

"My dear sister, have you ever thought upon what is implied in Paul's phrase (in Eph. i. 14,) 'the redemption of the purchased possession.' To my mind it implies the same truth as in Rom. viii. 21, where the apostle speaks of the deliverance of 'the creature from the bondage of corruption into the freedom of the glory of the sons of God.' The whole creation was made to partake in the results of Adam's transgression, but as Paul testifies it was 'in hope.' And as Christ died to reverse this, does it not follow that he died to redeem all creation? There is a mystery in the idea of a dying Redeemer, but it is one of grandeur when we try to realise the extent of the redemption effected."

"I never thought of such a thing before I hope your view is correct."

(To be Continued.)

Letter Drawer.

Dear Brothers and Sisters.

I have great reason to praise and glorify God for his grace to save and keep. I thank and praise his holy name for what he has done for me, for he is a blessed and ever-present Savior, ready to help in every time of trouble. He has sent his Comforter unto his true and faithful ones. How blessed is his Word of Truth and holiness. It is a chart and compass to his children which, if they will follow, will lead them from the broad road of destruction. May God help us all to search his Word more in the days to come than we have in the days gone by. Let us hold the "Gospel Banner" high above all things that are not in accord with God's wish or plan. He has made his Word so plain, that, "The wayfaring man, though a fool, may not err." Let us try to live up to all the light that God has given us that others may see our good works and be led to glorify their Father which is in heaven.

ROSNA CONKLIN.

Dear Restitution:

We feel unworthy and unprofitable, but an old adage says, "Man's extremity is God's remedy," and an apostle says, "All things work together for good to those who love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose," and the Psalmist says, "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy," and the preacher says, "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days," and "In the morning sow thy seed and in the evening withhold not thine hand."

The present time is the time to sow, and when Jesus comes the second time, at the resurrection of the Just, will be the time to reap. It is then that the dead in Christ (notice that there are two classes, or states in Christ,) will be raised incorruptible, and the living ones in Christ shall be changed in a moment to the same incorruptible nature," and with bodies like our glorious Head, shall we ever be with the Lor'. But be not deceived. Remember that the Word of God is the good Seed, the Bread of life, and that the water is the people and nations. God has a grand purpose in calling us unto his kingdom and glory. Let us be more diligent in serving the Lord, lest we become reprobate concerning the faith, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. Hence, we conclude that God will only reward them that diligently seek him.

Since our last writing we have had several good meetings in adjoining counties, besides helping some at home. I expect to move to Hernando, Miss., soon. Brethren, pray for me.

Yours in hope of Israel's King.
R. A. HENDRICKS.

Dear Restitution:

I have been acquainted with you a long time and the older I get and the more I see of you the better I like you, and have thought several times of writing for the letter drawer. We have no church here except in our house, and we just can claim the promise of his presence. Matt. xviii. 19, 20. My father and husband are the only preachers of our faith here. "Truly the harvest is great but the laborers are few." Luke x. ii.

I am much interested in Sister Wince's articles and hope she will have the "Story of Israel" put in book form. It exhibits such wonderful love and knowledge of God. Oh, how hard we ought to work to win the crown of life, and to be ready when our King comes. To be his guest is more than all the world to me. It will soon be four years since I was baptized.

Yours in hope.
KITTIE HUMPHREYS.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I will try and write you a few lines. There are a few believers in this part of the country, "earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints." There are but few of us and we have a great deal of opposition. We were without a preacher for a number of years. Finally, about two years ago, hearing of Bro. John Foore, of Kansas, we wrote him to come and hold meetings over two Sundays. We were so well pleased with him that arrangements were made to have him preach for us one week every two months, which he has done ever since, never disappointing us a single time. During that time, at this place, he only baptized one into the all-saving name of the Lord Jesus, but he withheld nothing. He was aware of the charge of Paul to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God' a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Oh, what a beauty there is in the chain of truth presented in the Bible when one sees and understands it. I want to say that Bro. Foore is the best educator I ever had the pleasure of listening to, but we had to bid him farewell. He preached his farewell sermon here Friday night before the second Sunday in August. Sad, indeed, it is to say farewell to those whom we have learned to love and respect, but if we never meet in mortality again I hope we will meet in the Kingdom of God. Dear brothers and sisters, may we each so live, that when our race is run, that we may say with the apostle of the Gentiles. "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto them also that love his appearing." If any of the preaching brethren pass this way we would like for them to stop and see us. Yours in hope of eternal life when Jesus come.

LUCY B. HUFFMAN.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I feel my inability to write a few lines to our valuable paper, but know it is a duty we all owe to each other to help each other in the way of life all we can. I think when I read some of those good letters from old writers and those who have grown old in the family of Christ, if only I could write as well, I would write often.

But the old enemy is reaping our golden grain and that calls for younger and less skillfull ones to put their shoulders to the Gospel wheel and help to roll it on. I feel it is quite a cross for me to write a letter to a paper for publication as I never wrote for a paper before, but Jesus says: "Take up your cross and follow me." We find it quite a cross to live a Christian life just as we would like to, we have many, many things to contend with, difficulties perhaps we never dreamed would be difficulties when we made the start, but Jesus tells us in Luke ix. 27, "Whosoever doth not bear his cross and follow after me can not be my disciple." So friends let us all bear our cross.

Jesus bore his cross for the joy that was set before him. There is just as great joy set before you and if only we bear our cross and live faithfully to the end.

When we think of all the pleasures and hilarity of this world it makes one feel sad and grow sick at heart to see so many that might be an example to others in the way of life if only they would stop and think, and follow the Masters words; but then it is any thing for a good time here, never stopping to think what the consequence will be.

We must not expect to keep on the good side of the world, because we learn that it hated our Savior and will also hate us, but there is at the end of the race, eternal life to as many as are faithful. Job tells us our days upon the earth are a shadow, and our days are few and full of trouble, and if we do not seek for an inheritance in the everlasting kingdom, then all is lost. So let us all try to do our Masters will more perfectly in the future. Yours in hope of eternal life.

ANNA J. ARNOLD.

Editor Restitution:

The weekly visits of the paper are like personal letters from the many whose names have become dear to us, although there are many whose faces we have never seen. The dear ones can never know how some of their words have come to me like an inspiration, and have helped me over so many hard places. That beautiful poem about the tangled skein of yarn, it seemed was just for me, and I said, dear Lord, take the tangled mess and straighten it and show me where to begin to wind, and I will try to do it patiently. But the paper also brings us sad news as one by one soldiers fall out of the ranks. Now we must tell you that our old brother Joseph Furry is gone. He came here from Indiana many years ago and was well known by the older members there. He died at his home here in Alden on the 24th of July, after a short illness. He was 82 years old.

He leaves his wife, our dear old Sister Furry, nearly blind, and one son in the old home, the rest being settled in homes of their own. So we are one by one falling under the penalty for sin, but we thank God that with the pronouncing of the penalty came the promise of redemption, and so Christ died for all, and will redeem all from death and so destroy both death and him which hath the power of death, may we all live so that we may not fall under the power of the second death from which there is no redemption.

LIZZIE PALMER.

Editor Restitution:

As we have just had a meeting I thought I would write a letter to THE RESTITUTION. Bro. John Foore preached his farewell sermon at this place a week ago last Sunday. While here there were two buried in baptism. Although he has been with us but a short time we shall miss him, and we regret very much to have him leave us, for we feel we may never find another to fill his place. But if we are never permitted to meet him in this life, my prayer is that we may meet him in the Kingdom of God where parting pain and death shall cease. I was baptized about two years ago by Bro. Foore, and am trying to live a Christian life. We have much to fight against if we would be true Christians. We meet every Sunday to read God's Word, and to encourage each other to hold out faithful. Oh may we overcome the many trials and temptations of this world. For there are precious promises made to the overcomer. Let us put on the whole armor of God that we may stand firm, that we may be able to say as did Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing. "2 Tim. iv. 7, 8. Pray for me that I may ever be faithful and meet you all in the Kingdom of God.

Your Sister in hope.
EFFIE BOWEN.

Dear Restitution:

I thought I would let the brothers and sisters know of Brother Foore's work here in Foster, Mo. The people here had never heard the gospel in its true light, and when he first came he had quite a time with them, but he stood his ground with his Bible in his hand, and kindness in his heart and prayed to them that he stood on the Solid Rock, Christ Jesus. He showed them God's plan of salvation, and told them what they should do to inherit the land of promise. He had large crowds and good order, and when he was through preaching the people that once were so hard against him said they never heard such preaching before. They did not know the Bible contained such knowledge. He came to stay with us for five days. The night before his time was up he asked all that wanted to put on Christ by baptism to arise, twelve arose and he baptized them the next day. He prolonged his stay for two days and four more arose for baptism, making sixteen in all. When the time came for him to leave us there was quite a sorrowing crowd stood around regretting to give him up. As he is going to Arizona, and we think he will not come back. He went from here out to Linn County, Kansas, and some of us went with him. It was a sad parting when he left us, but we have a bright hope of meeting him in the kingdom where no parting, sickness, or death ever comes. Brother Foore has truly been an earnest worker in the Lord's vineyard. We hope that when the Lord comes he will say, "Well done my true and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things I will make you ruler over many." He has truly done a great work here, for which he deserves a great deal of praise, and we know he will get a great reward for it when Jesus comes to claim his own. We have a Bible class started here now. We desire the prayers of all, that we may ever prove faithful and when Jesus comes in his glory that we may be ready to enter his kingdom. Your sister in Christ.

ROSIE CHAPMAN.

MARRIED.

Married by the writer at the bride's home near Colfax, Clinton County, Ind., Bro. Chancy O. Dukes and Miss Nellie Davis, on Sunday, Sept. 15, 1895. Bro. Dukes was 22 years of age, and is the son of Bro. and Sister John Dukes and grandson of Bro. and Sister John Boyd. He was baptized by the writer recently. The bride was 18 years of age, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Davis, living one-half mile west of Colfax. The wishes of many friends go with them for a happy and peaceful life.

Our deeds, seal our words in the record of our lives.

Selected.

All This Be Thy Portion.

New mercies, new blessings, new light on thy way;
New courage, new hope and new strength for each day;
New notes of thanksgiving, new chords of delight.
New praise in the morning, new songs in the night;
New wine in thy chalice, new altars to raise;
New fruits for thy Master, new garments of praise;
New gifts from his treasures, new smiles from his face;
New streams from the fountain of infinite grace;
New stars for thy crown, new tokens of love;
New gleams of ... Joy that wait Heaven above;
New light of his countenance full and unpriced
All this be the glory of thy new life in Christ.

Tribulation.

Afflictions, distress and vexations surround the advocate of the one faith, and place a heavy hand upon him. He may be afflicted like Job, yet he should remember that the "Lord will maintain the cause of the afflicted." He may be in great distress, yet will the Holy be "a strength to the needy in distress." If he be groaning under vexation, let him remember that presently those who now vex him "shall howl for vexation of spirit." Brethren, we must pass through tribulation now, but the peace and the glory that shall follow, if we are 'counted worthy of that world,' will reward us for all our vexations. The coming king when on earth said to the brethren, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." John xvi. 33. He knew just what his brethren would have to suffer, and he therefore referred them to himself, as an example under suffering, and bid them be of good cheer. If we can, like our elder brother, overcome the world, we too shall reign on earth with him.

That invincible apostle to the Gentiles said to the faithful ones in his day, that "we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God," Acts xiv. 22. Though they were in the church, yet they were subject to 'severe afflictions,' which could only be removed by an entrance into the kingdom of God, or asleep in death until the Strong One should return. When he was writing to the few at Thessalonica he strove to strengthen them by assuring them that through their tribulations they might be counted worthy of the kingdom of God for which they suffered, 2 Thess. i. 5. If all the world with her churches and societies, were favorable to what I believe and teach, and should they ever count me orthodox, then would doubts arise as to the righteousness of my cause. If there were no tribulations, no distresses, no vexations, through which I must pass every day almost, then would I refrain from calling on the God of my being, and grow strong in my own feeble arm. These things are necessary, and let us rejoice in them, and praise our God that we are worthy of such distinguished honor as to be hated for our devotion to the Master's cause. Our help is near us, and may it be his will to appear on earth mid our distress, and grant us a happy deliverance.—Kennedy.

The Size of the Ark.

Infidels object as to the size of the ark, that there could not be a vessel large enough to hold all the creatures which must have been placed in it, with sufficient food, it may be, for six or twelve months. Now from the dimensions of ark in the record of Moses, calculating on the lowest possible scale the ark was 300 cubits, or 450 feet long. The breadth is 50 cubits, or 75 feet, and 30 cubits, or 45 feet high. In other words, it was as long as St. Paul's cathedral, London, nearly as broad, and half as high. Its tonnage, according to the computation of modern carpenters, must have been 32,000 tons. The largest sized English ship (of a size altogether unimaginable to those who have never seen it) is 3,500 tons burden; so the ark must have been equal to 36 first rate ships of war; and if armed as such ships are, it would have contained beyond 18,000 men, and provisions for them for eighteen months. Buffon has asserted that all four-footed animals may be reduced to 240 pairs, and the birds to a still smaller number. On calculating, therefore, we shall find that the ark would have held more than five times the required quantity of food to maintain them twelve months.

Hired to Kill Themselves.

How many lives are sacrificed in foolhardy attempts to furnish a sensation which people are willing to pay for! In Mexico and Spain men fight with bulls for this purpose. In America they prefer to ascend in balloons, and jump from dizzy heights with parachutes. Those who pay for such exhibitions do not really want the performers to kill themselves for their amusement. Yet when the spectators hire these men to imperil their lives to such an extent as must often result in death; and when the excitement which comes from seeing their lives thus imperiled is what they pay for, it is not far from the truth to say that they pay the men to kill themselves. Is there any question about the morality of such an act in the case of either of the contracting parties? On a recent Sunday twelve hundred people took an excursion train at Seattle and went out to Snoqualmie Falls, some fifty miles from the city, to see a man jump over the precipice, which is nearly three hundred feet high. The railroad company hired him to make the leap into the yawning chasm, that it might pocket the profits to be made on the excursion. When he jumped he was sucked in toward the cataract and then caught by a current of air and thrown against the side of the canon. Spectators stood aghast as they saw him crushed to death, but something very much like this was what they had paid for. They were the sort of a crowd which we should expect to find on a Sunday excursion train!

Announcement.

The quarterly conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will convene (D. V.) at Watson, Allegan Co. Michigan, Friday evening Oct. 4, 1895, and continue over the following Sunday.

Those coming on the Indiana railroad, will stop off at Martin, teams will be waiting for trains at 12.58 from the south, 3.05 from the north Friday and Saturday.

There will be a good speaker to preach the word.

All of like precious faith are cordially invited by the brethren at Watson.

Let as many as can attend this conference, it will do you all good, and it may be the last opportunity that some of us may have, life is so uncertain.

Let us remember the words of Paul, Heb. 10, 25. "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together at the manner of some is; but exhorting one another, and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."

EMMA JACKMAN, Sec'y.

The Northwest Conference of the Church of God will be held at the Lake Shore school house, six miles north of Vancouver, Wash., beginning Friday evening Oct. 18th and holding over the following Sunday Oct. 20, 1895. All brethren and sisters from a distance are cordially invited to come. If any one wishes to come who has no means of conveyance, come to Vancouver and inquire for N. Secrest feed store which is on Main Street. Teams will meet you there to convey you to Lake Shore where the brethren will welcome all who may come. Preaching by Brothers Prosser, Grant, Skeels and others. We hope to have another good meeting. It is the best enjoyment many of us have in this life, so come all that can and help to make this our annual conference as interesting as possible. Yours in hope of eternal life.

MARIE TRUSDELL, Sec.

Home-Seekers Excursion During Sept. and Oct.

Agents of the Nickel Plate Road will be pleased to furnish, upon application, complete information relative to these excursions. Bear in mind the elegantly equipped through trains via the Popular Route.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonish Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put lovesalve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Dust, by its own nature, can rise only so far above the road; and birds which fly higher never have it upon their wings. So the heart that knows how to fly high enough, escapes all those little cares and vexations which brood upon the earth, but cannot rise above it into that purer air.

Poetry.

Satisfied.

I would not take a single gift
Less from the altar now.
Since Jesus came to me so great
I bend and humbly bow.

I know the things that he denies
Were not designed for me;
And that the blessings which he gives
May my salvation be.

He sees beside my earthly state,
As poverty or wealth;
Lest sin appoint my earthly lot,
He knows sore or health.

He sees, select my every friend
And every foe control;
Lest sin my heart with sorrow break,
Or fill with joy make whole.

He knows how best to heal the flame,
The shining gold to obtain;
Nor will he keep me in the fire,
Unless the dross remain.

The little ravens, helpless, weak,
Are by God's bounty fed;
Not one his mighty saints on earth
Shall ever lack for bread.

The cattle on a thousand hills
Are his, and his child;
And when I've made my wishes known,
Sweet has my Father smiled!

Saints, dould ye more a Father's love,
Rest in his constant care;
Go to his throne with perfect faith,
And leave your burdens there.

The Contrast.

The following quotation is the utterance of Anarchist Atheists of New York:

"We openly and frankly proclaim that God never existed. There is no God, and God will never be. In the name of freedom we mock the Jewish religion. As true revolutionists we fight against religion, the State, private and public property. These three things must be destroyed. We aim to throw off the yoke of the state under whose weight we lie, by means of powder and dynamite, which we intend to use against religion, public and private property. We will take the capitalists in the right hand, and religion in the left hand, and so they both shall go to the devil by means of the use of dynamite and powder."

Note the contrast. The birth of the Son of God was heralded by a "multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will among men."

One aims at peace and good will among men, the other at disloyalty, destruction, impiety, robbery, murder, hatred and strife. Which company begets in you a spirit of admiration? Which would be for the welfare of the community at large? No God, no hope, anarchy, fighting, murder, etc., or peace and good will among men?

The great aim and purpose of Jesus in his mission upon earth was to inaugurate a series of events which will finally culminate in an era of peace and good will among men.

To this end he is selecting out from the people a company who are willing to discipline themselves, that they may be brought in harmony with his purpose. He says to such: "Love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you; that ye may be the sons of your Father which is in heaven." It is the "Sons of God," allied with their Elder Brother, that are entrusted with the work that is designed to culminate in the promised blessing to all nations. The "Sons of God," suitable for this purpose, are those who by continued discipline have attained the power of performing acts of love toward an enemy, and who even pray for those who would delight in persecution, like as their Elder Brother did while nailed to the cross

"If ye love them that love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same?" You say this is contrary to human nature and the natural promptings of the flesh lead you to do the opposite. True, and this is just where the warfare comes in. The future life is formulated upon a higher plane than that of flesh, and those desiring to have a part in it, must begin that life now. And that the result may be attained, our Savior gave the following rule governing our actions toward others: "All things therefore, whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye also unto them."

The flesh says give him back as good as he sends, and often a little more added to.

The Savior's rule says, stop and think, would I like this thing done to me? and if you think you would not, then refrain from doing it to any one else.

The quotation at the head of this article, is a sample of the flesh corrupted, they have degenerated, and have become worse than civilized men are by nature; as it is possible to improve by cultivation, so also it is possible to attain a much lower plane than the beasts of the field. By means of dynamite and powder they purpose to rid the earth of all that is pure and noble, and that which tends to elevate and refine mankind.

In the near future the angelic reapers will remove for a brief period "the salt of the earth." The preserving salt being removed, the corrupt will rapidly grow worse, and God pity the "left," who have not advanced in the divine life to a degree sufficient to be gathered in by the angelic reapers. It is sad to contemplate that many who really know better but allow all their time and energy to be spent on the transitory affairs of life, will be "left" to pass through the scourge inflicted by the anarchistic atheistical element (noticed at the head of this article) under the leadership of Antichrist.

No one can possess a living faith without personal attention and discipline. A profession of faith separated from a life of faith, will yield no fruit, because such a faith is dead. It would be just as reasonable to expect fruit from a dead tree, as a holy life from a faith that does not work by love.

Many seem to act as if a profession of the true faith of the gospel is all-sufficient without further action. All such will find themselves deceived. A crude stone hewn from the quarry is unfitted for a place in the construction of a temple, it must first pass under the hammer and chisel, and be fitted for its place. So, likewise a living stone hewn from the quarry by the power of the gospel, must have the rough edges knocked off and be fitted for its place in the living temple. A rough quarry stone in a polished structure would mar its beauty.

Without this discipline how are we to obtain power to do what the apostle directs in 1. Thess. v. 13? "Be at peace among yourselves. And we exhort you brethren, admonish the disorderly, encourage the fainthearted, support the weak, be long suffering toward all. See that none render unto any one evil for evil, but always follow that which is good one toward another, and toward all."

No one can have any effect in admonishing "the disorderly," unless in the first place the admonisher himself is peaceable and orderly. He could not encourage the fainthearted and support the weak unless he himself should first become courageous and strong. Neither could a person refrain from rendering "evil for evil," unless he is first possessed of self control. We may read over these divine rules for regulating our personal conduct, and say yes, these things are all excellent, and ought to be observed, but how many stop and reflect on their inability to perform these things without culture and discipline?

To make a success of the Christian race, requires constant and unremitting attention, we cannot relax at any time without suffering loss. When men engage in worldly enterprises, they realize the necessity of giving it their time, energy and anxiety, and make everything else subservient to that one end. Those who enter the race for the kingdom and its honors, will have to give that their main interest if they succeed. Ye cannot serve two masters. Temporal duties are not to be neglected but must take a secondary place. Seek first the Kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. Do you believe the promise?

Any one who steps boldly out on the promise and makes the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, their anxious concern, and at the same time is diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord, may not be in the least anxious about temporal matters, his necessities (not luxuries) will be sure as the promise of God.

Oh, what a contrast! The infidel revolutionist vainly imagines that he can benefit his fellows by revolution, in which, by the means of dynamite and powder he will rob the rich, destroy government, and rid the world of religion.

But in place of this the Prince of Peace, will by the means of the Gospel of peace, develop children of peace, through whom the world shall yet see the time when there shall be peace on earth, and "good will among men."

W. H. WILSON.

PSALM. 95.
95 COM. VER.

1. When the house hath been built, after the captivity: David's ode. Sing unto the Lord a new song; Sing unto the Lord all the earth;

2. Sing unto the Lord; eulogize his name; Announce the good tidings day by day of his instrumental-salvation:

3. Declare his glory among the nations; Among all the laities his wonders.

4. Because great is the Lord and greatly to be praised: to be feared is he above all the gods.

5. Because all the gods of the nations are demons; (or daimons) but the Lord made the heavens.

6. Confession and timely-beauty are before him, sanctification and majesty in his sanctuary.

7. Bring unto the Lord, ye families of the nations; bring unto the Lord glory and honor;

8. Bring unto the Lord glory to his name; Take up sacrifices and go your way into his courts;

9. Worship the Lord in his sacred court; Let all the earth be moved before his face;

10. Say unto the nations. The Lord hath asserted kingship; Yea indeed, hath restored the inhabited to uprightness, the inhabited, that will not have been moved; He will judge laities in uprightness.

11. May the heavens (or heaven in the sense of the heavenly intelligencies) have rejoiced and may the earth be glad: May the sea be moved and the fulness thereof:

12. The plains will be joyful and all the things on them; Then will all the trees of the forest be glad.

13. Before the face of the Lord, because he cometh, because he cometh to judge the earth; He will judge the inhabited in righteousness and laities in his truth.

PSALM 96 (97 COM. VER.)

1. David's (psalm) when his earth hath been established. The Lord hath become king; let the earth be glad: May many islands have rejoiced.

2. A cloud and thick darkness are round about him; righteousness and judgment-rendered the successful accomplishment of his throne.

3. Fire will go its way before him and flame round about his enemies.

4. His lightnings have appeared unto the inhabited; The earth saw and was moved:

5. The mountains melted like wax as it were before the face of the Lord, before the face of all the earth.

6. Heaven (the heavenly intelligencies) hath declared his righteousness and all the laities have seen his glory.

7. May all those who worship the graven things, who boast in their idols, have been put to shame: May ye have worshiped him all ye his angels.

8. Sion hath heard and rejoiced, and the daughters of Joudnin have been made glad on account of thy judgments-rendered, O Lord.

9. Because thou art Lord the Most High over all the earth; exceedingly hast thou been exalted above all the gods.

10. Ye who love the Lord hate wickedness; The Lord is watching to guard the souls of his holy ones; he will deliver them out of the hand of obdurate-sinners.

11. Light hath arisen for the justified one, and rejoicing for the upright in heart,

12. May ye have rejoiced ye justified ones in the Lord, and confess ye in your remembrance of his sanctity.

PSALM 97 (98 COM. VER.)

1. David's psalm. Sing unto the Lord a new song, because wondrous things hath the Lord done. His right-hand hath saved and his sacred arm.

2. The Lord hath made known his instrumental-salvation; in the sight of the nations hath he revealed his righteousness.

3. He hath remembered his mercy for Jakob and his truth for the house of Israel. All the ends of the earth have seen the instrumental-salvation of our God.

4. Alala unto God all the earth; sing and be glad and exalt the strain.

5. Exalt the strain unto the Lord with cithern, with cithern and the voice of a psalm;

6. With hammered trumpets and with the voice a ram's-horn trumpet. Alala in the sight of the Lord, the king.

7. Let the sea be moved and the fullness thereof, the inhabited and those who inhabit it.

8. Rivers will clap their hands together, the mountains will be glad,

9. Because he cometh to judge the earth; He will judge the inhabited in righteousness and laities in uprightness.

PSALM 98 (99 COM. VER.)

1. David's psalm. The Lord hath become King; Laities have been wrathful; O thou who art seated above the Cherubim. Let the earth be moved.

2. The Lord is great in Sion and nigh above all the laities,

3. May they have confessed unto thy great name, because to be feared and sacred is it.

4. And a king's honor loveth a judicial-way; Thou hast made ready upright-things a judicial-way and righteousness hast thou created in Jakob.

5. Exalt ye the Lord our God, and worship at the foot stool for his feet, because he is sanctified.

6. Moses and Aaron were among his priests and Samuel among those who invoke his name; They invoked the Lord and he hearkened unto them;

7. In a pillar of cloud he talked to them; They watched to guard his testimonies and the statutes which he gave them.

8. O Lord our God, thou didst hearken to them; O God, thou didst become favorable to them, even though thou art a requiter for all their devices.

9. Exalt ye the Lord our God, and worship toward his sacred mount, because our God is a sanctified Lord.

PSALM 99 (100 COM. VER.)

1. A psalm for a confessional. Alala unto the Lord all the earth:

2. Serve (lit. "may ye have" all these verbs) the Lord as bond-servants with rejoicing: Enter into his presence with gladness:

3. Comprehend that God, he is Lord; That he made us and not we ourselves; That we are his laity and sheep of his pasture.

4. Enter into his gates with confession, his courts with hymns: Confess unto him; praise his name:

5. Because a useful-good Lord is he; his mercy forever and unto generation and generation his truth.

PSALM 100 (101 COM. VER.)

1. David's psalm. Mercy and a judicial way shall I sing unto thee:

2. I shall exalt the strain and understand in a blameless way; When wilt thou come unto me? I have gone my way through in guilelessness of my heart, in the midst of my house.

3. I have not placed a matter of transgression before mine eyes: I have hated those who were doing evasively: A perverse heart hath cleaved unto me.

4. As the wicked one inclineth away from me I did not know him.

5. The one who talketh covertly against his neighbor, this one I drove away; The haughty eye and the insatiate heart, this one I did not eat with.

6. Mine eyes were upon the faithful of the earth, to have them sit with me: One who was going his way in a blameless way, this one publicly served me.

7. One who acted superciliously did not take up his abode in the midst of my household: one who talked iniquities was not accounted upright before mine eyes:

8. Mornings I was accustomed to slay all the obdurate-sinners of the earth (or land) that I might utterly destroy from out the city of the Lord all those who were working the iniquity.

COMMENT.

The 95th psalm by number should be and we find is a consummation in its general teaching; and particular as "the house" having been built and "the captivity" having been consummated as we learn from the heading. The usual interpretation of this psalm makes it relate to the return from the captivity in Babylon and the rebuilding of the temple that followed that. But this is a very superficial interpretation of David's meaning in this "ode," I think, in the light of what is said for instance in the 10th verse, "Yea indeed hath restored the inhabited to uprightness the inhabited that will not have been moved." This with the context and the following 11th, 12th and 13th verses shows very plainly that the kingship or royalty here asserted has a far wider scope than this little restoration. The psalm was a national ode and of course prophetic of Messianic glory to come and even now still to come. It is a minor also in import being a fifth—a minor of a still deferred, not realized hope.

The 98th psalm, however, is a full major chord of consummation and moves with the grand major import as we would expect from the significant heading, "David's (psalm) when his earth hath been established." Observe also the first assertion. "The Lord hath become King" or asserted kingship, or "taken his great power and ruled." Again in the 2nd verse "Righteousness and judgment rendered the successful accomplishment of his throne." And again the 5th verse, "The mountains melted like wax as it were before the face of the Lord of all the earth." Something so long prophesied has been accomplished as depicted here. The Messianic rule has asserted itself and not only has the divine royalty appeared, but "the earth hath been established" "his earth" "and all the laities have seen his glory." "Exceedingly hast thou been exalted above all the gods." "Light hath arisen for the Justified-One and rejoicing for the upright in heart." "And confess ye in your remembrance of his sanctity."

The 97th psalm, if its number is correct, ought to be a consummation and a completion also. We find summed up here of things completed, of "the wondrous things the Lord hath done." 1st, "hath saved,"—2nd, "hath made known his instrumental-salvation" (or Christ), 3rd, "hath revealed his righteousness in the sight of the nations," 4th, "hath remembered his mercy for Jakob and his truth for the house of Israel," 5th, "all the ends of the earth have seen the instrumental-salvation of God (Christ, meant)." From the 4th verse to the 8th both inclusive we have the completeness of praise and exaltation announced and the alala of a complete victory. The 9th verse again sums up the wherefore of his coming.

The 98th psalm is a consummation and a resurrectional in its import. Two great consummations first announced, namely, "God hath become King;" "laities have been wrathful" (as prophesied of course). The decree goes forth. "The Lord is great in Sion and high above all the laities." "Exalt ye the Lord our God and worship at the foot-stool for his feet." This would not be a true picture if the resurrection had not already occurred. Therefore it is a post-resurrectional scene herein depicted. The 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th verses are prophetic instruction to these laities in view of this great consummation.

The 99th psalm depicts a final consummation and is a confessional of praise and alala. The great and final consummation is announced in the 2nd verse, "Enter into his presence with gladness." The summoned here must be "pure in heart," "For the pure in heart will see God." Comprehension seems to be vouchsafed also as stated in the 3rd verse and a part of "the confession" becomes that God is "a useful-good Lord," that "his mercy is forever and his truth unto generation and generation." Some of us Christians will need quickening a good deal to comprehend this last statement, I think.

The 100th psalm again is conjunctive and indicates and emphasizes the Messianic conjunction of the human and divine will. "I come to do thy will, O God." The same thoughts amplified that we had in the 10th psalm. In David's experience here given we have an epitome of the "Son of David's" experience or the Messianic experience more fully and perfectly implied. David aims to do exact justice as a ruler and judge; The greater "Son of David" does it. So David here is speaking in the spirit of the Christ which is the spirit of the prophecy.

TOBACCO.

Too much cannot be said on this subject, and the sooner we all come to the same conclusion so much the better for us. If it is dishonored to use tobacco in the presence of ladies, it surely is unbecoming in a Christian to use it at all. If it is all right for a father to use it, it is all right for his son, and how many fathers can feel conscientious in teaching their boys to use the stuff. Read Prov. xxiii. 2, and put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite. Oh! how is it tobacco user, are you not enought in this snare? Stop and reason a minute, the habit is generally acquired when a boy just in his teens, at the age when boys begin to think they are smart, and want to become men and by gratifying a boy-fancy. In learning to use the weed they imagine their desire accomplished, but after the habit has been formed it is not an easy matter to leave it off, but after you have grown to be a man, one in years and experience instead of one in fancy like in your boyhood days, and learned that instead of elevating you it has brought you one step lower, why not be man enough to stop it? You say God intended for us to use it, or he would never have caused it to grow. What God put here for our use we derive some benefit from it. Do we derive any benefit from tobacco? Not only in one way, and that is it being a poison it will counteract another poison, and proves beneficial in case of a snake bite. You say there are other things as bad, if not worse than using tobacco. I agree with you, but that is no argument in favor of it. We are overtaken in a fault many times and repent of it, but you aim to use tobacco and you are a victim of habit. Brothers and sisters and friends, if I didn't love you, didn't have a desire to see all of you in the kingdom I would never mention this, but I realize my duty more every day. I know that if I do not live up to the standard I will never enter the kingdom of God. We cannot be too careful, no danger of that, but we can be too careless. While you might think tobacco did not injure you, it sheds a bad influence and is giving up that much to the natural man to whom it belongs. Consider the responsibility that rests on your shoulders in mixing up your boys, that you have left not even a trace toward evil. For we are living in a time when it will take a noble boy to face the foe.

Promise to Abraham.

The blessing that was to come upon the world when God called Abraham and made the covenant with him. He said that "in him should all families of the earth be blessed." Gen. xii. 18. Does this have reference to this dispensation, or does it refer to the age to come? Abraham is returned to dust and but very few of the world ever heard of him, so it could not have reference to this dispensation. It will not do to say that the seed is blessing the world in this age, in fulfilment of the promise, for that would let Abraham out of it, but it is through him and his seed. Acts iii. 25. The seed is being developed to be with Abraham to bless all of the families of the earth, and all kindreds of the earth. So we see that with Abraham and his seed the blessing is to come. It will not do to say that all families will be blessed in him and his seed until the seed is developed, and it is only in process of development. When the seed is all developed then the world of mankind will be blessed in them. Then the Word of the Lord will go forth from Jerusalem, and the nations will beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, and nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. Then will be the time that Abraham and his seed will bless all families of the earth, and the knowledge of the Lord will fill the whole earth.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 2, 1895. NO 37.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the possession of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a clear belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and only life is essential for final salvation.

DR. ADAM CLARK on page 10, of his commentary, says: "Through the flimsy, futile, and false dealing of the immense herd of spiritualizers, metaphor-men and allegorists, pure religion has often been disgraced. Let a man put his reason in word, turn conscience out of its province, and throw the reins on the neck of his fancy, and he may write reflections without end."

GRANT ALLEN writing on a surviving ghost or spirit after death, rise at all? Clearly it is the result of crude and unscientific nature of early psychology. Unaware of the true relation of subject and object, and of the true theory of cerebral action, primitive men were of opinion that each of us possesses inside himself, in addition to the outward and visible man, another smaller man, called the soul or spirit."

THE temporal power of the Pope has gone; the political hopes of Israel are reviving; and the Turkish Empire must soon cease to be. There is distress among the nations, and perplexity among the rulers. The murmurs from the masses, are many, as the moan of the troubled sea when the storm is collecting its strength. Many hearts are failing with fear, and many faces are gathering blackness because of the terrors that are felt to be hidden in the womb of the immediate future.

IT looks as if the Turks are determined to suicide politically. The London Daily News of Sept. 10, publishes a despatch from Kars stating that fresh outrages have been perpetrated in the Erzinuzian district. On the 12th of August, a company of Turkish gendarmes killed a sergeant. Therefore the Turkish authorities, without making any inquiry, decided that the assailants were Armenian revolutionists from Kamakh who intended to release the Armenians in prison at Kars. A force of 1000 Turkish troops was sent to Kamakh and five villages were pillaged. Five thousand persons were rendered homeless. Men were tortured and women and children ravished"

ROBERT HALL asks what modern unbelief proposes to give us in the place of Christianity, and answers: —"Strauss proposes music, art and poetry as a substitute for the gospel. These are to ease aching hearts, bind up broken spirits and give rest to souls burdened with sin. Comte offers the worship of humanity." He is not the first, however, who has sought to deify human nature, and has worshiped the creature rather than the Creator. Herbert Spencer tells us, as the latest word of so-called scientific search, that God is unknowable. While Darwin, Huxley, Arnold and J. S. Mill tell us that we must renounce all hope of immortality, and look forward to annihilation; to all of which Faith answers, "I know that my Redeemer liveth."

ONE of Payson's illustrations is as follows: "Suppose we see a number of children playing together in the street, we could not without previous knowledge determine who are their parents, or where are their homes. But let one of them receive an injury, or get into any trouble, and we soon learn who are his parents, for he immediately runs to them for relief. Thus it is with the Christian and the man of the world. While we observe them together, pursuing the same employments and placed in the same circumstances, we may not be able at once to distinguish them. But let affliction come upon them, and we are no longer at a loss; the man of the world seeks relief in earthly comforts, while the Christian flies to his heavenly Father, his refuge and support in the day of trouble."

We here offer more stray lines worthy a place in one's memory; they are on "Daily Duty:"

"Each day its duty brings. The undone task
Of yesterday cannot be now fulfilled
Without some current work's displacement.
"Time
And tide will wait for none." Then let us not
So plan that they need not wait, and keep Shut out
With them by the discharge of each day's claims
The angel-ministries of blessing, sent
For such new dawn, like a prolific tree,
Bless me with opportunities and with duties which
No interweave grow that he who thinks
To gather Life the first. We cannot pick
The thing and refuse the tack. To win
The smile of him who did his Father's will
In the great work assigned him, while
It was day,
With loss self-sacrificing, his high course
We need. Him prayerful footsteps imitate;
And, knowing not what one day may bring forth,
Live so that Death, come when he may,
shall find
Us not defaulters in arrears with Time
Mourning, like Titus, "I have lost a day."
But busily engaged on something which Shall cast a blessing on the world's redound
With one to our own heart, and tend to give
To make some benefit, instead some praise."

WORDS are arbitrary symbols of thought and feeling, and are useless unless their meanings are agreed upon. It is merely idle to insist that people shall attach to the words we use any other signification than that which they are accustomed to attach to the same words when used by others. When a person tries to convey to another mind ideas born in his own, he is bound down to the limitations of the other mind, and he must use words as the listener uses them, or he may as well hold his tongue, for he can convey no accurate information. If you tell an American that you are starved he understands that you are hungry; and we have been told, if you tell a Scotchman that you are starved he understands only that you are cold. It doesn't make any difference what your idea is, each listener will understand according to his idea. We are hoping that our readers will all think of these things when searching the Scriptures. God speaks to men in their own language, and knows precisely how we use the same words.

The Question Drawer.

In answer to questions concerning, "God, Spirit, Sons of God," etc., we submit the following from the writings of Dr. John Thomas, and hope it may be helpful to those searching into the deep things of God.

1. Moses, the prophets and Jesus all teach that the Godhead is one All or power, and that this unity is absolute.

2. That the One Self-existent Eternal All hath never been seen by mortal man,—that he is an undivided and indivisible unity, pre-existent before the beginning of all things intelligent and material.

3. That he dwells in unapproachable light.

4. That spirit emanates from his substance, and that space which is unbounded or infinite is filled with his spirit, which is seen in lightning and heard in thunder.

5. That all created things are out of his spirit, and by it, and hence Father of all that exists.

6. That there be Gods many and lords many called Elohim, Shaddai, Adonia.

7. That by implication these created deities have all been originally subject to evil, even as we, and became immortal Gods after the moral and type exhibited in the biography of Jesus.

8. That all immortals are sons of God—of him who only hath immortality, as an essential quality of his self-existent and uncreated substance.

9. That in seeing God, men saw embodiments of the Spirit of the Eternal Increate, not the Eternal Himself, whom no man can see; and these embodiments are sons of power, i. e. sons of God.

10. That the doctrine concerning God reveals the multitudinous manifestation of the One Eternal Increate by his spirit, which is styled the manifestation of the sons of God.

11. That these sons of power (sown in weakness, raised in power) in the aggregate constitute the name of Jehovah—a name of a multitude a myriad manifestation of the Invisible God,—the one I shall be; God manifested in flesh, which is a grand mystery, but apostolically revealed.

12. That sonship to the Eternal One is an Old Testament element of this great mystery, and that an individual son was necessary to the development of the many sons as Isaac was to Israelites indeed,—we through Jesus."

Those asking authority for the statement sometimes made that "Calvin actually roasted a man alive" are referred to Cassel's Miniature Cyclopædia, page 631. It says: "Miguel Servetus, a Spanish medical and theological writer, born 1509 at Villanueva, went to Paris in 1533, was burnt for heresy at Calvin's instigation, 27 October, 1553, at Geneva.

The Encyclopædia Londinensis, Vol. iii. page 636, says: "Calvin is universally allowed to have had great talents, an excellent genius, and profound learning. His style is grave and polite. Independent of his spiritual pride, his morals were exemplary; for he was pious, sober, chaste, laborious and disinterested. But his memory can never be purified from the stain of burning Servetus; it ill became a reformer to adopt the most odious practice of the very church he was so earnestly crying down."

The World's Religions, page 570, says:—"Servetus was a brilliant young physician and a man of learning, who had anticipated some of Harvey's discoveries about the circulation of the blood; but his intellectual analysis of the Christian faith led him to publish a book in 1553, "Christianismi Restitutio" in which he aimed at restoring to its pristine purity. He regarded the doctrine of the Trinity as involving tri-theism and leading to atheism,—he believed in a Trinity of manifestation only. He was passionately devoted to the person of Christ, was an Anabaptist, and strongly relied on the Bible as his authority. Servetus had already been condemned to be burned in France, but escaped to Geneva, where he was accused under Calvin's influence, of blasphemy, and erroneous teaching. When brought to trial, Servetus used strong expressions against the right of the civil powers to decide in matters of faith, and he also announced further opinions tending in a pantheistic direction. Calvin approved of his being condemned to death, though he wished him not to be burnt. But his death took place by fire, to the great discredit of Calvin and Geneva, October 27, 1553."

OUR CHILDREN.

The Two Words.

One day a harsh word, rashly said,
Upon an evil journey sped,
And like a sharp and cruel dart,
It pierced a fond and loving heart;
It turned a friend into a foe,
And everywhere brought pain and woe.

A kind word followed it one day,
Flew swiftly on its blessed way;
It healed the wound, it soothed the pain,
And friends of old were friends again.
It made the hate and anger cease,
And everywhere brought joy and peace.

But yet the harsh word left a trace
The kind word could not quite efface,
And though the heart its love regained,
It bore a scar that long remained.
Friends could forgive but not forget,
Or bear the sense of keen regret.

O if we could but learn to know
How swift and sure our words can go,
How would we weigh with utmost care
Each thought before it sought the air,
And only speak the words that move
Like white-winged messengers of love.

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea.—No. 34.

THE SOJOURN AT SINAI.

We want you to understand just how God shut his people in, let us go out into a stony field and make Mt. Sinai, with its great valley, its wadies and its foothills.

We will make the mount of earth, and face it with stone. If we can find some rough slate-stones, pointed at one end, they will do best. Most mountains begin to rise so gradually that you hardly know when the ascent is commenced, but this one, that we are building, must start almost straight up from the ground, so that you can walk right up to it and put your hands against its sides. When we have it high enough, we must divide it into two peaks. At the north, we must have the valley of El Raha, and circling outside of it, the hills. To the northwest, must be the wady that we came through last, with hills on either side of it. Another wady must go out through hills to the northeast, and wadies must run down the east, south and west sides of our mountain, while lower mountains are made to skirt the outside of these rough narrow valleys.

If you do not like the labor of building the picture out of earth and rocks, you can use sand, or you can stay indoors, and set up books; your teacher will show you how.

Professor Totten says, this whole mountainous region where we are, was called Horeb. Then Rephidim, is not far behind us. We have said nothing about Jethro's visit. It must have been made before we entered the valley of El Raha. He was the father-in-law of Moses, and brought the wife and children of Moses with him.

His home, could not have been far away for these mountains and valleys are in his country.

Its name is Midian. It extends to the east, across the northern part of the Gulf of Akaba.

Did we not say in a former lesson that it stretched across the Persian Gulf? That was a mistake. It is much nearer Egypt than this would make it.

Jethro, was a priest in Midian. The Midianites seem to have been worshippers of idols, (Numbers xxv. 2. 17, 18—iii: 2, 20) were they Moabites? Jethro, was an Ethiopian, or Cushite. He must have been acquainted with the true worship of God, for he brought a burnt offering and sacrifices, and ate before the Lord, with Moses, and the elders of the people, just as the Israelites did. Had Moses taught him the statutes, and commandments of the Lord, while he was living with him in his tent after he had fled from Pharoah?

During the visit of Jethro, judges were appointed over Israel, that the labor of Moses might be lightened. It was to hard for him to decide the cases of so many people. The men chosen to help him were men who feared God, men of truth, hating covetousness. They were rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, and rulers of fifties. You will come to the book of judges by and by, and will want to know how long they ruled Israel. Paul will tell you, "He gave unto them judges, about the space of four hundred and fifty years, or until Samuel, the prophet. And afterward they desired a king," and he gave them Saul, removed him, and raised up David.

Acts xiii. 19-23. Where to begin and end their years, has been a knotty question with men who were trying to find out the age of the world. They begin at the time of Jethro's visit and reach to the thirteenth year of David, when the ranks of judgeship was transferred to the sons of the king. 2 Sam. viii. 18, 1 Chron. xviii. 14, 17. See also Deut. i. 15-19. You must read all these references or you cannot understand.

How long were the Israelites in reaching the Sacred Mount? About fifty days. They left Rameses on the fifteenth day of the first month, the day after the Passover—came to the wilderness of Sin the fifteenth day of the second month, and camped before the mount in the third month, probably the first day of the month. The months of the Israelites averaged thirty days. From the 15th of the first month to the 15th of the second month would be thirty days, and from the 15th of the second month to the first day of the third month, fifteen days, 30 plus 15 equals 45. The fifth day would bring us round to the season of Pentecost, fifty days from the Passover.

Mount Sinai was God's pulpit. What a grand pulpit it was! He has led his people out of Egypt, has shown himself their healer at Marah, the Giver of the Bread of Life in the wilderness of Sin, of the Water of Life at Rephidim, and as their Banner at the battle with Amalek; he is going to become their Teacher and Law-giver, now. He is taking them to Canaan, but they must first go to school, that they may know their duty to him, to one another, and to the people around them. He intends to overturn all the other religions of the world through them, that all men may have just laws and may lead pure and happy lives, and Paradise be at last restored. Can they be kept from their enemies, while he is giving them his holy law. No safer place could be found than this valley of El Raha. It is not on any of the great roads, and there are only two narrow places where people can enter it. It would take but very few soldiers to keep an army out. Here in this "beautiful, level, gravelly plain," they are to stay a whole year. God feeds them, and there are good springs of sweet, clear water, so they will lack nothing. We all love the wild, steep mountains. We seem nearer to God when we climb them, and I think we are. We are nearer because our thoughts are brought nearer by the mountains. We can better understand how great he is, and how much to be feared when we stand on some awful height.

The first thing that Moses did, was to go up and talk with God,—the holy, holy, holy One. And he brings back this message to the people, "Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings and brought you unto myself. Now, therefore, if ye will obey my voice, indeed, and keep my covenant, then, ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people, for all the earth is mine. And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation." Ex. xix. 4, 5, 6. You must read these verses over several times, and then turn to Peter ii. 9, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, etc."

The promise was, that if obedient, no other nation should be so highly exalted as the Israelites; they should literally be a kingdom of priests, or teachers, going out as missionaries to all lands. God had brought them to himself, for this very purpose, that they might show forth his praise in all the earth. And that purpose, will yet be carried out through Israel. For God hath not put off his people whom he foreknew.

He has elected, or chosen men and women out of all nations to be the rulers in the world to come, but the kingdom of Israel will still be the head or highest of kingdoms.

Flowers of Palestine.

"My Beloved spake, and said unto me:
Rise up, my love, my fair one,
And come away!
For, lo, the winter is past,
The rain is over and gone,
The flowers appear on the earth;
The time of the singing of birds is come,
And the voice of the turtle (dove) is heard in our land;
The fig tree putteth forth her green figs,
And the vines with tender grape give a good smell.
Arise, my love, my fair one,
And come away." Cant. ii. 10-13.

All travelers in Palestine grow eloquent in their allusions to the flora of Immanuel's Land. Testimonies like the following might be easily multiplied:

"The sacred fields of Canaan are emblazoned with botanical glories second to none on the globe. The richness and variety of the flowers upon the hillsides and vales of Bible sites are almost without parallel; not less than twenty-five hundred species of plants may be classified along the paths of Abraham, of Elijah, and of Jesus. Every sacred association is pointed with flowers—the punctuation of the language of beauty."—Dr. Morris.

"The path of usual travel, on which one enters immediately after leaving Jaffa, passes through a positive parterre of flowers, millions of anemones mingled with familiar asphodels and tulips, together with an illimitable variety of other natural and unfamiliar plants of every possible pattern and hue, whose faces are strange to your experience, and whose very names are unknown. No one can help growing enthusiastic as he enters Palestine from this direction. You are filled with exceeding delight and surprise at the exuberant profusion of these spring blossoms on tree and shrub and grass. A wide plain spreads out in every phase of variegated loveliness to the southernmost end of the ancient Sharon."—Dr. Robinson.

"The hills in the region of Mount Tabor offer better pasturage than any we have met in the Holy Land, and yet there seems fewer flocks upon them. But the flowers have taken advantage of this absence of cattle and people, to spring up in a variety I have never seen equalled. We gathered bouquets in a few moments by the path, which I defy any London or New York conservatory to equal in beauty and freshness, in variety or in rarity. Such feathery things, such fairy shapes, such delicate colors, such exquisite contrasts, were never it seems to me, combined in any nosegay, and I felt then, as I do now, ashamed that my feeble botany could not name and place them. I make their beauty the amende of a most honorable mention. Could I have sent one of those Syrian bouquets to each of my beloved friends at home, I would gladly have paid the largest New York price for a hundred, and a hundred might easily have been plucked from a rood of ground. But their frailty was equal to their freshness and delicacy. There is solemnity in the houseless, treeless, unpeopled state of this fine country, which is an affecting preparation for approach to the great center of Jesus' ministry, the Sea of Galilee. Nature seems to say there is no room for anything in this sacred region but the memory of him whose glory fills the earth. The hills are green, and flowery, and fragrant, but they refuse any meaner service than that of acting as the witness of him who, once putting their lilies above Solomon in all his glory, used them as his altar and pulpit. —Dr. Bellows

As we prepare this article a group of flowers, gathered at ten sacred localities in the vicinity of Jerusalem, is before us. We received it from Dr. R. Morris, Secretary of the Scholars' Holy Land Exploration. It is tastefully arranged and quite suggestive. He represents each flower as speaking —listen!

I heard the happy angels singing on the Christmas night,
When shepherds saw Christ's glory and were ravished with delight.
Luke ii. 4-14.

I heard the dying Rachel as she bid her friends farewell.
And pressed her baby to her breast with grief that none can tell.
Gen. xxxv. 16-20.

I saw the weeping sisters, weeping round the open earth.
And heard the god-like voice of Jesus, "Lazarus, come forth!"
John xi. 1-16.

I flourished on Mount Zion, where King David's harp was strung.
2 Sam. v. 7.

And all my leaflets quivered as the holy hymns were sung.
1 Kings ii. 10.

I heard the prayer of Solomon, his people's fond desire.
2 Chron. iii. 1; vi. 13.

And saw descend the answering sign of God, the cloud and fire.
2 Chron. vii. 1-3

I flourish by the Kidron, in the sweet Siloam's flow,
A green and fertile valley where bright fruits and blossoms grow.
2 Sam. xv. 23.

I heard the parting words of Jesus, full of sympathy and love.
Luke xix. 41-44.

And I saw his blessed form ascending to the realms above.
Acts i. 9-12.

I heard the shrieks of infants burned in sacrifice to Baal;
Their writhings and their tortures, were the mockery of hell.
Jer. xix. 1-6.

I sprang amidst the sepulchres where Judah's monarchs lay,
But all the tombs are empty now and Judah far away.

I bloomed beneath the olive trees, were Jesus bowed his knee;
His tears bedewed my blossoms in the dark Gethsemane.
Matt. xxvi. 36-45.

On Shepherd's Plain—near Rachel's tomb
—at humble Bethany—
By Zion's walls—Moriah's slope—the Kedron's flowery lea—
On Olivet—in Hinnom's dell—where monarchs had their tomb—
And in Gethsemane—we bright and holy blossoms bloom.

When the Divine fingers had completed the work of the heavens, they made the earth and adorned it. The bounty of the flowers is one of the evidences that the Spirit of wisdom is equally the Spirit of beauty."

Report of Annual Conference.

Pursuant to previous announcement the Church of God in Indiana met at Argos, Indiana, Sept. 20, 1895, continuing over the Sunday following.

On account of sickness in his family Bro. Wagoner was unable to attend the meeting. Bro. Wince presided when the business meeting was called Saturday at 1:30 P. M. The minutes for the preceding meeting were read and accepted. The following were elected as officers for the ensuing year. Pres. J. F. Wagoner, Vice Pres. J. L. Wince, second Vice Pres. R. C. Railsback, Sec. A. C. Roberts, Treas. L. B. Boggs.

The treasurer reported amount on hand at last meeting $140.52, received $8.00, paid out $50.00, remaining in treasury $104.52.

G. W. Smith of Kewanna was granted a letter of recommendation.

Ministers present were M. Joblin, J. L. Wince, Bro. and Sister Woodward, R. C. Railsback and G. W. Smith. The meeting was fairly well attended throughout with attentive audiences. Bro. Joblin did most of the preaching, presenting the truth in that plain and forcible manner so characteristic of him, capturing the admiration of all who heard him. The preaching was all excellent, and although there were no additions we trust the work was not all in vain. Sister Woodward occupied the pulpit at the Christian Church Sunday forenoon. There were several in attendance from abroad. Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves and all felt that we had a grand good meeting. Bro. and Sister Woodward remained in Argos to hold a series of meetings. May the Lord be with them and crown their and all others efforts to do good in his cause, with success.

The meeting adjourned to meet one year from then, the time and place to be decided in the future. The next quarterly conference will be held at Plymouth, notice of which will be given in due time.

Nothing can be more beautiful in the sight of God than a home circle where the Lord reigns in the hearts of the members and where love for each other is manifested in looks and tones. But dreadful the home marred by unkindness and bickerings. Family quarrels are the hardest to heal, the most wretched to endure. Daily flaunts and flings keep such wounds open, until finally hatred for each other ensues in utter defiance of the terrible denunciations of Scriptures against those who cherish hate in the heart.

Be polite to your children. Do you expect them to be mindful of your welfare? To grow glad at your approach? To bound away to your pleasure before your request is half spoken? Then, with all your dignity and authority mingle politeness. Give it a niche in your household temple. Only then will you have the true secret of sending out into the world really finished gentlemen and ladies.

A Greek, the wisest man of his day, once cried with honest fervor: "What a heap of things there are that I do not want!" How lucky we should be if we could get out of discontent and envy into his habit of loving the good we have, but fearing to have all the good we desire!

Good actions crown themselves with lasting days.

POETRY.

My Neighbor.

My neighbor met me on the street,
She dropped a word of greeting gay,
Her look so bright, her tone so sweet,
I stopped to music all that day.

The care that tugged at heart and brain,
The work too heavy for my hand,
The ceaseless underbeat of pain,
The tasks I could not understand,

Grew lighter as I walked along
With air and step of liberty,
Cheered by the sudden lift of song,
That filled the world with cheer for me.

Yet was this all? A woman wise,
Her life enriched by many years,
Had faced me with her brave, true eyes,
Paused on, and said, "Good morning dear."

BY JOHN WILSON.

"Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart."

A LOVING SON.

"You must judge its worth by comparison of other Scripture. But this is somewhat of a digression. The testimony we were considering was as to the reconciling effect of the death of Christ upon the Jew and Gentile. We may rightly view this as a social or national relationship of the cross of Christ. God's purposed brotherhood of nations will be cemented by the atoning blood of him who will be their King of kings. In the death of Jesus 'to' make of the twain one new man' is the initiation of the one body which will ultimately become the one people. It was for this that 'making peace' he reconciled 'both to God in one body by the cross,' having 'slain the opposing principle, i. e. the law of commandments. As with the law so with death—it enchained him, though he was guiltless of sin, hence he indicted it upon the charge of false imprisonment; and thus he was able to 'lead captivity captive, and receive gifts for men, yea, for the rebellious also.' As to the second passage you quote you will see that the Apostle is speaking of a condition of things under that law which Christ redeemed us from. As I have shown, substitutionary punishment is at variance with the principles of God's justice, hence it cannot mean that the shedding of the blood of another expiates our guilt. Nor is this idea necessary, seeing the preceding sentence says, 'almost all things were by the law purged with blood, and'—as a continuation of the same reasoning, not a totally diverse affirmation—'without shedding of blood there is no remission.' Remission signifies to put, send, or cast away: that which is here put away is not 'sins' (as our translators make it) but the first covenant, which having been brought into force by blood (Ex. xxiv, 7. 8,) needed the same agent to abrogate it. Remission of everything, however, was not dependent upon blood, though accompanied thereby, because the Israelites annually had their sins confessed over the head of the living scape-goat, which was afterwards 'sent away' (remitted) into the wilderness. Christ is called 'the Lamb of God who taketh away, (not endureth) the sin of the world.' The Hebrew names for the sacrificial offering all teach one doctrine, that confession and not substitution is the essential to forgiveness."

"I notice in the Mosaic law that most of the sacrifices are 'to make atonement.' I hardly see how this can mean reconciliation."

"It is really only by a secondary meaning that the term applies here. The Old Testament word is a very different one to the New; and properly should be 'covering.' The sacrifices, gifts, redemption monies, and other things made 'covering for sins.' If we retain the old word we must alter its theological meaning, which does not fit the Mosaic doctrine of atonements. The whole subject is too elaborate for to-night, but I will read you some items I found by a careful analysis of the Pentateuch.

Human priests made atonements for sin, sanctified and cleansed the people, &c.

Forgiveness of sins followed the priest-made atonement.

Unclean houses had atonement made for them by the remission of a living bird.

Female diseases were atoned by or upon cleansing.

The tabernacle and its furniture were also atoned by cleansing on the great day of atonement.

The living scape-goat was the atoner for the nation, and bore the sins of the people.

The Aaronic priests were sin-bearers: the way in which they 'bore iniquity' being by offerings.

The high-priest redeemed only unholy animals, and this he did by demanding a redemption price."

"These certainly seem to make a confusion of ideas, Alfred."

"Only in so far as they disagree with the theological ideas attached to the words, Ella."

"But how do you understand the Mosaic doctrine of atonement? How can a covering over of sins avail?"

"You remember the sanitary poem you read to me one day. One line from it will I think illustrate the whole case,

'Smells covered with earth are for ever at rest.'

Why? Because the antiseptic property of earth destroys corruption. So the Mosaic atonements were antiseptics provided to remove iniquity. I can see nothing of that notion advocated by some, of there being a covering robe, hiding sin from God's sight. The idea seems to me derogatory to an All-seeing God. The thing covered to him must be something which has ceased to be."

"So I think, cousin."

"Redemptions again were many and various under the law, but all radically signify 'buying back.' Putting aside all expiatory ideas, you will find no difficulty in understanding the reasoning of the Hebrew apostle, when he says, that 'by means of (Christ's) death for the redemption of the transgressions under the first covenant, they who are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.' In thus suffering under, to ensure the putting away of, that first covenant, he dedicated the new with his blood. He was the Mediator of the better covenant, which being founded upon better promises, required a more perfect mechanism."

"I understand much better now; but I wish you could go further into the meaning of the sacrifices, Alfred."

"I cannot now, sister, but sometime we will search the law together, for though we are not required to obey it as such, yet its essential provisions are interwoven with 'the law of Christ.' But I have one more passage of Edith's to answer and then we must part for to-night. You ask me, cousin, what that expression means. 'Ye are bought with a price.' Supposing it to have reference to the death of Christ, to whom was the price paid?"

"I always understand it to be God, or rather his justice."

"It seems that you did not share the doubt which for twelve centuries kept the divines at loggerheads; that is, whether it was paid to God or to the devil. Then you would regard his blood as the coin, so to speak, in which the price was paid."

"Yes, I suppose so."

"Could it be possible for a man to give satisfaction for another's sins?"

"Never; for it says in the psalms, 'No man can redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him.'"

"Yet 'Christ suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should tread in his steps.' In the popular idea these steps led to expiation, so that either the apostle or his modern expositors make a mistake. That Peter did not err is evident, because his saying is confirmed by Paul, who aspired to a 'fellowship with Christs sufferings' and 'like death, a rather blasphemous wish if he had viewed the passion of Messiah in the popular light."

"In what sense then is Christ a Ransom? Alfred."

"By what is the sinner enslaved? Ella."

"I can not say—oh, by sin, 'He is the servant of sin.'"

"Yes, he is a bond servant to sin, led captive by the lusts of the flesh and thus an 'enemy to God by wicked works.' In other words, 'The fleshy mind is enmity against God.' It was needful therefore for the philanthropy of God to devise some means of redeeming men from under sin's galling yoke, and hence that exhibition of Love by the cross. By destroying the willingness to serve sin, removing the enmity, preparatory to transforming or renewing our minds by faith, Christ causes us to come and be reconciled, and thus by forsaking our former works we are brought back from all iniquity."

"But, Alfred, does it not destroy the sense of the metaphor for the ransom to be paid to the ransomed."

"But, sister dear, it is not paid to the bondsman. Being metaphorical, it is, as I have shown, the practice of sin which is personified as the slave-holding tyrant, and that which causes us to cast off its chains is faith in the God-sent Savior, which makes us hate that which exacted the shedding of his blood. We are thus 'brought back from our vain conversation with the precious blood of the Anointed.' It is this moral power which 'purges the conscience from dead works to serve the living God.' Brought forth from under sin's deep-staining power, and living lives of continual protest against it, we can understand the Apocalyptic proclamation; 'These are they who came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb,' Rev. xix. 8. Surely there is inciting agent enough in love thus manifested, to break down the barriers of sin, to cause us to cast away our cords of bondage, and come forth in Christ's 'freedom."

"I cannot exactly grasp your reasoning, cousin Alfred."

"Perhaps an illustration may make it plainer. You have often heard Reuben White speak of himself as 'a seven years' slave of the bottle.' What redeemed him from it?"

"I suppose it was the power of of his will acted upon by his awakened conscience, through the dreadful accident to his little Lizzie. Poor child, I never look on her without feeling a double hatred to the drink-traffic."

"Then if I call Lizzie's lost limb her father's ransom from the drink-tyrant you will see how such can operate. Ever since the night when in his drunken fury he maimed his darling daughter, he has loathed the sight of intoxicating drink. Thus her suffering was his redemption, by arousing his conscience to fight against his sin. And if such a price was efficacious to bring about this conversation, how much greater ought to be our hatred to the many sins which caused the death of Christ."

"I see now what you mean by a ransom. And truly the death of Jesus was a heavy price to pay."

"But the willingness with which it was paid was equal to the value of it. Yes, thanks be to God, it is no blood-red arm, no stern inflexible countenance, no unpitying eye, which looks upon us through the Mediator; but a face beaming with more than a parent's smile, and a touch which has no equal for its exquisite tenderness, which greet us when we turn our faces towards him. In fact it is Himself—that God whose attributes are best summed up in the word LOVE,—whom we see when we in contrite mood return toward holiness. In melting accents His likeness cries, 'come to me, all ye who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest to your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.'....'If any man thirst, let him come to me and drink.' 'I am the Bread of life: he who cometh to me shall never hunger; and he who believeth on me shall never thirst.' And he pleadeth, oh how plaintively!

'Ye will not come to me that ye may have life!' But when, haply, some are won to retrace their steps and seek the way to immortality, how gladly God welcomes them as sons, and seals them to an inheritance in the Kingdom of His First-born. I am not surprised that this causes you both to weep: I have seen man from whom severest pain could not extract a groan, have tearful eyes at the recital of this surpassing love. Assured that 'God sent not His Son into the world to condemn it, but that the world through him might be saved,' and having accepted His Son, we are incited to 'draw near in full assurance of faith, (because of) having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, (anything more? yes,) and our bodies washed with pure water,' or having been immersed."

"I think we can understand the system of religion as revealed in the Bible now. How well every thing harmonizes in it. A promise is given of inheritance in a righteous, everlasting kingdom; any one having an opportunity to share therein, provided they prepare themselves for this royalty by faith, by immersion, and by life obedience. In addition to the advantages of the promised blessings so rich in themselves, we are induced to seek for them by the love shown in the life and death of our Lord: his resurrection being the seal or earnest of our redemption from that death to which sin consigns us."

"Yes, my dear sister,

God His way is perfect;
The word of the Lord is tried.'
'The words of the Lord are pure words:
As silver tried in a furnace of earth.'
'Therefore I esteem thy precepts as all right:
And I hate every false way.....
Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness.
And thy law is the truth.'
'And thy word was to me the joy and rejoicing of my heart.
Because I am called by thy name.
Oh, Lord God of Hosts.'"

"I feel much easier in mind, cousin Alfred, now that I see and feel the Love of God in the way of salvation. I was compelled to credit the Bible doctrine of life and death, of mortality experienced, and immortality attainable, after Ella and I had talked and read together. But it felt as something with which I had no affinity—as a lofty palace into which I should be ashamed to enter clad in my beggar's filthy rags, and which I must only admire afar off. In another aspect, as I told cousin Ella ere you came, it seemed to me as the landscape wanting the sunlight's gilding. Now all is warm and glowing; and the host stands at the door of his mansion and pleads with me to enter. I see before me a scene—To the left here is a slave, weary of his heavy task-work of sin with its pay in apples of Sodom, who hears the man in white raiment calling, 'Come to me all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest.' He asks, 'What hast thou to give me?' and the answer is 'Eternal Life in my Father's Kingdom.' 'But how am I to obtain that; I see nothing but death in prospect?' 'I will ransom thee from the power of the grave, 'But thou art so strict a master;' He pleads his great love, and says, My yoke is easy and my burden is light;' till finally, the poor wretch is persuaded. 'But thou art pure, I am filthy; my sins have separated between me and God,' is his wail now. But even as a strain of music comes back the answer, 'My Father hath loved thee, and is pitiful, and will have compassion on all who seek him. Wash thyself, therefore, and follow in my steps."

"My poetess cousin, you have well expressed it, But you will not continue the scene in word and in (your own) deed, thus:—'And he ran with all speed and was immersed in water, washing away the filth got in his past service, and emerged from the bath clean: and in new raiment went rejoicing on way, intent to obtain that crown of life which was ready, placed as a prize at the end of the race.' My dear girls, it is by such ready, heart-felt acceptance of the truth, the faith, for which he died, that 'the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin;' but it also requires 'the washing of regeneration (the new birth) for the putting away of sins,' ere we can say we are the children of God. 'Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I have commanded you.' And then your reward; 'To him who loves us, and has washed us from our sins in his own blood, and makes us to be kings and priests to God and his Father: to him be glory and dominion for ages of ages'. Yes, well may the elders sing (and we echo their song) 'Thou art worthy to take the book: for thou wast slain—and hast brought us back to God by thy blood,....and makest us kings and priests to our God, and we shall reign on earth."

"When may we be immersed? Alfred."

"As soon as you like: I will arrange with you to-morrow if all is well. I think your head aches no longer, Edith?"

"No, cousin, it does not. I feel inclined to sing rather than mourn now."

"Supposing we chant Micah's beautiful finale:—

Who is a God like to Thee?
Who pardoneth iniquity passing by the transgression of the residue of his heritage?
He retaineth not his anger forever.
Because he delighteth in mercy.
He will again have compassion on us;
He will subdue our iniquities:
Yea, Thou wilt cast all our sins into the depths of the sea.
Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob
Thy mercy to Abraham,
Which thou sworest to our fathers in the days of old.'"

The Fall of The Ottoman Empire.

Many of our people seem to be looking for the fall of Turkey at the hand of Russia, and I do not know why, unless it be that the world in general, is expecting that occurrence. But we should remember that the world is generally looking for the opposite of what will actually occur. They will be saying, "peace," when "sudden destruction cometh." If I understand prophecy aright, Turkey will never fall at the hands of Russia; but when she does fall it will be at the hands of the Jews, and that after Christ comes. Of course in the interpretation of prophecy no man is infallible, and the expositor should reserve the right to change his views with progressive knowledge. Yet by an exchange of views we may help one another in understanding prophecy, and even get some light from an erroneous exposition. Now as I follow Turkey awhile, I shall report some points previously published in an article in THE RESTITUTION. Both Russia and Turkey are plainly pointed out in prophecy. Russia is the Rosh of Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix., and I think Turkey is the Edom of prophecy. The Edomites were the descendants of Esau. We read in Gen. xxv. 30, that Esau said: "Feed me, I pray, of that same red pottage; therefore was his name called Edom." But Esau's extremity was Jacob's opportunity, and the crafty Jacob said: "Sell me this day thy birthright;" and Esau did so. We will now notice some points which identify Turkey with the house of Esau. When Isaac blessed Esau he said: "By thy sword thou shalt live, and when thou shalt have the dominion thou shalt break his (Jacob's) yoke from off thy neck." So Esau was to get Jacob's dominion; and the Turks were reckless soldiers under the fanatical teaching of Mohammed, and their career has been one of conquest, plunder and robbery. Further, the Sultan wears no crown, but when installed into office is girded with a sword, and thus invested with authority to rule over the people who "live by the sword." The Turks, also, observe an annual feast called Beiram at which a ram is offered, in memory of the one caught in a thicket, which was substituted for their father Isaac; for they believe they are his descendants, and who should know better?

Jerusalem was to be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles were fulfilled; and the Turks, or Edomites, are the present treader down. But Jacob the supplanter follows close on Esau's heel, Gen. xxv. 26, and now we find about 100,000 Jews in Palestine, waiting till God's time arrives for them to destroy and supplant the Turks. For the end was shown from the beginning, and Turkey has sold to the Jews her birthright. She got hungry and had to borrow from the Rothschilds, and other rich Jews; and crafty Jacob again said: "Sell me this day thy birthright," and Turkey gave a mortgage on Palestine. Now, a mortgage is a pledge, which gives the creditors a death-grip on the estate, and is seldom paid off; and in this case Turkey will never pay it off. Thus we see the fulfillment of Obad. 18, 'They that eat thy bread have laid a wound under thee,' and also Ezek. xxv. 14, "I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel." The wound is now made, and the vengeance is coming. We also learn from Obad. 18, that "the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame," and they shall kindle and devour the stubble field of Esau. Turkey is now an emaciated invalid; good for nothing only burning; but the Russians will not kindle that fire, but Judah and Israel, for they are the Lord's battle axe. Let us notice a few more points in Obad., which identify Turkey as Edom. v. 2., "Behold I have made thee small among the heathen: thou art greatly despised." v. 3, "thou whose habitation is high." (but Zion) v. 16, "Ye have drunk upon my holy mountain." v 17, "the house of Jacob shall possess their (Turkey's) possessions." v. 21, "And saviors shall come up on Mt. Zion to judge the Mt. of Esau and the kingdom shall be the Lord's." Thus Mt. Zion and the Mt. of Esau are the same, for Esau got Jacob's dominion for a while. "Saviours" in the plural refers to Christ and his saints when they descend on the Mt. of Olives to execute judgment. Jude xiv.

We also learn from Amos ix. 11, 12, that when the tabernacle of David is reared up there is a remnant of Edom left, which consist of widows and orphans, Jer. xlix. 11; but there will not be any men left of the house of Esau. Obad. 18. We learn from Dan. xi. 40, 41, that when the king of the north (Russia) heads the armies of Europe, that "these escape out of his hand, Edom and Moab and the chief of the children of Ammon for the overthrow of Edom (Turkey) is reserved for" my people Israel."

When Gog plants his tabernacle in the glorious holy mountain, Dan. xi. 45, it is for the purpose of taking a spoil from the Jews, who are now gathered back there with cattle and goods, Ezek. xxxviii. 12. The Jews are worsted at first and half of the city goes into captivity. Then, as we read in Joel iii. 11, the Lord "causes his mighty ones" (the saints and angels with Christ) "to come down." The Lord fights then as when he fought in the day of battle. Zech. xiv. 3. We read in Judges vii. 22, how the Lord fought for Gideon by "turning every man's sword against his fellow." So in the last war "every man's sword shall be against his brother." Ezek. xxxviii. 21. For the Lord will make the nations drunken with the wine cup of his fury. Jer. xxv. 25. Then will "every horse be stricken with astonishment and his rider with madness." Zech. xii. 4. "Jerusalem will be a cup of trembling to all the nations gathered about her." "All faces shall gather paleness" for "it is the time of Jacob's (the Jews) trouble, but he shall be delivered out of it." Jer. xxx. 6, 7; for the Lord shall save Judah before any other people from this tribulation. Zech. xii. 7. In Isa. lxiii., Christ is represented as coming from Edom with his garments dyed in the blood of his enemies after having trod the winepress of God's wrath. And the winepress is trodden without the city of Jerusalem, in the valley of Jehoshophat, and blood came out to the horses' bridles, by the space of sixteen hundred furlongs or two miles. But the hope of the saints is that before this great trouble begins, the Lord will send his angels, like thieves, to steal them away from the trouble to meet their Lord in the air. 1 Thess. iv., to be hidden for a little moment till the indignation is past. Isa. xxvi. 20. Then will the earth—contrary to the course of nature—before her travail, the last tribulation, bring forth a manchild, the church of the first born, a nation of kings and priests, in one day. Isa. lxvi. 7-11. "Let us pray, therefore, that we"—like the Christians at the siege of Jerusalem A. D. 70—"may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass and stand before the Son of Man."

W. L. CROWE.

Some people are very strong on "confess your faults to one another," but they want the other party to do all the confessing.—The Pentecost.

John the Baptist.

"Among them that are born of women there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist, notwithstanding, he that is the least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." Matt. xi. 11.

John was alive and not in the kingdom when Christ spoke. He, like Jesus and the apostles (until after the resurrection), looked for an earthly kingdom and did not comprehend fully Christ's mission. He was the Herald of a Messiah who was to "teach them all things"—and called to repentance as a preparation for that Teacher.

The Jews, rulers included, accepted John—had he understood and explained the nature of Christ's kingdom and teachings no doubt, they would have rejected him as they did Christ. Christ spoke of John as he was—'He that is (i. e. "will be" for the kingdom was future when Christ spoke) least in the kingdom of heaven is (will be) greater than he." That is—Those in the kingdom will be saved, glorified and immortal, whereas John though more than a prophet, was a mortal man, subject to death, liable to temptation and sin and even within the possibility (like Paul) of forfeiting his crown, and withal the Herald of a Teacher whose message he did not comprehend fully.

OBITUARY.

Stella, eldest daughter of Bro. and Sister H. H. Bernard, after 1 year and 18 days of untold suffering, peacefully fell asleep in Jesus, Sunday Sept. 15, age 18 years, 6 months and 15 days. All that medical skill, affectionate family and loving friends could do, could not stay the cruel, silent enemy; and day by day the fair loved one was seen to fade as the autumn flower, until death came and claimed the precious jewel. She was baptized into Christ, Nov. 1889, and has lived a devoted Christian. She was faithful to church and her presence was always seen at prayer meeting; and one of her last testimonies tells of her hope, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want." Her voice was ever heard in songs of praise to her blessed Master; but it is stilled now, no more to be heard until she joins the ransomed host, and sings the songs of the redeemed in that sweet Eden home. She leaves parents, brother and four sisters to mourn the loss of their loved one. "But sorrow not dear ones, even as others, which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." After funeral services by Bro. I. S. Miller, Monday afternoon, she was peacefully and sadly laid away in the Mount Vernon cemetry to sleep until the resurrection morn.

We have laid her to rest 'mong the jewels of his,
Folded close in death's icy embrace;
We have pressed the last kiss, we have dropped the last tear,
On the dead and the beautiful face.

O, soft be her slumbers—the young and the fair,
Whose life-sands so gently have run;
Though the night-dew nor clings to her bright flowing hair,
There's a morn for our beautiful one.

Fare you well for a while, faded one of our home;
Sweetly sleep from all sorrow and pain;
Till the Prince of the angels in triumph shall come,
And restore your lost glory again.

A. J. DAVIS.

"In this world we have plaintive songs—songs tremulous with sorrow, songs dirgeful for the dead; but in the kingdom of heaven there will be no sighing of winds, no wailing of anguish, no weeping symphony. The tamest song will be hallelujah, the dullest time a triumphal march. Joy among the cherubim! Joy among the seraphim! Joy among the ransomed! Joy forever!"

It is laughable to see one hunting high and low for his spectacles when they have only been shoved over his forehead. But it is not laughable to see Christians hunting for what they call opportunities to honor God, while overlooking such opportunities which they carry with them wherever they go.—Sunday S. Times.

We will read the Bible until something better comes, and in so doing will be found holding forth the faithful words.

Selected.

In the Rough.

The marble was pure and white
Though only a block at best,
But the artist, with inward sight
Looked further than all the rest,
And saw in the hard, rough stone,
The loveliest statue the sun shone on.

So he set to work with care
And chiselled a form of grace,
A figure divine and fair
With a tender, beautiful face
But the blows were hard and fast
That brought from the marble that work at last.

So I think that the Lord
Must hear God's children keen,
If the spirit yearns and sighs
For the better life unseen,
For men are only blocks at best,
Till the chiselling brings out all the rest.

The Tongue.

Let us review our past life and count our difficulties and see if they are not nearly all traceable to the misuse of the tongue. It has created wars between kingdoms, overthrown empires, exterminated nations, blasted homes, broken hearts and caused countless tears. It has taken the youthful bud from the cheeks of many an innocent bride. It has brought wives and mothers down to premature graves. It has caused innocent youth, in the home circle, to quake beneath its withering blast. It has separated the dearest friends. It caused the first murder, and has caused untold millions since "Cain Talked with Abel his brother....and slew him." Gen. 4; 8.

We see a beautiful couple to-day, with all of life before them, full of hope and promise, standing before the marriage altar. A few years pass by and we see them again. The tongue, the merciless tongue has wrecked all. The glow of hope which once shone upon the brow of the fair bride has flown. She is now dragging out a miserable existence, sometimes wishing she had never been born.

Husband! How does those harsh words crush the already broken and bleeding heart of that helpless wife. Wife, how those hasty, impetuous fault finding words discourage the weary husband. We see a little band of worshipers to-day banded together as with a chain of gold, but among them there is a treacherous tongue, and soon the chain is broken, and the work of God is apparently hindered thereby. We see in the pew to-day a soul we are anxious to reach, the pastor earnestly tries to lay before him the plain way of salvation. To-morrow the pew is empty, and on inquiry we learn that the hasty word of some member of the flock has wounded and kept him away.

"Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth." "The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquety; so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body."—James 3; 5, 6.

This disciple further says: "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion (is) vain."—James 1; 25.

"Who keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his soul from trouble.—Prov. 21; 23.

The Psalmist said: "I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my tongue. I will keep my mouth with a bridle while the wicked is before me."—Ps. 39; 1.

Please read and heed the following Scripture references: James 3d chapter, entire. Epp. 4; 29; 5; 4. Col. 3; 8; 4; 6. 1st Thess. 5; 11. Tit 1; 10; 2; 8; 3; 2. 1st Peter 3; 10; Jude 16; Prov. 4; 24; 10; 10-19; 14; 23; 15; 4; etc.

The man who worries over his surroundings would not cease to worry if his surroundings were changed. The change needed is in the man, not in his surroundings. The reason why some people have so little peace of mind, is because they are always giving a piece of their mind to others.—Young Men's Era.

Teaching Father.

I once experienced a great bereavement, which tested my God's providence beyond any previous trial of my life. One night I was seated with my little boy on my knee, mourning over my loss, when my eye rested on a favorite text over the mantlepiece. The eye of the child also turned in the same direction, and with all an orphan's confidence he said: "Pa, the Law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." As I heard the words from the dear boy, they seemed to sink into my heart with a power they had never done before. To my surprise the child asked me a question. "Papa, what does 'perfect' means?" My heart was for full to make any reply for a few moments, and before I could break the silence, my little one simplied the answer by saying, "Papa doesn't it mean that God makes us wholesome?" So.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we can not hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer the premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, cheerfully respond to the person sending us their own renewal and a new name for one year, otherwise all money is to be sent to us post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor Exiles these are able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfillment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typographical and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bagley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued call for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Please write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittance to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as called for. Report of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

PRAYER.

Prayer to the Lord, an incense is,
And while on earth Christ promised this:
"You may ask blessings in my name,
And God will hear and grant the same."

And from each sin we may be freed,
If we God's children are, indeed.
For Christ, exalted on the throne,
Will intercede for those his own.

Then, with a pure and contrite heart,
That we in heaven may have a part,
We will approach the mercy-seat
Will pardon ask, and mercy seek,

Lord may thy blessed kingdom come,
And may thy will on earth be done,
May we abound in God's rich grace,
And meet, to see our Savior's face.

PSALM. 101.

102 COM. VER.

1. The beggar's votive-prayer, whenever he shall feel compunction, and pour out his supplication before the Lord.

2. O Lord, hearken unto my votive-prayer, and may my cry have come unto thee.

3. Do not turn away thy face from me; in the day when I am suffering tribulation, mayest thou have inclined thine ear unto me; In the day when I shall invoke thee, mayest thou have quickly hearkened unto me,

4. Because my days have left off like smoke as it were, and my bones have been burned like kindling.

5. I have been smitten like grass as it were, and my heart hath been dried up, because I have ignored the eating of my bread.

6. With the voice of my sighing hath my skeleton cleaved to my flesh;

7. I have become like a pelican in the wilderness; I have become as it were a nightraven on a house-site.

8. I have been wakeful and have become as it were a lone sparrow on a house-top.

9. All the day long have mine enemies reproached me, and those who praise me have sworn against me;

10. Because ashes as it were have I eaten for bread and my drink was I mingling with lamentation,

11. From before the face of thy wrath and thine anger; because thou didst lift me up and cast me down.

12. My days have inclined away like a shadow as it were, and like grasses as it were have I withered away.

13. But thou, O Lord, dost abide forever, and the remembrance of thee is unto generation and generation.

14. Thou wilt arise and pity Sion, because an appointed-time is there to have pitied her because an appointed-time is coming.

15. Because thy bond-servants have been satisfied with her stones and her dust will they pity.

16. And the nations will have feared thy name, O Lord, and all the kings thy glory.

17. Because the Lord will build Sion, and will have appeared in his glory.

18. He hath looked upon the votive-prayer of his lowly ones, and hath not despised their supplication.

19. Let this be written for another generation; and a laity that is being generated will praise the Lord.

20. Because he hath bowed from out his sacred height, the Lord hath looked from out the heavens upon the earth,

21. To hear the sighing of those bound hand and foot, to loose the sons of those who have died,

22. To announce the name of the Lord in Sion, and his praise in Hierousalem.

23. When he hath gathered laities together unto the same place and kings to serve the Lord as bond-servants,

24. He hath answered him, (asking) Tell me the fewness of my days, in a way of his strength,

25. Thou art not going to lead me up in a half of my days art thou? (Answer) Unto a generation of generations are thy years;

26. Authority by authority hast thou founded the earth, O lord, and works of thy hands are the heavens.

27. These ("this order of things" meant) will perish; but thou wilt abide through, and they all will have waxed old like an outer-garment; and like a cloak wilt thou roll them up and they will be changed;

28. But thou art the same and thy years will not leave off.

29. The sons of thy bond-servants will pitch their tents down and their seed will have been made upright forever (or restored to uprightness lit.)

PSALM 102 (103 COM. VER.)

1. David's (psalm) Commend the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me commend his sacred name.

2. Commend the Lord, O my soul, and ignore not all his praises;

3. Commend him who is favorable to all thy transgressions, who healeth all thy diseases:

4. Who redeemeth thy life from corruption, who crowneth thee with mercy and tokens of pity:

5. Who supplieth thy longing-desire with good things: Thy youth will have been renewed like an eagle.

6. The Lord is one who doeth acts of mercy and judgment unto those who are being wronged.

7. He made his ways known unto Mouses, unto the sons of Israel his purposes.

8. The Lord is one who is pitiful and merciful, forbearing and very merciful.

9. Not unto the end or always will he have been wrathful, nor will he be furious forever.

10. Not according to our sins hath he done unto us nor according to our transgressions hath he repaid us.

11. Because according to the heights of the heavens from the earth hath the Lord held his mercy on those who fear him.

12. As far as the east is from the west hath he removed our transgressions from us.

13. Even as a father pitieth sons hath the Lord pitied those who fear him.

14. Because he knoweth our mould: Remember that we are dust.

15. Man's days are grass as it were; like a flower of the field so it were even so will he flower out.

16. Because the breath (or spirit pneuma) in him hath passed through and he will not exist, and his place will know him no more.

17. But the mercy of the Lord is from the animate-age for those who fear him; and his righteousness for sons of sons;

18. For those who watch to guard his covenant and who have remembered his commandments to do them.

19. The Lord in the heavens hath made ready his throne, and his kingdom awayeth all things.

20. Commend the Lord, all ye his angels, ye who do his Word, able in strength to hear the voice of his words.

21. Commend ye the Lord all ye his forces (dunameis) his public-servitors doing his purposes:

22. Commend the Lord all his works in every place of his dominion: Commend the Lord, O my soul.

PSALM 103 (104 COM. VER.)

1. David's (psalm). Commend the Lord, O my soul; O Lord, my God: Thou hast been greatly magnified; With confession and apropriat—ments hast thou clothed thyself (an under-garment meant).

2. Thou who dost cloak thyself with light as with an outer-garment, stretching out the heavens like a tent-skin as it were:

3. He it is who roofeth over his upper-chambers with waters; who maketh clouds his chariot; who walketh on wings of the winds;

4. Who maketh winds his messengers (angels) and a flaming-fire his public-servitors:

5. Who founded the earth on its sure foundation. It will not have declined unto the animate-age of the animate-age:

6. An abyss like an outer-garment is his cloak; above the mountains will waters stand:

7. At thy rebuke will they flee, at the voice of thy thunder will they grow cowardly:

8. Mountains will go up and plains will go down to a place which thou hast founded for them;

9. A boundary hast thou set which they will not pass by, nor will they return to cover the earth.

10. Thou art he who sendeth forth fountains in ravines; between the mountains will waters go through;

11. They will water all the wild-beasts of the field: Wild asses will await it in their thirst;

12. Beside them the flying-things of the heavens will pitch their tents down; out of the midst of the rocks will they give a sound;

13. Thou art he who watereth mountains from out his upper-chambers; with the fruit of thy doings will the earth have been full-fed.

14. He who causeth grass to spring up for the domestic-animals and verdure for the bond-service of men, that they may produce bread [illegible]

15. And wine rejoiceth man's heart with olive-oil to cheer his face, and bread stayeth man's heart:

16. The trees of the plain will have been full-fed: the cedars of the Libanus which he hath planted.

17. There little birds will make their nests; The household of the heron leadeth them:

18. The high mountains for the hinds; a rock the refuge for hedgehogs.

19. He hath made a moon for seasons; the sun knoweth its sitting;

20. Thou didst dispose darkness and it became night; In it all the wild-beasts of the forest will go through;

21. Lion's whelps that roar to take prey and to seek their way of eating from God:

22. The sun hath arisen and they will have been gathered together and will have lain down to sleep in their lairs;

23. Man will go forth to his work and his employment until evening.

24. How have thy works been magnified, O Lord: in wisdom hast thou caused them all: The earth hath been filled with thy generic-creation:

25. This great and spacious sea; There are there creeping things of which there is no number, living-creatures, small with great:

26. There ships go their way through, this dragon, which thou didst mould to play with.

27. They all look expectantly unto thee, to give them their sustenance in due season:

28. When thou hast given unto them they will gather together; When thou hast opened thy hand the universe will have been filled with thy useful-goodness;

29. When thou hast turned away thy face they will have been terrified: Thou wilt take away their breath ("pneuma" spirit) one by one and they will leave off, and return into their dust.

30. Thou wilt send forth thy breath ("pneuma" spirit) and they will have been generated (our word for creation) and thou wilt renew the face of the earth.

31. Let the glory be the Lord's forever; The Lord will have rejoiced in his works;

32. He who looketh at the earth and maketh it tremble; who toucheth the mountains and they smoke,

33. I will sing unto the Lord, in my life; I will exalt the strain unto my God while I exist.

34. May my discourse have been made sweet, and I shall have rejoiced in the Lord.

35. May obdurate-sinners have left off from the earth, and transgressors so that they do not exist; Commend the Lord, O my soul.

COMMENT.

The first psalm entitled "The Beggar's votive-prayer" is the key to many things that were once "mysteries" even to the angels; but now ought to be in the light of the gospel and the New Covenant Scriptures clear to Christians. "The Beggar" per se is Jesus the Christ and every follower of Jesus being a partaker of the same character as well as attributes in kind though not in degree, is also "a beggar"—a beggar for the sanctified—spirit. as indicated in the first "beatitude;" Blessed are the beggars for the spirit: Because theirs is the kingdom of heaven." This psalm is therefore specially Messianic in its import. The psalmist is pleading in the spirit of Christ "which is the spirit of prophecy." The psalmist's experience is typical of the Christ's experience—this difference being also a difference of degree and not of kind. Notice the special significance of the 19th verse—"a laity that is being generated," etc. again the 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th and 28th verses, all of which are quoted in the 1st chapter of Hebrews and there interpreted for us as Messianic and strictly applicable. Observe the differences of translation, as they are of vital importance to any true understanding of the passage. The contrast first drawn is between the mutability of this cosmos or order of things and the immutability of the new cosmos of which the Christ becomes the founded; "These" will pass away, but "those" will abide: and "thou" the Christ will abide through" the change. The opening clause of the 4th verse of the 2nd chapter confirms the truth of this interpretation moreover, if there were any remaining doubt of it in the mind of the reader, "For not unto angels hath he subjected the inhabited (earth) that is destined to be, about which we are talking." The number 101 is also correct in its agreement with this interpretation—the conjunctive 10 x 10 equals 100 being the conjunction of conjunctions, and the one symbolizes this conjunction of conjunctions in one person, viz., the Christ.

The 102nd psalm is the praise and confession of the church or the "body" of which Christ is "the head" or of those who have "the mind of Christ," or of those who become partakers of the sonship: or the praise and confession to God the Father of all the intelligent beings and "forces" and "works of his" "in every place of his dominion" as redeemed and inspired to do it through the Christ whose mouth-piece the psalmist here is, is, speaking the spirit of prophecy; the echoing praise of the new creation unified in the One Christ, this One being an integral part of every new integer just as the numeral one is in every succeeding digit of 9.

The 103rd psalm is David's inspired expression of what "the sonship" or the full participation in the divine nature means in its creative and regenerative import. Being a 3rd following "the conjunction of conjunctions" it is a first harmonic in the symphony of "the new creation." It gives us some idea of the power in action, of the great changes necessary to the rearrangement of material-things in order to bring out the new tune of God's glory in redemption. It is the 1st major-chord struck on the new instrument which is being tuned to the new key of blessedness; or rather it is the same old instrument restored to its pristine purpose of accompanying the songs of the sons of the morning-tuned now—no discords of sin any longer—and resonant with the glory of God: the refrain being, "Commend the Lord, O my soul."

A Sharp Distinction.

Such a distinction already exists between the true faith and hope of the gospel, and the delusion of the apostacy, and no less a marked distinction should exist between those who profess these several faiths.

There is something wrong if the world can see no difference between one who professes a faith founded primarily on platonic philosophy.

The faith of the Scriptures diverts that those who profess it should be living epistles, known and read of all men. An epistle is a letter designed to convey information to whosoever the letter is addressed. Professors of the Bible faith are to act in the capacity of living letters for all men to read. Now as we go about among our fellows, what do they read in me and you, dear reader?

There are two things which should stand out in bold relief. First: That our whole existence should be enthused by the presence of the Blessed Hope, and as a result, our lives become pure, even as he is pure.

Does it fire the heart now, as it did the worthies of old? Can we point with certainty to-day to a people and say these are willing to be willing to be destitute, tormented, afflicted, clothed in the skins of animals, have no certain abiding place, but lodge in the dens and caverns of the mountains, and suffer persecution at every turn? Faithful ones of old did this. It was not difficult to read those epistles. They were read in their day, and since then, have been read by untold millions as recorded on the pages of Holy Writ. Oh how many suffered under cruel Nero. Their enemies testimony appears on the historic page that they suffered and died heroically on account of their faith; that they did not regard worldly professions, but trusted one another; and did not even hold their lives dear unto themselves, because they say that Master of theirs who was crucified had told them that they should one day enjoy immortal life.

The thought of one day enjoying immortal life as held out in the hope of the gospel, is soul inspiring. The hope leads to noble deeds and sacrifices, if it once take hold on the heart. A mere head theology will do no one any good.

As we near the culmination of the ages I have an intense longing to see a sharp distinction drawn between those who profess this faith, and those who profess pagan philosophy inspired by Serpentine theology.

There must be a distinction between the two, we cannot consistently exchange fraternal greetings with them, without loosing ground. There is no particle of affinity existing between the Blessed Hope, and the Serpentine theology revived by Plato, and universally held by so-called evangelical churches located on the "broad-way" which leads to destruction.

No hope holds out such an incentive to holy living, like the Blessed Hope. The promises are glorious and are of such a nature that when properly understood captures the heart, and inevitably leads to a life of purity. Paul had a lively appreciation of its value. when he said: "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed to us-ward."

And when it does once firmly lay hold on the affections, it is there to stay. Paul says: "I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to seperate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." It can't be done.

None of these ever fraternize with churches built upon the Serpentine theology. And they would also disdain to disgrace their faith by an unholy life. This life is not simply a moral existence, apart from the inspiring energy, the blessed hope, but it is born of it. Says Young:

"Talk they of morals?
The grand morality, thou bleeding Lamb,
Is love to thee."

Yes, "is love to thee." The natural tendency of the Blessed Hope, which purifies the heart, is to give a grander incentive, to live right, and a broader, higher, and loftier conception of what "love to thee means. A false hope can never do this. True, a person who believes in delusive promises, may for a time rejoice in them, but sad disappointment awaits all such. We should fell sorry for them, and endeavor to show them something that will never disappoint.

The promises and covenants sworn to by the great Jehovah, will never disappoint. They are as immutable and sure as the existence of him who swore by himself, because there was no higher authority by which he could swear that he would bring to fruition everything that the covenants of promise

A realizing sense of this, is so comforting, even now it makes believers cheerful, happy, sunny and joyous. There is a real, calm, deep and settled gladness of heart in it.

This can never come, unless we are first rooted and grounded in the faith, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel.

This hope allied with a life in harmony with it, extracts the sting from the conscience, and is the only remedy for the sting of death. The bereaved believer draws comfort from the "life and immortality brought to light through the gospel."

The delusions of the Serpentine religion so universally believed in, can give no such hope, Oh, why trust its delusions?

Embrace the Blessed Hope, and then you may be given "beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

Then we may have a "merry heart," and Solomon says, this "doeth good like a medicine." All such may "eat their meet with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with all the people."

These things are so joyous and blessed, let us ever be faithful, and draw a sharp distinction between the true and the false. Let our aim in life be,

"To walk as children of the day,
To mark the precepts' holy light,
To wage the warfare, watch and pray,
Show who are pleasing in his sight."

W. H. WILSON.

Oh, think of it! You are Christ's ambassador, appointed to deliver the message of God to souls who must know the eternal truth or perish. You whose knowledge is necessarily so limited; you who are so full of imperfections, so liable to mistake with even your best intentions you stand between God and your fellowmen, and your words must stand the test of God's judgment! None but God can make you sufficient for these things. Study and pray without ceasing that you may be able to declare "all the counsel of God," as the Lord will help you, nothing more and nothing less.—Evangelical Messenger.

The Restitution.

The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with [illegible] of kings, and the universal [illegible] with him in the possession of the sentence of the redeeming of the [illegible] by real resurrection of the dead; the [illegible] of thanksgiving, and the final [illegible] of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a clear bill of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential to final salvation.

"Dont."

Dont think more highly of self than you ought to think.

Dont envy one another.

Dont speak evil one of another.

Dont think of self with a capital I. But whatever you do, let all be done for Gods glory

Dont condemn every brother that does not agree with you on points of Scripture. You have doubtless changed your mind, and may do so again. Dont advertise your brother to the church and the world if he differs with you, if he is wrong in his position you might win him back to the right way, if you would use a little love balm instead of a good stick.

Don't preach peace and stir up strife.

Dont leave the ranks of Jesus to join in the pleasures of satin, not even a moment.

Dont wear a smile to church and a frown at home.

Dont always be finding fault, remember the Israelites were overthrown in the wilderness. For fault finding.

Dont forget the prayer-meetings. The Scriptures says, "meet often one with another and pray one for another." If we do this the blessing will be ours.

LOVE.

Love from a Bible standpoint is not so outstretched that it takes in the vilest wretch without conditions. If God had the kind of love some of the leading divines claim Adam and total him he could get into the kingdom through the 12th gate. As there was a gate appropriated for every man according to his works, but God had better reasoning than this, he required obedience. 1 John ii. 5. "But whoso keepeth his Word, in him verily is the love of God made perfect. God so loved the world that he sent his own Son to die that we through him might have eternal life." Do we get eternal life simply because Christ died? No. Christ came in the form of flesh to show that sin could be overcome in the flesh therefore, he had to die, but he was our pattern. We only get eternal life through or by obedience. To love God is to love his Word or do his Word. If we do everything for the truth's sake, no respect of persons, we know we are approved of him. We love Christ for his noble character, he will love us for the same. If we leave self out and do everything in the name of Christ we may rest assured we are exercising the perfect love of God. Your Sister.

MRS. CORA HARLAN.

The saintly Samuel Rutherford found that "Christ's sweet presence casteth out the bitterness of sorrow and suffering." "I have but small experience of suffering for him; but let my Judge and Witness in heaven lay my soul in the balance of justice if I find not a young heaven, a little paradise of glorious comforts and soul-delighting kisses of Christ here beneath the moon, in suffering for him and his truth; and that the glory, joy and peace, and fire of love, which I thought had been kept until supper time, when we get leisure to feast our fill upon Christ, I have felt in glorious beginnings in my bonds for this princely Lord Jesus."

"No man ever sank under the burden of the day. It is when tomorrow's burden is added to the burden of today that the weight is more than a man can bear. Never load yourselves so. If you find yourselves so loaded, at least remember this: It is your own doing, not God's. He begs you to leave the future to him, and mind only the present."

"MARTIN LUTHER foresaw the approaching rationalism and pseudo—spiritualism, doubtless, when he remarked, "Christ did not say of his spirit, but of his WORDS THEY are spirit and life."

BROTHER Fred Austin of Dutton, Mich., has accepted a call from the Church at Rensselaer, Ind., and will begin his year's work some time during the present month. Our prayer is that he may be successful in his new field, and that the Church at Rensselaer may be benefitted and encouraged by his being with them.

"ALL down through the ages the friends of God have been few and contemptible. Nowhere in all the Scriptures can we find a majority on the side of truth." If Lot had been influenced by numbers he would have perished in the flames, and Noah before him would have been drowned. Abraham and his family stood firm against a world of idolaters. Moses despised the wealth and splendor of the kingdom of Egypt out of "respect unto the recompense of reward; which reward is for the contemptible few that find it."

A Miss MCCULLS of New York City fell from a hammock and was taken up unconscious and paralized from head to foot—her neck was broken and splintered at the fifth vertebrae; but no operation was performed—the shattered vertebrae which pressed upon the spinal column was removed in bits—consciousness returned after the neck was bandaged, as also did the power of motion and sense of feeling. Dr. W. O. Plympton performed the operation in the presence of Drs. Dana and Kelly. Of what use is an immortal soul if it becomes unconscious when one's

THE following lines have just come to us from over the ocean, and we want our readers to take them as a reminder of what they are; it may help them to keep down the ambitious flesh:

"For what is man? As nothing worth,
Whose destiny is earth to earth,
As from a bucket falls the drop
Unnoticed, or as boughs we lop,
As fat of lambs before the fire,
As thistles trampled in the mire,
As dust from off the balance blown,
His place no more for ever known,
As ashes trodden under foot,
As trees twice dead in branch and root,
However wise, however great,
But vanity his best estate:
Outside the covenant God has made
He's like a flower that blooms to fade."

Cory says an ambitious man is apt to overdo the thing in whatever he undertakes. Once in awhile you see a man or woman who is down where they can be of service to God, but the majority are at work on the tower of Babel. More ambition than ability keeps half of the servants waiting for something to turn up grand enough for them to take hold of. Had they the simplicity which is in Christ they would go to work at the thousand things at their feet they are able to do. Ambition like steam is good, but it must have the drivewheel of ability, to be of real service. Escaping steam makes a terrific noise; and so does unrestrained ambition.

A DESPATCH from Wichita, Kansas, Sept. 16th said Squire Huzen of Jamesburg, that county, rode around among the parishioners of the Baptist Church, wildly exclaiming, "Our preacher has sold out to the flesh and the devil;" and it went on to say that the Rev. Mr. Wilkins, the pastor mentioned, has been holding a hot revival meeting lately, and among other conversions were five members of the baseball nine. Yesterday was the day set for the general baptizing of the converts, but the baseball team had to play the Colwich nine at the very hour the baptizing was taking place. When the Squire heard the baptizing had been postponed for a baseball game he became furious, and rode into town shouting as above at the top of his voice; and nothing but the discharge of the Rev. Wilkins will satisfy him.

A Ministerial Suicide.

The Rev. James Woodyard, pastor of the Baptist Church at Rochester, near Elyria, Ohio committed suicide on Saturday evening the 14th of September, by taking a big dose of aconite. He attended the young people's meeting in the evening, and after that drove to New London and procured the poison, went home and wrote three letters, in one he gave his mother's address and gave instructions about the funeral, etc., and in the letter addressed to his mother gave as the cause of his act, that he had received a call up higher. It was filled with endearing terms, and he was anxious she should not feel that he could have done more good by staying on the earth. The solution of the mystery is believed to be in a letter he was seen reading on the street and in the shelter sheds belonging to the church.

The 27 year old pastor was a baptized pagan. If he had believed the first principles of the oracles of God he professed to teach, instead of heathen philosophy there are several things he would have known; and among these, he would have known that he would go down lower instead of up higher; and another, that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him, so that if he went "up higher" there would soon be a funeral up there. Just imagine such an one feeding a flock! Think a spiritual guide so cowardly that he could not face a trial? This is evidence enough that he was without God, or else he would have sought his help. Yes; think of it; a man who makes God a liar by disbelieving him, pretends that that disbelieved God had called him to the heaven that not even the Friend of God had ascended to. Think of this man as one of the world-converting agents, and then you will not wonder they put the millennium a long way off. Yes; this was a baptized pagan. He was a true disciple of Plato, and of Socrates in one respect, but a disgrace to them in another—Socrates only took the deadly cup when he was obliged to. Think of him committing murder, and "enduring" the foretaste of such a man as that being wanted in the throne of God, to do good—expects to do more good up there than he did down here. Wonder if he calculated to get up a "hot recital" there? Poor, naked and blind wretch,—the example he set his flock may be summed up in five words:—"Go thou and do likewise." Think God, traffic in souls will soon be stopped. Amen.

The Narrow Way of Life; Random Thoughts.

Enter not into the path of the wicked; go not in the way of evil doers; avoid the very appearance of evil. A course of sin being once entered upon, it has a hardening effect which makes it very difficult to break off; yes hardening sets in because of the deceitfulness of sin. Oh, how deceitful sin is. It represents covetousness as laying up a little for the children, and pride as dignity, and revenge as a becoming spirit for a man, if he wants to be a man at all; and it twines in religion as prudence, and conformity to the world as winning others; that is the way sin hardens. It becomes every one who has named the name of Christ not to be ignorant of Satan's devices,—indeed there is no need of ignorance,—God, in his Word tears off his disguises, and shows us that his aim is only to ensnare, and enslave, and rob, and degrade, and wound, and destroy. Oh, brethren and sisters, heed the injunction of Eph. iv. 27, "Neither give place to the devil;" he transforms himself into an angel of light, but all his desires are bad. The more you give way, the more advantage he has over you. It is a hundred times more easy to keep him out, than to get him out after he is in—so much harder is expulsion than exclusion. He must not be treated with but rejected. O, guard against beginnings—they increase unto more ungodliness. Evil communications corrupt good manners.

Never in the struggles of the faithful, was the injunction of the Spirit in Eph. vi. 10, 11 more timely, "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." The lust of the eye and the pride of life blind people to these wiles. But the bird need not be afraid of the fowler if he keeps away from the snare and the gun. The angler does not wade into the water and seize the fish with his hand. He does not even see his prey; but he reaches it, and secures it by a baited hook at the end of his line and rod; yet he catches the fish, and would do the same if his instrument were a mile long.

THE WHOLE ARMOR OF GOD,

Especially are the young liable to be caught by the wiles of the devil. They do not become prodigals all at once. When a person walks out in the morning nicely cleaned up, he is careful where he steps, and the first soil he contracts is offensive to him, the second affects him less, and the third and fourth less still, for he thinks it doesn't matter now, and so dashes on heedlessly; so, too, the first compliance with temptation hard, but this by degrees is overcome by repetition. One sin naturally leads to another, and often renders another necessary either by way of finish, or in order to concealment. David to hide his adultery, committed murder; and then falsely and wickedly ascribed this to God's providence by saying the sword smite to all alike!" He knew he was lying when he said that, and yet he said it because this was not the first nor second sin of the series.

The Word says the devil will flee from those who resist him. God cannot be mistaken; nor is he capable of deceiving us; and therefore it will be time enough to discredit this statement after it has been thoroughly tested and found to fail. Hope grows out of faith, and is the mainspring of action; and so, when the apostle bids us to resist sin steadfastly in the faith, we see faith is the only solid ground on which we can successfully contend. There can be no fighting on a quagmire. Faith clothes us with the whole armor of God, and, through the Christ, the captain of our salvation without whom we can do nothing, but through whose strengthening of us we can do all things.

CONQUERS US WITH GOD,

Abounding iniquity is having more or less effect upon all—sin is decked out in such rich colors and in such endless devices that the flesh is pleased with; and hence the tone of resistance must show that we are in earnest. A heartless, undecided refusal, invites renewed application, because it leaves the impression that there is a latent longing for the forbidden thing. Oh, let us be out and out for God and Christ, so that our colors may be seen and recognized, show to all that we have been with Jesus and learned of him. It is a great piece of folly to think that simple assent to the truth of God will avail anything when the reckoning time comes. A righteous character must be developed in obedience to the truth, or else it were better that we never knew it. If these lines meet the eye of any who only have a name to live,—we entreat them to revive the things that remain before the Master appears for those who are his, and shuts the door.

Forever.

A little girl, whom, we knew, came in her night clothes very early to her mother one morning, saying:—

Which is worse, mamma, to tell a lie or steal?"

The mother, taken by surprise, replied that both were so bad she could not tell which was the worse.

"Well," said the little one, "I've been thinking a good deal about it, and I've concluded that it is worse to lie than to steal. If you steal a thing, you can take it back, 'less you've eaten it; and if you've eaten it, you can pay for it. But"—and there was a look of awe in the little face—"a lie is forever."—Sel.

A pure heart at the end of life, and a lowly mission well accomplished, are better than to have a stained soul and a wrecked destiny.

The feet of Truth are slow, but they never slip.

Childhood, Home and Mother.

Oh! how often the old home-steal
Comes before my vision clear,
As I ponder o'er it memories
Till my heart rises with a tear.
When I think of childhood pleasures
When in innocence I came
To my mother's knee and whispered,
"allowed he thy name."
Matt. xi. 9-19.

Oh! that mother's hand I remember,
As it laid up a my head,
When at evening I so I'm kneeling
Just before I went to bed.
As she taught me to say simply
"Now I lay me down to sleep."
Ah! that prayer I'll never forget it,
"Pray the Lord my soul to keep."
Prov. xvii. 6.

But the time i coming, mother,
When we'll meet each other again.
For the prayer which that child did offer
For thy child, were not in vain.
For our Savior said in plainly,
What we ask in his dear name
Will receive a hearty welcome,
In the palace of the King.
1 Jn. xvi. 23.

And the loved ones, some are sleeping
In the quiet graveyard there,
And we soon shall all together
Meet our Savior in the air.
For he'll surely come and wake them
From the silence of the grave,
Change us all into his likeness.
'Tis the promise that he gave.
1 Thess. iv. 15-17.

Oh! that resurrection morning
When the "dead in Christ shall rise,"
When the trump of God shall wake them
With their bodies glorified
We will then shout, hallelujah!
to the Lamb that once was slain.
And we then will reign with Jesus.
Hallelujah! once again.
1 Cor. xv. 51-54; Rev. xx. 5, 6; 1 Cor. xv. 22-28.

What about thee, poor lost sinner.
In the resurrection morn.
When the wicked dead shall gather.
And behold the "great white throne."
For thy resurrection, sinner.
Is a thousand years to come.
Will thou not now turn to Jesus.
Ere that awful day shall dawn.
Acts xxiv. 15; Rev. xx. 5.

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea.—No. 35.

THE SANCTIFICATION OF ISRAEL

We are studying the six. Chap. of Exodus; Moses, has been up the mount, and has come down with a grand and precious message, to the people of Israel. It is a great thing, to be brought near to God, to be chosen of him to do his work, to be set on high above all nations of the earth, to have him for a Teacher and Law-giver, and to have the constant guardianship of his eye; be ever kept in safety by his strong hands.

And that promise made at Sinai, will be kept to eternity. It seems to be conditional, it is conditional, the terms are, "If ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then shall ye be," etc. but we learn elsewhere, that God will never give his people up, that the promise, made to Abraham, to bless all other nations through them, applies to them as a nation. "The two families which the Lord hath chosen, hath he cast them off? * * * that they should no more be a nation before them?" "Thus saith the the Lord, if my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth. Then, will I cast away the seed of Jacob, and David my servant. So that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, for I will cause their captivity to return and have mercy upon them." Jer. 33: 20-26, 31:37 "I will put my law in their inward parts and write it in their hearts and will be their God and they shall be my people, * * * I will forgive their iniquity and I will remember their sin no more." Jer. 31: 33, 34, 35.—Jer. 31: 10, 11, 12. God has loved them with an everlasting love, and the time is to come when Jesus is to "reign over the house of Jacob forever." When their city is to be built, no more to be thrown down, where none are to make them afraid, and they are to sorrow no more at all." The people promised that they would do all that the Lord had said, but we shall find them disobedient a great many times as we go on.

It will take hundreds and hundreds of years to school them, so they will be fit for the eternal inheritance of Canaan, and of the earth under the rulership of Jesus and of the saved ones. They will forsake the Lord, and be very wicked. He will punish them and cast them off, and they will be captured by their enemies, and carried into far lands. But God will never forget them, and will find a way to teach them of himself and to bring them back to their own beautiful Canaan again.

The time will come when they will obey him, and will keep his covenant. The condition will be fulfilled and they will be to him a peculiar treasurer above all nations of the earth.

You wonder how Moses could climb such a steep mountain? Have travelers ever climbed it? Mr. Randall did. The path is very steep. You have to go in a diagonal direction. Up a little way, there is a sweet spring of water, where you can rest. Then the path winds along the bed of a narrow ravine and you must pick your way over great bowlders, and toil up stone-stair ways. The Catholics have built chapels on the mountain sides, and have made gateways in the ravines.

There is an acre or two of ground beyond these chapels. It is a kind of dell, and is planted with fruit and cypress trees and vegetables. Up farther is another building and a small cave. In this cave it is thought Elijah once lodged. 1 Kings six. 9.

It takes two hours and a half to climb to the summit, 7,054 feet above the sea. Thirty or forty paces will measure the narrow space across it.

The whole mountain is formed of granite, red at the base and gray at the top.

You passed a cleft in the rock, not very far below: you will think of that cleft when we come to a lesson farther on.

We have a harder task before us now, we must go down to where the mountain divides, and climb up to one of the higher summits of Horeb.

There are frightful precipices, and the sharp rocks will cut into your hands. In some places you will be obliged to cling up on your hands and knees. But you will see a sublime sight when you have reached the top. The green valley of El Raha, the low range of the Sena and Furcia hill, and the broad, wady Es Sheik will all be in view. You will understand how the Israelites were placed, when the Lord came down in the thick cloud in their sight upon Mt. Sinai and will feel as you have never felt before, how great is the glory and majesty of God.

The Lord appeared to Moses in a thick cloud, so that the people might hear His voice and yet he himself be hidden from their sight for no one might look upon his face and live. John the Revelator, when he saw the glorified Jesus, fell to the ground like a dead man, Rev. 1, 17.

There must be the audible voice and the visible tokens of the presence of the Lord, that the people may believe Moses forever. Will they? They surely will for they still cling to the dear books that he wrote on that wilderness journey and are delighted as each new discovery is made, proving them to be true.

Do you understand the word "sanctify?" Read the 11th chap. of Leviticus. You will see that the children of Israel were not to touch the carcass of any unclean, beast, bird, fish or reptile, if they did, they too were counted unclean. They must wash their clothes and must not until evening touch any clean thing.

To "sanctify" is to set apart, "to make clean," for God's service. When anything is given to God, it ought to be pure and clean outside and inside, pure hearts, pure clothes, pure bodies must his people bring to him.

You think it strange that dead animals could defile his people so they could not approach him, yet you feel dirty if obliged to touch a dead carcass. There is a sense of foulness and of poison when you come near a decaying reptile or beast. The germs of death, are lurking in them. They are types of all unclean and unholy things. If we kill such things ourselves, we do not think them fit for food. If eaten, they would defile us, their flesh would not make good, pure blood. God made all animals, and he knows their nature. He does not want us to be like the wild, savage beasts and birds. So he counts us defiled if we touch their dead flesh. His people must have this defilement washed away.

They must be ready the third day, for the Lord to come down in the cloud on Mt Sinai.

You remember how abruptly the mountain rises, and how you can stand at its base and put your hands against its sides? That is the reason that the Lord said "there must be bounds set for the people round about." He knows how curious men are, and how they delight to gaze upon strange and wonderful things. The Israelites must be kept back, they may trample one another to death in their haste to get to the mount. And they must be taught to reverence holy things, by a rigid and fearful law. This is the law.—"Take heed to yourselves that ye go not up into the mount or touch the border of it. Whosoever toucheth the mount, shall surely be put to death. There shall not one hand touch it, but he shall surely be stoned or shot through; whether it be beast or man, it shall not live; when the trumpet soundeth long, they shall come up to the mount.

There must have been some kind of fence made around it, or animals could not have been kept away. Mr. Randall, says he did find a long, low alluvial mound, at a little distance from the perpendicular cliff and running along for a great distance nearly parallel to it, as if left there to remind the visitor that a boundary was once built here by the direction of the Almighty."

"And it came to pass on the third day in the morning that there were thunders and lightnings and a thick cloud upon the mount. And the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud, so that all the people that was in the camp trembled. And Moses brought forth the people out of the camp, to meet with God. And they stood at the nether part of the mount. And Mt. Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the Lord descended upon it in fire, and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mount, quaked greatly." What an awful [illegible] think to read it, that Mt. Sinai, had broken out in volcanic eruption, but it is not a volcano and there is nothing to shew them that it ever has been. There are no craters, no ashes no beds of lava. That "devouring fire upon the mount," the smoke, the cloud, was all miraculous.

Why was Moses commanded to charge the people the second time, that "they must not break through unto the Lord to gaze?" To impress them still more, with a sense of his majesty and greatness. Even the priests must not come near, but this time Aaron could ascend the mount, with Moses.

Our next lesson will be the 20th chapter. Commit the commandments to memory.

The Fearful and Faint-Hearted.

Every leader of men has been troubled with people of this sort. Military officers have been annoyed and hindered a vast deal by such soldiers. Pastors too, have been sorely tried by members thus affected and afflicted. This was one serious difficulty with not a few of the Israelites. Read what Moses said: The officers shall speak further unto the people, and they shall say, 'What man is there that is fearful and faint-hearted! Let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart faint, as well as his heart.'" Fearful-heartedness and faint-heartedness are contagious. Let one, who is supposed to be courageous, exhibit fearfulness, and those closely associated with him, who are naturally somewhat timid, will be quite likely to soon express a good deal of fearfulness. And the fearful are quite sure to be faint-hearted. The two invariably go together. And how unreliable such ones are! If they seem courageous to-day, they may be fearful to-morrow. In fact, they may be fairly courageous one hour and very fearful the next. Such ones cannot be at all depended upon in trying emergencies. When stout, unwavering courage is most needed, then they are too fearful to be of any help. Indeed, they are a positive and damaging hindrance. The fearful Christian is a very weak Christian. His faith is regulated by signs and circumstances. That is a very weak faith. Such ones never build up strong churches. They also drag down rather than build up. And what a bad influence they have on some of their brethren and sisters!

Restlessness.

It is a noticeable fact that a spirit of restlessness seems to characterize the present age. People are hurrying "to and fro" all over the world. The steam-cars and steam-boats are daily crowded with human beings, and change and novelty seem the object of life. Those who have not the means to travel are uneasy, and are constantly changing their places of abode. Riches do not satisfy, fame does not quench the heart-longings, and power does not give peace. This, perhaps has ever been so; but now more than ever all nations are looking for some great event, and the hearts of the people are growing faint. Well may the world "be restless, like the waves of the sea," for a change is soon to take place. Vague, shadowy omens of coming woe, like dark clouds, hang over the people. Man seems to lose confidence in man, and business stagnates. The crust of the earth heaves with earthquakes, volcanoes and tornadoes.

All this is but the tremblings of earth over its final doom—one of the signs that foretell its dissolution. Not many years can come and go before an awful blackness will cover the earth, and a terrible despair settle upon the ungodly. The restlessness of the children of men will soon reach its climax, and the gathering storm burst in all its fury. The sad lamentation, "too late! too late!" will re-echo from pole to pole, and heaven's gates will forever close to the unrighteous.

O restless heart of man! cease thy strivings for worldly honor; reach up and grasp the golden cord of mercy, which for a little season hangs over the human race, and thus secure eternal rest.—Review and Herald.

Speak in Season.

There are many kind words that we mean to say sometime, but which are likely to remain for ever unsaid. There are many things we plan to do, and are never likely to do them, And some of these words may well be left undone. But there are things which we may do and do promptly. If we have faults to confess, forgiveness to ask, apologies to make, or faults to amend, the sooner we do it the better.

Life is fleeting, the days are passing away, and in a little while others will have gone beyond the reach of our praise or blame; and we too may have passed beyond all mortal scenes of honor or of shame. If we have anything to do which ought to be done let us do it quickly. We shall feel all the better when our work is done; and the time that remains to us can be better improved when certain needful things are done with and off our minds.

How many times there comes to us the news that some one whom we have known has passed beyond our reach; and sometimes we regret that things we intended to do or to say are left undone till it is too late to do them. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, for there is no work, device or knowledge in the grave whither thou goest."

"Why do we wait, and coldly stint our praises,
And leave our reverent homage unexpressed,
Till brave hearts lie beneath a roof of daisies,
Then heap with flowers each hallowed place of rest?

"For every year the veteran ranks are broken,
And every year new graves await our flowers,
Ah! why not give to living hearts some token
Of half the love and pride that throb through ours?

"Bring blooms to crown the dead, But in your giving.
Forget not hearts that still can strive and achel
Oh! give your richest garlands to the living,
Who suffered all in youth for honor's sake."

POETRY.

The Cost of Joy.

The cost of joy is joy; for in the sea
A brook no longer may an iller lie;
The swan lifts her ships and bears them on;
Our sweet old hillside frontalour is gone.
The cost of joy is joy; June brings the rose;
But shed in tears the violet springtime grows;
The rose of passion withers hot, red breath
Is love's first silent messenger to death.
The cost of joy is joy; suns fright the moon;
The rainbow hope dissolves in truth's high noon;
Joy's cost we pay in heart and brain,
In mortal life, the sum of earthly gain.

"Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart."

LIGHT SOWN.

My Dear Mary,

I received your letter yesterday and now that I have a spare hour I sit down to write. It seems you are not satisfied with the portion of doctrines I have already presented to your consideration, but want more—the whole. In other words, you are like the child listening to the tale—"and what next?" I commend this spirit to you. You do well to wish to know all the scheme of salvation, that you may ponder its bearings; and not like some persons turn away your ear at the first mention of a new truth. Your last two letters have pleased me much from their tone of candour. I will therefore give you my reasons for being immersed, and leaving the old connection. This, however, I think I can best do by giving you a sketch of the events of that day.

You know Brookdale. It is one of those lovely spots where every line of the picture proclaims that God made the earth as the scene of man's dwelling and reward. In this place surrounded by both his celestial and terrestrial handiwork I, Edith, and five others met to do our Father's will. And all his works smiled on us. How vividly the scene is engraven on my mind! Through the bottom of the valley meandered the clear sparkling rivulet, whose waters here danced along over the obtruding pebbles, there raced down a gentle fall, and anon flowed silently and deeply through a secluded dell. This latter was the locale of our gathering. In the foreground across the stream was the grove with its green-capped oaks and silver-coated ash trees, the height being crowned by the dark branching fir. Over the stream drooped the willow as though wishful to share our bath. Under and behind our tent spread earth's verdant carpet, woven with the daisy, the butter-cup, and the forget-me-not; whilst the hare-bell rang insensible chimes, and the primrose joined with the sweet-scented violet to breathe a perfumed welcome. In their sylvan haunts caroled the finches, whilst the thrush responded with his mellow notes, and cuckoo gave the chorus in brasso; so that one united hymn of praise was sent forth by all the feathered songsters to the author of nature. Above was the silent sunlight, gilding the whole landscape with an effulgence to be surpassed only by resurrection glory. (Isaiah xxiv. 23.) Those who had the key could read in it a fitting token of "the inheritance of the saints in light." Outspread over all was the fair blue sky, in which, when a fleecy cloud passed, it told in the same language, that if the few trials were inevitable, yet they were but for a moment, holding comparison with the "exceeding profundity of glory" in no greater degree than those little vapory gatherings did to the illimitable depths of the expanse in which they seemed to float. When the gaze turned upward, it could not else than direct the thought to travel onward to him who made all things, constraining one to reflect on the Psalmist's comparison—

"When I consider the heavens, the work of thy fingers;
The moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained:
What is man, that thou art mindful of him?
And the Son of Man, that thou visitest him?"

As Alfred would say, "If the heavens are so great, how great then is man.'

In this place we seven were assembled, ready to "fulfil all righteousness." We were supported by the members of the church; beside whom were a large company who had been attracted to witness the scene. The other five about to 'die to sin,' were an aged man, a mother and her daughter, a youth, and a Jew in the prime of manhood. You would not know them, were I to mention their names. Mr. M——, the brother appointed to administer the ordinance, set forth the purport of the rite. I could like to give you all the speech but it would take to much time; I can only give you these conclusions. 'The rite of immersion is the Form of induction into the Church, or Bride of Christ, and thus is Marriage to Christ,

Adoption into the Family of Abraham; giving the consequent blessings of
Resurrection,
Eternal life, and
Rule on earth with Christ;
preceded as means to attain this end by
Washing away, or remission, of sins,
Death to sin, and uprising to holiness;
and also standing as
The marking-line between the children of men and the children of God,
Our oath of allegiance,
Our signature of the Abrahamic covenant, etc., etc.

If these do not prove the saving importance of the ordinance, I must say that reason seems almost useless to man, (Mark xvi. 16, 1 Pet. iii. 21.)'

We then proceeded to the observance of the rite, and were all immersed into Christ, invoking the name of the Lord.

Oh, my dear Mary, the sensations I then felt are impossible to describe! The feeling of deep solemnity as I passed into the water-grave—the hush of thought which accompanied my symbolic burial—and the intense joy of a satisfied conscience with which I rose to newness of life—as well as the sense of great responsibility attaching to the high calling in Christ: all these you must experience before you can realize the conception of them. I could only pray for help from on high when I remembered such sayings as these—'Let your conversation be such as becometh the gospel of Christ;' 'Thou shalt be perfect with the Lord thy God,' 'Be ye holy, for I am holy;' 'Be sincere and without offence till the day of Christ.' Blessed be his name that I have thus far been enabled to keep my garments clean; and in the same strength I can say,

"I will meditate in thy precepts,
And have respect to thy ways:
I will delight myself in thy statutes;
I will not forget thy Word."

Shall I stop here? "No don't," I think I hear you say; "if you have any thing else to tell me, go on." And I can also imagine dear Mary, that you would think my account incomplete without my reporting our way of worship. Well, then, I will tell you what passed that morning, which will give you a pretty good idea of it.

From the river side we went to the upper room where the few believers meet. I sat down to break bread with them for the first time. I have partaken of the sacrament several times at Mr. Phelan's church, but this seemed so very different as to suggest altogether another ordinance. Mr. C—— (whom you know,) was the presiding Elder on that day, and upon our entrance he rose to give forth a hymn; after the singing of which he returned thanks for the mercies of the past week, and supplicated blessing upon the season of communion. Then a portion of Scripture (Epis. Titus) was read, after which Mr. M——, the companion Elder, gave thanks for the bread, and also the same for the wine. (We use both these unfermented, alike on account of the proper symbolism, and because we abhor the drunkard's cup at the Lord's table.) Between these he explained the intention of this Christian Passover, which, however, I cannot repeat in this letter. Praise again having been given by chanting a psalm, various brethren made prayer and supplication on account of Israel, the church, the brethren, and the rulers and the people of the land. Unless you had witnessed you cannot conceive the beauty of our primitive service, —so simple, so comprehensive. I never found half the good in the "sacraments," love-feasts," "fellowshipmeetings," "revivals," etc., which I have attended among the 'evangelicals,' as they misname themselves. After these Mr. C—— rose and gave us what you would call 'a charge.' I shall long remember it, and I pray that you may be privileged to receive a similar one. I cannot pretend to write you more than the outline of it now, which must content you. I give it as nearly as possible in his own words. Alfred wrote it out for me from his short hand notes.

"My dear Brethren. I am very happy to see you all this morning around this board. By the joys you now have I beseech you 'never to forget the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is.' Resolve to let nothing you can control hinder you, for we have the more need to 'take sweet counsel together' as we see the day approaching.' My brothers, my sisters, you have this day 'put off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ, being buried with him in waters of immersion, wherein ye are risen with him, through the FAITH, by the working of God, who hath raised him from the dead.' In so doing you resigned all property in yourselves, and now you are no longer your own. 'You are bought with a price;' and you have this day signed and sealed the conveyance thereof. See then 'that you walk worthy of the calling wherewith you are called, with all lowliness and meekness; with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavouring to keep the oneness of the spirit in the bond of peace; their being one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling' and have one Lord, one faith, one immersion, one God and Father.' You have signed the bond which Messiah dedicated with his blood; if you violate it you wound your Lord afresh. But dear ones, 'I hope better things of you,' believing that you are watching for the coming of 'the day of the Lord, as a thief in the night.' 'Seeing these things are nigh,.... what manner of persons ought ye to be? In all holy conversation and godliness looking for and hastening the coming of the day of God.' And such observant walk I have confidence you will perform. Remember, beloved, you have taken upon you the name of him who was 'the express image and brightness of the glory of God,' and at his second advent will appear as the great Lord and Master. See then that you dim not the lustre of his glory, but reflect in your dispositions and lives the beauty of our Exemplar's character. Be ye moons to his solar light, radiating his effulgence forth, that men may bless you for the light you shed upon the night of darkness: and in so doing you will glorify your Father. Your election of God in Christ ranks you as his sons, entitling you to divine or morning star exaltation. And as such you must bring no discredit on the family name. (Eph. ii. 10, iii. 14, 15, These references are put in by Alfred.) Remember that we are the future aristocracy of the world, therefore let us have the true patrician pride. And to this end 'I pray that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith, that you, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to hold in mind,..... what is the breath, and length, and depth, and height, and to experience the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that you may be filled with all the fullness of God.' 'As you have received Messiah, the Savior, the Lord, walk in him: rooted and built up in him, and fixed in the faith.'

There remains another incentive to a perfect life and consistent walk before God. This is the kingship. The Father in his abundant mercy has given us eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord, but in his wisdom, and justice, He has founded our rank in this kingdom upon our own works. The number of cities under our rule, the star-gems in our crowns, are to be regulated by the ripeness of our fruit-deeds. And thus we 'work out our own salvation;' let us all do it 'with fear and trembling,' as 'fellow-workers to the Kingdom of God.' The Christian life is a training college wherein we receive our tuition in the science of government, the book and the object being first self: if we can govern our own passions and thoughts we shall be able to govern others, (Jas. iii. 2, Prov. xvi. 32,) This day you have entered the lists as candidates for a prize: it will require strong efforts, every nerve and muscle must be brought into play to reach the standard or 'mark' according to which the prizes will be adjudged at the examination day. Like Paul, 'I press toward the standard for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus,' and I must have you to join me in the strong endeavour. How glowing the thought that we, by labors abundant, by victories over our sinful desires, by deeds of mercy and self-denial, may earn the reward (Matt. vi. 1, 3. 4,) and the encomium, 'it is well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.' Therefore, my brethren, 'whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not to men.' You who have a service to perform, do it in singleness of heart. Do that which is right, reckoning not as to profit to yourselves, and rest assured you will be no losers. If your service bring increased wealth to your employers, and they refuse to let you benefit thereby, still labor, for that wealth will eventually be yours, (1 Tim. vi. 17-19.) 'Whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord.' And you who are in business, pursue the right for the same reasons, for such is your Lord's pleasure.

In your scholastic capacity, your hope demands from you self-culture; acquire every truescience and art which your means and time, well economised, will permit. The wise king advises you to seek wisdom as hidden treasures of silver, &c., and promises that if you so apply yourselves, you 'Shall understand the fear of the Lord,

And find the knowledge of God.
For the Lord giveth wisdom....
He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous'

This is that you may be fitted for your stations, for

'Then shall you understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity:
Yea, every good path.'

This acquisition of knowledge is doubly your duty, for in addition to preparation for the future you need it in your witnessing. An ignorant Christian is an anomaly unrecognized by the Scriptures. Ye must 'be wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.' See then that you acquit yourselves well in your collegiate course, that you walk perfect before men, and acquire sound wisdom. 'Follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience and meekness.' In your office of light-bearers and sounders of truth, see that you 'refuse profane and old wives' fables,' 'avoiding vain babblings and oppositions of science falsely so called; but be mighty in the Scriptures, 'contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints.' 'Let the word of the Anointed dwell in you richly in all wisdom.'

Because the truth is committed to your care, you can have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. In this day we have to contend with a work of the devil which was not so rampant in the Apostolic times. I mean a nation-drunkenness fostered by a legalized traffic. It becomes our duty therefore to oppose this, firstly, by your own personal abstinence from all alcoholic liquors, and also by doing what you can in co-operation with those who are waring against this giant evil. In this and all other work for God and man, let your conversation be such as becometh the gospel of Christ;' cultivating all the graces of the holy brotherhood. Allow me to give each of you a copy of, these 'precepts for a holy life' in this printed form that you may put them in your pocket-books, etc., to be truly a vade-mecum. 'Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things honest, whatsoever things just, whatsoever things pure, whatsoever things lovely, whatsoever things of good report, if any virtue, and if any praise think on these things.' (2 Pet. i. 5, 7, 10, 11.)

In this list of Christian duties one principle is the agent, love. I may be wrong, but it is a fond idea of mine, that according to the love possessed will be the beauty of the glorified body. I cannot but believe that the passions are material fluids; and we know that love, by influencing the features and the body, imparts a softness, a grace, which is sought in vain in the loveless. Therefore 'love one another with a pure heart fervently.' (1 Cor. xiii.) The more love we have and show the nearer do we approach to be like him. He who loveth not knoweth not God. for God is love.' 'We know that we love the children of God. when we love God, and keep his commandments.' 'Whoso is born of God sinneth not.' 'I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.' In this conviction let us all be found 'looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God our Savior Jesus Christ.'

'Blessed are the poor in spirit:
Because the Kingdom of the heavens is their's,
Blessed—the meek:
Because they shall inherit the earth.
Blessed—the pure in heart:
Because they shall see God.'

In the hope then of inheriting the earth, and possessing the kingdom of the heavens, let us all study the science of Christian life. Let us also watch for the coming of our Lord 'in power and great glory.' See that you all be clad with the panoply of godly warfare, 'the whole armor of light' 'your loins girt with truth,' bracing your energies to the struggle 'having on the breastplate of righteousness' to guard your affections, 'your feet being shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of the faith, wherewith you will be able to ward off the fiery darts of the wicked,' never omitting 'the helmet of the hope of salvation' to protect your intellects, and wield powerfully 'the sword of the spirit.' So equipped, you can advantageously fight 'the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life.' 'Let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap (and what a glorious harvest!) if we faint not.'"

Well, really, here I have gone on leaf after leaf, and intended only giving you a sketch of the "change." You will have smiled at my brevity, I dare say, but as you will perceive I have become so interested in it as to forget all considerations of length. Well, what I have written, I have written,' so you shall have it as it is. But I must curtail the rest, and so can only tell you that after M—— had sat down, our Jewish brother spoke for a short time. He pressed upon our attention the position which Israel holds to "the Covenants of Promise," founding his remarks upon our Lord's saying, "Salvation is of the Jews:" and pleading for our increased endeavours to disseminate the truth amongst them. Another hymn and prayer concluded our service for that morning. I must not, however, forget to mention that each of the brethren contributes weekly, as the Lord hath blessed his store, which, after payment of expenses, is dispensed to the poor. This is the sample of our meetings.

And now dear schoolmate, that I have complied with your wishes, and you have received in previous letters, the setting forth of the faith, and the practice of the righteousness of God, what will you do? You have the whole plan so far as my weak powers of telling it can show you: and now I expect to hear of some decision being come to by you. I will not think that I have written in vain, though others might have done it better. I know that you may have household affections to debar you, but you know the conditions of discipleship, (Luke xiv. 26, 27.) My dear friend, avoid anything which would make you depend upon your early teachings and cause you to "reject the Word of the Lord." Remember "rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is iniquity and idolatry," This is only a caution: "I hope better things of you; and things which concern salvation." I pray for you always, dear Mary.

Believe me, ever yours in love,
EDITH.

Epistle of Christ.

"Ye are manifestly declared to be the Epistle of Christ, . . . Written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God, not on the tables of stone, but on fleshly tables of the heart." 2 Cor. iii. 3.

Paul in writing to the Corinthian brethren, used this impressive language. Showing to them what their position in the world was. That they were manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ, and he further says that they were known and read of by all men. Then they certainly filled a very important place. Yes, a place of trust, a place of honor. The thought that impresses itself on my mind is this, and as the Corinthian brethren, were manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ. So the follower of Christ is today declared to be his epistle, and is just as much read as it was in the apostles' times. Hence what manner of persons ought those claiming to be the disciples of the meek and humble Savior be? What does the unbeliever read as he looks on, does he see in our lives the traits of character that our Savior manifested? When called upon to suffer for his sake, do we suffer patiently, or when persecutions arise, do we also let our passions arise and retaliate? Our Savior when reviled, reviled not again, when persecuted, he threatened not. What a serious thing it is for Christians to not be considered genuine by the world, they watch our every act and word, and if we are not living and doing right we are read by them. How often the influence we might have had, has been destroyed by our daily acts and walks in life. It is not unfrequent to hear, especially some young person, say, I do not want to join church. I see more quarreling and bickering among people claiming to be the children of God than I do among the world. It is terrible, terrible, to thus bring reproach upon the cause of our Redeemer, upon his blessed name, for he has told us to follow his footsteps, and when we stop by the way to jangle over some trifle, and he thus looked upon, we bring reproach upon his cause. We must lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, if we expect to safely enter the haven of rest. The time is short in which to make ready. May our lamps that have nearly gone out, be filled with the precious oil of love, ere it be too late; and may we throw light, blessed light around us that others out on life's stormy sea may see the light and reach the ark of safety.

A READER.

Dear Ones in Michigan and Elsewhere:

Rejoice with us. Paul has planted, Apollos watered and God has been pleased to give the blessed increase. On Sunday Sept. 20th seven young ladies put on Christ by baptism. Let those who do not favor Sunday schools take notice, that these dear ones had all been instructed in the gospel faith in that "nursery of the church," and now the church is rejoicing even with the angels in heaven that seven more names have been registered in the "Lamb's Book of Life." Pray God the good work may go on, for others are already almost persuaded to embrace Christ. On Thursday evening our son Fred came over from Rossville, and took part with us in the services. He was on his way to Michigan to fill some of our appointments, then he goes on to Watson to attend the conference, after which he goes to Renasselaer, Ind., to take charge of the church for the coming year. May God's blessings follow his work and much good be done in his name.

May God be with the dear ones assembled in conference in Watson. Bro. Wagoner expects to be present, and will need the inspiration of your presence and your prayers.

On Monday 28rd inst. the Elder was called to preach the funeral sermon of Mr. John Shaffer, an old pioneer of Marshall County. Today, Monday, he goes to Bracken to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. Frye; and so the enemy's work goes on. We can only pray come Lord Jesus and put an end to his work, and bring in everlasting righteousness. May we all be prepared for his coming.

Conference Report.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I thought that I would write and tell you about our annual conference here at St. Paul, Nebraska. It opened Friday evening Sept. 6th and continued ten days. Besides the members here there were fifty or sixty from other parts of the State, fourteen being from Blair.

The preaching brethren present were G. M. Myers of Belle Plaine, Iowa, Bro. Almus Adams, state evangelist, Bro. J. T. Prime, assistant evangelist, Bro. Herriman of Ainsworth, Bro. Watkins, and Bro. Bartlett and Bro. Crowe of this place. Many able discourses were preached, setting forth the "glad tidings" in all their purity and beauty; and we think that all who were present felt that it was good for them to be here. Five persons embraced the truth during the conference, and were baptized into the all-saving name of Christ. Then Bro. Myers stayed three evenings longer and six more were baptized. We were also very much encouraged during our meetings by the kind letters from the brothers and sisters who would have liked to have been with us, but were unable to do so. We were sorry that they could not come, for we should have enjoyed having them with us; but if we are never permitted to meet in this life, may we all strive to so live that we may meet in the kingdom of God.

During the meetings about $67.00 paid into the evangelist fund and $15.00 into the expense fund. The officers elected for the coming year were as follows: Bro. M. D. Nowell, Pres., Bro. W. L. Crowe, Vice Pres., Rena Gordon, Sec., Bro. John Mehrens, Treas., Bro. Almus Adams, Evan., and Bro. J. T. Prime, Assist. Evan. May these officers all be faithful in the discharge of their duties, doing all that they can for the cause of the Master; and when Christ comes, may we be gathered as an unbroken band into his kingdom, is my prayer. Your sister in Christ.

RENA GORDON.

OBITUARY.

near Circleville, Ind., young Sister Bertha May Finney, Sept. 25, 1895. She was born July 13, 1873, being 22 years, 2 months and 12 days old. The dear sister was immersed by the writer nearly two years ago. She heard the gospel of the kingdom and obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered, and lived a consistent Christian during her short life in the faith. She died with consumption. She leaves a father, mother, two brothers and two sisters and many relatives to mourn her loss; but we can say they sorrow not as others that have no hope, for we believe she sleeps in Jesus.

Low Rate Excursions to the West.

Bountiful harvests are reported from all sections of the west and northwest, and an exceptionally favorable opportunity for homeseekers and those desiring a change of location is offered by the low-rate excursions which have been arranged by the North-Western Line. Tickets for this excursions, with favorable time limits, will be sold on October 22, to points in Northern Wisconsin, Michigan, Northwestern Iowa, Western Minnesota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and a large number of other points. For full information apply to agents of connecting lines, or address A. H. Waggoner T. P. A., 7 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.

"The kind word which you might have spoken, but did not speak; the helpful act you might have done, but did not do, these are your condemnations in the sight of God. You felt some impulse to let your better nature assert itself, but smothered it down and repressed it. There was a hungry soul waiting to see your lips open, and your hands stretched. Alas! you missed your opportunity."

Would you live eternally, reader, in a realm of health, joy and peace? Put yourself by faith in Christ—in the cleft of the Rock; then "when he who is our life shall appear, ye shall appear with him in glory."

LIFE.

How beautiful is Life! When the first streak of dawning
Touches the sunrise hills,
And all the glint and glow of early morning
The wide east fills.

How beautiful is Life! At noontide's hour
When, glowing like the sun,
Man's widening pathway lit with wondrous power,
Is mapped and run.

How beautiful is Life! When eventide
Steals softly on,
And sunset's gates are flinging open wide
Till day is done.

How beautiful is Life! When up the night
Dissolves her starry breast,
Gleaming with other world's far distant light,
And man must rest.

The White Stone.

"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and I will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it" (Rev. ii. 17).

In primitive times, when traveling was rendered difficult by want of places of public entertainment, hospitality was exercised by private individuals to a very great extent. Persons who had partaken of this hospitality, and those who practised it, frequently contracted habits of regard and friendship for each other; and it became a well established custom, both among the Greeks and Romans, to provide their guests with some particular mark, which was handed down from father to son, and insured hospitality and kind treatment wherever presented. This mark was usually a small stone or pebble, cut in half, and upon the halves of which the host and the guest mutually inscribed their names, and then interchanged them with each other.

The production of this stone was quite sufficient to insure friendship for themselves or their descendants, whenever they traveled again in the same direction. While it is evident that these stones were required to be privately kept and the name written on them carefully tain the privileges instead of him for whom they were intended, how natural is the allusion to this custom, in the words: "I will give him to eat of the hidden manna;" and having done so, having recognized him as my guest, my friend, "I will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it, a pledge of my friendship, sacred and inviolable, known only to himself."

The Great Master.

"I am my own master!" cried a young man proudly, when a friend tried to persuade him from an enterprise which he had on hand; "I am my own master!"

"Did you ever consider what a responsible post that is?" asked the friend.

"Responsibility—is it?"

"A master must lay out the work he wants done, and see that it is done right. He should try to secure the best ends by the best means. He must keep on the lookout against obstacles and accidents, and watch that everything goes straight, else he will fail."

"Well!"

"To be master of yourself you have your conscience to keep clear, your heart to cultivate, your temper to govern, your will to direct, and your judgment to instruct. You are master over a hard lot, and if you don't master them they will master you."

"That is so," said the young man.

"Now, I could undertake no such thing," said his friend; "I should fail sure if I did. Saul wanted to be his own master and failed. Herod did. Judas did. No man is fit for it. 'One is my Master, even Christ.' I work under God's direction. When he is Master, all goes right."—Dr. Bacon.

It is the best enjoyment many of us have in this life, so come all that can and help to make this our annual conference as interesting as possible. Years in hope of eternal life.

Mamie Truesdell, Sec.

"There is but one way to kill an enemy," says the Christian Witness, "and that is by putting coals of fire upon his head; that does the business for him at once. Lie in wait for him, and when you catch him in trouble, faint from hunger, or shivering with cold, spring upon him like a good Samaritan, with your hands, eyes, tongue and heart full of good gifts. Just feed him, give him drink, warm him with clothing and words of kindness, and he is done for. You have killed an enemy and made a friend at one shot."

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You defay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

Please write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put lovesalve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into The Restitution for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to The Restitution office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Promised Land.

TUNE "BEYOND THE SEA."

My blessed Redeemer,
My Lord and my King!
Sweet songs and rich praises
Of thee will I sing.
Upon the Mt. Zion,
Thy dear feet shall stand;
Then oh, may we gather
In that dear promised land!

CHORUS.

In that dear promised land,
In that dear promised land:
Then oh, may we gather,
In that dear promised land!

There is nothing on earth
Half so precious as thee;
Then, whom we have followed,
Whose Word made us free,
Upon the Mt. Zion,
Thy dear feet shall stand;
Then oh, may we enter
That fair promised land!

We long have expected,
And waited for thee;
Soon, soon in thy presence,
Dear Lord, may we be,
Upon the Mt. Zion
With harps in our hands,
We'll sing thee, "A new song,"
In that fair promised land!

My days they are weary
Of watching for thee:
Yet, there is joy in my pathway,
'Tis the way of the free.
Upon the Mt. Zion,
The redeemed of the Lamb,
The pure and the loved,
Triumphant shall stand.

Thy word precious promise
Lord, with thee to be,
And hear thy sweet accents,
"Peace be unto thee."
Upon the Mt. Zion,
Thy dear feet shall stand,
Then, sweetly we'll enter
The dear promised land.

Sympathy, the Royal Law of Love.

Should you ask me to define Christian sympathy, I would reply, it is love in action. Should a brother or sister be in need of food or clothing, and we should go to them and offer words of sympathy, and give them not what they need, that is not sympathy but a hollow mockery. True Christian sympathy always acts. Jesus illustrated this by the man who fell among thieves. The Samaritan found him wounded and helpless, and his sympathy led him to dress his wounds and take him to a hotel and ordered him to be cared for and pays his expenses. Suppose the Samaritan had simply said, I am sorry for you and hope your wounds will soon be healed, and then leave him among the bushes where the robbers threw him, would you call that sympathy?

Let me carry the illustration nearer home. Suppose you hear some one say, I am sorry for our Evangelist, he is a dear good brother, he loves the truth, he is earnest and zealous in presenting it to others, but he has to endure many hardships on account of lack of support. I know his mind is harrassed because his family at home are not comfortable. It is a sorry reflection on the Christian sympathy of any person, church or conference, who would for a single day allow such an Evangelist to thus suffer for temporal necessities. At the best he has enough to contend with, and at all times needs both your material and moral sympathy.

Read the cruel persecution of Christians under Nero, and we will see to a marked degree what practical sympathy Christians had toward each other. We can have no better evidence than the testimony of their persecutors, who said it was marvelous what sympathy they had toward each other, and that they were expedition about rendering aid, and often traveling long distances to do so. They said that Master of theirs taught them that they were brethren, and should love each other. "Whether one member suffered, all the members suffered with it; or one member was honored, all the members rejoiced with it."

The great Apostle Paul said: "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." Are we bearing another's burden, by simply giving a word of sympathy, and then let the brother shoulder his own burden, even it breaks his back? There is something more than a passing word required in bearing or sharing a burden with another.

"Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep." We are to be in heart-touch with each other, if we are not, our "rejoicing" and weeping will be simply hypocrisy. A mere passive feeling of compassion is of no more worth than the fair blossom on a tree which disappoints expectation, and never turns to fruit. Give us no such tears as fall upon the pages of a novel, or are shed over some romantic drama in the theater. Let sympathy and action go hand in hand."

We may share a burden with a brother who is weak, and is apt to yield to temptation. Share your strength with him, restore him, say, up brother, try again.

In many cases kindly sympathetic words and attentions may be what is needed, these will often take the keen edge off many sorrows. There is so much in feeling that our heart is in sympathetic touch with some other loving heart.

Says, Mr. Bell: "Love is the life of all religion, the parent of all godliness, the secret of all fruitfulness, and the only meetness for that age where God, who is love, will be all in all. Love is more to be coveted than eloquence lofty as angels' speech; than knowledge that penetrates the deepest mysteries. Oh, in your daily life, look around, and see what burdens you can bear, what pillows you can smoothe, what tears you can wipe away, what weak hearts you can bind up, into what wounds you can pour oil of consolation. Launch boldly into the ocean of love." "Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep."

W. H. WILSON.

"Be Ye Separate."

We learn by reading the Scriptures of Divine Truth, that when God has had any special work for man to do, before he began that work he must be cleansed, and consecrated to that service. Even so now, every one that wants to be adopted into the family of God must be cleansed, and consecrated to the service of God. Hence we read in the first epistle of John i. 7, that the blood of Jesus Christ, (God's own Son) cleanseth us from all sin. John iv. 10, herein is love, not that we love God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. 1 John ii. 2, and not for ours only but, also for the sins of the whole world. Rom. iii. 24, 25, says, being justified freed by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood. To declare his righteousness, for the remission of sins that are passed. Ver. 26th to declare at this time his righteousness, that he might be just—and the justice of him which believeth in Jesus. Heb. xi. 6. He that cometh to God must believe that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. We have here learned that it is the blood of Jesus that cleanses us from sins that are passed. Now, we want to know when that cleansing blood is applied. Rom. vi. 3, says, know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death, therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we should walk in newness of life .....Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed that henceforth we should not serve sin. Ver. 17, 18, But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered you (at the time you obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered you). You are then made free from sin, and become the servants of righteousness. Therefore, if any man be in Christ he is a new creature. What a beautiful thought in this, that though our sins be as scarlet, they shall be made white as snow, in the purifying blood of Jesus, and we come up out of the watery grave a new creature, and begin a new life. This is what sets us apart as servants of God; separates us from the world, and the command is "Be ye separate." It is useless to try to follow the world, and the Savior for he has told us, that no man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Dear pilgrims on the journey to the kingdom of God, how many of you are trying to serve Jesus, only Jesus? How many have cut loose from every worldly tie, and are working and striving with no other motive in view than sending forth the joyful news of Jesus and his kingdom? It is true that if you are thus separate from the world, you will be evil-spoken of by the world, and right here is the test that many fail to stand. The evil tempter is ever ready, yes always ready to turn those away from the narrow and narrow way that have started, and as one writer has truly said, he seldom comes to the child of God with some dreadful appearing sin, but with little things that are nevertheless sins. He may come to one with the plea that your vote is needed to help elect a certain very good man, can't you help? Well, you think that is only a trifle, and so cast your vote. Soon he will come again, Mr. G. we are engaged in getting up a lodge, or perhaps a G. A. R. post over here at the village, as you was a soldier and stand well among your neighbors, we would like to have you join in with us, and so of course to be popular with the world you join hands with them, and before you are aware of it you are heart and hand serving the mammon of unrighteousness, little by little you have drifted away until your condition is alarming. Dear reader, if you are one of these that are not serving Jesus and him alone, (Listen what he says,) "Come out from the world and be ye separate." "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Then again, "For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness than, after they have known it to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them." Dear reader, the night is far spent, the glorious morn of eternity will soon dawn. The golden bells of promise are ringing sweetly. They echo and re-echo the glad refrain of coming joy and gladness. If you have wandered out on the wilds away from the Father's house, return, oh return. If you are called upon to suffer for Christ's sake, rejoice that ye may be partakers of his sufferings. For Christ also suffered for us leaving us an example that we should follow his steps. Humble yourselves, therefore, under the right hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time. Remembering that his servants ye are, to whom you obey.

Submitted in love.

PSALM. 104.

105 COM. VER.

1. Alleluia. Confess ye unto the Lord and invoke his name; Declare his works among the nations.

2. Sing unto him and exalt the strain unto him; May ye have discoursed all his wonders.

3. Speak praise in his sacred name: May the heart of those who seek the Lord have rejoiced.

4. May ye have sought the Lord and may ye have become controled; May ye have sought his face always;

5. May ye have remembered his wonders which he hath done, his prodigies and the verdicts of his mouth.

6. Hubraam's seed are his bond-servants, sons of Jakob his elect ones.

7. He is the Lord our God; In all the earth his verdicts.

8. He hath remembered his covenant forever, a Word which he hath enjoined for a thousand generations;

9. Which he covenanted with Habraam and his oath to Isaak,

10. And he confirmed it to Jakob for a decree and to Israel for an eternal (or age-everlasting) covenant,

11. Saying, To thee will I give the land of Chanaan, a definite portion of our inheritance;

12. When they were few in number fewest and sojourners in it.

13. And went through from nation to nation and kingdom to another people.

14. He did not allow a man to wrong them and he reproved kings for their sakes;

15. Touch not my anointed ones (Christs) and do not do wickedly to my prophets.

16. And he called a famine upon the land; all the stay of bread he broke.

17. He sent before them a man; Joseph was sold for a bond-servant.

18. They humbled his feet with fetters; his soul passed through iron;

19. Until his Word came; until the oracular-Word of the Lord had purified him with fire,

20. A king sent and loosed him, a ruler of laities even let him go:

21. He established him lord of his house and ruler of all his creation;

22. As himself to chasten his rulers and to make wise his elders.

23. And Israel went into Aiguptos and Jakob sojourned in a land of Cham.

24. And he greatly increased his laity; and he gave him control over his enemies;

25. And he changed their heart to hate his laity, to do deceitfully with his bond-servants.

26. He sent out Mouses his bond-servant, Aaron whom he had chosen;

27. He placed in them the words of his signs and prodigies in a land of Cham;

28. He sent out darkness and it became dark and they embittered his words,

29. He changed their waters into blood, and slew their fish;

30. Their land produced (caused to creep forth) frogs in the inner-chambers of their kings.

31. He spake and a dog-flea pest and sand-fleas came in all their boundaries;

32. He made their rain hail; (He made) fire to flame in their land.

33. And it smote their vineyards and their fig-orchards, and shattered every tree in their boundary;

34. He spake and dying and creeping locust came, of which there was no number;

35. And devoured all the herbage in their land, and devoured the fruit of their land;

36. And he smote every first-born from out their land, a first-fruits of all their painful toil;

37. And he led them out with silver and gold, and there was not a weak one in their tribes:

38. Aiguptos was rejoiced with their departure, because fear of them had fallen upon them.

39. He spread a cloud for their shelter, and fire to light them by night.

40. They asked and a flight of land-sail (or reed-birds, not quail) came; and he filled them with bread of heaven:

41. He rent asunder a rock and waters flowed; Rivers went their way in places without water.

42. Because he remembered his sacred Word unto Habraam his bond-servant:

43. And he led out his laity in gladness and his elect ones with rejoicing.

44. And he gave to them countries of nations, and they inherited the results of the painful-toil of nations;

45. That they might watch to guard his statutes (enactments that justify) and might seek out his law.

PSALM 105 (106 COM. VER.)

1. Alleluia. Confess ye unto the Lord, because he is useful-good, because his mercy is forever.

2. Who will tell of the Lord's acts of able rule; who will make all his praises to be heard.

3. Blessed-happy are they who watch to guard a judicial-way and who do righteousness in every period.

4. Remember us, O Lord, in thy satisfaction with thy laity; visit (take an oversight of) us with thy instrumental salvation.

5. useful-goodness of thy elect-ones and be made to rejoice with the rejoicing of thy nation, that we may be praised in the midst of thine inheritance.

6. We have been sinning with our fathers, we have transgressed, we have done wrong:

7. Our fathers in Aiguptos did not understand thy wonders, and did not remember the plenitude of thy mercy, and they embittered while going up in the Red Sea.

8. And he saved them for his name's sake, that he might make known his ability to rule;

9. And he rebuked the Red Sea and it dried up; and he guided them in abyssmal waters as in a desert.

10. And he saved them out of the hand of those who hated them, and he redeemed them out of the hand of an enemy.

11. Water covered those who were afflicting them; not one of them was left.

12. And they put faith in his words and sung his praise.

13. They quickly ignored his works; they did not abide his counsel.

14. And they inordinately desired in the wilderness and made a trial of God in a place without water.

15. And he gave them their request, and sent satiety to their soul.

16. And they provoked Mouses to wrath in the camp and Aaron the Lord's saint.

17. The earth opened and swallowed Dathan and covered the synagogue of Abeiron.

18. And fire flamed out on their synagogue and a flame burned up obdurate sinners.

19. And they made a yearling-bullock (a moschos) in Choreb and worshipped the graven thing.

20. And they exchanged their glory with a likeness of a yearling bullock that eateth grass.

21. They ignored the God who was saving them, who had done great things in Aiguptos,

22. Wonders in a land of Cham, and fearful things at a Red Sea.

23. And he said he would have destroyed them if Mouses his elect one had not stood before him in the act of breaking them in pieces, to turn him away from the wrath of his anger, that he might not utterly destroy them.

24. And they despised a very desirable land and did not put faith in his word.

25. And they murmured in their tents; they did not hearken to the voice of the Lord.

26. And he raised his hand to cast them down in the wilderness,

27. And to cast down their seed among the nations, and to scatter them in the countries.

28. And they were perfected in the Baal fire-worship, and ate sacrifices for the dead.

29. And they provoked him with their devices, and the plague-smiting on them was multiplied.

30. And Phineas stood and made an expiation (or fit showed himself favorable) and the crushing blow was allayed.

31. And it was accounted to him for righteousness unto generation during the Animate-age.

32. And they provoked him to wrath at the water of gain saying (or talking against) and Mouses experienced evil for their sakes,

33. Because they embittered his spirit, and he gave a decision with his lips (instead of with his enlightened reason as he ought)

34. They did not utterly destroy the nations which the Lord told them (to do),

35. And they mingled with the nations and learned their works;

36. And served their graven images as bond-servants, and they became a stumbling block to them:

37. And they sacrificed their sons and their daughters to the demons. And they poured out innocent blood, the blood of their sons and their daughters, which they sacrificed to the graven-images of Chanaan; and the land was polluted with the blood of murder;

38. And defiled with their works; and they committed harlotry in their devices.

40. And the Lord became wrathful with anger at his laity and he abominated his inheritance;

41. And he gave them up into the hands of enemies, and those who hated them, lorded it over them:

42. And their enemies afflicted them, and they were humbled beneath their hands.

43. Many a time did he deliver them and they embittered him with their counsel, and they were humbled with their transgressions.

44. And the Lord saw while they were being afflicted, when he had harkened to their supplication,

45. And he remembered his covenant and he regretted according to the plenitude of his mercy, and gave them unto feelings of pity in the sight of all those who took them captive.

47. Mayest thou have saved us O Lord our God, and mayest thou have gathered us together from out the nations, that we may have confessed unto thy sacred name, that we may boast in thy praise.

48. The Lord of Israel be eulogized, (blessed com translation) from the animate-age and during the animate-age, and all the laity will say, may it have come to pass; may it have come to pass (Amen; Amen(com translation)

COMMENT.

The 104th psalm is according to its heading an alleluia of confession and praise on the part of God's laity with an exhortation to all the nations to do likewise in view of his many wonders and judgments rendered in the past.

It being a 4th there a special emphasis placed upon judgments rendered and being a 10 x 10 it is a consummation of consummations also in their regard. Observe the exhortation of the 5th verse to remember "the wonders and prodigies wrought" and the verdict of his mouth, as executed on Egypt.

Also the emphasis placed upon God's verdicts in all the earth, in the 7th verse.

In contrast with this display of judgment in what issued of his covenant of mercy in the 8th verse, and how this covenant is regarded by the Lord in the warning of the 15th verse.

Observe what is said of Joseph the representative of the Christ in the 21st verse especially the last clause "and ruler of all his (Pharoah's) creation" even as God has made the Christ the ruler of all his creation: and the definition of this rulership under God as taught in the 22nd verse.

Then in the 26th and 27th verses what is said of Mouses and Aaron as forerunners of the Christ in the mediatorial offices of leader and chief-priest, and how his word in them qualified them to speak and do as no man could speak and do just as it did the Christ of whom they were antetypes; and how the object of all this is summed up in the 44th and 45th verses.

The 105th psalm is also in Alleluia, but in the minor-key of humility as well as confession. God's utility as a Lord and why he is good emphasized.

The blessed-happiness resulting from a persistent seeking after righteousness and the judicial way of doing things brought out in the 3rd verse.

The significance of the minor strain well illustrated in the 5th verse, the deferred hope though a sure hope of being ultimately "praised in the midst of thine inheritance," and that too though "we have been sinning with our done wrong." Observe the gospel ring out in the 8th verse—appropriately too to its number "and he saved them for his name's sake etc."

From the 8th on to the end of the psalm all the familiar types and analogies reviewed and brought out in the way of judgment and mercy.

Again observe the antetypical mediatorship of Mouses in the 28rd verse and the resultant failures to keep it with all the forbearance and mercy attending these failures and the final remembrance of the covenant with Habraam which antedates the covenant of law and is the harbinger of the new and greater covenant of mercy with Christ as the mediator of it, and the closing prayer of the 47th and 48th verses which proves to be a prophecy of its coming fulfillment and under the provisions of which we as Christians now are awaiting another fulfillment, the realization of which hope will be the grand climax of God's glory and humanity's good.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Mr. Spurgeon says: "If I were asked what in a Christian minister is the most essential quality for securing success in winning souls to Christ, I should reply, 'Earnestness.' If I were asked a second or a third time I should not vary the answer. Personal observation drives me to the conclusion that, as a rule, real success is proportionate to the preacher's earnestness. Both great men and little women succeed if they are thoroughly alive unto God, and fail if they are not. I delight in McCheyne's remark, 'It is not so much great talents that God blesses, as great likeness to Christ.'"

"Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace and good will toward men." How different that is from some who profess to preach the gospel and at the same time go forward with the Bible in their pockets to slay their fellowmen! How different! O, how different this is from my feelings at this time.—Jesse Moon.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 16, 1895. NO. 39.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the possession of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ are among other kindred truths. Also steadfastness of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

IT is written that a crown of glory will be given to the righteous when Christ shall appear. 1 Peter v. 4.

IT lightens a duty to resolve to perform it cheerfully. Faith is the root of all good work. A root that produces nothing is dead.

"BELIEVE not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God, for many false prophets (or teachers) have gone out into the world." John.

IT is written that immortality is a prize to be sought for. Rom. ii. 7. Popular teachers say that man already is immortal, and that he has only to seek for eternal happiness.

"EVERY word of God is pure." Prov. xxx. 5. "Search the Scriptures." John v. 39. "If any man speak let him speak as the oracles of God." 1 Peter iv. 11. "In doctrine showing uncorruptness." Titus ii. 7.

THE Libre Parole, of Paris, publishes a report of an interview with M. Turpin, the inventor of the explosive melinite, in which he is represented as asserting that the porte has asked him to apply his new discovery in fortifying, the get to work," M. Turpin says, "the straits will be impassable to the united fleets of the world. But French experts totally discredit M. Turpin's alleged engines of destruction.

FROM the Idenette we learn at a settlement known as Bene Israelites located near Cochin, the Jews assert that shortly after the destruction of the second temple at Jerusalem, they emigrated to this country near the city of Colungalaon, which is known by the Portuguese as Cromponore, situated about fourteen miles from Cochin. They were cordially received by the aboriginal chiefs and Indian kings—acquired great prominence and were accorded many privileges and concessions. They have now three copper plates with the ancient inscriptions detailing the conditions of the privileges accorded them. On account of the persecution of the Jesuits they emigrated to the neighborhood of Cochin. The number in that vicinity at the present time is about 1800 and comprises white, black and brown Jews. In 1809, Dr. Buchanan discovered among them an unfinished pentateuch in Hebrew besides a 150-year old translation in Hebrew of the New Testament.

EX-CONGRESSMAN George Tillman, of South Carolina, in expressing his views, says, "Our people are desperate. We are approaching a war between the rich and the poor, and I look for lots of trouble coming between now and 1900. The millionaires have oppressed the masses until the latter are like a squeezed lemon. They are unable to educate their children, to travel and improve their minds, or to read books, papers and magazines. They merely make a living, a scant one at that. They have grown desperate. The millionaires buy up half the masses and arm their hands with which to intimidate the other half, and thus keep them all in subjection. The time is coming when these people will rise in conflict. I look for it during the next presidential election or the one after that. All the writers on our government unite in declaring that if this government ever goes to pieces, it will be at the period of a presidential election in a conflict over the spoils of office and the administration of taxation. So firmly do I believe that this revolution is coming that I am already preparing for it. I have three sons, and toward that end I am giving them a military education so that when the threat cutting time comes they will not be high privates in the ranks."

A FEW days ago Mr. Chas. Campbell, 478 Jackson street, Chicago, was walking on the lake front with a spaniel dog when suddenly there was a splash in the water followed by a wild shriek of alarm, and then a little boy's hat was seen bobbing about in the waves. The dog saw what had happened, and without stopping to thing whether or not his life was insured plunged in and swam out near where the hat was floating. Presently the boy came up spluttering and half drowned. The dog seized him by his coat and held the child's head above the water, the boy meantime struggling violently, but Jack held on till help from the pier came and took the little fellow. And yet it is claimed that matter cannot think!! A stone and a stick are matter, and sure enough they cannot think. But matter organized as a dog can think, theology to the contrary notwithstanding. While visiting in a rural district recently we watched a dog as he herded Colonel's part of whose duty it was to keep little pigs out of the lawn. Time after time we saw him drive a bunch of little pigs up to a whole in the fence, and wait for one after another to get through, and invariably stopped at the last one, when it entered the whole, and there were none to be scattered by it. "Colonel" understands English pretty well, although he cannot speak it. Now what becomes of the doctrines that matter cannot think, that only immaterial and immortal souls can think? Have thinking dogs immortal souls?

AN earnest brother writes: "I am deeply impressed with the thought that the angelic reapers are about to go forth to gather in mind is centered night and day for the household at large, whom I fear are not alive to the fact. You know as well as I that none will be gathered except those whose daily life has been made conformable to the requirements of the ancient faith of the Gospel. They must have white robes, unspotted from the world. I feel so anxious for the dear household, so many of whom do not seem to fully appreciate this. Oh dear brother throw the whole ardor of your being into a mighty endeavor to show them the danger they are in and the risk they run. Cry aloud and spare not. "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," and it is only the Bride that hath made herself ready that he will receive. Oh what wailing and anguish there will be among the rest." It is gratifying to find those in these days of delusion who with zeal for God's glory the safety of those who have the name of Christ, and realize that headwork is useless without heart-work will avail nothing at that day. We can only say to our brother's injunction that as far as in us lies we intend to spend what of time and strength may be vouchsafed to us in the direction indicated, trusting the good God and Father to add his blessing.

FELLOW laborers, our work is not done when we have gained the submission of men to the Gospel of Christ. We are more and more convinced that we should give more attention to the Spirit which prompts submission, and which should in the future characterize and rule the believer. Numbers are not more important than the quality of the material. Numbers without depth of heart, or true love for the things of the Spirit are of little value. They will not abide temptation nor persecution. This is the class of believers that cause many divisions. The true spirit of Christ being wanting will always choose the easiest side because it gratifies the flesh. He who obeys because he loves will serve where duty leads him. It is with the heart man believes unto righteousness. Mechanical believers do not bear the fruits of the Spirit. This is eternal life to know the only true God and Jesus Christ whom he has sent. But knowing God means more than knowing about God. The chief priests and Pharisees knew about God, but this was of no advantage to them; nay, it condemned them. There is a knowledge of God that surpasses that of the head—it is realization. We know God and Christ when we have drunk of this spirit—when we have buried our old selves and risen up to do the commands of our Lord. When the old man has not been buried things may go smoothly when all is pleasant, but look out when unpleasantnesses have to be dealt with. That is the time flesh asserts itself. Labor is lost except the Lord build the house. Intellectual assent will not fit a person for the temple God is erecting for his dwelling. Let us be careful how we build. Wood, hay and stubble will not stand fire. If our work is burnt up we receive no reward for it.

Lively Stones.

Believer, did you ever think of it? It is those who have but little vanity who fall a prey to prevalent diseases. Those in a vigorous state of physical health seldom succumb to the various epidemics that sweep over cities and villages. The outflow of living health prevents contamination. Here is a lesson for you and all who have named the name of Christ. He who feeds regularly and bountifully upon the bread of life, and constantly breathes a spiritual atmosphere, will be a stalwart Christian, and will never be tainted by the pollution and sin that he comes in contact with.

Uncorruptness of Doctrine.

Among the instructions given by Paul to Titus, his son after the common faith, are those: "In all things showing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity. Nothing that Titus could say would have an influence for good if his conduct were not in harmony with it. He must himself be a pattern of good works to Christians in doctrine, as a "pattern of serious deportment. Years of close observation have proven to us that corruption of Bible doctrine first manifests itself by asserting things which cannot be stated in Bible language. If Paul, so richly endowed with spiritual gifts did not presume to express the things revealed to him by the spirit of God, in words of his own, or "words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Spirit teacheth," ought we not to demand of all who assume to have new light, or points of truth in advance of the brotherhood generally, that they speak the same in the Spirit's Words? If they cannot do this we hold it to be conclusive evidence that the new light so-called has been evolved from thier own brain or from that of some other mortal. The persistence with which such ideas are urged upon the attention of others, even to the exclusion of vital truth, savors of the policy of a vender of a proprietary medicine. It is time our brethren should "hold up" all such by demanding of them a statement of their views in words which the Holy Spirit teacheth. We are persuaded that this would unseat all the hobby riders.

If men have to reason out and infer a doctrine, and then teach it as the truth of God, they sin grievously against God, against their fellows and against themselves. It is preposterous in the extreme to imagine that they can supplement God's statements with reason and inference and then exact our faith in them. The best and ablest of men reason from false premises sometimes, and therefore their conclusions at such times cannot be true. We find men everywhere so absorbed in matters of this kind that they have no time for weightier matters; and as if they had been selected by God—raised up for the purpose of disseminating some after-thought of God Almighty. It is a delusion! God's Word needs no supplementing. The Scriptures of the Old and New Testament are as able to make us wise unto salvation now as were the Scriptures Timothy was conversant with in apostolic times. When Jesus said, "Occupy till I come," he had laid out the work with which they were to be occupied, and speculation and inference formed no part of it. He said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." John viii. 12.

From these words of the Master we learn exactly what we must do in order that we may have the light of life,—we must FOLLOW him. If we get ahead of him we walk in darkness, because then any light that may have been received from him becomes darkness. If we go beyond him we are no better off than if we had never reached him. If we make articles of faith out of our own researches we are certainly not following him. We follow ourselves, we lead and direct ourselves. To prove that this is all wrong is found in scores of divided and disbanded congregations. This self-exalting, self-over-bearing lawless contention, and is fatally throughout. We can conceive of no more heinous sin than that of dividing the Body of Christ to gratify personal ambition. It is far easier to keep out manufactories of faith, than to get rid of them if once they get in. The devil tallies in with what is opposed to the spirit of truth. We hope our reader will try the effect of the suggestion to demand the statement of any questionable teaching in the Words of the Spirit.

It cannot be denied that we are living in perilous times. Iniquity abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold. Snares are everywhere set for the feet of those who do not live in harmony with their environment. They must be on the watch. They must be fortified with the Word of God and with prayer. They must warm their hearts in the heavens of the light of the good time coming. Live to God's praise now and then in a little while God will be all in all in them.

Words of Comfort.

Rolla Button, the oldest son of our Brother and Sister Lucien and Emma Button died at La Cross, Wisconsin, on September 28th, aged nearly 20 years of rapid consumption.

Rolla was living with his parents at Austin, Ill., and not feeling well, his uncle Charles Button invited him to visit him at La Cross, Wisconsin, thinking the change might benefit him. For a time he did seem to be benefitted, but the fell destroyer had fastened itself upon him, and it became apparent that he could not last long, and so his Uncle Charles telegraphed for his parents to come, but he passed away a few days after their arrival.

Lucien and Charles are both sons of Asa W. Button, who in life was a heroic defender of the ancient faith of the gospel, as revealed in the covenants of promise. (Eph. ii.) He was formerly a Baptist clergyman, and I heard him remark that for twenty-one years he had preached heathen fables, supposing he was preaching God's truth. (He was shown the way of life by Brother Richard Appleyard, another valient defender of the "some faith," who now sleeps in Jesus, leaving a blessed record behind him.)

Brother Button was killed by the St. Paul R. R. a few years ago. After the funeral service, Charles and his loving wife were buried in baptism, having believed the only saving faith—the gospel of the Kingdom.

Rolla was buried at West Northfield, the former home of his grandfather Asa.

Services were conducted by the writer.

The following is a brief summary of the words spoken:

Beloved brethren and friends: we are once more assembled before the door of the sepulchre, and with it comes life's lesson, which on account of its frequent occurrence, is often unheeded. We are frequently entreated on like occasions to prepare to die, but the fact is it needs no preparation to die, therefore I would say to you prepare to live. Alas! too few make this preparation I beseech of you in the name of Jesus my Lord not to neglect it. If any of you have come to a knowledge of the saving faith of the gospel of the kingdom, I beg of you to yield obedience at once. Those who have thus obeyed, let me lovingly exhort you to live a holy life of faith. None of us know how soon we may be called hence. Death has all seasons for its own. "Leaves have their time to fall and wither at the north winds blast," but death, O cruel death, has all seasons for its own. The babe is snatched from the loving arms of its mother, stalwart youth like the one before us is laid low, likewise the aged whose heads are whitened by the frosts of many winters. Therefore the need of being constantly prepared to live.

Let me call attention to the grand old patriarch Job. He suffered the loss of all things, even as his loving children were laid below the sod of the valley, yet he could bless God. He had an abiding faith in God's power to raise the dead. Listen: "O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint a set time and remember me! If a man die shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait until my change come. Thou shalt call and I will answer thee."

The anticipation of the coming glorious "change" cheered his heart, and he desired that others may cherish it also, hence he exclaimed: "Oh that my words were now written! Oh that they were printed in a book! That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever! Yes, he desired that they may be engraven in the solid rock, that time may not efface them. What words were these? I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another: though my reins be consumed within me." Are you conscious of the fact that your "Redeemer liveth," and that you will meet him when "he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth?" If not, let me entreat you in the name of Jesus to make the necessary preparation, and do not delay for already the eastern horizon is luminous with omens of the ear of coming glory.

[illegible] its effect. It leads to self-sacrifice for others good. It seeks to relieve suffering wherever found. It loves to pour the healing balm of consolation into hearts burdened with affliction. Kind words distill from lips so possessed like dew drops from heaven inspired by holy piety and love which leave their impress upon the heart. Linked with faith and hope it forms a cord of three-fold strength, and this binds the believer to the Infinite One, and the reflex influence brings a holy calm which in solemn stillness lifts up the heart in adoration to him who is love. It makes the heart tender, it feels for others woes. It brings sunshine to the afflicted. I tell you

"It is a flower that cannot fade,
A fire that never dies;
A light that cannot cast a shade,
A life that never flies."

The Sun of righteousness is about to emerge from behind the cloud. Yes, light is dawning as an omen of a better day.

"The aurora of knowledge is seen in the clouds
With prophecies cheering and grand."

Dear hearers, are you ready? If not, Oh make haste, delay not, I beseech you.

"O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee; my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee."

And now, as we commit Rolla to his last resting place, we do so, trusting in a just and loving Father, who doeth all things well, and pray God to bless those who mourn, and that all may prepare to live. Farewell,

W. H. WILSON.

Some one has said that there is nothing at all in life except what we put there. The power is given us by our Creator to make life a failure or success. Dare we treat lightly such liberty? It is not the place we are set to fill but the way in which we fill it that marks our worth. So many neglect the minor duties in business and home life, while they meet great demands with energy. "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much"—Sel.

An Admonition.

When our Savior was on earth he commanded that we love one another, and that we should love our neighbor as ourselves. We go among the so-called Christian people to-day, and there isn't one out of a hundred who doesn't have some evil to say of their neighbor. Some one is not living to suit them. If we could only remember that God is ruling the world, and trusting all to him, and watch our lives to see if our every day walk is that of a Christian, we would be so much happier and raise our children to have a closer walk with God.

There are one-third of the preachers to-day that are preaching against other denominations, instead of preaching the gospel that will save souls. If that the Christians would all be preachers in these latter days! If all Christian would take on the whole armor of God there wouldn't be room for men that are only injuring the cause by their unworthy efforts to be a "popular preacher," and down some one else. O you who are Christians, be strong, be brave, be pure! Stand firm and live cheerfully, loving all men if possible, with the Christ-like love, and stretching out your hand to the fallen one, point out the way of truth, let them see by your every day walk in life that you love God, and want them to love him too.

Sister, do you know that your true womanly sympathy can do more to bring a wayward soul to the Savior than sermons could? Brother did you ever think what a power for good your manly voice might have over a soul-sick sinner, if softened with the love of Christ. When you have that life in yours, you can speak tender words that may sink deep into a poor heart, and be the means of bringing him to Christ. That through believing he too might be saved. We don't all have to be ministers, but we ought all to be Christians, and the true Christians will always be doing good. The Bible don't tell us to depart from evil and do nothing, but to "depart from evil and do good." Let's ever be watching, working and praying that God may make us useful in his cause, and that we may be ready when Jesus comes. Your Sister,

MRS. G. W. DERRYBERRY.

The Sabbath in Revelation.

We have been asked to harmonize our views on the sabbath with some Scriptures found in the Book of Revelation. Which I will try to do, for if I have a theology that can not be harmonized with God's Word I will drop it as I would a red hot iron.

First the question is asked if the sabbath law is done away with, how can you harmonize Rev. xiv. 12 with your views. "Here is the patience of the saints, here are they that keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus." Now, let us see if we can find who is referred to here that kept the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus, for it is plain that some have kept them. Let us begin at the first verse of the chapter, and read "And I looked, and, lo, a Lamb stood on the Mount Sion, and with him a hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their forehead." Here are the company spoken of in the text. Read on to the 4th verse, the last clause says, "These were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God and to the Lamb."

Now, go with me to Rev. vii. beginning with the 4th verse. "And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed a hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel." Now, read on and you will see in the next few verses below that these are all Israelites. Those taken out or redeemed from among men before the gospel was preached to the Gentiles, and so they did keep the commandments for the law was in force down to the cross. For Paul says the law was our school master to bring us to Christ, but after faith is come we are no longer under the school master. Gal. iii. 24, 25. And so we see that the hundred and forty and four thousand were taken from the twelve tribes of the children of Israel, so that the passage is in perfect harmony with the view that the view that the law ended at the cross. I will now ask them to harmonize their views with the passage they claim to be the hundred and forty and four thousand, I want to know how they can be said to be taken out of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel. If they can't show this, then their theory falls to the ground.

Again they ask me to harmonize my views with Rev. xxii. 14. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates of the city." There says one, that means us if we expect to enter the city and have access to that tree of life we must keep the commandments. I say yes. But what commandments? Let us look at the preceding verses, 12 and 13. "And, behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." This is Jesus that sends this grand news to us by his angel, and then the angel says, "Blessed are they that do his commandments." So we can all see that it is Christ's commandments we are to keep. As he says in John xv. 10, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in his love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in my love." A plain distinction between and his his Father's commandments.

"He who never connects God with his daily life knows nothing of the spiritual meaning and uses of life—nothing of the calm, strong patience with which ills may be endured; of the gentle, tender comforts which the Father's love can minister; of the blessed rest to be utilized in his forgiving love, his tender fatherhood; of the deep, peaceful sense of the Infinite One ever near, a refuge and a strength."

"No amount of singing and praying, of church-going and profession is sufficient to maintain a Christian character in a man who is not honest in his dealings, or truthful in his relation with men. The moral character is just as essential as a spiritual experience. If his faith does not dominate his life, influence his conduct, and shape his character it is not a saving faith."

POETRY.

Weak Things of God.

Was but a little wayside flower
That pleased the hurrying traveler's eye,
It showed to cheer one lonely hour,
And in his weary hand to die.

Was but a little wayside rill,
Among the stones and sands that sprung;
And dropped down and took its fill.
Then with fresh wing upsoared and sang.

Was but a little gift of bread,
Accepted as a Tropical cure;
A weary child it comforted,
And answered a believer's prayer.

Was but a little, passing word
Unexpectedly were moved to speak;
A wakened spirit overheard,
And straight was stirred the truth to seek.

Was but a little, simple song
That unknown had leave to sing;
Yet answered and none too strong,
Since still it soothed a tender sting.

Was but a little thing of hope and faith it flew,
Yet new quick echoes caught the ear
Of watcher listening in the dew
For coming of their heavenly cheer.

Was but a rill, and work, and song, and gift
All weak things but weak things of God?
Yet they bear his message swift
And speak life-throbs with soul or sod.

What things—but who shall name the small?
And who declare what great must be?
All, in God's eyes, each and all
Are but to his infinity.

Selected.

Our Reign with Jesus on the Earth; or, the Saints Possessing the Kingdom.

Of all the thrones and royal lines of earth, the house and kingdom and seed of David alone shall endure forever.

Aye, more. Its greatest glory is to come; when Christ as the seed, the natural seed of David, as a man, as the fruit of the body of David, the fruit of his loins according to the flesh—for these, in their Scriptural order, are some of the Scriptural designations of Christ as the Son of David, as employed in connection with our present theme—shall celebrate, and in his own personal reign, vindicate, upon the throne of his father David, the accomplished triumphs and accomplished wonders of redeeming grace, and, casting down Antichrist, set up, in turn, the tabernacles of his own palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain.

The following are, in part, the sublime terms, original and supplementary, of this royal covenant:

"Thine house and thy kingdom shall be established forever before thee; thy throne shall be established forever.

"I have found David my servant; with my holy oil have I anointed him. My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure forever, and his throne as the days of heaven. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established forever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven.

"David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel.

"The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it; Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne.

"Therefore David being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;

"He, seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption."

But the record of this royal covenant would be incomplete, and its proper fulfilment would be incomplete, and the predicted glory of the throne of David would be incomplete, if we were to omit in reciting, the following lofty but condescending proclamation of the great Davidic King Himself:

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

"And he that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations; even as I have received of my Father; and I will give him the morning star;

"I am the root and offspring of David, the bright and morning star."

Now, therefore—not to take note of any of the twenty-two kings of the house and seed of David, who successively sat upon the throne of David, until it was finally overturned, or of the divine sentence which overturned it, and which overturns, and overturns and overturns it still, and which will continue to overturn, and overturn and overturn it until the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled, and He shall come whose right alone the diadem and the crown, the throne and the sceptre of David are—

Now, therefore, we say—not to take note of these things if the record be, that the house, the kingdom, the throne, and the seed of David shall endure forever, and that David shall never want a man as the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, to sit on his throne, which is the throne of the house of Israel:

And if the record be, that the angel Gabriel announced to the Virgin Mary, herself the natural seed of David, that she should conceive in her womb, and bring forth a Son—all of which can be predicted of the flesh alone and should call His name Jesus: that he should be called the Son of the Highest: that the Lord God should give unto him the throne of his father David, and that he should reign over the house of Jacob forever:

And if the record be, that the Virgin Mary did conceive in her womb, and did bring forth a son, and did call his name Jesus—only that the unbelieving and judicially blinded nation to whom he came, and whose rightful king, of the house and lineage of David, he was, would not so acknowledge and receive him, but took him, and with wicked hands crucified and slew him;

And if the record be, that on the third day after his death and burial, he rose from the dead untouched and therefore unchanged, as concerning the flesh, by the corruption of the grave;

And if the record be, that he rose from the grave, untouched and unchanged by its corruption, for the express purpose that he might still fulfil, as the fruit of the loins of David according to flesh, notwithstanding the cruel and successful and permitted wrath of his enemies, what remained to be fulfilled of the prediction of the angel Gabriel, namely, that the Lord God should give unto him the throne of His father David, and that he should reign over the house of Jacob forever:

And if the record be, having thus risen from the dead, that he thereafterward, for the space of forty days, showed himself in the flesh unto his disciples, his friends and his brethren, even as before his death, eating, drinking, sitting, and walking with them, and discoursing with them of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God and to the throne of His father David;

And if the record be, that, at the end of the forty days, without having taken his seat, according to the announcement of the angel Gabriel, on the throne of his father David, and at the very moment when the disciples without any expression of disapprobation on his part, were asking him if he would at this time restore the kingdom to Israel, he was taken up into heaven, and a cloud received him out of their sight;

And if the record be, Jesus being thus taken up into heaven, that two angels immediately appeared to the disciples, as with straining eyes they watched his retreating human form, with this consoling assurance, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven;"

And if the record be, that this same Jesus hath not yet so come again in like manner as he ascended into heaven; and if, therefore, he must so come again hereafter, if at all;

And if the record be, that many spirits are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is to come (erchomenon) in the flesh; and that the same are deceivers and antichrists;

And if the record be, that Christ, when he thus ascended into heaven, sat down at the right hand of God, and that he has remained seated there, not indefinitely, or for ever, but until only, and until the appointed time shall arrive when God shall make his enemies his footstool, even as God hath said, "Sit thou at my right hand (not until I make thine enemies thy friends, but) until I make thine enemies thy footstool;" or, in other terms, if the record be, that the heavens must receive him "until," and therefore until only, "the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began;"

And if the record be, that Christ still addresses us, not from the throne of His father David, which still, according to the sentence, is overturned, but from the throne of His Father in heaven, as the root and offspring of David, without any more qualification as to his being the root and offspring of David in the sense of being his natural seed, the natural fruit of his loins according to the flesh, than ever before, then when, for instance, he was accustomed so to address his disciples on earth;

And if the record be, that Christ, when he thus addresses us from the throne of His Father in heaven, plainly declares that he will return to the earth, and that, when he returns, he will build again the ruins thereof, and will set it up, and crown it with a lustre so far surpassing the lustre of the days of old and of former years, that its ancient glory shall not be remembered, or even come into mind;

And if the record be, that Christ, when thus he shall return, will come with "all His saints," to be glorified in them, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day, since they are members of his flesh, and of his bones;

And if the record be, that, because Christ lives, we shall live also; that, because Christ rose from the dead, our flesh shall also rest in hope, and awake in triumph from the grave, "every man in his own order: Christ the first-fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming;

And if the record be that we shall be satisfied, when we awake, with his likeness, as resting upon us, will be that we shall be fashioned like unto his glorious body;

And if the record be, that the saints of the most high places, of all the ages to the whole unbroken company of whom the pious Job formed no exception—know that their Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and that, though after their skin worms destroy their bodies, yet in their flesh they shall see God; whom they shall see for themselves, and not another, though their reins be consumed within them;

And if the record be, not only that the saints of the most high places, of all the ages, shall in their flesh see God, but that they shall live and reign on the earth as priests of God and of Christ for a thousand years, even as they are represented as singing in heaven in their new song—"For thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us unto God by thy blood, out every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth;"

And if the record be, not only that the saints of the most high places, of all the ages, shall reign upon the earth, but that they shall "judge the world," and "judge the angels," and "have power over the nations," even as Christ hath received of his Father.

And if the record be, although in our sinful flesh there dwelleth no good thing, and although our sinful flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God, or everlasting life, yet that in our resurrection bodies, our risen flesh, we shall "inherit all things;"

And if the record be, that, if we suffer with Christ, we shall also reign with him;

And if the record be, when Christ shall come with the clouds of heaven, that there shall be given unto him dominion, that all people, nations, and languages shall serve him; and that the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven—that is, upon the whole earth—shall be given to the people of the saints of the most high places; and that they shall take the kingdom forever, even for ever and ever;

Then, if all these things be so, we claim that the Davidic covenant, as it gradually unfolds and even more clearly reveals itself to us in the sacred pages, places Christ, in that better dispensation which is to come, AS THE FRUIT OF THE LOINS OF DAVID, ACCORDING TO THE FLESH, upon the throne of His father David, between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; and that it places the saints of the most high places, of all the ages, at his side, not as subjects of his personal kingdom and reign upon the earth, for the saints are nowhere spoken of as subjects of his kingdom on the earth, but as members of it, members in the first and highest degree, the members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones, his queen-consort, his bride, the Lamb's wife, He with garments that smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia out of the ivory palaces, she with clothing of wrought gold, and raiment of needlework, all glorious within, in meekness inheriting the earth, and sharing the equal honors and equal joys, the equal glory and equal dominion of his throne—whatever new elements and conditions of life may enter into our resurrection bodies, our risen flesh in our reign upon the earth, to purify and exalt, to transfigure and glorify it.

"It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is;

And every man that this hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure."

"Wherefore, 'Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God.'"—Joseph A. Lord, A. M., in Our Rest.

OUR CHILDREN.

Grandmother's Sermon.

The supper is over, the hearth is swept,
And the wood fire's ruglow
The children cluster to hear a tale
Of that time so long ago.

When grandmamma's hair was golden brown,
And the warm blood came and went
Over the face that could scarce have been sweeter then
Than now in its rich content.

The face is wrinkled and careworn now,
And the golden hair is gray;
But the light that shone in the young girl's eyes
Never has gone away.

And her needles catch the fire's light
And in and out they go,
With the clicking music that grandma loves,
Shaping the stocking toe.

And the waiting children love it, too,
For they know the stocking song
Brings many a tale to grandma's mind
Which they shall hear ere long.

But it brings no story of olden time
To grandma's heart to-night;
Only a refrain, quaint and short,
Is sung by the needles bright

"Life is stocking," grandma said,
"And yours is just begun;
But I am knitting the toe of mine,
And my work is almost done.

With merry hearts we begin to knit,
And the ribbing is almost play:
Some are gay colored, and some are white,
And some are ashen gray.

But need are made of many a hue,
With many a stitch set wrong,
And many a row to be sadly ripped
Ere the whole is fair and strong

There are long, plain spaces without a break,
That in youth are hard to bear
And many a weary tear is dropped
As we fashion the heel with care.

But the saddest, happiest time is that
We count, and yet would claim,
When our heavenly Father breaks the thread
And says that work is done."

The children come to say good-night,
With tears in their bright young eyes,
While in grandma's lap, with broken thread,
The finished stocking lies.

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea.—No. 38.

THE SOJOURN AT SINAI.

There is a brief preface to our lesson. It is worded thus—"I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage."

Have you ever read "Uncle Tom's Cabin?" or any other books picturing the life of a slave? If you have, you can understand what a great thing it was to save a whole nation from cruel task-masters, like Legree, or, like Mehemet Ali of whom I have told you before. The mother of the prophet Samuel said, "He raiseth up the poor out of the dust and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes and to make them inherit the throne of glory, for the pillars of the earth are the Lord's and he hath set the world upon them." 1 Sam. ii. 8. That is just what he did for our ancestors,—the Israelites—he took them from the dust, that from them might come the Christ, and they with him, be the princes of the Saviors of the world. It is a love that we can never fathom; it is a love that we can never exalt too high. You cannot help loving such a good being as this, can you, dear children? Little did the proud Pharaohs think that this despised nation, would in the far off future, be the head nation of the world, possessing all its strongholds: or, that they would ever be in a position to break the bands of other oppressed and persecuted nations, as they have and will.

You can see if you read, what the English-speaking people are doing. Get your maps of India,—in the northwestern angle of the Indian Empire lies the state of Kashmir. The people are Mussulmans. For years they have been trampled on by the Hindus, their villages were in ruins, the canals that watered their lands were broken, the poor farmers driven off. A settlement officer was sent to Kashmir by the English government. His name was Lawrence. In six years he had won the confidence of the people, had trained the natives to help him, and had turned the oppressing Hindu officers into friends. The peasants now own their farms, the towns are built up, the taxes are small, the cruel oppression is at an end. And under God it will be the voice of the English-speaking people that will save the poor Armenian from the Turk.

It is Israel's destiny "to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the bands of the yoke and to let the oppressed go free," and that they "break every yoke." R. V. Isa. lviii. 6, 7. I only stop to tell you this, so that by contrasting the state of Israel in Egypt, with that of the people of England and of our own dear country, you can better understand what the love of God has done.

How much that little prefers means! If the Lord were the God of Israel, they were his children, and were called upon, as we are after our baptism,—"to present their bodies a living sacrifice to God." A living sacrifice is a sacrifice of the whole life. They must carry their whole bodies to God's altar and lay them upon it. You cannot understand this? Then you can never become Christians. It means that we must be, not only willing, but glad to do the things that God has told us to do. We must give up or sacrifice what we would like to do, that we may mind God. Wicked people may strike us, and we may want to strike back; they may hate us and do us wrong, and we may want to hate them and to take revenge on them, but we are forbidden to do any of these things,—we must let bad people keep on striking, as they used to strike the dear Savior, the apostles and martyrs, but we must not strike them; we must love them who hate us, and do good to them who break down our fences and take our property from us. To meekly bear the wrong and be kind and helpful to the wrong doer, is the only way to show what the love of God is like. When the heart is brought to feel pity and grief for poor sinners, who are taking the road to death, and we use our voices, our hands, our feet, our money, to bring them to God,—no matter how they have treated us—it is doing what God requires us to, it is making a living sacrifice to him, of a loving, obedient heart—a holy, blameless life. Do this, and you will be blessed in time and in eternity. The people have come near and are standing by the boundary line, under the mountain, while it "burns with fire unto the midst of heaven, with darkness, clouds and thick darkness." They have met with God. There has never been such a meeting before. He speaks to them from this awful pulpit, that they may never forget what they have seen, nor the words that they have heard, but may learn to fear him all the days that that they shall live upon the earth, and may teach their children and their children's children. No other nation has God so near, that they may call upon him for all things, nor has any other people such a righteous law, as he is about to give them. He wants them "to keep his words and do them," that they may be a wise and understanding people in the sight of other nations that shall hear of his statutes, for "righteousness exalts a nation but sin is a reproach to any people." You must read the 4th chapter of Deuteronomy.

But here are the commandments, have you learned them all? Part of them teach our duty to God, and part our duty to man. There are ten in all. The first is "Thou shalt have no other Gods before me."

Abraham was called out from his own people, because they worshiped idols. He was the friend and lover of God from his early childhood. That is why God chose him to be the father of a race, who were to show forth the Creator's praises upon earth, and who were to worship and obey him only.

Idol-worship seems to have begun with Nimrod, the great hunter. His name means, "rebel." He was a rebel against God. He went over to the side of Satan, and made himself the great high-priest of a false religion. He taught people that he was a god and could not die, and that they must worship him, as they worshiped and obeyed the unseen gods. After his death he was still worshiped. He is thought to have been the great Baal, or sun-god of Babylon. The worship that he taught spread over all the countries of the East. It went to Canaan, and Egypt, and Pergamos and Rome. People who worship idols are not good people. They commit every abominable sin and imagine that their priests can forgive them, if they but confess to him what they have done. They can lie and steal, and commit murder, and do no wrong. They never feel sorry, they never care to give up their sins. They expect to be saved by minding their gods. Isn't it dreadful?

The great Creator has given us a religion very different from this. He has revealed himself to us as a pure and holy God, and he wants us to be like him. He loves holiness, and this love "is the most glorious of the divine attributes." He has given us commandments that will make us holy beings. He has taught us that "it is the tendency of every act to become a character, the law of habit as it is called." By acting as he tells us to act, we grow strong to keep on in the way of right. "The righteous shall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands shall wax stronger and stronger." "Evil men and seducers wax worse and worse." We form the holy characters that God loves, by looking at him as a holy Being, and by repenting acts of obedience, until what was "hard at first becomes an easy, pleasant, and permanent thing."

God shows us how to like him, by telling us how to become so. He shows us what sin is, and makes us understand that it will destroy us:—that, the wages of sin is death, and not life. We love people who are like God. We want all our friends to be such people. They are kind, they speak kind words, they do kind acts, they make us happy. We hear and read of wicked gamblers and drunkards, and thieves and murderers, we do not want our friends to be like these. So what we want our friends to be we must be.

To have no other God before the God of the Bible, is to take no other course, than that which he has commanded you to take. If you mind your own evil, or self, you sin, and Satan is your God. You must know all this to understand what it means when God says, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." To obey God is a part of his worship, we cannot "worship him in spirit and in truth" unless we do obey him.

AUNTIE WINCE.

A person may harden himself against any poison by using it habitually, until he can take a large amount of it; but it harms the constitution, deteriorates the health, and finally kills the man. The less we have to do with any of these stimulants, the better for us. —The Safeguard.

The Education of Moses.

We are told in the Bible "that Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians." In common parlance, he had received a university education, and, thanks to the unwearied labors of modern explorers, we are able to get a tolerably good idea of the schools at which he obtained it.

Among the splendid architectural remains at Thebes are those of the temple of Kourneh, or, as it was called, "The house of Seti," where, in all probability, Moses was sent to be educated. In this building and in others surrounding and connected with it, forming a group of colleges, the youth of Upper Egypt were trained in literature, art, and science. Within the walls of this institution, founded by the great-grandfather of "Pharaoh's daughter," and under the especial patronage of her grandfather and father, the latter having been educated there, the Hebrew boy whom she had adopted, there is little doubt, attained the intellectual development requisite to the great work for which he was chosen of God.

It is interesting to note the studies which might be pursued at this ancient seat of learning. There were schools of theology, laws, and medicine; of architecture, engineering, astronomy, and music. After a pupil had laid a solid foundation in the elementary studies, including probably some knowledge of mathematics and the art of literary composition, he was required to prove it by passing an examination, and if successful in this he was admitted to a higher department, where he had a choice of instructors in any special course he might select. A graduate of this university was a man of no mean attainment, though compared with our standards he would have fallen short in some respects, but when we consider that in no other country of the world at that time could such an education have been obtained, we understand how great were the advantages which Moses enjoyed. Under the instruction afforded here, and with free access to the valuable libraries of which there were a number in Egypt, the one at Thebes containing some twenty thousand volumes, he must have gained an intimate acquaintance with the best literature which that ancient civilization could produce. Here were history, poetry, and so much of science as was then known. Thus his mind was disciplined by his severer studies, and his taste formed by the lighter ones, as well as by familiarity with the specimens of art surrounding him on every hand.

In another direction his position was an advantage. Brought up at the court of Rameses II., and having always before him the example of that great warrior and able monarch, he doubtless gained knowledge which was of use to him when called to be leader of his people.

His education having progressed so far, and there being nothing more that man could teach, it was necessary that he should complete it under God's own tuition; hence the forty years in Midian.—Christian Advocate.

A Single Sin.

A single sin lost Eden, a single sin may lose a soul. "Achan's sin, the theft of two hundred and fifty shekels of silver and a Babylonish garment, brought disaster to the camp of Israel, and the people stoned the spoilsman. 'Sin when it is finished, bringeth forth death.' One Achan can demoralize a host. One tale-bearer can rend a church, distract a community, and, like a maddened scorpion, sting itself to death with its own poisonous fangs. The slanderer is like the eagle that filched flesh from the altar, but carried with it a live coal that consumed its nest and cremated its fledgelings. The wages of sin are always retributive. If you would not be overgrown with thistles scatter no noxious seeds." Fly to Christ who can forgive the sins that are past, and flee from all sin in the days to come, as you would flee from pestilence and death and destruction.

"The closer we are to the world's need, the farther are we from its contagion."

...PPEARANCE.

Lost and Found.

A roof so tight, and a fire so bright,
In the time of the rain and frost;
And a nice soft bed for his weary head—
Ah! these are what he had lost!

Neighbors and friends, to make him amends
When his sky with clouds was crossed,
And the honor and trust of the good and the just—
Ah! these are what he had lost!

A wife whose love chose rubies above,
When his heart was torn and bruised;
And children whose ways evoked his praise—
Ah! these are what he has lost!

A purse without gold, a heart that is cold
And a lot that has like wormwood;
The signs of disgrace on his own once fair face
Ah! these are what he has found!

A mind that is wrecked by its own neglect,
And a will evil habit has bound!
And a tongue free to speak what it ought not to speak
And a conscience that is weak
Ah! these are what he has found!

Some ragged clothes, and a great deal more,
And the right to be called a cad,
A big brown jug, and a prettier mug
Ah! these are all he has got!

The Saloon Curse.

The very first glimpse a stranger gets of a Western or an Eastern city as he alights from the train and emerges from the depot is a long line of saloons, stretching block after block. The first odor he inhales is the fetid breath that issues from the gaping maw of this destroying monster, the saloon. Young and old, rich and poor, are drawn into this voracious throat, and night and day the open mouth gapes for more victims. Here is the leak that tells where the money of American laborers goes, the countless millions which are spent by the working men of our land for drink.

If the money spent by wage earners for liquor were kept for home building, enough would be saved in a few years to put a roof over the heads of every working man's family between Maine and California. The saloon is the cause of more strikes than are capitalists. The saloon keeper is a worse tyrant over laborers in this land than any other man can ever be. All the combines that can be formed cannot rob the wage earner as heartlessly and systematically as the rumseller does. We want a strike against the great American dictator—the saloon. Such a strike would result in unparalleled prosperity to the industries and the working classes of the land—if it were wide-spread and continuous.

The wisest, keenest, most able statesmen of today have recognized the dominance of the saloon in American politics as a fact that makes the saloon an enemy not only of the home, but of the nation. In New York city, 700 out of 1000 primaries and nominating conventions are held in saloons, or next door to a saloon. When one reflects that the vote of New York has decided a national election and that it is recognized as the pivotal point in national contests, he may well stop to ask, what will become of a nation that allows the worst elements of society—the thief, the gambler, the anarchist with the red flag, the rumseller, to dictate the elections, to dominate its politics, to select its rulers from their throne in the saloon? In New York there are, all told, not more than 1000 public and private schools, orphanages, asylums and churches; but there are 10,000 saloons. There, and everywhere, the saloon is the crying evil of the day, the standing menace to our civilization, the school that educates in vice and crime; and because of its power in the administration of every city, our municipal politics, almost everywhere, has become a stench in the nostrils of civilization.—Central Christian Advocate.

Abusing God's Creatures.

God has given men dominion over all the beasts of the field, but he does not intend that they should be tyrants nor more brutal than the beasts that they rule. He desires that they shall rule kindly and nobly, as his representatives in the earth.

We may reasonably suppose that man is the highest being of whom beasts have any knowledge, and beasts when kindly treated look up to their masters with a reverence that is akin to worship. Indeed there are many of the animals who are much more loyal to their masters than their masters are to the loving God who made them. And yet how often are their masters cruel to their creatures and careless of their needs.

Many a faithful horse stands shivering in the cold, while his heartless owner is drinking himself drunk in the dram shop. Many a horse is driven until heated and exhausted, and then left to bear the chill of the evening air while its owner settles himself comfortably before the fire. Many a horse has taken its death-cold, or has become lame and practically worthless by the neglect of a cruel or thoughtless owner.

Beasts learn the ways of their masters whether good or evil. A sensible woman who desired to get a kitten was anxious to secure one which had been brought up in a Christian family. Ill-natured mothers teach boys to be ugly and contrary, and when such boys are really converted to God, their cats and dogs and horses and cows are likely to fit; if not as soon as any one.

It is a beautiful sight to see a noble, kindly, fatherly man, surrounded by beasts, and birds, and even fishes, all of which know his voice, respond to his invitations, and obey his commands. So long as man obeyed God all the beasts were subject to man, but when man rebelled against his Maker, then all authority was gone, and anarchy and confusion followed. When men return to God they can learn how to control his creatures, but Christian people behave as they ought to in the presence of the creatures whom God has given them to rule, and if they are thus "faithful over a few things," in the world to come they may be made "rulers over many things."—The Safeguard.

OHIO EXCURSION.

On Wednesday, October 16, 1895, the Vandalia Line will run its annual excursion from Lakeville, Ind. to Lima, Forest, Upper Sandusky, Bucyrus, Crestline, Mansfield, Wooster, Orrville, Massillon, Canton, Alliance, Niles, Warren, Youngstown, Akron, Millersburg and Mt. Vernon, Ohio. Tickets good returning thirty days. Special train will leave Lakeville, Ind., on the above date at 9:30 p. m. running through via Plymouth and the Pennsylvania Line. The rate from Lakeville will be $6.00 for the round trip to any of the above points except Youngstown. Rate to Youngstown and return $9.00. For full information regarding time of trains, etc., address Mrs. M. C. Rensberger, Agent, Lakeville, Ind., or C. M. Wheeler, Traveling Passenger Agent, Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 16.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

Excursion Rates, Atlanta Exposition.

Round trip tickets to Atlanta, Ga., account the Exposition are now on sale via Pennsylvania Lines at reduced rates. Persons contemplating a trip to the South during the coming fall and winter will find it profitable to apply to Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines for details. The person to see at Plymouth, Ind., is Ticket Agent J. E. Hanes.

Reduced rates to Chicago are offered by the Nickel Plate Road on the certificate plan, account National Paint, Oil, & Varnish Association Convention Oct. 8th to 12th. Ask agents for particulars.

Please write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill; some brother, but put lovesalve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into The Restitution for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to The Restitution office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 23, 1895. NO. 40.

Poetry.

Two Ways.

My husband, once upon a time,
Heard a preacher in a town;
Who told the people he would tell
Them all, what must be done.

He said: "You pray, and pray, and pray,
Till in your heart you feel,
That God has pardoned all your sin:
From sin you'll, then be clean."

But, now, if he had known the truth,
As taught by Holy Spirit,
He would have told them the Good News,
And how they should obey it:

That they the Gospel must believe;
And then repent of sin.
And be baptized in Jesus' name.
If they'd forgiveness win.

The Church vs. the Lodge.

A young man enters the city with health, strength, good morals and willing to work; he has courage and ambition, or, without money, friends and employment he would not venture. Of such is the hope of our beloved Fatherland.

From early training and with the tears of his mother and her prayers fresh in his memory or through sheer loneliness, he enters a church and departs unnoticed or after receiving the stereotyped handshake and notices. That is all. He has no money, influence or social status; a forlorn and friendless waif, utterly alone in the dismal solitude of a great city,—Mother, it may be your own lost Johnnie. Green as he may be, instinct tells him no one there has any interest in him or his future welfare. No effort is made to assist him, there is an utter lack of sympathy that chills all his energies and causes him to despair; he might die uncared for and unnoticed; that church might never hear of him again, until the coroner appeared and he rests at last in his pauper grave, and the out-of-office paper, with an axe to grind, gives him a brief notice with comments and is promptly abused by its rival as a "calamity howler," a "mischievous mugwump" and "calumniator of our best-citizens" and then the great car of Juggernaut rolls grimly on.

Poor mother! poor Johnnie!!!

The young man soon discovers that there is a great gulf fixed between the Christian on parade and the Christian in office hours. Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde, and the saloon keeper with an eye to future business is more likely to assist him in finding work than Dr. Jekyl.

He quickly hears that the easiest mode to get what he needs is though the lodge. It welcomes him with open arms, nay more (through its agents) it seeks him while yet afar off, and runs and falls upon his neck and cherishes him.

It introduces him to a wide circle of acquaintances, workers who are able and willing to assist him; at each meeting it enquires if any brother is sick, out of work or needs help, if so it supplies what is needed of, if he dies, buries him decently and passes resolutions of respect and sympathy and furnishes, if required, help to the widow and orphan.

The church, with its policy of masterly inactivity, does nothing, but hopes he is saved, and passes by on the other side, on its way to a cinch party, when he is down and helpless.

The result he cleaves to the lodge and nourishes a feeling of bitterness against the church, that time intensifies. As he thrives, has a family, and acquires means and influence, the lodge receives its reward. His children hear of father's early struggles and how he loves the church for its selfish indifference; and as the old cock crows the young ones learn.

The influence of the lodge is anti-Christian, for few of their numbers affiliate with the church; and these few like Apah, kiss but don't cleave to it. The young man surrounded by averse influences and previously embittered by past experience, loses his faith, which is often succeeded by dissatisfaction with society in general, religious, social and political, and quite possibly, (where the tendency is downward) this ripens into localistic or anarchistic views.

The good fellowship of the lodge, and the companionships there formed, have often a drift towards saloon and often worse places.

The time to win to our side and gain the respect of the young man is at the out-set of his career when he needs help and friends, and bread then cast on the waters will be found after not many days, and we receive a thousand-fold in this age and in the world to come life everlasting.

Such young men (often through our apathy or neglect doomed to destruction) are the very class needed to build and sustain our churches, and their offspring should throng our Sunday School. As it is the very infant we train therein and look to for future support, turn and leave us, under similar conditions, when they enter the world. Surely our sins will find us out.

The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light—they at least will risk a sprat to catch a whale. We, on the contrary forsake the simplest rules of common sense, setting aside all consideration of the Christian aspect of the question. Our motto is "A dollar in hand is worth a thousand in the near future," and "prove nothing, hold fast what you have got."

The result is, saving a few earnest souls, our churches consist of women, elderly men, with a sprinkling of their employees, or young men who join the church as an entry to good society. The millions who will fight our nation's battles and who in the future will sway the policy of this country are conspicuously absent, and are opposed to Christianity, or simply totally indifferent.

Men undoubtedly compare the church unfavorably with the lodge, and justly so form their standpoint. Some confound Churchianity with Christianity, but all condemn the system that teaches one thing and does another. The system that believes it is more blessed to receive than to give, that fouls its own nest, and lowers its own dignity and desecrates the House of God by making it a den of thieves to induce the public to part with its money, and strives to build a church of God on dollars wheedled from the pockets of those they censure as foes of Christ and destined to eternal damnation. Oh! the shame of it. Tis true, tis pity, pity tis, tis true.

One of two things are foreshadowed, either the churches must stiffen their rules, weed the flock, and devise means as liberal and wise as the lodges to care for the bodies as well as the souls of the young men or their spiritual members will leave. God will desert them and they will drift on the rocks. Our Christian young women must for the most part marry worldly young men and we lose them and their children both, in most cases.

The membership will in the future consist of the old, trembling for misspent lives, and seeking under a false Christianity to evade the penalty, or of those who join the church as a respectable club that imposes few restraints, and preaches a doctrine that goes on tip-toe over the tender spots and cries: Peace, peace, when there is no peace, saith the Lord, for the wicked.

PSALM. 106.
107 COM. VER.

1. Alleluia. Confess unto the Lord, that he is useful-good, that his mercy is forever.

2. May those who have been redeemed by the Lord have said it, those who have been redeemed out of the hand of an enemy,

3. And gathered together out of the countries, from the East and West and North and South (lit. a sea).

4. They have gone astray in the wilderness, in a land without water; a way to a city of habitation they had not found;

5. Hungering and thirsting their soul in them had left off;

6. And they cried unto the Lord in their tribulation, and he delivered them out of their necessities,

7. And guided them into an upright way that they might go their way to a city of habitation.

8. May they have confessed unto the Lord his mercies and his wonders unto the sons of men;

9. That he full-fed an empty and filled with good things a hungry soul;

10. Those who were sitting in darkness and a shadow of death forsooth, those bound in poverty and iron.

11. How that they embittered the oracles of God and provoked the counsel of the Most High;

12. And how their heart became humbled in toil and how they became weak and there was no responsive-helper.

13. And how they cried unto the Lord and he saved them out of their necessities,

14. And led them out of darkness and a shadow of death and rent asunder their bonds.

15. May they have confessed unto the Lord his mercies and his wonders unto the sons of men.

16. How he shattered copper gates and broke iron bars:

17. How he intervened to deliver them from the way of their transgression; For they had been humbled because of their transgressions.

18. How their soul abominated all food and they drew nigh unto the gates of death,

19. And they cried unto the Lord their tribulation and he saved them out of their necessities;

20. How he sent his Word and healed them and delivered them out of their acts of corruption.

21. May they have confessed unto the Lord his mercies and his wonders unto the sons of men;

22. And may they have sacrificed unto him a sacrifice of praise and declared his doings with gladness.

23. Those who go down to the sea in ships, who engage in employment on many waters.

24. They have seen the doings of the Lord and his wonders in the deep.

25. How he spake and the breath of a cyclone stood, and the waves thereof were lifted up;

26. They go up unto the heavens and they go down unto the abysses; Their soul succumbed in trouble;

27. They were disturbed, they were shaken like a drunken person; and all their wisdom was overwhelmed;

28. And they cried unto the Lord in their tribulation, and he led them out of their straits.

29. And he directed the cyclone and it stood for a zephyr: and the waves thereof became silent; and they were rejoiced because they were in quietude: and he guided them unto a harbor of their desire.

31. May they have confessed unto the Lord his mercies and his wonders unto the sons of men,

32. May they have exalted him a church of royal-people, and on a judicial-seat of the elders may they have praised him.

33. He hath made rivers a desert and water-courses thirst;

34. A fruitful land a salt-place by reason of the evil-doing of the dwellers therein;

35. He hath made deserts harbors of waters and a land without water water-courses.

36. And he hath caused the hungry to dwell there, and hath gathered together cities of habitation;

37. And they have sowed fields and planted vineyards and produced the fruit of a generic-product.

38. And he hath blessed them and they have become exceedingly multiplied and he hath made their domestic-animals not a few.

39. And they became diminished and afflicted with the tribulation of calamities and woe;

40. Contempt was poured out upon their rulers and it led them astray in a trackless-place and in a way that was no way.

41. And he responded to help the needy one out of poverty, and he disposed families like sheep as it were.

42. Upright ones will see and will have rejoiced, and all transgression will stop its mouth.

43. Who is wise and will watch to guard these things and understand the mercies of the Lord?

PSALM 107 (108 COM. VER.)

1. David's ode for a psalm.

2. My heart is ready, O God, my heart is ready; I shall sing and exalt the strain in my glory.

3. Awake, O psaltry and cithara: I shall have been awakened in the dawning.

4. I shall confess unto thee in laities, O Lord, I shall exalt the strain unto thee in nations:

5. Because great above the heavens is thy mercy and unto the clouds thy truth.

6. Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens and over all the earth thy glory.

7. O that thy beloved ones may have been delivered: Save with thy right-hand and hearken unto me.

8. God hath said in his saint: I shall have been exalted, and I shall apportion Sikima and the valley of the tents I shall apportion by measurement:

9. Mine is Galaad and mine is Manasse and Ephaim an intervening-help for my Head; Joudas is my King;

10. Moab is a lover of my hope; over Idoumaia I shall cast my sandal: other tribes have become subject to me.

11. Who will lead me unto a city of circumference; or who will guide me as far as Idoumaia?

12. Will not thou, the God who hath saved us? And will not God come out in our hosts?

13. Give unto us responsive-help from tribulation: And vain is man's salvation.

14. In God shall we make a host; (dunamis, the word here) and he will make nought of our enemies.

PSALM 108 (109 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; David's psalm. O God do not silently disregard my praise;

2. Because an obdurate-sinner's mouth and a deceitful man's mouth hath been opened against me: They have talked against me with a deceitful tongue:

3. And with words of hatred have they encompassed me, and they have warred against me without cause.

4. In return for my loving them have they been slandering me, and I have been offering votive-prayer;

5. And they have devised evil against me in return for good, and hatred in return for my love.

6. Mayest thou have established an obdurate-sinner over him and may a false-accuser (a diabolos, "dovil" Com. Ver.) have stood at his right.

7. When he is being judged may he have gone out condemned (by civil-process) and may his votive-prayer have become sin.

8. May his days have become few, and may another have taken his bishopric: (his overseership).

9. May his sons have become orphans and his wife a widow:

10. May his sons have been moved and transported as captives, and may they have solicited; may they have been cast out of their own house-sites.

11. May a creditor have sought out everything that belongs to him and may aliens have plundered the results of his painful toil:

12. May there be no intervening-helper for him, nor may there come to be any one to pity his orphans,

13. May his offspring come to be in utter-destruction, in one generation may his name have been wiped out:

14. May the sin of his fathers have been remembered in the sight of the Lord, and the sin of his mother not have been wiped out;

15. May they have come to be constantly before the Lord; and may the remembrance of them have been utterly-destroyed from out the earth.

16. Because he did not remember to do mercy, and persecuted a needy man and a beggar and one who so felt compunction in his heart as to want to die.

17. And he loved a curse and it will come to him: and he did not desire a blessing, and it will have been removed far from him;

18. And he put on a curse like an outer-garment as it were, and it will enter into his vitals like water as it were; and like olive-oil in his bones as it were will it be.

19. May it have become like an outer-garment for him, which one throws about himself; and like a girdle as it were with which one girdeth himself constantly.

20. This is the doing from the Lord for those who are culminating me and who are talking wicked things against my soul,

21. And do thou O Lord, O Lord, do with me for thy name's sake, because useful-good is thy mercy: Mayest thou have delivered me,

22. Because a beggar and a needy one am I, and my heart hath been disturbed within me;

23. Like a shadow as it were when it inclineth away have I in turn been taken away; I have been shaken out like a flight of locusts (he means by the wind).

24. My knees have become weak with fasting, and my flesh hath been alienated for the sake of olive-oil.

25. And I have become a reproach to them; They have wagged their heads.

26. Become my responsive-helper, O Lord my God, and save me according to thy mercy:

27. And may they have comprehended that it is thy hand, and that thou, O Lord, hast done it. (lit. caused it).

28. They will curse, and then wilt bless; May those who have arisen against me have been put to shame; but thy bond-servants have been made to rejoice.

29. May those who are calumniating me have clothed themselves with confusion for an under-garment and with their shame as with a double-cloak for an outer-garment.

30. I shall confess unto the Lord exceedingly with my mouth, and in the midst of many shall I praise him.

31. Because he hath stood by at the right-hand of a needy one, to save (me) from those who persecute my soul.

COMMENT.

The 106th psalm is an alleluia and a triumphant confession of deliverance from tribulation, poverty and death even, on the part of God's laity through their representative head, the prophet here, who is speaking in the spirit of Christ. It is therefore Messianic in its fullest significance, though appropriate as a commemoration of the trials of God's laity in the wilderness of sin. But the confession covers experiences upon the sea as well as upon the land and the exhortation is to all who have had similar trials and tribulations, as brought out in the closing 43rd verse beginning "who is wise," etc. The psalm is a double-major when considered harmonically.

The 107th psalm we would expect to teach completion in some way (not perfection) if true to its number; and we find this thought straightway in the 2nd verse and made emphatic by repetition, "My heart is ready, O Lord, my heart is ready," and moreover this is the first complete-work done always in the regenerate state. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Observe the correlative confession here in the 4th verse, "I shall confess," etc. The I here of course in its Messianic import and last analysis is "our Head," the Christ and the psalmist is speaking in his spirit throughout the psalm or "ode" as it is here denominated. And why "an ode?" Because it is to be appropriate some day in the mouth of all God's laity. See how this is brought out in the last half of the psalm beginning with the 7th verse. Observe also that the "ode" closes with a 14th verse true to its numerical import.

The 108th psalm we find to be an emphatic amplification as we would naturally expect of the 8th and in a very marked degree Messianic. In fact portions of it have been interpreted for us in the Gospels. So we need have no doubt about the fact. If it depicts David's experience of tribulation and suffering under persecution, much more does it depict that of the "Son of David." Applied to Joudas portions of this psalm have been in their retributive denunciations, we must go still further and bring under the same denunciations all those who "crucify the Lord afresh" in their betrayal of him under the covenant.

Observe what is said of the beggar and the needy one "all along through this psalm, because it makes Christ the typical beggar and needy one, and teaches us just what we all have to become to be acceptable unto God, namely "beggars for the spirit" because we need it and feel our need to this extent. The 20th and 30th verses are really Christ's prayer for his enemies, though accounted worthy of the curse they have loved and clothed themselves with; and expresses the mercy of "grace" versus the curse of the "law." Observe how the statement in 27th verse harmonizes with Paul's and Peter's interpretation of God's agency in this matter.

The Buried City.

On the eastern bank of the river Tigris, nearly opposite the town of Mosul, there once stood a great and important city, the capital of Assyria, one of the oldest and grandest empires of antiquity. This "exceeding great city of three days journey," was probably founded by Nimrod (Gen. x. 11), and contained a vast population. Diodorus Siculus asserts(ii, 3,) that it was sixty miles in circumference, surrouded by walls one hundred feet high, and broad enough for three chariots to drive abreast them; and was defended by fifteen hundred towers of two hundred feet in height. We cannot verify all these statements, but according to Strabo (xvi. 7-37), Nineveh was larger than Babylon in circuit, and it must have been a "great city."

But for centuries the very site of this city was unknown. When four hundred years before Christ, Xenophon, leading the retreat of the ten thousand Greeks, encamped his army on the site of ancient Nineveh, no one could tell him that any such city had existed there; though they spoke of a city called Larissa. Indeed skeptics have claimed that there was no such city as the Nineveh described by the Hebrew prophets; and yet the account of both profane and sacred historians is clear, that there was such a city as Nineveh, that it was great, wealthy and powerful; and that it was long ago overthrown and destroyed.

In 1843 M. Botta, the French consul at Mosul, made certain discoveries in the great heaps opposite that city, and about 1845, Austen Henry Layard entered upon a systematic investigation of these ruins. Excavating the great mounds and heaps scattered over a wide territory, he found palaces, tombs, inscriptions, images, idols and statues, buried beneath the soil, yet so preserved that the plans of the buildings could be traced, the foundations determined, the sculptures examined, and in some cases the structures themselves substantially restored upon paper, in the style of the original architecture. There were halls, palaces, columns tesselated pavements, gods of stone, and on every hand were sculptured on the marble slabs used in the construction of these ancient palaces, the memorials of war, strife, hunting, amusements, records of victory, cruelty, fury and destruction. In some instances events were depicted which were described by the Hebrew prophets as occuring in the days of Assyria's glory, such as the seiges of Lachish and Samaria; and the names of kings and people mentioned in the Bible were found among these ancient ruins. Among other things were discovered tablets of clay containing inscriptions in arrow-headed letters, which have since been deciphered, and so the lost literature of past ages has been brought back to our gaze.

The prophecies of Nahum and others concerning Nineveh are fulfilled. The city is desolate, it is "empty, void and waste." The streets where Jonah uttered his warning cry, are buried in the ruins of the fallen city; but a mound is still standing which bears the name Neby Yunas, or the tomb of the prophet Jonas, which is regarded as so sacred that no one has been allowed to explore it.

The Assyrian architecture was exceedingly beautiful, but its inscriptions tell the story of cruelty, brutality, and sin; and the prophet said, "Woe to the bloody city." Beneath that woe Nineveh has gone down to dust, but God's Israel lives, and his people yet rejoice in that word which abideth faithful, even though heaven and earth shall pass away.—Common People.

The word "cannot" in its contracted form is a prominent word. Can't is used by the minister, doctor, lawyer, politician, scientist, teacher, and in fact all classes. Even editors can't. We have can't in every branch of business, in society, in politics and religion. Men and women use it without fully considering. Can't has kept many a man poor, stopped the progress of some good enterprise, and destroyed the usefulness of many a well-begun course in the Christian life. Churches, publishing houses and conferences have been cursed with it.

"Nothing so expands and deepens our nature as true love of any kind. But love to God has a special power of its own for making the heart bigger, deeper for him to come in and inhabit it, and fill it out of his fullness. The entire moral being is ever growing larger through the sanctifying influence of Divine love."

As there are five Wednesdays in this month our next issue will bear date, Nov. 6.

We believe it is true, must be true, that the man who always does his best, can always do better the next time.

PRIDE is said to be the companion of unbelief. Pride makes men obstinate: they will not see; they will not bow to God's sovereignty.

THE practical line of subjects selected by the young people of the church in Cleveland, for discussion at their own meetings indicates that they are alive to the snares set for their feet in these evil days, and are bound to be overcomers.

"THE man who carries a lantern in a dark night can have friends all around him, walking safely by the help of its rays, and he is not defrauded in the least. So he, too, who has the God-given hope of life and eternal glory can help on many others in this dark world not only without loss, but with most precious gain."

THE Bishop of Exeter says: "I believe the literal sense of the Old Testament prophesies has been too much neglected by the churches, and is far too much neglected at the present day; and that under the mistaken system of spiritualizing and accommodating Bible language, Christians have too often completely missed its meaning. Luke xxiv. 25, 26.

"IF you wished to look at a portrait of Raphael's, what would you think to see only the forehead uncovered, and then only the eyes, and son on, until all the features had been separately seen? Could you gain a true idea of the picture as a whole? Yet this is the way men look at the picture of Christ in the gospels, reading a few verses here and there, and never considering the life in its entirety and harmony."

THERE is a heap of truth in the remark that men will confess sins in general, but those sins which bow him down with shame, and which he would not have his neighbor know for his right hand, are passed over in his prayers. Men are willing to be thought sinful in disposition, while in acts they praise themselves. They confess their sinfulness and defend their conduct; make out to be wrong in general but right in particular!

THE word God occurs 32 times in the first chapter of Genesis. The original word is Elohim, and should have been translated Gods, or Mighty Ones. Trinitarians sometimes bring this word forward as proof of their doctrine, whereas, "Elohim" would imply more than three persons. If they would consider other portions of the inspired Scriptures, it would be made plain, that these powerful servants of the Lord Jehovah are very numerous "Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire, Ps. 104:4-9. Note also that this psalm will bear reference to the creation Gods. Where is there a passage of Holy Writ which distinctly and positively teaches the absurd dogma of One God, yet three equal persons?" W. H. H. in Glad Tidings.

READER, if you desire to become recipients of God's blessing, the first and indespensable requisite is the knowledge of the Gospel of the Kingdom. The Divine Gift is limited to this class. "Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound; they shall walk O Lord, in the light of thy countenance. In thy name shall they rejoice all the day; and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted. Ps. lxxxix 15. Knowledge must produce intelligent belief, for without this it is impossible to please God.

THE Church in Plymouth have been having an unusually interesting meeting the past week. Brother and Sister Woodward have been with us to help, and the members of the Church have set to work with a will and determination which it has already been fruitful. The young people seem especially in earnest, and five of these have made a start for the kingdom. May God keep them by his own loving care, and may they have an abundant entrance into the everlasting home prepared for the overcomers. The meeting will continue this week.

THE agents of the society for the prevention of cruelty to children, have recently unearthed a school where the art of stealing was taught in New York City. Seven arrests have been made, six of the prisoners being children of tender years. Agents arrested three children in a dry goods store, where they were reaping a rich harvest under the very eyes of the detectives. Kate Fitzgerald and another woman named Madge Kennedy, the teachers in this infamous institution in the neighborhood of Fourteenth street and Third Avenue are under arrest.

IN a note by F. G. H. he says of the Spirit of God: "We read of free spirit" in Ps. li. 12, and of Holy Spirit. Holy Spirit is sometimes translated Holy Ghost, which is misleading. There are no such absurdities as Ghosts. The Spirit of God may be described as his aura, which pervades all substances and space; so that he is in touch with everything, and by means of it can act upon anything or everything. See 139th Ps. This is the basis of all life and is declared as being free. By it all things exist. But when this free Spirit is directly used by God to accomplish his will or to make it known, it is called Holy Spirit."

A PARAGRAPH from Bro. C. Smith, asks, "What is the zeal for the truth? Is it public speaking and gesticulating on a platform? Is it manifested by a peculiar tone of voice, or by the upturned eye, or looking solemn? Is it in writing about and publishing books, and distributing tracts, or is it the increase of faith through the increase of knowledge of God? The truth does not progress in, or by the excitement of human feelings. Its progress is like that of leaven, working slowly but surely, all unseen to the natural eye. The still small voice of the Eternal sows the seed, and, where the ground is good it grows and bears fruit. It is not by our might and power as the natural mind thinks, but by the Spirit of the living God. The zeal of excitement so pleasing to some brethren, is not the zeal that can patiently endure. The true zeal of God is generated by drinking at the fountain of the water of life which he has so abundantly supplied, and every thirsty soul, who has drunk deep of that fountain will be possessed of unfailing zeal. What is often called zeal is but the ebullition of the natural mind, and readily mingles in worldly schemes."

THE midnight cry has been raised by a great number of people and amongst many different sects. Yes; many who really do not know for what purpose he is coming are crying. "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." No one can study prophetic subjects and note passing events without concluding that the end of the age is near, very near. "It behooves us, then to trim our lamps and provide ourselves with oil, that is, the spirit of Christ, before the Bridegroom comes. Only those possessed of that spirit will be permitted to go in to the marriage feast. It is an appalling thought tha. some even of those who from week to week break bread in commemoration of the body that was broken in our behalf may do it to their condemnation. The conduct of some in almost every community is a trial, a grief, a burden to others. Everywhere there seem to be some who imagine that because they have a correct belief of the gospel, and have been immersed, that they are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. But true religion consists of something more than theory and outward forms and observances. Bitter disappointment awaits all who fail to recognize this fact. To their's may the door will be closed upon them. We earnestly entreat all to examine themselves whether they be in the faith, not in theory only, but in the faith practically.

Foreign Items of Interest.

Late dispatches from Shanghai say that the Admiral Buller, commanding the British fleet, will return to Foo Chou on board the dispatch boat Alacrity, the Viceroy having assumed an attitude of defiance.

A Constantinople dispatch to the Kreuz Zeitung says that the Armenian affair is gradually becoming the starting point of a struggle between Great Britain and Russia for paramount influence in the Bosphorous. It looks as if Said Pasha may be recalled to his old position of Grand Vizier. Russian diplomacy is now trying to secure the removal of Grand Vizier Kiamil Pasha, to which end Russia will even support Turkey against Great Britain. Unless we have been entirely wide of the mark something or other will bring on a mighty conflict between these Great Powers, and we are watching and wondering whether the match will be applied through the Japanese and Chinese complications or through the defiant attitude of England in Armenian affairs.

Singularly enough at this unsettled state of affairs the New York Tribune publishes a letter to the effect that the startling reactionary address of the young Czar last spring, in which he said, "The Russian throne is based upon the principle of autocracy," and in which he announced "the intention of maintaining this principle unimpaired, as a heritage of his ancestors," was drawn up by Dournovo, the Minister of the Interior, and that it was very reluctantly delivered by the Czar, in deference to the entreaties of his mother, a very pronounced reactionist, and at the urgent demand of his ministers, enforced by their threats of resignation. It is now said that he is about to break away from the influence by removing Dournovo from the office of the Interior and has requested Pabidonotzoff Procurator of the Holy Synod of the Orthodox State Church, to confine himself to his duties in connection with the State church, and to abstain from interfering with other religious sects, and with the administration of the government generally. Dournovo is said to be the enemy of constitutional government, and of anything like popular freedom. His successor, Sipgayine was formerly governer general of Courtland, and was distinguished for his gentle and considerate treatment of the people. He is a man of liberal and progressive views, and his appointment is regarded as a pledge of the new Czar's inclinations toward a more liberal policy. Prophetic students will watch this movement closely to note its effect upon the immediate situation of the people beloved for the Father's sake.

A dispatch from Paris says the Gaulois asserts Prince Lobanoff Rostovsky, the Russian minister of foreign affairs has signed another convention between Russia and France, pledging Russia to interfere forcibly against other powers than those composing the Dreibund, in the event of their attacking France. This practically binds Russia to assist France against any attacking power whatever. They are preparing for an emergency.

Later information from Constantinople says the Sultan has finally concluded to swallow the bitter dose prescribed for him by Great Britain, France and Russia. The scheme is almost identical with the proposals of last May. The governors and vice governors of Van, Erzeroum, Livus, Bith's Khurtut and Frebizand are to be Christian or Mussulmen according to the wish of the population, but either the governor or the vice governor is to be a Christian, and the appointments are to be confirmed by the powers. Local officials are to collect the taxes and enough money is to be retained to pay the expenses of the local administration. The judicial system is to be completely changed, torture abolished, prisons under serveillance the police composed of both Christians and Turks, "ave against compulsary conversions to Islamism will be strictly enforced. The high commissioner charged with the execution of this scheme of reform is to be a Christian. It looks as if there was not much more of the sick man to be expounded.

The Christians at Ismid are apprehensive of a Turkish outbreak. The situation is critical, and a Russian warship has just arrived there.

That the Minister Denly and the British Minister have secured the execution of seventeen of the rioting criminals, is the latest news from China.

OUR CHILDREN.

Lambs of the Flock.

Little ones who love the Savior,
Jesus knows your every thought;
Go to him in every trouble,
Who your precious souls has bought:
Tell, oh, tell him every grief,
He can give your heart relief.

And when tempted, if ink of Jesus
Loving, tender, gentle, mild;
Go to him in your temptation,
He was once a little child.
Jesus is your nearest friend,
And he will be to the end.

When some bitter disappointment
Almost breaks your little heart,
And your best friends seem unkindly,
And the wedding tears will start,
Tell the Lord; he'll help you bear
Every sorrow, every care.

Little Lambs, the Saviour calls you:
He the gentle Shepherd is,
Do you know how much he loves you,
And the joy of being his?
Oh! then, seek his will to do
Who has done so much for you.

Learn while yet your faith is simple,
All in Jesus to confide;
Learn on him in joy or trouble,
He your feet will surely guide.
Soon he'll give your heart to leave,
Longs to show you all his love.

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea.—No. 37.

THE SOJOURN AT SINAI.

We come now to the second commandment.

2. "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth. Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them nor serve them, for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me. And showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments."

Do you remember the great Congress of Religions, held at Chicago during the World's Fair? Men talked in that Congress who were makers and worshipers of graven images. And I heard professed Christian people say "it was a good thing,"—that "it would break down our prejudices against other religions, and would show us that even the Buddhist, the Brahmin, the Catholic, have much of truth!" What if they have, dear children? Does that make them worshipers of the true and living God? Does that make it no sin to break the first and second commandments of the Decalogue, and in breaking these, to break all the rest? Is "the light of Asia" like the light of Sinai? I cannot stop to tell you about Vishnu and Siva and Brahm, and the Catholic dolls, crucifixes and pictures, it would take too long; but if I had you hear, I would show you some wood cuts representing them, and would give you a description of some of their temples and churches. If you could get a book telling about "The Vestal Girls in France and Spain," you could read of the idols of the Catholics.

But we must go on. Can you understand why the Lord is a jealous God? Is his jealousy like that of men? No, for they are jealous when our love and esteem for others is perfectly innocent; he is jealous of our love for other gods, because it is sinful in us to love them. He knows if we serve them we shall be led into every imaginable sin; that we will wrong others, be miserable ourselves, and perish at last. He wants us to love him because he knows that it is for our good, and that we can never be saved unless we do.

Paul was "jealous for others with a godly jealousy." He wanted to keep them from sin. They who make graven images and bow down to them and serve them, hate God. Then those great Brahmins and Bhuddists and Catholics who spoke at Chicago hate him. We hate God when we disobey him. The will or mind has not been brought into subjection to his law. I wonder if I can make you understand how God visits the iniquity of the fathers upon the children? It will be a little hard to do, but I will try. God does not punish the children for the father's sins, that is not the way the penalty for iniquity is visited upon them. We must each one answer for our own sins. "The soul that sinneth it shall die * * * the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him." Ezek. xviii. 20. But if the child having the father's example and teaching before him, went and committed the same sins, what then? Would he not be punished with death? If one of your fathers should commit murder, his child would not be hung in his place; but if the child seeing his father do such a deed, went and killed somebody himself, would he not be punished in the same way? God meant that if his people went off into idolatry their children would become idolatrous, wicked and debased, and would perish. And there is also another way whereby wicked, idolatrous people would degrade their children. God made a law which we call the law of heredity, and in making it he surely meant that we should obey it. We are guilty before him if we neglect it, and the consequences of our disobedience will fall upon our posterity. Ishmael and all his race are like the insolent Hagar, Isaac and his descendants, like the God-fearing Abraham.

You get your features, your forms, your dispositions, your intellectual and moral faculties from your fathers and mothers, in accordance with this law. It makes one pretty, another deformed, one talented, another an idiot. It makes one a mechanic, and another an orator; one a missionary, and another a demon. Disobedience to this law caused the iniquity of the fathers to be visited upon the children in even a more terrible form than that brought upon them by teaching and example. We will look at the religion of the heathen, and see what kind of people it makes, and then you can guess what kind of children such people would have. It compels men and women to do deeds of wrong. "Even their sons and their daughters have they burnt in the fire unto their gods." Deut. xii. 30, 31. The dearest thing in the family must be sacrificed to the idol, this was usually the first-born child, but no child was safe if the priest of the pretended god required its life. Thousands of other victims were often offered at the dedication of a single temple. The Druids put their prisoners of war, and often many innocent persons, into a great wicker-work figure of a man and burned them as a sacrifice to their god. The blood-tree of the Northmen was only put away when the gospel of Jesus taught them better. Sins that we dare not name are a part of the religion of idolators.

Those who embrace such a faith cannot remain pure and clean, because their faith is impure and unclean. They have an impure god to look at, unholy laws to obey. Their hearts become hard and cruel, their minds full of superstitious fears. They are sensual, bloody men. Just such dispositions as they have cultivated, they give to their children. Isn't it an awful thing? And more than this—the children inherit weak and diseased bodies from the parents, for a course of sin is sure to fill the body with disease. We cannot be wicked, and be strong and healthful. God promised to keep sickness from his people if they minded him, but not, if they went after other gods. We cannot live wicked lives without imperiling the happiness and well-being of others. The families of Jereboam, of Baasha and of Ahab, were cut off because of idolatry. The fathers sinned, and the children walked in their steps. You, my dear young friends who will sometime make choice of a companion for life, should think seriously of this matter. It is not a light thing to disobey God. You forfeit your own happiness if you do, and imperil the lives and eternal well-being of all your posterity. Do not mate with an unbeliever. Do not choose a Canaanite, "Thou shalt not" is what God says in either case. Marry an unbeliever, and your lives will be filled with regret and your descendants will be your sorrow, be idol-worshippers, and haters of God. God shows mercy to them that love him and keep his commandments.

The Promises.

Are there two sets of promises in the Bible, one For Judah and one for Israel?

I think this rather an important thing to find out, because there are two there may be more, and the promises to Abraham may not be the Gospel after all. "Keeping in mind" what the writer in 20th Feb. paper says, let us search the holy oracles and see if we find the language used there, carries the idea there advanced. How do the writers about the people called the House of Israel generally speak of them? I believe that they generally speak of them as one, or of either by the same names. Cyrus, who only says what he has learned from the Jews, makes proclamation to the people to go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the Lord, God of Israel in Jerusalem. Now Jerusalem is in the tribe of Benjamin, who was one of the children of Israel, and it shows how it was regarded then. I find in Jeremiah, 2nd chapter, the same kind of language made use of. Sometimes the people are called Israel, verse 26th, "As a thief is ashamed when he is found, so is the house of Israel ashamed; they their kings, their princes, their priests and their prophets, verse 28th. But where are thy gods that thou hast made? Let them arise if they can save thee in time of thy trouble for according to the number of thy cities are thy gods, Oh Judah." This is all one sentence from 26th to 34th, and the 31st verse calls them Israel also. In the 4th chapter the same language is used, verses 1 to 15 I might cite passage after passage showing that there is no destruction again. Read the 3rd of Micah.

Micah is of Judah and he speaks concerning Samarie and Jerusalem (1:1). He says the high places of Judah are Jerusalem.

Now the promises of the kingdom are in chapter 4th which we certainly rely upon as the gospel of the kingdom, and the offers of mercy and the promises in Micah all apply equally to Samaria and Judah.

This ought to be enough to satisfy any one who wishes to be satisfied. But let us go to the New Testament.

Jesus although born in Bethlehem, in Judah, lived in Nazareth, in Galilee, and the prophet Isaiah speaks of the Great Light that should shine in the land of Zebulon and Naphtali, which is declared to apply to the Saviors preaching in Galilee. Jesus says himself that he is only sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, but he was certainly sent to Judah and Jerusalem.

To show what a common expression it was at that time to speak of the Jews as all the people of Israel, or the opposite, I will cite Paul's words: "I am a man which am a Jew," "Are they Israelites, so am I," and again he says he is a Hebrew of Hebrews, of the tribe of Benjamin.

I cannot close without saying something about a former article in your paper, headed, "Who are you?"

Several very questionable statements are made in that article. The ten tribes are said to "have escaped in the days of Darius, the Mede, to the north of the Black Sea, and left monuments there and married wives there after the name of the tribe of Dan, and that they settled the north of Europe and Denmark, Saxony and England, and that proves England is Israel. That these kingdoms and countries have always been protestant and never under the Latin Kingdom or its authority.

This is a sweeping assertion which any one will find hard to prove to the satisfaction of people who demand proof of such assertions before believing.

The Latin Kingdom has had dominion over most of these kingdoms before there were any protestants who only made their protest in 1520, more than 2,000 years after Darius the Mede.

The great historians do not mention things that he asserts as facts. It is not proved that Zedekiah's daughter was left in Palestine or went to Egypt with Jeremiah, or that Jeremiah ever went to Ireland.

It is easy to assert, but hard to prove such assertions. LeNormant the distinguished French historian thinks that at the dispersion in the days of Noah that the descendents of Japhet settled most of north Europe, that Ham's desendents settled Canaan, South Asia, Egypt and North Africa. I have not space to notice all this.

I must remark however that the names of those rivers were different from what they are now, in the time of the Roman Empire

He asserts that the Milesian line of kings founded Troy. Now no one can tell the history of Troy, much less who founded it.

I recommend him to study history and not believe in Myth's.

The book of Mormon, written by Solomon Spaulding was founded on a made up history and has led away thousands from ever believing the truth.

Z. SWIST.

The End Approaching.

We surely are nearing the consummation of the age in which we live. Gentile domination is certainly nearing the last and final act of man-rule. I certainly think that the seven-headed beast of Revelation is almost in sight, if not quite, even now the few are whispering about re-nationality. Our United States have almost abandoned the Monroe doctrine, and have become a controlling power in the world—the seventh head it seems to me. The remaining acts in the picture of last times as given in the grand drama of Revelation can soon be enacted in these times of swiftly occurring events. The Jews who hold the money purses of the world can soon organize an independent government and receive him who comes in his own name, who will turn against them in the end. But deliverance comes to them from an unexpected quarter. See Zech. xiv. The ten kings who give their power to the beast can soon be developed. The apostate church and her daughters are even now holding love feasts together, and as to herself she is now seeking and is getting control of the beast. Dear ones, we are nearing a critical time, a time that will try the souls of men and women. Are we ready for the test? See Rev. xiii, 7, etc. The persecution of the dark ages will be re-enacted, but thank God it will be short-lived. In view of these it behooves us to cut loose from the world that is destined to pass away, and to lay hold upon the hope set before us in the Glad Tidings. For beyond this dark picture of sorrow, trouble and death lies the land of peace and rest. The kingdom of God, the saints' sweet home, the imperishable life will be the heritage of the saints. Over there the overcomers shall take the kingdom and possess it forever more. The kingdoms of this world shall become our Lord's and his Christ. What a home this redeemed earth will be when free. For this I wait.

POETRY.

"Not as the World Giveth."

Not as the world gives, givest Thou, indeed.
Blessed Lord of peace! Pleasures that end in sighs—
Cars of dull sorrow—bitter agonies—
A hollow love that fails us in our needs—
Wrong judgments—mockery when our hearts bleed.
These are the presents which the world supplies
Out of its poisonous vines and treasuries
Into our vessellage and slavish heed.
O Lord of love and life, and inner joy,
The gifts are different, sure; a gentle sky
That makes the heart more light-some every day,
A faithfulness no wrongs of ours destroy,
A thousand pleasures, innocent and coy,
Forgiveness when we err, and guidance when we stray.

Precepts for a Holy Life.

DUTIES TOWARD GOD.

1.—PRAYER.

The Injunction.—"Let us come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Heb. iv. 16. "Pray without ceasing." 1 Thess. v. 17. "Continuing instant in prayer." Rom. xii. 12. "Praying always, with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereto with all perseverance." Eph. vi. 18. "Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known to God." Phi. iv. 6.

The promise.—"Ask, and it shall be given you." Matt. vii. 7. "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do." John xiv. 13. "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss." James iv. 3.

2.—THANKSGIVING.

"In everything give thanks." 1 Thess. v. 18. "In the faith abounding with thanksgiving." Col. ii. 7. "Be ye thankful." Col. iii. 15. "Giving thanks unto the Father, who hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." Col. i. 12.

3.—JOYFULNESS.

"Rejoice evermore." 1 Thess. v. 16. "Rejoicing in hope." Rom. xii. 12. "Rejoice in the Lord." Phil. iii. 1. "Singing and making melody in your hearts to the Lord." Eph. v. 19. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." Matt. v. 12.

4.—HEARTINESS.

"And whatsoever ye do, do heartily, as to the Lord, and not to men." Col. iii. 23.

5.—FERVENCY.

"Be fervent in Spirit." Rom. xii. 11. "Quench not the Spirit." Eph. iv. 30.

6.—PERSEVERANCE.

"Hold fast that which is good." 1 Thess. v. 21. "Let us not be weary in well-doing." Gal. vi. 9. "In nothing terried by your adversaries." Phil. i. 28. "Stand fast in the Lord." Phil. iv. 1. "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful who promised.)" Heb. x. 23. "They who trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever." Psa. cxxv. 1.

7.—HOLINESS.

"Be holy, for I am holy." 1 Pet. i. 16. "Abstain from all appearance of evil." 1 Thess. v. 22. "Abhor that which is evil." Rom. xii. 9. "Keep yourselves from idols." 1 John v. 21. Covetousness is idolatry." Col. iii. 5.

8.—RIGHTEOUSNESS.

"Lord, who shall abide in Thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in Thy holy hill? He who walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart. He who backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor. In whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoreth them who fear the Lord. He who sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not. He who putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He who doeth these things shall never be moved." Psa. xv. 1-5. [Commit to memory the Lord's sermon on the Mount which is the embodiment both of his Gospel and Law.]

9.—WISDOM.

"Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly, in all wisdom teaching and admonishing." Col. iii. 16. "Be ye doers of the Word, and not hearers only." James i. 22. "Holding forth the Word of Life." Phil. ii. 16. "Despise not prophesyings." 1 Thess. v. 20. "Beware lest any man spoil you through love of vain wisdom and deceit, after the traditions of men, and not of God." Col. ii. 8. "Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines." Heb. xiii. 9. "Receive with meekness the engrafted Word, which is able to save your souls." James i. 21.

DUTIES TOWARD MEN AND BRETHREN.

The Inducement.—"There are given to us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these ye might be partakers of the Divine Nature. 2 Pet. i. 4.

1.—BE GENEROUS.

The Duty.—Distributing to the necessity of the saints." Rom. xii. 13. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." Gal. vi. 2. Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth." 1 John iii. 17, 18. "Do good and lend, hoping for nothing again." Luke vi. 35. "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth to the Lord; and that which he hath given will he pay him again." Prov. xix. 17. "Deal thy bread to the hungry, and bring the poor that are cast out to thy house, when thou seest the naked, cover him." Isa. lviii. 7. "Let no man seek his own, but each another's weal." 1 Cor. x. 24.

The Reward.—"Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily; and thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward." Isa. lviii. 8.

2.—BE HELPFUL.

The Duty.—"Support the weak, comfort the feeble-minded." 1 Thess. v. 14. "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love." Rom. xii. 10. "Do good to all—especially to them of the household of faith." Gal. vi. 10. "Lift up the hands which hang down, and strengthen the feeble knees." Heb. xii. 12.

The Reward.—"And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace." James iii. 18.

3.—BE CONSIDERATE.

The Duty.—"When the disorderly." 1 Thess. v. 14. "If a man be overtaken in a fault, restore such in the spirit of meekness." Gal. vi. 1. "Teaching and admonishing one another." Col. iii. 16. "Let us consider one another, to provoke to love and good works." Heb. x. 24. "Be gentle, showing all meekness to all." Titus iii. 2.

The Reward.—Whatsoever good thing ye do, the same shall ye receive of the Lord. Eph. vi. 8.

4.—BE PATIENT.

The Duty.—"Be patient in tribulation." Rom. iii. 12. "Be patient towards all, see that none return evil for evil." 1 Thess. v. 14, 15. "Forbearing one another in love." Eph. iv. 2. "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us." Heb. xii. 1.

The Reward.—"To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, honor, and immortality, God will render eternal life." Rom. ii. 7. "If we suffer we shall also reign with Christ." 2 Tim. ii. 12.

5. BE PEACEABLE.

The Duty.—"Follow peace with all men." Heb. xii. 14. "Study to be quiet." 1 Thess. iv. 11. "Live in peace." 2 Cor. xiii. 11. "Be not angry, lest ye sin; let not the sun go down upon your wrath." Eph. iv. 26. "Do all things without murmurings and disputings." Phil. ii. 14. "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts." Col. iii. 15.

The Blessing.—"The God of peace sanctify you wholly." 1 Thess. v. 23. "Peace I leave with you, my peace give I to you." John xiv. 7.

6. BE HUMBLE.

The Duty.—"Be not wise in your own conceits. Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate." Rom. xii. 16. "In honor prefer one another." Rom. xii. 10. "Let us not be desirous of vain glory." Gal. v. 26.

The Blessing.—"Blessed are the poor in spirit, for their's is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. v. 3, 5.

7.—BE OBEDIENT.

The Duty.—"All of you be subject one to another." 1 Peter v. 5. "Be subject to principalities and powers, obey magistrates." Titus iii. 1. "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for your Lord's sake; whether to the King, or to governors, etc., Fear God; honor the king." 1 Pet. ii. 13, 17.

The Blessing.—"That we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty." 1 Tim. ii. 2.

8. BE PURE.

The Duty.—"Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth." Eph. iv. 29. "Evil communications corrupt virtuous habits." 1 Cor. xv. 33. "Let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ." Phil. i. 27. "Abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul." 1 Peter ii. 11.

The Blessing.—"Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." Matt. v. 8.

9.—BE SYMPATHETIC.

"Rejoice with them who rejoice, and weep with those who weep." Rom. xii. 15. "Be pitiful." 1 Pet. iii. 8. "As the elect of God, put on bowels of mercies, kindness." Col. iii. 12. Remember them who are in bonds, as bound with them; and them who suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body." Heb. xiii. 3.

The Blessing.—"Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." Matt. v. 7.

10.—BE COURTEOUS.

"Be courteous." 1 Peter iii. 8. "Greet one another with a holy kiss." 1 Cor. xvi. 20. "Salute all them who have the rule over you." Heb. xiii. 24.

"That ye may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God." Col. iv. 12.

11.—BE HOSPITABLE.

"Use hospitality one to another without grudging." 1 Peter iv. 9. "Given to hospitality." Rom. xii. 13. "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." Heb. xiii. 2.

"My God shall supply all your need, according to his riches in glory, through Christ Jesus." Phil. iv. 19.

12.—BE HONEST.

"Provide things honest in the sight of all men." Rom. xii. 17. "Let him that stole steal no more, but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth." Eph. v. 28. "Do your own business, and work with your own hands, as we commanded you; that ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of nothing." 1 Thess. iv. 11, 12. "If any man will not work neither let him eat." 2 Thess. iii. 10.

"Trust in the Lord and do good, and truly thou shalt be fed." Psa. xxxvii. 3.

13.—BE TRUTHFUL.

"Lie not one to another." Col. iii. 9. "Speak every man truth with his neighbor." Eph. iv. 25. "Having your loins girt about with truth." Eph. vi. 14.

"The lip of truth shall be established for ever." Prov. xii. 19.

14.—BE ABSTINENT.

"Destroy not with thy meat him for whom Christ died. It is good neither to eat flesh, nor drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth." Rom. xiv. 21. "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess." Eph. v. 18. "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." Prov. xx. 1.

"Your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit in you, and ye are not your own." 1 Cor. vi. 19.

15.—BE LOVING.

"Put on charity, which is the bond of perfection." Col. iii. 14. "A new commandment I give to you, that ye love one another." John xiii. 34. "Let love be without dissimulation." Rom. xii. 9. "Walk in love." Eph. v. 2. "Let brotherly love continue." Heb. xiii. 1. "Love one another with a pure heart fervently." 1 Peter i. 22. "Have fervent love among yourselves, for love will cover the multitude of sins." 1 Peter iv. 8.

"He who dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." 1 John iv. 16.

16.—BE FORGIVING.

"Avenge not yourselves. Overcome evil with good. Bless them who persecute you. Bless and curse not. Return no man evil for evil." Rom. xii. 19, 21, 14, 17. "Not rendering evil for evil, nor railing for railing, but contrariwise blessing." 1 Peter iii. 9. "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." Matt. vi. 15.

"The wisdom which is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." Jas. iii. 18.

17.—BE UNITED.

"Be of one mind." 2 Cor. xiii. 11. "Be of the same mind one to another." Rom. xii. 16. "Endeavoring to keep the oneness of the Spirit in the bonds of peace." Eph. iv. 3. "Submitting yourselves one to another." v. 21. "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together." Heb. x. 25.

"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their Word; that they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one: I in them, and Thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that Thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me."

18.—BE CONFIDENT.

"Prove all things." 1 Thess. v. 21. "Let every man prove his own work." Gal. vi. 14.

"Hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him. For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things. Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God. And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do these things that are pleasing in his sight." 1 John iii. 19, 22.

19.—BE WATCHFUL.

"Walk circumspectly, redeeming the time." Eph. v. 15, 16. "Be sober, be vigilant." 1 Peter v. 8. "Be watchful." Rev. iii. 2. "Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. Matt. xxiv. 42.

"Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." Rev. xvi. 15.

20.—BE PRAYERFUL.

"Be sober and watch to prayer." 1 Pet. iv. 7. "Pray for one another." Jas. v. 16. "Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereto with all perseverance, and supplication for all saints." Eph. vi. 18.

"The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Jas. v. 15, 16.—John Wilson.

The Future Metropolis of the World.

"According to the word that Isaiah the son of Amoz saw," not concerning the church, but concerning Judah and Jerusalem, "the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills, and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob, and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (Isa. ii. 1-3). "And the Lord shall be King over all the earth" (Zech. xiv. 9). This world shall then have embraced its rightful Soverign, and the hearts of its great nations shall beat in unison with heaven.

Nor need you be surprised, dear reader, when, in the light of prophecy, I declare the conviction that Jerusalem is yet to become the metropolis of the world, just as it was the metropolis of Judea in the days of Solomon. All the nations of this world are yet to come under one universal government—the Kingdom of Christ and his glorified saints. "God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name that is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord" (Phil. ii. 10). "Now we see not yet all things put under him" (Heb. ii. 8). But he must reign until he hath put all his enemies under his feet" (1 Cor. xv. 25). "The Gentiles must be given him as his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession" (Psa. ii. 8). He has declared himself to be appointed "King of the Jews, and Prince of the Kings of the earth" (Matt. xxvii. 11; Rev. i. 5). "The kingdoms of the world are to become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever" (Rev. xi. 15). And the center and seat of this great Kingdom is Jerusalem. "The Lord of Hosts shall reign" (where?) "in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously" (Isa. xxiv. 23). "The Lord shall roar" (from whence?) "out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem, and the heavens and earth shall shake, but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel. So shall ye know that I am the Lord your God, dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain; then shall Jerusalem be holy" (Joel iii. 16, 17). Nay, as there is to be a literal reign of the Son of Man on earth, where is it most likely that his imperial seat will be? To what locality does the mind most naturally turn? The holy associations, and the very geographical position of Palestine mark it out with signal felicity as the place where the Son of Mary shall hold his sublime court. As remarked by one who has looked carefully at the matter, "Palestine is so remarkably situated, that it forms the bridge between two continents, and a gateway to a third. Were the population and wealth of Europe, Asia and Africa, condensed into single points, Palestine would be the center of their common gravity. And with the amazing facilities of modern intercourse, and the prodigious extent of modern traffic, is it not easy to estimate the commercial grandeur to which such a kingdom may attain, planted as it were, on the very apex of the old world, with its three continents spreading out beneath its feet, and with the Red Sea on one side to bring it all the golden treasures and spicy harvests of the east, and the Mediterranean floating in on the other side, all the skill and enterprise and knowledge in the west. For the sake of higher ends it seems the purpose of God to make the Holy Land a mart of nations, and by bringing 'the forces (wealth) of the Gentiles to Jerusalem,' to send the blessing of Abraham over all the earth."

It is also well known, that ever since the Jews first entered Canaan, it has been the battle ground of nations. To this hour it is mixed up with the mightiest disputes that disturb the world. The Assyrian, the Egyptian and the Roman of old, the Arab, the Turk, the Greek, the Papist and Rabbi of our times, all have claimed it as if the earth contained not another prize like it. The Russian war, which converted the Crimea into a Golgotha, and made the world tremble, had its beginning in Jerusalem, in disputes and altercations about its shrines and holy places. And the history of the world is filled with illustrations of the desirableness that has ever adhered to that "goodly land," and of the interests involved in its occupation. Ages have rolled around it as the spot of decision on which the question of supremacy is suspended. And Divine prophecy, sounding through the long galleries of centuries, proclaims the fact that all the nations shall yet be governed from that point.

Men may think I dream, but I must take God's Word as meaning what it says. The day is coming when the world shall join in that glad song of David, "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is Mount Zion, the city of the great King!" That wonderful people, the scattered relics of a mighty nation shall come back to their ancient home. From the north and the south, from the east and the west, they shall come with singing unto Zion. "And they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; and they shall no more be pulled out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord" (Amos ix. 14, 15).—J. A. Seiss, in Our Rest.

Will He Come to the Feast?

"What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?" was the question on many lips when the assembling hosts gathered to worship the Lord in Jerusalem. At their previous passovers there had been One whose presence had brightened and enlivened all the scene; One at whose word the sick were healed, the blind received their sight, the lame leaped, the dumb sang, the palsied were restored, and the lepers cleansed. But his presence greatly interfered with the established order of things. He drove out the buyers and sellers from the temple. He upset the tables of the money-changers. He asked the wise men questions they could not answer, and exposed hypocrites in a most uncomfortable manner, and thus made things decidedly unpleasant.

Hence his presence was embarrassing to many. There were vested interests at stake; there were prominent ecclesiastics who must be considered; there were Herodians, priests, politicians, time-servers, Scribes, Pharisees, lawyers, and hypocrites, and their tastes and wishes had to be consulted; and he who was the life and center of the trusting and believing souls, was not as welcome to the feast as in days gone by. Men who followed him were cast out of the synagogue; men who favored him were suspected; men who defended him were scorned, and there was a question whether he would come to the feast or not. The Savior came. He comes to many a place where he is unbidden, and sometimes where he is unwelcome.

There are many assemblies in our own days to which people are coming from far and near, where the question might well be raised, Will he come to the feast? There are conventions where the world comes in, where worldly policy takes the place of honesty and sincerity; where shrewd and unscrupulous leaders manage to control affairs; where wealth gives prominence, and money rules the day; where men full of faith and the Holy Ghost are not in great demand; where the feast is sometimes unblest by the presence of the Lord; and where the spiritual life is low and feeble, while worldliness is rampant and aggressive. Of such places, where men gather that they may eat and drink and feast and visit and flatter and contrive, the question might well be asked, "What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?"

We remember a report of one professedly religious gathering, where nothing was said or to say of sinners being convicted, or of souls being saved; but where it was said that eighteen hundred meals of victuals were eaten; as if eating and drinking were more important or more prevalent than fasting and prayer, and faithfulness to God. To such gatherings men may be attracted by various motives. Worldly interests, social pleasures, eloquent talk, sectarian enthusiasm, and free feeds of loaves and fishes may draw them thither; and when these motives do not attract, when the sectarian enthusiasm dies, or the free table ceases to be spread, then they are conspicuously absent. When there is a call for sacrifice and devotion and labor, they are not to be found.

But what do all these gatherings and feastings avail if the Master of assemblies is not present? If he comes, his presence makes up for all deficiencies. Thus in dens and caves of the earth, on lonely hillsides where men have worshiped God in poverty, in distress, and in peril of their lives; or in lowly homes where only Christ was present as a guest; in places where the despised, the slandered, the outcast, and the persecuted have found refuge from the scorn of foes, even there the Master has deigned to meet with "two or three," and make their homes and hiding-places bright with the presence of the eternal King.

Thanks be to God, in this dispensation we are not dependent upon public feasts or great assemblies for the blessing and presence of the Lord. We need neither to go to Jerusalem nor to Samaria, to camp-meeting nor to convention, to worship the Father; but where two or three are gathered together in Christ's name, in lowliness, in humility, in poverty, in reproach, even there, the people of God may enjoy the presence of their Savior, and the children of Zion may be joyful in their King. And though instead of luxuries there may be crusts, and instead of gathering throngs of the rich, the influential, the great, the hilarious, there may be but a "little flock" of "the poor in spirit" and "the pure in heart," yet to that "little flock" it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. And the dwellers in the lowliest cot may have even here consolation for which the denizens of marble halls may sigh in vain, and the humblest disciple of the Lord may know and enjoy what "kings and prophets waited for, and sought but never found."

Conference Report.

The quarterly conference of the Church of God in Michigan, convened as per announcement at Watson, Allegan County, Michigan, Oct 4, 1895. There was a large number present, the brethren coming from the north, south, east and west. Brother J. F. Wagoner, of Rochester, Ind., was with us and did the speaking throughout the conference. All the social meetings were good and a great deal of interest was shown by all the brothers and sisters that their faith was still strong in the Lord.

The business meeting was called to order Saturday at 2:30 p. m. by the president Brother Austin. After a little business Brother F. L. Austin arose and said as he was to be in Rensselaer, Ind for the coming year it would be necessary for him to resign. Brother H. H. Hammond, of Dutton, Michigan, was elected to fill his place for the rest of the year.

All who listened to Brother Wagoner's beautiful words of truth could not help being convinced. Sunday morning at the invitation of Brother Wagoner two become obedient to the gospel, the ordinance was attended to Sunday afternoon.

The Lord's Supper was administered after the Sunday morning service.

The meetings were all good but the one, Sunday morning and Sunday evening were especially so and will long be rembered by all present.

The lesson Sunday evening was from 2 Cor. viii. Mark iv. 20, the gradual development of the plan of salvation.

The meetings came to a close with singing those beautiful words: "God be with you till we meet again."

May God keep us all pure until he shall come, is my prayer.

Conference Notice.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Indiana, will meet at Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 15, 1895, and continue over the following Sunday.

A hearty invitation is extended to all of like precious faith.

Come with hearts filled with love and all differences laid aside. Let the one great aim be to cheer and encourage each other on the way and by so doing better prepare ourselves to overcome the trials and temptations we may have to endure. Come and let us do our duty and God will take care of the rest.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec.

Bread is a good thing, but Jesus would have us learn that man must not live by bread alone. It is a means, not an end; it is not the principal thing. We need to know how to make it without setting our hearts on it. Bread is for to-day only, we are but worms; if we work for to-morrow, we are but bees; not until we work for eternity do we work as men.—Bible Reader.

How independent of outward circumstances the Holy Ghost can make the Christian! How firm, how happy, how calm, how peaceful we may be.

Every step we take with God makes our Bible bigger.

...MPERANCE.

The Bondage of Drink.

You think I love it? If this nerveless hand
Could gain immortal strength this very hour,
I'd sweep the hellish, traffic from the land
And crush its blighting, maddening, night-mare power.
Yes now, with all my latest, dying breath,
I'll curse the thing that drags me down to death.

Love it? I loathe it! Yet I drink and drink,
And hate my bondage with a deathly hate.
And hate myself as through the town I slink.
The pledge? No, no! 'Tis far too late!
No pledge! I've tried it twice—a waste of breath!
Too late! There's no release for me but death.

It's bad enough to drink, but not to drink
Doth such a train of ghastly horrors make
As in one hour would leave me mad I think.
Ah, keep away, ye fiends, for pity's sake!
The very thought of them affects my brain.
My end will be when they shall come again.

Lose rum? I'd have to hold my head up high
And breathe God's air a free and fearless man.
And look with unbent eyes on earth and sky.
With steady nerve to do and bear to plan:
I'd have to grapple trials as they come
In manly fashion, brave and strong. Lose rum?

If only I could come into some land
Where no drink is, God knows how will firmly
I'd fight these dreadful torments of the damned
That clutch the soul of him who would be free.
But mad—but up the grizzly shapes of woe
To fall again as twice before? No, no!

Ah, if I might have known how it would be
In those old college days so wild and gay
When first I drank in youthful revelry!
How easy then to put the cup away!
A mother's hope and joy I was till then:
Now see me trembling in! These eyes again!

Back, fiery eyes, to hell, where ye belong!
I'll drink ye down—what, blood! Drink blood!
Help! Help! They come, a hideous, devilish throng!
Back, get ye back! They'll tear me in the flood!
Long, crooked hands are clawing in my hair!
Is this the end? Ha, ha! Too late for prayer!

Narcotic Poisons.

The narcotic poison that causes more poverty, crime, disease and death than any other is alcohol. Poverty and crime, with their attendant conditions, naturally tend to shorten life. Not only does alcohol produce this effect indirectly: it produces it directly. The latest and highest medical science teaches that alcohol, the intoxicating element, "is a virulent poison, and that it predisposes to disease, aggravates it when it comes, and so reduces the vitality and sensibility of the system, and it does not respond so readily to remedies." From the statistics gathered by life insurance companies and otherwise, it is proven beyond question that the use of alcoholic beverages has a very marked effect in shortening human life.

Another narcotic poison that shortens human life is tobacco. this weed contains two distinct, deadly poisons, an oil and an alkaloid. Both of these, we are told, in concentration are speedily fatal in small doses. It is specially a heart poison, weakening the muscles and paralyzing the nerves of that important organ. A school of physicians has published the declaration "that careful investigation has led them to the conclusion that not less than twenty thousand persons die in the United States annually from the effects of the use of tobacco; and that the common indulgence of its use reduces the average life of its victims as much as ten years."

Opium has come into very extensive use, first as a medicine, afterward as a self-administered sedative. The indulgence in this drug is done so secretly that few know the extent to which this vice prevails. An inquiry of a reputable physician or druggist will bring a shocking revelation. The startling proportions to which this evil has grown may be traced to the general custom of dosing infants with preparations of opium in the form of paragoric and soothing syrups. Fond mothers, ignorant of the terrible influence of this drug, implant a taste for it in their beloved offspring. May the time be hastened when this ignorance shall disappear.—Evangelical Messenger.

"Tobacco is not Injurious."

This is the testimony of a multitude who are using it, and who say it does them good. The following incident from O. S. Fowler, in "Life, its Factors, Science and Culture," may be of interest to such persons.

A few years ago a call was issued from London, England, to the scientists of the world to assemble for the discussion of whatever scientific subjects might be presented, every statement to undergo most rigid scrutiny. One member said; "Tobacco is not injurious. I have chewed it for fifty years, and my father sixty years, without perceptible damage. All this hue and cry about it is nonsense." The actuary answered, "Step forward, sir, and let us canvass this matter thoroughly. How much do you chew?" "I chew regularly three quids per day, of about this size," cutting them from his plug. One was given to a Russian, and another to a French chemist, with, "Please return their extracts."

Then the actuary said, "Will any young man unaccustomed to the use of tobacco, chew this third quid before the audience? Here are twenty dollars to any one who will." A young man stepped forward. The audience was requested to scan his looks, cheeks, eyes, and general appearance, before he took it, and closely watch its effects. He soon became pale from sickness, then vomited, and anon fainted before the assembly. The extract from one quid was given to a powerful tomcat. He flew wildly around, and then and there died. The other extract was put upon the tongue of a premium dog, which uttered a yelp, leaped frantically, lay down and expired. These facts transpired before the world. They are recorded in the most scientific repository of this century or any other, in a volume which cost twenty dollars a copy. They cannot be controverted. Every consumer of tobacco in either form, is a practical witness that these are its precise effects, by his own initiation to its use.—The Safeguard.

The Stimulant Habit.

"Our war against alcohol and other stimulants," says a health journal, "is not based upon the specific influences of alcohol, tobacco, tea, coffee, or opium, but upon the fact that these substances are all artificial stimulants, that is, by their use the body is harmed, and the vital power is weakened by the consumption of energy which is not in any way reinforced by the substance employed. There are many other substances besides those name above which possess this same property, such as hashish, Siberian fungus, strychnia, and arsenic. Dr. Norman Kerr, in a recent article, records cases which have come under his own observation, in which persons have taken from ten to fifteen grains of arsenic, and claimed to have been improved by it. According to Dr. Kerr, ladies swallow arsenic to improve their personal appearance, and also use it externally for the complexion. Gentlemen are also addicted to this practice, and both sexes take doses of arsenic as a fillip and a general tonic. Nor is the habit confined to the wealthy. On one occasion, while crossing a ferry, Dr. Kerr saw a boatsman rest on his oars and take a drink out of a pocket-flask. The beverage was a preparation of arsenic, and the dose was enough to kill any four average Englishmen."

The Beer Curse.

"In appearance," says the Scientific American, "the beer-drinker may be the picture of health, but in reality he is most incapable of resisting diseases. A slight injury, a severe cold, or a shock to the body or mind, will commonly provoke acute disease, ending fatally. Compared with inebriates who use different kinds of alcohol, he is more incurable and more generally diseased. It is our observation that beer-drinking in this country produces the very lowest kind of inebriety, closely allied to insanity. The most dangerous class of ruffians in our large cities are beer-drinkers. Intellectually a stupor amounting almost to paralysis arrests the reason, changing all the higher faculties into a mere animalism, sensual sluggish, selfish, varied only with paroxysms of anger that are senseless and brutal."

One to Begin, Two to Make Ready, Four to Go.

This is the way one little girl puts her idea of striving to live right:

"I'm wishing—that's one to begin;
I'm learning—that's two to show;
I'm trying—that's three to make ready;
I'm doing—that's four to go."

And then we suppose she jumps right into the middle of some good action.

Here is a whole sermon on temperance in a few words: "Temperance puts coal on the fire, meal in the barrel, money in the purse, credit in the country, contentment in the home, clothes on the children, vigor in the body, and intelligence in the mind."

Change of Address.

My address is now Guthrie, Oklahoma, instead of Rossville, Ill. Correspondents will please take notice.

L. E. Conner.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

Please write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into The Restitution for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to The Restitution office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send as many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Buried Flowers.

In the course of his wanderings among the pyramids of Egypt, Lord Lindsay, the celebrated English traveler, accidently came across a mummy, the inscription upon which proved to be at least two thousand years old. In examining the mummy after it had been carefully unwrapped, he found in one of its hands a small, round root. Wondering how long vegetable life could last, he took the little bulb from that closed hand and planted it in sunny soil, allowed the dew and rain of heaven to descend upon it, and in the course of time, a few weeks, to his astonishment and joy, that root bore forth and bloomed into a beautiful flower.

Two thousand years ago a flower,
Prized highly, in a far-off land;
Two thousand years ago its seed
Was placed within a dead man's hand.

Before the Savior came to earth,
That seed had lived and bored and died,
And been in that far off time,
Its flower had spread its perfume wide.

Ages rose and fell, years came and went,
The dead hand kept its treasure well:
Nations were born and turned to dust,
While life was hidden in that shell.

The shriveled hand is robbed at last,
The seed is buried in the earth;
Wise, but the life long-hidden there
Into a glorious flower bursts forth.

Just such a plant as that which grew
From such a seed when buried low,
Just such a flower in Egypt bloomed,
Two thousand years ago.

And will not He who watched the seed,
And kept the life within the shell,
Watch over their buried dust as well?

And will he not from 'neath the sod
Cause something glorious to arise?
And though it sleep two thousand years,
Yet all that buried dust shall rise.

Just such a face as greets you now
Just such a form as here we bear,
Only more glorious far, will rise
To meet the Savior in the air.

Then will I lay me down in peace
When called to leave this vale of tears,
For 'tis my flesh shall I see God,"
Even though I sleep two thousand years.

The Crowning Day.

Those who are to be rewarded with the highest vocation, i. e., To reign with Christ, will receive their crowns at his coming (not before). It is when the Chief Shepherd shall appear ye shall receive a crown of glory that shall never fade. Those who have patiently sought for the glory shall then receive it with honor and incorruptibility. Hear the testimony of a dying saint, "I have kept the faith, from this time forth there is laid up for me (held in reserve) a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the Righteous Judge, shall give me at that day (the day of his appearing), and not alone to me but also unto all them that love his appearing." All who have turned from idols to serve the true or living God and to wait for his Son from heaven, shall receive their reward at the same time when he who is our life comes then (and not before) they shall appear (be manifested) in glory, even that glory they have so patiently labored for in this present evil world.

If the foregoing be facts and Scripture how comes it that, not withstanding these plain declarations of apostolic teachings, we constantly hear from the lips of men, teachers and editors, D. D's, who love to be called learned, as well as generally from those called unlearned, when speaking of a deceased person, he has received his reward, he has received his crown of glory, he is reigning with Christ in heaven, etc? Do they not know that Christ has not been yet crowned, and that he is not reigning in heaven? and that he will never reign there, but when he is crowned and reigns it will be on earth, on the throne of his Father David, which was an earthly throne, in Jerusalem, the city of the great King, even Jesus? If any saints are reigning in heaven and are crowned, over whom are they reigning, who are their subjects? not God, nor the angels, and certainly not over one another. No Christian has yet received his crown, nor will they until the Chief Shepherd shall appear as saith Holy Scripture. "Then all who are expecting and looking for the coming of the Just One shall be crowned together with him, and when he takes his crown, as joint-heirs, we who are waiting and praying for the coming and kingdom of Christ, and for the peace of Jerusalem, the consolation of Israel, will receive our thrones, and reign with him on the earth and nowhere else.

There are many professors of religion, self-styled Christians, who are expecting to go to heaven when they die, these will receive no crown in that day. Indeed they are not expecting it then, neither are they looking for God's Son from heaven. But their hired shepherds have fed them so long on the delusive doctrine of immortal-soulism, natural immortality, that they have become blind to the Word of God, and cannot understand the things about the kingdom of God. Many, no doubt, will say to Jesus in that day, Lord have we not done many things in thy name? But he will say to such, depart from me, I never approved of you. It is implied that some Christians even, will be ashamed in the presence of Christ at his coming. John the beloved says, "And now, little children, abide in him, that when he shall appear we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming. The crown of life will only be given to the well doers, the faithful ones, the saints, to whom Christ can say, "Well done, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord, such will constitute the ruling element, the Bride of Christ, in the age to come. As we have seen only those will receive crowns, who have longed for and are expecting the coming and kingdom of Christ. This is the crucial test, a minister, a hired shepherd, said in a public discourse in my hearing, that he supposed that Christ would come again, perhaps in a thousand years hence. That he did not want to be alive when he comes for it would be an awful time. I thought when I heard him use the phrase "an awful time," that it would be a fearful time to those that are unprepared, to those who have spent all their energies in the delusive idea of preparing for death, who have made no preparation to live to meet Christ at his coming in peace.

The true followers of Christ are praying for his coming today, and are with glad hearts hastening unto the coming of the Lord. Many of them are spreading the glad news of the coming and kingdom of the Christ, endeavoring to turn erring mortals from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God. Trying to persuade men and women to seek life, and incorruptibility and a place in God's kingdom. The coming of Christ and his reign on earth was the faith of primitive Christianity, which a few representatives will prove. See Titus ii. 13; Heb. ix. 28; James v. 7, 8; 1 Thess. i. 10; 2 Thess. i. 10. He is coming and in the "language of Spurgeon, I can say I don't know the time, but if he were to come today I would be glad to see him."

The saints of the Most High will be rewarded for their toil in the vineyard of the Lord on the earth, and nowhere else. If it had been the purpose of Deity to save any of Adam's race with which to people any of the other planets than this, it would be revealed in his revelation as given to the children of Adam in the Holy Scriptures. Since the blessed Volume teaches that the righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever, the upright shall dwell in the land and the perfect shall remain in it, we have no right to assert that they will go to heaven or any other place, for it is plainly revealed that all who are saved through the provisions of the covenant of redemption will ultimately inhabit this earth and abide therein forever. The justified ones are promised no inheritance or home anywhere else in the universe, whatever heavenly orb they may be permitted to visit in their glorified, immortalized state. The Scriptures are clear and explicit on this point, and should forever settle this question in the minds of every honest-thinking person, that the covenant of redemption was no scheme by the opperation of which the inhabitants of the earth were to be fitted and prepared to inhabit some other planet or sphere; and that this once the most desirable of all, is to be abandoned at last to desolating fires and everlasting ruin as we constantly hear proclaimed from all the popular pulpits of the land, and sung from all popular song books. No, earth was not created to be annihilated, but to be inhabited. In that blessed Book, the Bible, I can clearly read my title to an heirship of this entire earth, and that when Christ the Nobleman returns to take possession of it, and builds up the tabernacle of David his father and his throne to all generations, when he shall have restored again the kingdom of Israel. I am persuaded that I shall set down with him in his throne, inherit its wealth, its honors, its glory, its government with him, and when he shall have redeemed it and made every foot of it more than a garden of Eden for his own particular abode, and the eternal home of his Bride, I shall enjoy it with him forever. Why should I sigh for a home in some strange, far-off world less fair than this, whose soil the foot of my Redeemer has never trod, and his precious soul-cleansing blood has never consecrated? Why should I desire a home in some sphere upon whose purified soil will never descend from God out of heaven the city, whose foundations are of jewels, whose streets are of gold, paved, its gates of solid pearls, its temple,—the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are its Temple? Glorious city, through the midst of it. The River of Life will ever flow on, either side of which the tree of life will ever grow and offer its healing leaves to the nations of the saved. Why seek some unredeemed orb, on whose soil the glorious throne of God and the Lamb, will not be located; whose dwellers will not see the face of him who wore the thorns for them, and wear his name in their foreheads?

The scene of all this indescribable glory is to be upon this, our own earth, when it shall come forth renovated and purified by the fires of the last day. A new, resplendent, heavenly world, a prepared place for the everlasting home of the redeemed ones of Adam's race, the home of Christ and his Bride forever more, and the nations of them that are saved, shall walk in the light of the glorious city, the New Jerusalem. The Bible is a history of ruin and redemption. Its first chapters open with earth uncursed, an Eden fair. Then follows disobedience, the curse, sin and death. Then the gradual revealing of a plan of redemption for man and the earth from the effects of the curse of the broken law. The last chapter closes with earth resplendent with beauty, fully peopled with the redeemed of Adam's race, the special abode of the glorified Redeemer.

We have seen that coronation day is when he the great Shepherd of the sheep has come. It is then that the waiting ones receive their crown. Then a King shall reign in righteousness and princes rule in judgment. That will be a glorious day, indeed, when Christ in the presence of the angels—ten thousand and thousands of thousands with all the peerage of the heavens, the high principalities and dominions and powers, and in the presence of all the redeemed by his blood out of all nations and before the eyes of the kings of the earth will be crowned King of all kings and Lord of lords. When the crown of universal empire will be set upon that brow, that was once in mockery pierced by a crown of thorns, when the scepter of all dominions will be triumphantly placed in his hands that were nailed to the cross. When will the tall archangel in profoundest and most joyful adoration with multitudes of the heavenly hosts and millions of his saints, and all the kings and princes, and the mighty of earth. For that day I am waiting.

Moses on the Mountain. Matt. xvii. 3.

The context to the account of the transfiguration given by Matthew, Mark and Luke proves that the subject of our Lord's teaching on this occasion, was the coming of the Son of Man in his kingdom, and that some there present should not taste of death until they should see him in his kingdom. The scene on the mountain was given for a purpose, and in fulfillment of Christ's promise. That it was a good lesson and made a lasting impression on those that saw it is learned by what Peter says in his 2nd Epistle i. 16–17 and 18, "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty." For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased, and this voice which came from heaven we heard when we were with him in the holy Mount." Having learned the object of the vision, for such it was, as we learn from Christ's charge to them, to tell the vision to no man till the Son of Man be risen again from the dead. Let us see if we can understand what it contained in the vision, for it is a view of Christ in his kingdom.

We see Christ as King, his face shining as the sun, and his raiment white as the light. We see Elias to represent the saints who will be alive when the Master returns and will be translated without seeing death. We see Moses a representative of the dead saints who will be raised when the Lord returns from the far country. We see Peter, James and John to represent the subjects of the kingdom, men in the flesh. How then shall we understand the appearance of Moses on the mountain? The same way that we understand the appearance of the woman in Rev. xii., clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve stars. The dragon and the leopard beast were symbols of things to come, they had no actual existence, neither had Moses on the mountain, but his appearance in vision taught the lesson to the disciples and answered the Master's purpose just the same.

The whole teaching of the Scripture forbids us to say that Moses was on the mountain, except in the way indicated. The Master himself says in John vi. 49. (Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead.) Moses being one of the fathers that did eat the manna, surely he is dead. Some have claimed that Moses was raised the third day after buried as a type of Christ, but this view is out of joint with what is taught by Paul in Col. i. 18, where it is said that he, Christ, is the first-born from the dead; that in all things he might have the pre-eminence.

In Acts x. 12, we have an instance similar to the one we are considering. Peter was shown wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air, to teach him God's purpose in relation to the Gentiles. No one believes that there was a literal sheet and real animals in it. Rev. xiv. 1, is a case similar to the scene on the mountain. Both are visions to be fulfilled in the future, Christ is there, so are the 144 thousand, and in v. 3 they sing a song before the four living creatures, and the elders. In chap. iv. 4, the elders are said to have crowns of gold on their head, and in chap. v. they sing a song that reveals their identity as the redeemed ones. Paul has not yet received his crown nor stood on the Mount Zion, nor heard the song of the 144,000.

An Inquiry.

What is truth? This question should be earnestly propounded by every Christian, but the mass seem content with the inquiry what is popular? We should be willing to follow the truth irrespective of popular theology, let the truth be what it may or where it may. Tradition should not deter us from a scrutinizing search of this rare article in this age of fables. The Savior in addressing the Father gives this general answer, "Thy Word is truth." Then let us appeal to that Word, holding ourselves in readiness to submit to its unequivocal testimony, however adverse to our pre-conceived sentiments. It is lamentably true that anything that will tickle the ear by those unacquainted with the plain teachings of Christ and his apostles is readily believed rather than truth. For instance we hear proclaimed from the pulpit that man has an immortal soul that never dies, that as soon as the body dies the soul goes to heaven or hell to await the great judgment day when this mortal body will be resurrected and the soul brought back from heaven or hell, and soul and body re-united. Now I must ask these modern theologians where they get such doctrine. What does the Bible say in regard to immortality? It is declared in Gen. ii. 7, that God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul, not an immortal soul: for,

"It was dust and breath the nature whole
That made a human living soul."

But again what does the Savior say in regard to such teaching?

Does he say that we must give an account at death, or at the judgment? Answer. Jesus never told us that we must give account at death, but at the judgment. Matt. xii. 36. And now I will write a few quotations for the many readers of THE RESTITUTION which they can look up for their own interest, in regard to the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

1st. When are the saints recompensed, at death or at the resurrection? Ans. "They shall be recompensed at the resurrection." Rev. xi. 18; Luke xiv. 14; Matt. xvi. 27; Rev. xxii. 12.

2nd. Are saints to be recompensed in heaven or on earth? Ans. "Behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth." Prov. xi. 31; Matt. v. 5; Rev. v. 10; Psa. xxxi. 11; Dan. vii. 21.

3rd. Are the dead conscious or unconscious? Ans. "The dead know not anything." Eccl. vii. 5; Psa. cxlvi. 4; Isa. xxxviii. 18.

4th. Are departed saints now celebrating the praises of the Lord? Ans. "The dead praise not the Lord." Psa. xv. 17; Psalm vi. 5; Eccl. ix. 5.

5th. Are the patriarchs in heaven? Ans. "David is not ascended into the heavens." Acts ii. 34; John iii. 13.

6th. Have the prophets received their reward, or does it await them at the judgment? Ans. "The time of the dead that they should be judged and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets." Rev. xi. 18; Psa. xi. 15.

7th. Have the apostles gone to heaven? Ans. "As I said unto the Jews, whither I go ye cannot come so now I say to you." John xiii. 33; 1 Tim. vi. 14.

8th. Are saints crowned at death or at Christ's coming? Ans. When the Chief Shepherd shall appear ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Peter v. 4; 2 Tim. iv. 8.

9th. Did Job expect to see his Redeemer at death, or at the latter day in heaven or upon the earth? Answer. "I know that my Redeemer liveth and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh I shall see God." Job. xix. 25, 26; 1 Thess. iv. 16. What a grand assurance that Christ who is our life, will come back again to remove the curse that now rests upon the earth and fit it up anew for his true believers, who are asleep in Jesus, as well as all those who shall die in the faith of the gospel, or who shall be living upon the earth at his second advent.

10th. Did David expect to be satisfied at death or at the resurrection? Ans. "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Psa. xi. 15; Phil. iii. 20, 21.

11th. Will the saints shine in the kingdom at death or at the resurrection? Answer. "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." Dan. xii. 23.

12th. Did Christ promise to receive his saints unto himself at death or at his coming? Ans. "I will come again and receive you unto myself." John xiv. 3.

13th. Did the apostles groan for a disembodied state or for the redemption of the body? Ans. "We ourselves groan within ourselves waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body." Rom. viii. 23; 2 Cor. v. 4.

14th. Were the ancient worthies rewarded at death? Ans. "These all died in faith not having received the promises." Heb. xi. 13, 39, 40.

15. When will the saints receive eternal life? Ans. "In the world to come eternal life." Mark x. 30; Luke xviii. 30.

16th. Will the soul come from heaven or the grave at the resurrection? Ans. "God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave." Psa. xlix. 15; lxxxiv. 48.

17th. Does the soul die? Ans. "He spared not their soul from death?" Psa. lxxxix. 48; xlix. 15. David says none can keep alive his own soul. Jesus never told us that we must give an account at death, but they shall give an account in the day of judgment. Matt. xii. 36. Paul very plainly shows the fallacy of such doctrine when he says, "The King of kings, the Lord of lords, who only hath immortality dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto, neither hath seen nor can see." 1 Tim. vi. 15, 16. Now this brings to mind that wonderful prophecy in Jeremiah xxxi., which was fulfilled by Herod in Matt. ii. 16, 18, in regard to his attempt to put Christ to death. Let us refer to this prophecy, "Thus saith the Lord, a voice was heard in Ramah lamentation and bitter weeping, Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children because they were not. Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping and thine eyes from tears for thy work shall be rewarded saith the Lord and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. In the first place this has reference to children dying as revealed in Matthew's gospel, and in addition to this Rachel, who represented all the mothers in Israel that had at their children, shall look forward to the resurrection for the consummation of their hope when their children would be brought again from the land of the enemy, not from heaven. Where is this land? It is where the grave is. Where is the grave? It is in the earth. Whose land is this? It is the enemy's. Who is the enemy? It is him that had the power of death that is the devil' Heb. ii. 14. You may be astonished at this conclusion, but you must bear in mind that we started out in search of a very rare article—truth, and if the Bible contains as then we are safe.

But again, Christ says, "Behold I make all things new, I create a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness," and in regard to that beautiful city which Christ has gone away to prepare for his saints, John the revelator in his vision says, he saw "the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Where was that city coming down to? Ans. The new earth and will be the capital of Christ's kingdom.

MRS. H. A. OBEY.

The Kingdom of God.

This is a subject on which there are a great many different ideas, and a subject in which we all should be greatly interested, for without the kingdom there is no promise of a reward. Christ came into the world for various purposes. Not only to save sinners, as we are taught by many, but to fulfill the old law, and to make a new law, and to choose out a people for his name, and through the obedience of this new law we may be of this number that he will take out for his name, to be made kings and priests, to reign and rule with him. There is no promise to any until he comes? When he comes the promise is to those that have lived up to the new law, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. How could any have washed their robes in the Blood of the Lamb before it was spilt? There will none be made immortal but those written in the Lamb's Book of life. How could any be written in the Lamb's Book of life before the Lamb's Book existed? So those who make up this number will be of this Christian age or of the new law, these will be taken out at the coming of Christ, which is the first resurrection and the setting up of the kingdom, Christ's kingdom. Those with Christ shall reign a thousand years, to subdue all authority and powers that now be, and Christ will rule will justice and equity. When he has accomplished this work of subduing, and all things are ready, then the second resurrection will take place and the Book of life is used. The Lamb's Book of life having been used at the first resurrection, or the commencement of Christ's kingdom and reign. Those in the Book of life will be those who will live on the new earth, will be as Adam was before he sinned, good and very good. When these things take place, and the wicked are destroyed, and all things made ready, then the kingdom will be delivered up to the Father that he may become all in all. Then it will be the kingdom of God, a joint reign, God and Christ in the eternal age for ever even forever and ever. I have given no reference, any Bible reader can readily find all. The twelve hundred and ninety days of Daniel are very near at an end, then will begin the thirteen hundred and thirty-five days taking in the millennial reign. The little season, and the ending of the days. Beyond, there is no night. Daniel was promised he should stand in his lot at the end of the days. Our prayer is for "Thy kingdom to come, Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." If the kingdom was set up on the day of Pentecost, and the will of the Father has been done on earth since that time, heaven surely is a corrupt place. We have no anxiety to go there; no, we would rather wait and live with Christ on the earth. Yours waiting for the kingdom.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

Notice is hereby given that the Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association will be held at Chapel Hall, Plymouth, Ind., at 1:30 p. m. Saturday, Nov. 16, 1895, for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors for the year, and the transaction on such other business as may come before the Association.

ROBERT RALLSBACK, Pres.
A. R. CYPHERSON, Secy.

ANY one who can give us information as to the whereabouts of E. M. Snoek, late of Burgin, Ky. please write to this office.

IF the person who sent us a money order from Wheeling, W. Va. will tell what to do with the money, we will gladly attend to business. As it is we can do nothing. Also a like case is at hand from Crown Point, Ind. No word with the order. Who knows any thing of these?

ONE brother who appreciates our paper has sent us the names of 58 persons to whom he wishes the paper sent. He proposes in this way to do a little missionary work. The paper going to those homes each week cannot fail to have a good result, and the example of our brother is worth following. He pays the cash to have the papers sent.

"As flowers never put on their best clothes on Sunday, but wear their spotless raiment and exhale their odor every day, so let your Christian life, free from stain, ever give forth the fragrance of the love of God."

"A noble person compares and estimates himself by an idea which is higher than himself, and a mean man by one which is lower than himself. The one produces aspiration; the other ambition. Ambition is the way in which a vulgar man aspires."

SOME one has said, "Wherever I find truth I will appropriate it for it is an estray from God's Word, and belongs to me and to all. Eminent men and parties and sects claim truth as theirs, because they have most fully expounded them; but men never make truths. They only recognize the value of this currency of God."

"WHENCE have sprung the dirges of sorrow that have rolled over the earth all down through the ages? They sprang from sin. Sin is sorrow in the seed; when it is finished, it bringeth forth death. Death is the sum of all evil. What home on earth has not been darkened by its shadow? What heart has not been wrung by the icy hand of death? The dead vastly outnumber the living, and presently all the living will be with the dead. Only the spirit of God can lift the curtain of the future and reveal a bright tomorrow,—a morning without clouds. The spirit in Paul and the rest of the apostles assure us that the saintly dead sleep in Jesus. Listen. "I would not have you ignorant brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others who have no hope. For if ye believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him (Jesus). For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the lord in the air and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore, comfort one another with these words." By God's help we will do that. They have quieted many a throbbing heart and chased away many a hot tear.

If any one can tell us the present address of L. Fogelsang, late of Esmond, South Dakota, we will be very glad.

WE came across this noble sentiment the other day: "From the beginning I educated my self to speak along the line of truth and in the current of my moral convictions; and though in later days it has carried me through places where there were some batterings and bruisings, yet I have been supremely grateful that I was led to adopt this course. I would rather speak the truth to two men than blandish a country and lying to a million. To it, to me, there is nothing greater than what it is to speak with God behind you, to speak so as to be only the arrow in the bow which the Almighty draws."

The Kingdom of God.

Still they lead blindly. One of the city papers during the week contained nearly a column notice of a sermon on "The Kingdom of God," and gave a number of choice passages, a specimen which we herewith subjoin: "How many persons are to-day looking not within their selves, or about them, awaiting God's kingdom? You may wait, brother and sister, until you pass from this sphere of existence, and if you have not found God's kingdom within yourself before that time, you will not find it in the hereafter. It is not a special locality, it is a condition, a living, walking reality within yourself. It is a realization of the fact that you were created in the image of God; that you were endowed with all the qualifications necessary to understand his every law, his every wish; that you can and should be in perfect harmony, perfect rapport with him. You have been living simply an earthly, material life, like any animal. You have expected to some time find the kingdom of God, forgetting entirely that Jesus told you that if you find it not within yourself, you will never find it, and are lost."

If this be not teaching lies in the name of the Lord, we do not know what it is! We do not to just such men God spoke by the prophet Isaiah: "Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the Lord, and their works are in the dark, and they say who seeth us? And who knoweth us? Surely your turning of the things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay." Isa. xxix. 15, 16. It is most distressing to see men fed with such chaff in place of wheat, and to see the feeders take the wheat that lies on top and turn it under out of sight—yes, the spirit expresses it; they turn things upside down. Think of the fact that the good news of the kingdom of God is his saving power, and then listen to what this blind leader says the kingdom of God is, and it ought to make you pray as never before, "Thy kingdom come." Oh, no; there is not the slightest hope that the veil will be lifted till Jesus in power and majesty appears. Absolutely the religious world generally have no faith in what God says. The faith they claim to have is not faith, it is only a blind confidence that is in no way related to the truth that sanctifies. Our experience is that as the months go by it becomes harder and harder to reach people with God's saving truth. And it becomes the bounden duty of those who labor in the vineyard to build up and encourage those who have fled for refuge for fear the cares of this life choke the word.

Severe Earthquake.

On Thursday, Oct 31, soon after five o'clock in the morning, persons in this vicinity were awakened by the very distinct agitation of the earth's surface. We append part of an editorial from the Chicago Tribune of Friday, regarding its extent and probable cause.

"The earthquake of yesterday morning was one of wide extent and severity for the United States. The area affected included Alabama and New Orleans on the South, Kansas City and Topeka in the Southwest, Western Iowa, Southern Wisconsin, Southern Michigan and West Virginia. It was felt with especial severity in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, awakening many thousands of people from their sleep, wrecking some buildings, breaking glass and crockery, and in other places causing stovepipes and tinware to drop from their fastenings, but not involving any loss of human life so far as reported at this writing. The statements of time and direction of vibration are not sufficiently close to indicate precisely the point of greatest disturbance, but it would seem to have been some distance south from Chicago. The central area may be well up towards the middle of the eastern boundary of our state, or even far beyond that. In fact, the greater intensity experienced in Gedeon, in Mahomet, also indicate a center of sinking to be far from the northern boundary of the state, though the reported direction of the lines of vibration further north does not bear out the conclusion.

Volcanic action is a frequent cause of earthquakes in some parts of the world, but hardly can be looked for as the excitant in this case. We are obliged to suppose that the disturbance was due to an extensive slipping of rock strata at a considerable distance below the surface. The character of the movement was something like what would be due to the subsidence of supports in a coal mine away from a water course, but probably the seat of the trouble was much deeper than indicated by the comparison. It might be caused by a sinking of a large tract that has been robbed of its underlying coal, but even that explanation may not be sufficient to account for it, as the central point of disturbance for large earthquakes has been found to range from five to as much as thirty miles below the surface. But undoubtedly the phenomenon was the result of a sinking of land to a lower level by unrestrained pressure towards the earth's interior, and it is probable we yet shall hear of some such subsidence having taken place, perhaps accompanied by an upheaval elsewhere, the double movement being caused by a lateral shrinking of the earth's interior.

What is it to Believe in Jesus Christ?

Some time since we were invited to speak to a little company in a private house. One of the number seemed to be favorably impressed with the truths advanced, but when we urged repentance toward God and baptism into the name of Jesus for the remission of past sins, the reply was, "Oh, but I am a Christian already." To us it is one of the most painful incidents of religious life and labor to meet with people of this type, who plant themselves so firmly in their feeling and impressions, that God's terms of adoption will not be considered for a moment. But, although this be not a promising field to cultivate we have resolved by the help of God to try and show the fallacy of claiming to be a Christian by believing merely in the historic Christ. Of course no one can be saved without believing that the person called Jesus lived and taught, and wrought signs and wonders, and suffered and died, and rose and revived and ascended to heaven. This is PART of the gospel to be believed. But if this be all, can accrue to us from believing those historic facts? This part of the gospel discloses neither promise nor prospect to the believer of it. It is absolutely true, but standing alone, it is like a thousand other truthful historic statements in the Book of God, powerless to save. In order to secure the benefit intended by means of these facts, we need to know why Jesus lived and taught and suffered. At least we must know that he died that we might have life, and that there was without the shedding of blood, and that life after death through his death and resurrection was necessary to enable us to inherit the kingdom of God on earth. It is absolutely necessary, too, to know the precise conditions on which God offers to confer these inestimable blessings. 1. Faith in the things promised. 2. Repentance toward God. 3. Baptism into Christ for the remission of past sins, and this followed by a godly life till Jesus comes, or life's journey is ended. If a person claims an undying existence independent of Christ's death, he does not believe in Jesus. And if he believes that at death he goes to heaven

WHAT BENEFIT

NO REMISSION OF SINS

BEYOND THE SKIES

he does not believe in Jesus Christ, because he taught that those who were worthy of the life he brought to light would hear his voice and come forth out of their graves to possess it and enjoy it. And he who believes that he is pardoned of all past sin without obedience to the command of the Spirit to be baptized for that purpose, is not a believer in Jesus Christ. We think any intelligent and honest person must admit that he does

NOT BELIEVE IN JESUS

if he disobey his commands, or objects to the kingdom that he offers, or denies that he needs Elect from him in order to live forever, or refuses to comply with his conditions of forgiveness. We think he must admit that he either believes more in himself or some other mortal, who formulated his rule of faith and practice for him, than he does in Jesus, who said, "This gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world,.... and he that believeth and is baptized

SHALL BE SAVED;"

and "I am come that they might have life" and "because I live, ye shall live also."

But here it may be said that the Philippian jailer was told by Paul and Silas that if he believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, he should be saved," and that ought to be enough to save any body. We think so too; but now as to

WHAT IT IS

to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. In the first place we remark that this object of faith held up to the jailer had but one proper name. It was named JESUS by Gabriel, before his birth; in Luke i. 31; and he was so named because "he shall save his people from their sins" see Matt. i. 21, and the wages of sin being death, he of necessity must become the resurrection and the life, as well as furnish the blood through which forgiveness was possible. It is in this name of Jesus alone that remission of sins is obtainable. We can obtain that name in the manner prescribed by Christ

"BAPTIZING THEM

into the name. How could objector be so unreasonable as to claim Jesus as his Savior if he set Jesus' terms of salvation aside and select others? He selects as his Savior he whose terms he adopts. If they are his own, he simply tries to save himself. But we will now consider briefly, the official

TITLE OF JESUS

—Christ,—meaning Anointed. We read in Acts iv. 27 and x. 38; that God anointed [Christ] Jesus of Nazareth with Holy Spirit and with power. We read the account of his baptism by John in the 3rd of Matthew, and it said that the heavens were open unto him and he saw the spirit of God descending upon him like a dove and lighting upon him. In Heb. i. 9; Psa. xlv. 7, is quoted and applied to Jesus, "Thou lovest righteousness, and hatest iniquity, therefore God, thy God hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows." And we know from the language of Gabriel to Mary that besides being anointed to

PREACH THE GOSPEL

to the poor, heal the broken-hearted, preach deliverance to the captive, recovering of sight to the blind, etc., at his first advent, we know that he was anointed to sit upon the throne of his father David, and reign over the house of Jacob forever;" and from the 14th of Zechariah we know that he is also to be King over all the earth; and from his own lips we learn in the 25th of Matthew that he will certainly come from heaven and assume his royal prerogative, and invite all the

BLESSED OF THE FATHER

to share his power, authority and glory with him, by saying, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." And when the apostles went forth in obedience to Jesus' command to preach the gospel of the kingdom, we know that it was no more or less than a call to the people,—that is an invitation—from God unto his kingdom and glory. We say we know this, because in writing to the church at Thessalonica the apostle enjoins them to "walk worthy of God who hath called them unto his KINGDOM AND GLORY."

In all the Book of God there is a call to nothing that this does not include. No invitation to realms of glory above the sky, but as Dan. vii. 27 states it, the dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens; or as Jesus says, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth;" this squarely settles the locality of the kingdom God invites people to. People who accept an invitation to heaven, set aside God's invitation, and accept man's in preference to it; and they have no right to sell it

GOD'S HELP TO GET THERE.

God does not want them there, or else he would have invited them there. Heaven is already peopled as it hath pleased him. The gospel as a whole is God's effort to people this rebellious planet earth with holy and incorruptible beings equal to the angels in heaven, and who will do his will as perfectly here as they do there. For that purpose, he who is Anointed—that is Christ, Jesus of Nazareth, God's glorious Son, taught us to pray, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." If that kingdom never comes he has been

MADE CHRIST FOR NOTHING,

and the great God has the first time failed to carry out his revealed purpose. But he cannot fail. He has sworn by his own existence that he will not repent, that is, turn aside from his plan to fill the earth with his glory, so Jesus has not been anointed to his high office in vain. His resurrection from the dead is Jehovah's pledge that he will rule the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained. See Acts xvii. 31. Just as surely as the Bible is the Word of God so surely will Christ's mission be utterly useless for salvation purposes unless he comes again and brings salvation—life he procured by his death and resurrection, and bestows upon them the kingdom long promised. And here again we repeat, Christ is not the

SURNAME OF JESUS.

It is his official title; and how in the name of truth, or reason or commonsense can people say that they believe in Christ when they reject the kingdom he has been anointed to be King of? How can people claim to believe in Christ when they disbelieve what he says, disregard the gospel of the kingdom he offers to share with them? Just one more loving appeal and we have done. There are those who really love Jesus for what they SUPPOSE HE HAS DONE FOR THEM. In all kindness we say to them he has not done what they suppose; and hence their love is thrown away upon him. For him to reciprocate their love they must love him for what he HAS DONE! He shed his blood to ratify or make effective the life-giving covenant made with Abraham and that we might obtain forgiveness of sins, and so be entitled to a resurrection out from among the dead, and obtain an inheritance among all the sanctified ones—share the blessing of Abraham, (see Gal. iii. 14) who became heir of the world, (not heaven) through faith, Rom. iv. 13. And it is through belief of those exceeding great and precious promises relating to life and land and glory that Divine nature is to be attained, see 2 Peter i. 4. Only when their faith and hope grow out of what is promised are they possessed of a good hope through grace. We plead with them to remember that Jesus only appears unto salvation to them that look for him, Heb. ix. 8; and also not to forget that Jesus is coming here to be glorified in his saints. They do not go to him, see 2 Thess. i. 10. He is coming soon, and if they would reign with him when he comes, they must secure the great salvation now.

The London Standard announces that a Pan Anglican will convene in Lambeth Palace, the arch-episcopal residence, in 1897. It is 30 years since the last conference. The Archbishop says it is of the highest importance that the church of England should demonstrate that it is entitled to negotiate with Rome on a footing of perfect equality. Well, well; is it ready to go back to its mother, or negotiate to that end on such easy terms! Every way equal to Rome. We are sorry if it is every way equal to Rome.

Announcement.

The Church of God at Eagle Creek, Stark Co., will be dedicated the 2nd Sunday in November. Services will begin on Saturday evening before. Brother Wagoner is expected to preach the dedication sermon, and we extend an invitation to the officers of our conference and all lovers of truth to be present. Those coming on the Nickel Plate and Three I. R. R. will be met at Knox on Saturday and conveyed to the church. Yours in hope of the soon coming of Christ.

Dear Restitution:

In sending in my report of the annual conference here at St. Paul, Neb., I gave the amount that was paid into the evangelist fund, but neglected to give the amount subscribed. The amount paid in was $37.50. The amount subscribed was $227. Hoping that you will publish this for the encouragement of other lovers of truth, I remain.

Yours in the blessed hope.

The Reign of Peace.

When Jesus comes with his saints he will inaugurate a reign of peace that will include all the nations of the earth.

The prophet Isaiah speaking many hundred years ago, told of a time when peace should be universal in the world. He said they "shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks, nation shall not lift sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more". Certain it is that this prophecy has not yet been fulfilled. There is nothing in the outlook of nations at the present time that indicates that it ever will be fulfilled. But when we examine our Bibles a little further on we find another prophecy which must be fulfilled before the prophecy quoted above can be.

Isaiah says "nations shall not learn war any more." When that prophecy is fulfilled, war on this earth will forever be at an end. Who can comprehend how much that signifies. The prophet does not say there will not be any nations to make war with each other, but nations shall not learn war any more. Showing that there will be nations but they will be at peace.

Can nations be at peace if the people that constitute those nations are wrangling and disputing, arguing and contending with each other? No. The prophet evidently saw a time of universal peace and happiness. The people of all the world living in harmony and unison, each regarding the rights of others under the most absolute rule of right, yet without the necessity of competition.

But let us examine the second prophecy and see how it fits the present arrangement of things now existing in the world. Listen to Joel while he "portrays a scene which he saw take place on the earth." Proclaim this among the Gentiles. Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near, let them come up."

"Beat your plowshares into swords and your pruninghooks into spears." How does this fit the present statutes of things in the world. Are the nations arming, are they getting ready for war? All of the great nations except China, are and have been for the last several years, making greater preparation for war than they ever made before. Even the United states is engaged in this preparation. Our Navy is many times as more powerful today, than it has ever been before and we are still building war ships.

The great war when it comes will be fought on the continent of Europe and on the high seas. This country will not therefore need a land force.

The war spirit of the world is stronger to-day than it has ever been before.

Let us go back to Joel's prophecy again and examine it. First the "proclamation" is made to the Gentiles. Please note that the Jews have no part to this preparation for this great war. After all the great military chieftains of the world are called to the front, they are given strict and positive orders, what they are required to do, viz. "Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks into spears."

Is it not true that this command is being literally obeyed to-day by all the great European nations.

How many men are kept in the army in time of peace, who should be at home using their plows and pruning-hooks to raise food for their families instead of practising with swords and spears learning the art of how to kill each other.

Before we can have that peace and good will on the earth spoken of by the prophet Isaiah, the war spirit must be broken. Will it ever be broken, if so what means will our Heavenly Father use to accomplish it?

A Noble Life.

What is a noble life? Let some men show
[illegible]
[illegible] wealth till life is but a dream
[illegible] Mida-like their touch behold
[illegible] eating over-gross earthy things to gold!
[illegible] which grows clever as their hoards grow more,
[illegible] only with their breath their labors [illegible]
[illegible] Their fellow-men some spleen did raise
[illegible] and treasure hoped, but spurned
[illegible] memories shall be composed in [illegible]
[illegible] waxed rich, but died and [illegible]

[illegible] is a noble life? Let some men tell
[illegible] Come in many a battle-hail:
[illegible] hidden empires, scattered with a [illegible]
[illegible] gospel banner on his throne;
[illegible] those that believe and mend it as their [illegible]
[illegible] heads with rays of precious [illegible]
[illegible] with their brother's blood they stain the ground!

[illegible] die; and after many days
[illegible] marble speak their only praise!

What is a noble life? Some men grow pale
[illegible] quest, till their strained nerves fail
[illegible] struggle with strange lore, and comprehension
Mark well of wisdom in their wearied brain:
[illegible] age with treasures of the mind
[illegible] hidden meaning of all things they find,
[illegible] seek to find, and as they deeper go,
[illegible] still a jealous guard on all they know,
[illegible] with weight of knowledge in the race,
[illegible] whither like the dead, and leave no trace!

Wisdom and wealth and fame are glorious things,
And each may grace a life to which it brings
[illegible] true aims to be desired and garnered well
No life is noble with a good of self!
Where on earth a noble life would live
That toil to aid, and gather still to give;
Succour the weakling, smooth the rugged ways,
And with wise bounty sweeten all the days
He hath with manna to supply
He hath with manna to supply
He hath with manna to supply

"Are You Going Alone?"

Little David had been silently sitting by his dying brother, when, suddenly rising up, the child bent eagerly towards him, and said, as though giving utterance to a distressing thought, "But are you going alone, brother?"

"Going where, my little man?" asked Frank, in astonishment, and in some fear that his kind friends were planning to take him from home, in the vain hope of improving his health. I don't know," replied the child; "that's what I want to know. I heard the neighbors say you were going very fast, and when I asked about it, they said, 'Never you mind, little Davie, he's going where he can't take anybody with him!" Here poor David broke down, and the only words intelligible between his sobs were a repetition of the question, "Are you going alone?"

After his tears had subsided and he could listen quietly, Frank said, "The neighbors are right, Davie; I can't take you along with me; but don't you fear, I am not going alone." Little David's face brightened at this, and he said confidently, "I knew you wouldn't, 'cause who'd light your little lamp in the night?" Frank smiled and said, "Ah," Davie, "that's lighted already! 'twould be over late to light it now, though not too late, blessed be God!"

"But who's going with you, Frank, if none of us is?" asked Davie, after a short pause.

"A friend, Davie; and when I've told you three things about him, I think you will be able to guess his name." "All right!" nodded David, pleased to have anything to guess. "He is a true friend; he is a strong friend; he is a loving friend; he is——" David darted a look of inquiry at his brother, and then perceiving a certain beaming expression in his eyes, which always came when he spoke of his Savior, he said, quickly, "I guess already; you mean Jesus!"

Yes, Frank did mean Jesus, whom he had sought and found as a Savior in days of health and strength: and now that he was lying on a deathbed, expecting soon to take that long journey "from which no traveler returns," he found the value and happiness of having such a friend to trust to and in. Frank had so often proved this friend to be a true, strong, and loving one, that now, in the prospect of death, he could take the 23rd Psalm and make it the very language of his own soul as he looked up to the Lord Jesus Christ, and said, full of holy joy, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff comfort me."

Reader this is not idle tale. It is the true story of one who has to-day—the day on which I write, been laid in the grave; one whose voice of Christian peace and joy, "I am not going alone, for Jesus is with me!" still brings consolation to his weeping family, as I trust it may to you, if you are fearful of the unknown future with its certain ending.—Worlds Crisis.

Life's Little Days.

One secret of sweet and happy Christian life is in learning to live by the day. We think of life as a whole, running on for years, and it seems too great for us. We cannot carry this load until we are threescore and ten. We cannot fight this battle continually for half a century. But really there are no long stretches. Life does not come to us in life-times; it comes only a day at a time. Even to-morrow is never ours till it becomes to-day, and we have nothing whatever to do with it, but to pass down to it a fair and good inheritance in to-day's work well done and to-day's life well lived.

It is a blessed secret this of living by the day. Any one can carry his burden, however heavy, till night-fall. Any one can do his work, however hard, for one day. Any one can live sweetly, quietly, patiently, lovingly, and purely till the sun goesdown. And this is all that life ever really means to us,—just one little day.

"Do to-day's duty, fight to-day's temptation, and do not weaken and distract yourself by lookig forward to things that you cannot see, and could not understand if you saw them." Give us nights to shut down the curtain of darkness on our little days. We cannot see beyond, and we ought not to try to see beyond. Such horizons make life easier, and give us one of the blessed secrets of brave, true, holy living.—Northwestern Advocate.

Give Attendance to Reading.

One part of Christian worship is the public reading of the Word of God. And it is of great importance that people know how to read distinctly, clearly, audibly, and giving the sense properly.

To do this, persons must understand the meaning of the words read, and be so self-controlled that they can properly express the thoughts which they comprehend. There are those whose reading is affected and disgusting; others do not understand what they are reading, and hence cannot make others understand it.

There are others whose reading instructs, interests, melts, and thrills those who hear. Sometimes a passage is so read that it seems like a new revelation; or a hymn is so read that it cannot be forgotten.

Sometimes great good can be done by meeting for reading. A good reader can extend the influence of good books or tracts; and persons who cannot or will not themselves read, will listen intently to words which are well written and well read.

Many who cannot write or speak well can read, and "a reading meeting" may be made very useful to the hearers. What reader will undertake such a work?

Lost Lives.

Lost lives? which are they? Lives spent on self, wasted in pleasure, frittered on vanities, lived for time? Ambition may be gratified, aims achieved, honors won: but when earth is left behind what remains for such? Their grace and triumph will have vanished, self-consumed. Lost lives! As the words re-echo I see the saints of God, who from of old, declaring plainly that they wok a country have cheerfully gone forth on pilgrimage "not knowing whither they went." Abraham is among them. Paul is among them, and the heroes of our century of missions—Livingstone is there, Krapf is there, and William Carey; Allen Gardiner, starved to death on the desolate Fuegian shore; James Gilmore, tramping with bleeding feet frozen Mongolian uplands; Grahame Bronke, dying alone on the Upper Niger; John McKitterick, sleeping in the first white man's grave in distant Lololand—they are all there, all part of the eternal. And Jesus' life is there.

How to be "Nobody."

Loiter around your home all day Sunday in your soiled and patched apparel, when you should be clad in your cleanest linen and finest suit, occupying a seat in some gospel church.

When you return from your daily labor, eat your supper, and go up to the corner saloon, sit there upon the beer barrels, smoke tobacco and drink liquor.

Spend your leisure time in the barber shops, playing dominoes, checkers and cards, to kill the precious time God has given for nobler ends.

Withdraw from the society that is intelligent, moral, and refined, and let your company be the non-church-goers, the for-beer-senders, and the dime-novel-readers.

Be unambitious to reach elevated stations, listless in what you are engaged, given to idleness, and satisfied with your mental and moral growth.

Jews in Smyrna.

A remarkable Jewish movement is reported from Smyrna. A Russian Jew named Abraham was converted in the hospital at Smyrna, and began preaching to the Russian Jews, who formed themselves into a Jewish Christian Society. Already about two hundred have joined the movement, and it has become sufficiently important to attract to itself vigorous persecution.

Lost Money.

Almost every week we hear of men who have lost money. They have been robbed by employees, swindled by sharpers, betrayed by those they have trusted; money which they have supposed was safe has been squandered and lost; wills have been made, altered and broken, and in scores of ways their hard earnings and prudent savings have been lost, and have gone into the hands of servants of the devil.

It is better to do good with money while you have it; those who do this, can be sure that the money has gone where they wished it to go, and that the Lord will repay in his own good time that which has been lent to him.

Conference Notice.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Indiana, will meet at Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 15, 1895, and continue over the following Sunday.

A hearty invitation is extended to all of like precious faith.

Come with hearts filled with love and all differences laid aside. Let the one great aim be to cheer and encourage each other on the way and by so doing better prepare ourselves to overcome the trials and temptations we may have to endure. Come and let us do our duty and God will take care of the rest.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 13, 1895. NO. 42.

Poetry.

An Old Song.

[illegible] as you turn the yellow page,
[illegible] old song you sing,
[illegible] her look, it could ever age
[illegible] so simple merely
[illegible] old-fashioned thing.

[illegible] page was fair to view,
[illegible] old type was fresh and new,
[illegible] strain was our delight,
When hearts are gathered, night by night,
And those in the music of our day
Are soulless jog to sing and play,
In [illegible] youth, long, long ago.
A [illegible] group, we loved to meet,
When hope was high, and life was sweet;
When no shadow dared its sudden light
[illegible] veiled, in a rainbow bright,
[illegible] unwrinkled brow.

Two lips are mute that sang those words;
Two hands are still that struck those chords;
The loving heart is cold,
For all but the circle, one by one,
Has found companion there has gone;
While others stay to find how true
Their life has closed and flowed too,
And all of us are old.
To-day alone when music thrills,
The power of thought profound that fills
The soul, "Tis not all art!
The old familiar tones we hear
Descend upon the listening ear;
They vibrate in the heart.

And now you know the reason, dear,
Why I have kept and treasured here
This song of bygone years.
You laugh at the old-fashioned strain:
It brings my childhood back again,
And fills my eyes with tears.

From Old and New for August.

PSALM. 109.

110 COM. VER.

1. David's psalm. The Lord hath said unto my Lord, sit thou at my right-hand until I shall have made thine enemies a foot-stool for thy feet.

2. A sceptre of ability will the Lord send forth unto thee from out of Sion. Rule as Lord in the midst of thine enemies.

3. With them is the authority in a day of thine ability in the shining splendours of thy saints. From a womb before Heosphoros I begot thee.

4. The Lord hath sworn and will not change his purpose. Thou art a priest for the animate-age after the order of Melchisedek.

5. The Lord at thy right-hand crushed kings in a day of his wrath.

6. He will judge among the nations; He hath multiplied mutilated carcuses: He will break heads of many upon the earth;

7. From out a spring-torrent on a way will he drink; Therefore will he exalt a head.

PSALM 110 (111 COM. VER.)

1. Alleluia. I shall confess myself thine with all my heart, in a council of upright ones and in a synagogue.

2. Great are the works of the Lord, works that have been sought out (or found) in all his purposes.

3. Confession and majesty are his works and his righteousness abideth unto the animate-age.

4. He hath caused his wonders to be remembered; merciful and pitiful is the Lord:

5. Sustenance hath he given to those who fear him; his covenant will he have remembered forever.

6. The strength of his works hath he declared to his laity in having given to them an inheritance of nations.

7. Works of his hands are truth and judging; Reliable are all his commandments.

8. Staid up unto the animate-age instituted in truth and uprightness.

9. A way of redemption hath he sent unto his laity; He hath enjoined his covenant forever (or for the animate-age): Sacred and to be feared his name.

10. A beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord and good understanding is there for all who do it. His praise abideth unto the animate-age of the animate-age.

PSALM 111 (112 COM. VER.)

1. An Alleluia. Blessed-happy the man who feareth the Lord: In his commandments will he purpose exceedingly.

2. Enabled on the earth will his seed be; a generation of upright ones will have been blessed.

3. Glory and riches will these be in his house, and his righteousness abideth unto the animate-age.

3. He hath sent forth light in darkness for the upright, merciful and p'tiful and just is he.

5. A useful-good man, the one who pitieth and loaneth (the idea of use in this word for lend) will as a steward dispense his words in a judicial-way.

6. Because a justified man will not have been moved forever (or unto the animate-age); in eternal remembrance will he be.

7. He will not have been afraid of a wicked report; his heart is ready to hope in the Lord;

8. He hath scattered; he hath given to the needy; his righteousness abideth unto the animate-age of the animate-age; His horn will have been exalted in glory.

10. An elaborate-sinner will see and will have become wrathful; He will gnash his teeth and melt away; an elaborate-sinner's inordinate-desire will perish.

PSALM 112 (113 COM. VER.)

1. An Alleluia. Praise the Lord ye children: praise the name of the Lord.

2. May the name of the Lord have been eulogized from now on and during the animate-age:

3. From the rising of the sun unto the going-down thereof should the name of the Lord be praised.

4. High above all the nations is the Lord; above the heavens his glory.

5. Who is as the Lord our God; He who dwelleth among high ones.

6. And who looketh at the lowly things in the heavens and on the earth?

7. He who riseth up a beggar from earth, and exalteth a needy one from a dung-hill,

8. That he may seat him in the midst of rulers, in the midst of rulers of his laity;

9. He who causeth a barren one to dwell in a household as a mother rejoicing over children.

PSALM 113 (114, 115, COM. VER.)

1. An Alleluia. In Israel's exodus out of Aigyptos, Jakob's household from out a barbarous laity,

2. Joudaia became his sanctuary, Israel his official-power.

3. The sea saw it and fled away; The Jordanes was turned backward.

4. The mountains skipped like rams as it were, and the little hills like lambs of sheep.

5. What is it to thee, O sea, that thou didst flee? And thou, O Jordanes, that thou wast turned backwards?

6. O mountains, that ye did skip like rams as it were, and ye hills like lambs of sheep?

7. From before the face of the Lord was the earth moved, from before the face of the God of Jakob.

8. When he turned the rock into marshy-places of water, and the precipitous rock into fountains of water.

9. { PSALM 115, COM. VER. } Not { numbering 1 to 18 ver. } for us, O Lord, not for us, but rather for thy name's sake mayest thou have given glory unto thy mercy and thy truth.

10. Never may the nations have said, where is their God?

11. Our God forsooth is in the heavens and in the earth; All that he hath purposed he hath done.

12. The idols of the nations are silver and gold, works of men's hands:

13. A mouth have they and they will not talk; eyes have they and they will not see:

14. Ears have they and they will not hear; nostrils have they and they will not have smelled:

15. Hands have they and will not handle; feet have they and they will not walk; They will not make a sound with their throat.

16. Like to them may they have become who make them, and all those who trust in them.

17. The house of Israel hath hoped in the Lord: their responsive helper and protector is he.

18. The house of Aaron hath hoped in the Lord: their responsive-helper and protector is he.

19. Those who fear the Lord have hoped in the Lord, their responsive-helper and protector is he.

20. The Lord hath remembered us and blessed us: He hath blessed the house of Israel: He hath blessed the house of Aaron:

21. He hath blessed those who fear the Lord, the small with the great.

22. May the Lord have again (blessed) you, you and your sons;

23. We are they who eulogize the Lord who created the heavens and the earth.

24. The heavens of the heavens are the Lord's; but he hath given the earth unto the sons of men.

25. The dead will not praise thee, O Lord, nor all those who go down into hades (the grave);

26. But we who are alive will commend the Lord, from now on and during the animate-age.

PSALM 114 { 116, COM. VER. Heb } { 1 verse of the next ps }

1. An Alleluia. I have loved, because the Lord will hearken unto the voice of my supplication;

2. Because he hath inclined his ear unto me, and in my days shall I invoke him.

3. Woes of death encompassed me, dangers of hades found me, tribulation and woe I found;

4. And I invoked the name of the Lord, with, O Lord, mayest thou have delivered my soul.

5. Merciful is the Lord and just, and our God will be merciful.

6. One who watcheth to guard the chil[illegible] is the Lord; I became humble and he saved me.

7. Return O my soul unto thy rest, because the Lord hath been thy benefactor.

8. Because he hath delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from destruction.

9. I shall be content in the sight of the Lord in a land of the living.

Saved by Law or Gossip, —Which?

Dear brothers and sisters, I can imagine I can see you open your eyes with astonishment and look the second time when they first fall on the heading of my article. But let me tell you how I happened to take it. My little boy was reading the other day in THE RESTITUTION. And this is the way he read, Saved by Law or Gossip—which.

At first I was inclined to laugh at him for reading that way. But the more I thought of it the less I felt like laughing.

Bro. Joblin's article is good, I have been very much edified by reading it. I truly believe if I had been a Seventh day Adventist, I should have concluded after reading his article to change belief and become converted to the gospel of Christ.

But to come back to my heading, saved by law or gossip, which. As to the law I am not going to consider that today at all.

What is the meaning of the word gossip. If I am allowed to give Webster, I will say one definition is, to tell idle tales. Now what is a larger share of the preaching and teaching of to-day but the telling of idle tales. I would not say the people are not honest in their teaching, because I know many are, but I fear they have read the Bible with their father's specs upon their head, and sees the thing just as their father said.

Now if they are not preaching and teaching gospel what is it. I believe there is one gospel, one faith, one Christ, and one baptism.

Some preach that it matters not what you believe if you are honest in it and try to do right, that you will be saved.

Cornelius of old was a devout man, and one that feared God, who gave much alms to the poor. And prayed to God always. Yet God saw fit to send Peter to tell him words whereby he might be saved.

Again, we often hear, and from the pulpit too that baptism is not a saving ordinance, it is only a sign of consecration required by the church, (and some churches do not require it). If that is all, why then did our Savior say: He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. They will tell you that there are three modes of baptism. If so why did Jesus not tell us. But instead he showed us by example one way being baptized himself. John the Baptist was baptizing in the Jordan (not out of a bowl). The record says that Jesus came to be baptized of him. Jesus overruled all his scruples, and said, suffer it to be now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. And Jesus when he was baptized went up straightway out of the water, etc.

We often hear, yes it is taught in most of our school books, that the soul is immortal and can never die. If so where can it be found in the Bible. I remember hunting all one winter for it long, long ago. When I found it was not there then I thought it must be infered. But I can say for a truth now that it is not infered either. But this is what it does say, that God in his judgment will render to every man according to his work or deeds.

To them by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life. I understand by this that those that seek for glory, honor, and immortality, that the reward is eternal life, and if they get it they will become immortal and be like Christ. As has often been said if we are in possession of a thing why would we seek for it. But they will confront you with this that the reward spoken of is a home in heaven, and will give whole sermons, telling you how this one, or that one has been called away by death, forgetting that death is an enemy. No enemy will place us in the presence of Jesus and all his holy angels. But on the contrary death will place us in the grave where we shall have to stay until the Life Giver opens the graves and says "Come Forth."

Now all this looks to me like idle tales, therefore must be gossip. They are tales handed down from generation to generation. They are fables and commandments of men, given for doctrine like the teachings of the Jews of old. We all know what has been preached and what is being preached today for gospel, and truly we can hardly find any gospel in it. So if it is not gospel it must be gossip, as I said, for gossip in telling idle tales.

Let us dear brothers and sisters, read our Bible, and try to understand what it says, and not trust others to fix it up for us.

"So many people in these latter days,
Have read the Bible in so many ways,
That few can tell which system is the best.
For every party contradicts the rest;
But read it prayerfully and you will see
Although men contradict, God's word agrees.
For what the early prophets wrote,
We find that Christ and his apostles spoke.
So trust no creed that troubles to recall
What has been penned and verified by all."

ALMIRA BROOKS.

OUR CHILDREN.

Kissed His Mother.

She sat in the porch in the sunshine
As I went down the street
A woman whose hair was silver,
But whose face was blossom sweet.
Making me think of a garden,
When, in spite of the frost and snow
Of bleak November weather,
Late, fragrant lilies blow.

I heard a foot-step behind me,
And the sound of a merry laugh,
And I knew the heart it came from
Would be like a comforting staff
In the time and the hour of trouble,
Hopeful and brave and strong.
One of the hearts to lean on
When we think all things are wrong.

I turned at the click of the gate-latch,
And met his manly look;
A face like his gives me pleasure,
Like the page of a pleasant book.
It told a steadfast purpose,
Of a brave and daring will;
A face with promise in it,
That, God grant, the years fulfill.

He went up the pathway singing;
I saw the woman's eyes
Grow bright with a wordless welcome,
As sunshine warms the skies.
"Back again, sweetheart mother,"
He cried and bent to kiss
The loving face uplifted
For what some mothers miss.

That boy will do to depend on;
I hold that this is true—
From lads in love with their mothers
Our bravest heroes grew.
Earth's grandest hearts have been loving hearts,
Since time and earth began;
And the boy who kisses his mother
Is every inch a man.

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea.—No. 38.

THE SOJOURN AT SINAI.

We come now to the third commandment.

2. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."

You all understand this, you know that we break this command when we speak of the dear Heavenly Father in a light and irreverent way, we must never use it when there is no need of doing it, even in our most solemn speech, or prayers, we must not make it a by-word to cry out by, when in anger, pain or surprise. We must not take oath by it on any occasion or under any circumstances. "Swear not at all," must be the law of the Christians. To swear by animate or inanemate things, is to swear by him who made them, we must reverence that holy, holy, name.

4. Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

This command was given to Israel, because they had been in bondage in Egypt, and had been brought out by the mighty hand and outstretched arm of their God, Deut. v. 12, 16. Some think that this was the statue, that was given to them at Marah. Ex. xv. 25.

God promised, that if they kept the Sabbath it should be well with them, if not, evil would come upon them.

You will find by and by how Jeroboam, the servant of Solomon, was made king of the ten tribes of Israel, and how he led them into idolatry, and how idolatry led to Sabbath-breaking, and to their being carried away by their enemies, into Assyria, to Halah and Habor by the river Gozan, and to the cities of the Medes. They divorced themselves from God and from his laws, by their idolatry, and he gave them a bill of divorcement and put them away, just as a wicked wife is put away by her husband. Je. iii. 8. The sweet, restful Sabbath was taken from them, and all the blessed things that were made for their health and peace.

They were far from God, "alienated from his covenant by wicked works, without God and without hope in the world," from before Christ 721, when Jesus came and was "sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." They were redeemed by his death from the curse of the law, and were given a new covenant and a new day of rest. That is how it comes that we keep the first day of the week instead of the seventh day.

It was given to us to keep in memory of our Lord's resurrection. The house of Judah, or the Jews, seem never to have been divorced from the old covenent. No bill of divorce was given to them. They still hold fast to the Sabbath and to the law of Moses.

God has a reason for his action in both cases. The one house was to cling to the Old Testament, as a witness to the truth of that, "Ye are my witness, saith the Lord of Hosts."

5. "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

Paul calls this the first commandment with promise. God promises to give long life to children who honor their parents. Eph. vi. 1, 2, 3. You honor your parents by obeying them. Disobedience to father or mother, God says is worthy of death. Rom. i. 30, 32. The death spoken of is the second death, no obedient, faithful child can be an anarchist, no lawless breaker up of society and of government, can come from a family where the God-appointed heads have due and respectful honor. Eternal life can come only to an obedient child. If you would have the life to come, learn to obey.

6. "Thou shalt not kill." "He that hateth his brother is a murderer." We must keep all angry, revengful thoughts out of our hearts, it is these that tend to murder.

7. "Thou shalt not commit adultery."

Be pure and chaste in mind and character, let not the shadow of an impure thought, sully the tender pages of your hearts.

8. Thou shalt not steal.

We do not like to have others take our things from us without paying for them, we feel wronged if they do it, we work hard to get what we have, and God meant that we should enjoy the fruits of our labor. It is not doing as we would like to be done by if we take without leave, or without pay, that which another has earned.

My mother taught me not to take even as small a thing as a pin without asking the owner if I might have it. It is stealing if we take apples at a grocery-store, just as much as it would be, if we went to a money-drawer and helped ourselves to the money. We get on the wrong side of the fence and break God's command when we go into a neighbors woods and take his nuts and berries without leave.

It is not fun, but sin, when chicken-roosts and melon-patches are robbed. It is trampling on the rights of your neighbors, it is taking that which is not yours. Do not touch the smallest thing without leave, keep your inner self unsullied. Only faithful boys make faithful men, and only faithful men can be trusted here and hereafter.

9. "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."

Would you like to have one of your young companions tell a false story about you? If some misdeed had been done, in which you had taken no part, would you like it, if the ringleader, for fear of being blamed and punished himself, should lay the blame upon you, and you get the punishment due to him? Then in all cases tell the exact truth. If you do wrong, confess your guilt and bear the consequences bravely.

10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbors house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbors wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's.

To covet that which does not belong to us, is the desire to get it wrongfully, if we cannot gain possession of it in any other way. Ahab, coveted Naboth's vineyard and it led to murder, we must not want things that we cannot get in a lawful manner. If a man does not care to sell his house, we must not have such a desire for it that we will take it from him by wrong means, we would not like to give up a cherished home ourselves, and we must do here as we would like others to do by us. To covet the property of others, leads us into a great many other sins, let us obey God, and be content with what we have.

We have now finished our study of the ten commandments, much more could be said about them, but we cannot tarry now, we had not thought of stopping as long as we have. But how could we tell you what God meant his people to be if we did not explain his laws as we went along?

Do you remember the bitter waters of Marah? Were they not like the bondage of Israel in Egypt? Then, if the Sabbath was the ordinance given them there, was it not given to teach them that though their bondage had been hard, and full of bitterness like these waters, that rest, peaceful rest had come now?—rest and guidance under the wings of the great and good shepherd?

How many of the ten commandments can you find carried over to the New Testament? Have any of them been changed or left out? We will see who can answer, for God has taken this people out of Egypt to make of them a nation, loftier in character, than any other nation, and all laws necessary to bring this end about will be given to them in whatever age of the world they may live.

He will not have them become a nation of idol-worshipers, liars, thieves, drunkards, adulterers and murderers, so he forbids all these sins and commands as the first step toward keeping his commandments, that they remember that he is the Lord their God, and that to him only belongs their allegiance.

When God had spoken these words, and all the terrors that surrounded him had been seen and heard, the people stood afar off, and begged that God might not speak any more to them lest they die.

So the manner of his worship was explained to Moses, and Moses told it to the people. An altar of earth must be built to him and burnt offerings and peace offerings offered therein, and in whatever place he recorded his name, there he would come to them and bless them.

AUNTIE WINN.

One of the sweetest passages in the Bible is this one, "Underneath are the everlasting arms." It is not often preached from, because it is felt to be so much richer and more touching than anything we ministers can say about it. But what a vivid idea it gives of the divine support! The first idea of infancy is of resting in arms which maternal love never allow to become weary. Sick-room experience confirms the impression when we have seen a feeble mother or sister lifted from the bed of pain by the stronger ones of the household. In the case of our Heavenly Father, the arms are felt but not seen. The invisible, secret support comes to the soul in its hours of weakness or trouble; for God knoweth our feebleness—he remembers that we are but dust.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a scriptural belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a godly life as essential for final salvation.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

Notice is hereby given that the Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association will be held at Chapel Hall, Plymouth, Ind., at 1:30 p. m. Saturday, Nov. 16, 1895, for the purpose of chosing a Board of Directors for the year, and the transaction on such other business as may come before the Association.

ROBERT RATHBURN, Pres.

"SET your standard of character and conduct high, then work up to it."

HE who lives for himself alone, lives for one of the meanest men in existence.

"WITH love, the heart becomes a fair and fertile garden, glowing with sunshine and warm hues, and exhaling sweet odors, but without love it is a bleak desert covered with ashes."

"SOME persons take reproof good humoredly enough unless you unfortunately hit a sore place. Then they wince and writhe, and start up as if they would like to floor you for your impertinence, or wish you good morning."

IT was Carlyle who said, "It is a high, solemn almost an awful thought for every individual man that his earthly influence, which has had a commencement, will never, through all ages, were he the very meanest of us, have an end!"

REV. Myron Reed of Populist tendencies recently said at a campaign meeting, that two hundred men should be armed on election day to watch the polls, and any one detected voting fraudulently, should be shot down on the spot, and closed with the remark: "That's the kind of a saint I am."

JERUSALEM is becoming quite modernized. There are now eight printing offices, five of which are in connection with monastic establishments. The three general printing offices are those of local Hebrew newspapers, respectively called the "Hoar," (Light), "Hacharazeleth" (the Flower) and "Jerusholjim."

BROTHER and Sister Woodward returned to Plymouth last Saturday and began meeting in the evening and will continue through the week. The conference will begin on Friday, and it is hoped that all that possibly can, will attend. The interest is better than ever before and we have every reason to believe that much good may be done for the Master. Pray for us.

"THERE is no condition in the world so mean and despicable but yields us opportunity of doing good. There is neither old nor young, man nor woman, rich nor poor, high nor low, learned nor unlearned, but in their spheres, by a good husbandry of those talents God has given them they may be very useful to others, and prove instruments of much good in their generation."

PERSIAN Proverbs say:—"A man passes for a sage when he seeks wisdom; but he who thinks he has found it is a fool." "An ass which bears its burden is of more value than a lion which devours men." "Patience is a tree whose roots are bitter, but whose fruit is very sweet." "Ten poor men can sleep tranquilly on a mat; but two kings cannot live at peace in a quarter of the world."

ACCORDING to a recent statement of Prof. Sayce, it is now determined beyond a doubt that there was such a person as the Queen of Sheba, and there was such a district from which she hailed; and that her journey to see Solomon was one of the most natural things to be expected. The spade did it, although we have been told over and over again that there was no such person, and no such place, etc. Wonderful thing that spade. And it has come to pass that the testimony of a piece of old crockery is worth a dozen statements from the Bible. Uh, me says the Standard.

SIN is our nakedness and shame, and it must be covered by putting on the robe of righteousness.—Christ, in baptism. Ye must be buried with him in baptism,—being dead in your sins and thus being born of water a new creature, must live unto God through Christ. Col. ii. 12; John iii. 5. This is the only way by which we can enter Christ, and it is only through him that we can obtain the blessing of Abraham, because it has to come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ, that we (who have been baptized into his name) might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith. Gal. iii. 14.

IT is said that in the forests of Tartary and South America where the wild horse is gregarious, there are herds of five or six hundred, which, being ill prepared for fighting, or indeed, for any sort of resistance, and knowing that their safety is in flight, when they sleep appoint one in rotation who acts as sentinel while the rest are asleep. If a man approaches, the sentinel walks toward him, as if to reconnoiter and see whether he may be deterred from coming near; if the man continues on he neighs aloud and in a peculiar tone, which rouses the herd and all gallop away, the sentinel bringing up the rear. Nothing can be more judicial or rational than this arrangement, simple as it is.

The Drift of Things Religious.

An important telegram from Young-town, Ohio on Nov. 3rd said, "The women of St. John's Episcopal Church, the wealthiest congregation in the city, are making arrangements to present a minstrel entertainment during December, at the residence of Judge and Mrs. Arrel, the proceeds to be used in augmenting the building fund of the church. The programme will include a genuine minstrel performance, with plantation songs and negro melodies of the time before the war, and it is predicted will be an artistic and financial success." We have no doubt of it; and besides the artistic and financial features it is a clear fulfillment of the prophecy of Paul 2 Tim. iii. 4 that in the last days perilous times shall come, and one of their characteristics is the love of pleasure more than the love of God. Mark, it is the wealthiest congregation in the city, but the love of God will not induce them to part with their wealth: but if there be a prospect of fun and frolic money flows freely. The next verse still further helps us to realize that we are living in the last days, because the having a form of godliness without its power or influence was to be another characteristic of the last days. It becomes those who understand from the prophetic Word that we are rushing on to the point where two dispensations meet, to set themselves like steel against this sensual tendency or else they will presently wake up to the fact that a deadly enemy to vital godliness has gained an entrance to the fold. The Spirit's injunction uttered by Paul, "From such turn away," was written for us. Let us heed it; and if we raise a breeze it proves that the flesh has already begun to assert itself, and decisive measures must be adopted at once.

Foreign News Items.

Startling despatches have been coming from the East concerning a recent treaty between Russia and China by which the former has obtained wonderful commercial advantages and England is said to be not a little stirred about it. It is also said that there is a strange and growing feeling in Japan in favor of Russia, it being felt that an alliance with that power will alone bring prosperity. A despatch from Philadelphia says that the operations of the Transcontinental Railroad, now in course of construction from the Black Sea to Vladivostock had placed a large order there for locomotives for service on that road. The British whaleback steamship Turret Bell had been chartered to load the first cargo there in December.

Late advices from Constantinople say that another terrible massacre of Christians has taken place in Armenia, and later reports from Erzingjan reports several hundred killed in the recent disturbance there. The Turkish version of it says fifty were killed.

The London Times, commenting upon the recently concluded Russo-China treaty whereby Russia obtains the right to anchor her fleet at Port Arthur and to construct and work railways from Nertchinsk and Tsitsihar to Vladivostock, and from Tsitsihar to Port Arthur, together with other commercial advantages to which the most favored nation clause is not applicable, is something the great power cannot look upon with indifference. And adds "such a destruction of the balance of power is almost unparalleled in audacity." We are living when we may expect audacious things to be done by that power of destiny, we think.

The St. James Gazette says: Even war with Russia would be less than to allow her, without a blow, to get such a grip upon China. She could throttle all the other powers and choke off their commerce. Unless Russia and China give the necessary assurances, it is a case for an ultimatum, and perhaps step our diplomacy has had since the Crimean war."

The impression is general in the official world, and it is reechoed by the press, that neither America nor Germany can allow the Pacific to become a "Franco-Russian lake," as the Globe puts it, and it is generally thought that the diplomats would be sufficiently strong to combine to resist Russian aggression.

The Pall Mall Gazette sums up the startling news from the far East with the statement that "Russia has annexed China," and in the course of a long article on the subject, adds: "If this treaty is to stand, roll up the map of Asia." In conclusion the Pall Mall Gazette urges the occupation of Port Hamilton by the British and the immediate strengthening of the British fleet in Chinese waters "lest Japan lose her fleet at the first blow."

"Oh, I Have been Baptized."

Twice, recently, we have been met with this assertion after urging the obedience of faith upon those who we were persuaded believed in outline the great Truths we proclaim as gospel. Singularly both of them said they had been baptized into the Disciple, or Christian Church." For their benefit, and that of those in a like condition, we propose to reason the matter with them from a Bible standpoint.

We admit they have been baptized; and we admit there is only one Scriptural mode of baptism,—immersion in water, and that they have complied with that mode: and we take it for granted that they were baptized because they understood it to be a divine command,—and furthermore that they honestly and truthfully state the case when they say they were baptized into what is called the Disciple, or Christian Church, and that the object in view was the remission of their past sins. They may think, perhaps, after all these admissions that nothing remains but for us to recognize them as parts of the Body of Christ.

But now to the law in the case, and the testimony. Jesus said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned." Now, as Jesus and his apostles are recognized as authority for the command to be baptized for the remission of sins, they certainly should be recognized as authority for the conditions imposed. These are faith and repentance; a person is not a fit subject for baptism unless he believes, because Jesus says, "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" and Peter, addressing those who already believed, says in Acts ii. 38, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins."

Being authority for the conditions of faith and repentance in order to remission of sins, Jesus and the apostles must certainly be also authority for the object of faith, or the things to be believed. It is not left for men and women to select something that pleases them, to believe, and conclude that that will make them fit subjects for baptism, and secure to them remission of sins, and all the rights and immunities of God's children. It was the gospel Jesus commissioned his disciples to preach, that must be believed before baptism is valid. It is he who believes the gospel and is baptized that shall be saved. If it be asked what gospel, we answer there is but one gospel, variously styled the "Gospel of the Grace of God;" "the gospel of Christ;" "the gospel of the kingdom," etc., and if it be further asked what the gospel of Christ is, we answer the gospel Christ preached: "The gospel of the kingdom." see Matt. iv. 23: Mark i. 14: and Matt. xxiv. 14 where Jesus says, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness," etc. Now, the importance of believing this very gospel of Christ is evident from the language of Paul in the 18th verse of the first chapter of Romans, where it is distinctly said that "the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation," —to whom?—"Every one that believeth." this means that no others will be saved, we know, by the words of Jesus; "He that believeth not shall be condemned."

The question now is, at the time of baptism what did these friends believe? Did they believe the good news concerning the kingdom which they now believe the God of heaven shall set up on the earth, the throne of which shall be occupied by the exalted and glorified Jesus, and the foundation promises of which were made to the fathers of the Hebrew nation, and which is to be the grand instrument in reclaiming the rebel planet earth, and filling it with the glory of God? If this was what was believed, we suppose they intended or expected by baptism to secure an interest in that kingdom, so as to be welcomed to it, and enstalled in office by the King of kings when he comes in his glory, and seats himself upon the throne, and says, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

But the fact of being baptized into the Disciple or Christian Church seems to say that they were of the same faith as that Body; which knows nothing about God's promised kingdom to be set up in the last days, but supposes that the church is the kingdom of God on earth, but their everlasting home is away off beyond the skies somewhere.

As our friends have discovered the baselessness of that faith and hope, they should now see, that their confidence being misplaced, their baptism was in obedience to that misplaced confidence or faith, instead of obedience to faith in the gospel of the kingdom. And, as they believed in, and hoped for, what God has never promised, they were baptized without the essential condition named by Christ, viz., faith in the gospel. And having now corrected their faith, correct obedience is now in order, providing they believe with the heart, and not merely intellectually.

The great mistake of our friends, and many more we fear, is, that they pay too little attention to the pre-requisites for baptism and rely too much upon the act itself. Immersion in water has no virtue for salvation purposes apart from heart belief of the gospel. Immersion in water with merely a correct intellectual faith in the gospel is many times worse than useless. It fatally deludes. It is with the heart [mind, affection] man believes unto righteousness. In other words, man's sins are not remitted, he is not considered righteous in the sight of God when baptized with only an intellectual faith. We must obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto us.

Again, in being baptized into the Disciple Church our friends became members of a Body that believes men are by nature immortal. And we hold that it is impossible for such to understand the import of baptism. How can such understand what it is to die with Christ, figuratively, and be raised up out of the grave of water in the likeness of his resurrection? Paul in the 6th of Romans says, "For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." But the Disciple doctrine of immortal souls and heaven-going at death being true, what care they about the resurrection? At the most it would only mean to them the resurrection of an old tenement or prison house that they would have no use for, after being freed from it long ago.

Finally, Paul in the 3rd of Gal. says, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." This is far different from baptism into the Disciple Church. Christ means Anointed, and to be baptized in the one anointed to be King of God's kingdom is to have embraced the faith of the king so he is heir to, and to become His, the result of this being that the baptized one becomes one of Abram's seed [faithwise, of course], and [and what?] heirs according to the promise," [to Abraham]. Thus and only thus the obedient believer obtains a title clear to a mansion in the Father's House. Our prayer is that our friends may lose no time in securing an inheritance among all the sanctified ones, by obtaining the sin-covering name of Jesus, by obedience to the truth as it is in him.

The Christian's Hope.

First, let us see what is meant by the expression: "The Christian's Hope." Now hope is made up of expectation and desire. When either of these is absent, hope can not exist. Therefore a Christian's hope is that which a Christian desires and expects. What then is the Christian's hope?

What answer would the majority of those, who pretend to believe the Bible, give if they were asked what they hoped to receive, or, what benefits they hoped to derive in return for following Christ? Would they not say that they hoped when they died, to be taken to heaven and there sing forever around the throne of God?

I believe that this is the substance of the answer which nine persons out of every ten would give; but according to the Word of God can they have this hope? We know that no matter how much we may desire to go to heaven, if God has not promised us to go, or has not invited us there, we may, never expect to go. Hence, we can not have that hope.

Let us therefore see what the Bible says in reference to this. In Acts the 13th chapter, and the 22nd verse, we find God's testimony to David. He says, "I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfill all my will.

In Acts ii. 29, we read that David is both dead and burried. Well has David gone to heaven? If he has, we, too, may expect to if we live according to the will of God; but if he has not, we can never expect to. In the 34th and 35th verses of the same chapter, we read, "For David is not ascended into the heavens, but he saith himself, the Lord said unto my Lord sit thou on my right hand until I make thy foes thy footstool."

Next let us turn to the third chapter of John and the thirteenth verse. Here we read, "And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven."

Again we notice that while Christ was talking to his disciples before his crucifixion, he spoke the words recorded in John vii. 33 and 34. "Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me. Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me and where I am, thither ye cannot come."

From these passages we find that David has not gone to heaven, that no man has gone there, and that Christ told his apostles that they could not go there, and now in Prov. x. 30, we read, "The righteous shall never be removed; but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth."

Notwithstanding all this, the majority of those, who claim to be following Christ, are working and trying to go where Christ has never promised them to go, and where he has positively told them that they could not go. What good can such a hope as this be to any one? a hope that is right contrary to the teachings of the Bible. What then should be the Christian's hope, or is it necessary that we should have a definite hope?

In Eph. iv. 4, we find these words. "There is one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling." This shows that Paul recognized but one hope. Let us now endeavor to find out whether he thought it necessary to have this one hope or no. In Rom. v. 3, and 4, we read, "And not only so, but we glory in tribulations also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience: and patience experience: and experience hope. Does not this of itself show that Paul thought it necessary to have this one hope? Would he suffer and glory in tribulation for something which he did not need, or which would be of no benefit to him?

Again in Rom. xv. 4, we read, "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope."

Why does Paul think it so necessary to have this one hope? He tells us in the 24th verse of the 8th chapter of this same book, where he says, "For we are saved by hope."

What is this hope that would save Paul, and how may it be obtained?

In Eph. ii. 11, and 12, we read, "Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called uncircumcision by that which is called the circumcision in the flesh made by hands. That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world."

Then to be aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, is to be without hope and without God in the world. To have hope then, which is just the opposite, one would have to be worthy of a share in the commonwealth of Israel, and acquainted with the covenants of promise.

In other words they must have the faith of the gospel, which will create this one hope.

To prove this, let us turn to Gal. v. 5. Here we read, "For we through the spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith.

Again in Col. i. 3, to 5, we find these words, "We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you, since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints, for the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel."

In Col. i. 21 to 24, we read, "And you that were sometimes alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unreproveable in his sight. If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven; whereof I Paul am made a minister."

There we see that it is only by a belief in the gospel that we can have a saving hope.

Let us therefore study the Word of God that we may be ready always, as Peter says, to give an answer to every man that asketh us a reason of the hope that is in us, with meekness and fear. (1. Peter iii. 15.)

The Christian's hope is a very broad one. The realization of it depends upon a resurrection from the dead to eternal life.

In Prov. xiv. 32, we find the words, "The wicked is driven away in his wickedness; but the righteous hath hope in his death." Yes, he has hope that he shall rise again at the appearance of the "Life Giver."

In Job. xiv. 14, and 15, Job says, "If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee; thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands."

Yes, Job was going down to the grave as he says in Job. xvii. 13, "If I wait, the grave is mine house, I have made my bed in the darkness." But when Christ calls, he will answer, and will come forth; and as he said in Job xix. 26, in his flesh, he shall see God.

Are we sure that Paul's hope is in the resurrection? To prove that it is, we have only to turn to Acts xxiv. 14, and 15. Paul here says, "But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my father, believing all things that are written in the law and the prophets; and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust.

Here we see what Paul's hope was, and what ours should be. In Acts xxvi. 6, Paul says, "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers.

I suppose some one would say, "why I thought that you had just been saying that there was but one hope and that was in the resurrection, and the resurrection is not mentioned here at all."

So there is but one hope. This is only another expression for the same thing. Can we prove this?

Let us just read this verse and then the two following. And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers, unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. For which hope's sake, King Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?

Here again we see that Paul's hope is in the resurrection. This hope is called also the "Hope of Israel."

What further assurance have we that the righteous dead will be raised to eternal life? In 1 Peter i. 3, and 4, we read, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you." Again in 1 Thes. iv. 13, and 14, we find these words, "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

We have now found what the Christian's hope is; we must next find out where it is.

In Psalm 146, 5, we read, "Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God."

Again in those verses that we read a short time ago, Col. i. 3, to 5, "We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you, since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus and of the love which ye have to to all the saints. For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel."

"Why", says some one, "I thought that your hope was not in heaven." O, yes, it is, but it is not going to stay there. It will come to us when Christ comes.

In Titus ii. 11, to 15, we read, "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

Now my dear friends, when we see this hope so clearly set forth in the Scriptures, why cannot everyone accept it?

Let us believe the one gospel message, and thus have the one faith, which creates the one hope, and then let us purify ourselves that when Christ comes, we may be like him and see him as he is, for we know that if we are partakers of the sufferings, so shall we be also of the consolation. 2 Cor. i. 17.

If we have this hope, it will be as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast. Therefore we desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end. That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises.

Your sister in the Blessed Hope.

Watching, Walking, Working.

Are you watching for the Master
Day by day?
A fresh golden morn is breaking,
Does the thought your spirit cheer
Maybe ere the day is over
He'll appear?

Are you walking with the Master
Day by day?
Simply walking on with Jesus,
Pressing on for one step more;
Undismayed that he veils the future
Yet in store?

Are you working for the Master
Day by day?
Are you gathering in some lost ones,
Following in the Savior's track,
Like the keeper of the vineyard
Cometh back?

Be a watching, waiting, working,
Day by day,
In the little time that's left you,
Even though the way be dark,
Press still onward, upward, heavenward,
Toward the mark.

How Sabbatarians Reason.

An objector inquires: "If Israel's sabbaths were to continue how could the Holy Spirit through Paul say, let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink, or in respect of a feast day, or of a new moon, or a sabbath day?"

Mr. Sabbatarian replies: "I answer. The weekly sabbath is not Israel's sabbath, but Jehovah's sabbath. 'The seventh day is the sabbath of Jehovah, thy God.' Ex. xx. 10. 'Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep; six days shall work be done, but the seventh is the sabbath of rest, holy unto the Lord.' 'And mindest known unto them thy holy sabbath.' Neh. ix. 14. There were yearly sabbaths which belonged to that people and to that dispensation. Paul had reference to them. They were connected with the feast days, and were contained in the "handwriting" which, in a figure, was to be nailed to the cross, and taken out from the 'midst.' 'Let no one, therefore, says the apostle, 'rule you in drink, or in respect of a festival, or of a new moon, or of sabbaths.' I quote from the Emphatic Diaglott. 'Sabbaths,' plural in the Greek, plural in the rendering into English in the Diaglott. It was because the handwriting of ordinances was taken out of the 'midst' between Israel and the Gentiles by the sacrifice of Christ, that Paul said, 'Therefore let no man rule you in food and drink, and in respect of feast days and new moons, and sabbaths.' The sabbaths referred to were the holy convocation days connected with the yearly feasts enjoined upon Israel."

Mr. Sabbatarian in answering the above question seems to think it necessary to draw a distinction between the weekly sabbath, and the yearly sabbaths God commanded Israel to keep. He affirms that "the weekly sabbath is not Israel's sabbath, but Jehovah's sabbath." In proof he quotes Ex. xx. 10: "The seventh day is the sabbath of Jehovah thy God."

His next citation from Scripture is the following: "Verily MY SABBATHS ye shall keep."

Mr. Sabbatarian's last quotation is adverse to the point he wished to make. "My" is a personal pronoun in the possessive case, relating to Jehovah, and possesses sabbaths,—in the plural number. Hence Jehovah claims both the yearly and weekly sabbaths as HIS sabbaths. Try again.

In answer to the inquiry at the head of this article, he says: "There were yearly sabbaths which belonged to that people and to that dispensation. Paul had reference to them." True, that is what we claim for the weekly also. They were all given "to that people and that dispensation."

One of the reasons God gave Israel why they should observe the sabbath was that he had delivered them from the bondage of Egypt; "therefore [for this reason] the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath."

We have seen that Mr. Sabbatarian claims that the word "sabbaths," in the plural, relates to the yearly sabbaths; and belongs "to that people, and that dispensation. Now notice the consistency of his reasoning. He quotes the following Scripture: "Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, My sabbaths ye shall keep, for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations, that ye may know that I am Jehovah that doth sanctify you." Ex. xxxi. 13. His quotation relates to "sabbaths" in the plural, and he comments upon it as follows: "The generations of Israel have not ceased: therefore the sign should be on them still. Our friends claim to be adopted into Israel, but they reject the sign, and call it a yoke of bondage. How, then, do they know that Jehovah, the God of Israel, doth sanctify them. Separated from the heathen world and doing as the heathen does, rejecting Jehovah's sabbath, working upon it, polluting it!"

He has already told us that these plural sabbaths "belonged to that people (Israel) and to that (Mosaic) dispensation." Now, he says: "The generations of Israel have not ceased; therefore the sign should be on them still." Why should it "be on them still," seeing "that dispensation," has passed away, to which it "belonged?" He says, speaking of his opponents: "they reject the sign, (My sabbaths—plural) and call it a yoke of bondage." Why should we not "reject the sign," seeing we do not belong "to that people and that dispensation," to which you say they belonged?

We have seen that Jehovah claims all sabbaths as his—"Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep;" the phrase "my sabbaths, includes all sabbaths. Jehovah never makes the distinction Mr. Sabbatarian does, he has no authority to say the weekly sabbath only is Jehovah's sabbath. It is a human assertion to bolster up a false doctrine. In his answer at the head of this article he quotes: "Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep; six days shall work be done, but the seventh is the sabbath of rest." Here he calls the sabbaths in the plural, his sabbaths, and without making a break in the sentence, says: "Six days shall work be done," etc., thus including the weekly in the phrase, "My sabbaths ye shall keep."

How long were these sabbaths to continue? We read: "The law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ * * * but after that faith was come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster." Gal. iii. 24, 25.

God long ago by his prophet Hosea declared these sabbaths should all "cease." Listen: "I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her feast days, her new moons, and her sabbaths, and all her solemn feasts." This not only coveres all the feast days, new moons, etc., which Mr. Sabbatarian said: "belonged to that people and to that dispensation," but Jehovah adds to these: "AND HER SABBATHS." What is the matter? Can't you believe Jehovah when he adds to the "new moon" etc., "his sabbaths?" You can't change his unerring decree, his word has gone forth; "I will cause" "his feast-days, her new moons, and her sabbaths." "To CEASE." And yet, Mr. Sabbatarian goes about teaching people to observe that which Jehovah said "I will also cause" "to cease." Is it not a shame men can't take Jehovah at his Word? He has fulfilled his decree, for in the New Testament there appears no command to keep the sabbath, and no disapproval for breaking it, while the Old Testament abounds with both. But has now passed away because the "schoolmaster" don't rule any more. Sabbatarians attach salvation to keeping just exactly the right time as the sabbath, it wont do to start either a few hours too soon, or a few hours too late, but must be exact. The above question is now agitating seventh day sabbath keepers to a large extent. To them it is a vital question. The seventh day sabbath they think accomplishes for them, just what the gospel does for us. A disputant as to the time the sabbath day commences says: "I believe it is essential for my salvation that I should keep the seventh-day sabbath," and believing this it is essential to him to know what time the seventh day commences. It is now a matter of dispute among themselves. They are in a pretty muddle over it, and it must be serious, seeing they expect to get salvation in keeping it, and the time to them is so obscure that they have to indulge in quite heated discussions about it in their paper among themselves.

One writer says the "day line," from which to reckon the sabbath must be found in Eden. He says: "What we do know is that the Eden Moses wrote about is now called Armenia, and eastwards of Armenia is Lake Van; therefore, we may, without any supposition, reckon the day line, or the commencement of the day from the latitude of 43 east of Greenwich. * * * The inspired day line must belong to that place, and that sabbath which was made for man." Another writer says, in the same paper: "My study has confirmed me in the opinion that the only natural day-line must be between Japan and California, and that there is no such thing, nor can there be, as an inspired day-line at any fixed locality on the earth."

Here one Sabbatarian thinks Eden is the only place to get the "day-line," and another thinks the only natural day-line must be between Japan and California," and as they attach salvation to observing the true seventh day, it must be a matter of much concern to them. There is one thing certain, if God had made it obligatory upon Gentiles to observe the seventh day in order to salvation, he never would have left it in a dark enigma to be guessed at and disputed over as sabbatarians are doing. But it being simply a local matter given for the government of Israel, while under the Mosaic law, Gentiles of our day have no business with it, and there is no wonder they get puzzled over it, and don't know when to start to keep the sabbath. They had better find out themselves when the sabbath begins and ends, before they condemn others for not keeping a day, they are quarreling about among themselves, as to when it begins and ends. But it would be better still to believe Jehovah's Word: "I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her feast days, her new moons, and her sabbaths, and all her solemn feasts."

W. H. WILSON.

Why Not.

Behold thou shalt bring forth a Son and shall call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest. If you believe the above statement to be the Word of God, and believe it was literally fulfilled just as the angel had said, why not believe, the Lord will as truly fulfill his promise when he says: "And the Lord shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Why not believe when it harmonises so beautifully with Ps. lxxxix 3, 27, 38. Once have I swore by my holiness that I will not lie unto David, his seed shall endure forever and his throne as the sun before me.

Why not believe Christ will sit on David's throne when the pages of Holy Writ are laden with the blessed tidings. The oath of the Great Living God confirms it, angels, prophets and apostles all testify to the same thing, Jesus himself saying: "to this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world, St. John xviii. 37. If you believe St. John xiv. 2, which says: "In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. Go on why stop there! Why not believe the next verse which says: And if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also.

It harmonises perfectly with Christ's teaching according to St. Mark, xiii. 26, 27: And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds with great power and glory. Angels also testify to the glorious event. Acts i. 11. This same Jesus shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.

If you believe 1 Peter, i. 4, which tells of an incorruptible inheritance reserved in heaven for you, why not believe Rev. xxi. 2, it harmonises perfectly with Peter's statement, saying: And I, John saw the holy city, the new Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride, adorned for her husband. Peter says an inheritance undefiled. John calls it the holy city, why believe one and doubt the other.

If you believe Mat. vii. 12, where Christ comforting his persecuted followers, said: rejoice and be exceeding glad for great is your reward in heaven for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you. Paul speaking of these faithful old prophets, says, these all died in faith having not received the promises, and the faithful myriads of whom it is said the world was not worthy, Paul says these all having received a good report through faith, received not the promise.

God having provided some better thing for us that they without us should not be made perfect. Heb. ii. The above Scriptures plainly show that the prophets have not yet received the reward or the promises, and Peter says plainly, David is not ascended into the heavens. Therefore has not yet received his reward. Christ told Nicodemus no man hath ascended up to heaven except he that came down from heaven even the Son of Man which is in heaven. If you believe when the Savior says great is your reward in heaven, why not believe when he promises to bring the reward. Rev. xxii. 12. Behold I come quickly and my reward is with me to give to every man according as his work shall be. Mathew xvi. 27, also tells us, He shall reward every man at his coming. Why believe, we will go to our reward when the very idea is entirely foreign to the teachings of the prophets and apostles.

Why expect our reward at death when the Savior and apostles all represent death as a sleep. And the reward to be given at the resurrection from the dead. This is why, because there are blind leaders in the land who do pervert the gospel, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men, who teach there is no death, the same doctrine taught by the very popular leader of whom you may read. Gen. iii. 4. Those blind leaders set aside all Scripture as unimportant, which they can not by their treacherous twister called theology in some way harmonious with Gen. iii. 0, when the serpent told Eve, ye shal' not surely die.

If there is no death why should there be a resurrection from the dead.

SADIE SKEELS.

Immortality not Inherent.

Is it not presumptious in the creature man, to attribute to himself that, that is declared to be an attribute of the Creator only. The King of kings and Lord of lords the only one, possessing immortality, deathlessness? It seems so to me, and yet we see men of corrupt minds assuming to possess an incorruptible nature or soul as they call it. There are men that claim infallibility, that they can not make mistakes, some organizations called churches that fear to admit that they might be mistaken in some things.

Immortality as we have seen according to the highest authority, is a characteristic of Deity. The invisible God, the incorruptible Jehovah. The divine nature, of which we erring mortals can know nothing save as it has been revealed to us by the divine mind. He the inhabitor of eternity. The living and true God hath seen fit to make known his will and purposes to us mortal children of Adam, of earth. His purposes concerning man and earth, having anciently spoken in many parts, and in many ways to the fathers by the prophets. In the last of these days spoke to us by a Son, the appointed heir of all things, who is the express image of the invisible God. Both as to form and personality the first born of every creature. Immortality means deathlessness not subject to death or decay, continued existance. Eternal Life Jesus the heir of all things, (the things promised) who was put to death for our offences and raised (first born from the dead) again for our justification, now possesses eternal life. Hear him, I am he that was dead (put to death) and behold I am alive for ever more, (having been raised and have the keys of death and hades, and those of us mortals who have complied with the requirements of the gospel as proclaimed by Jesus and his authorized ambassadors and have become joint heirs thereby, suffering with him we shall also be glorified together with him when he comes in his glory, when the Chief Shepherd shall appear ye shall receive the promised crown of life, then the divine incorruptible nature shall be yours.

As Jesus our high priest had a mission to perform, a work to do, a work of mercy and endurance, was obedient unto death, even an ignominious death of the cross, and was buried, yet His Father the incorruptible God raises his well beloved the third day ere he saw corruption to an incorruptible life, and glory. To each of the heirs to the future habitable joint heirs with him, he has given a mission to perform, a work to do. God has not promised to bestow indiscriminately upon mortals the divine nature, but upon such only as shall have developed characters in harmony with the divine mind, worthy of the incorruptible nature. Eternal life will be given to those who by perseverance in good works have sought for glory, honor and incorruptibility.

To those who comply with the requirements of the gospel, great and precious promises pertain. They shall partake of the divine nature. Eternal life they will receive. The life indeed even mortal life will then be sweeter and more real, for then the angel will have come down from heaven, having the key of the abyss and a chain in his hand and will take hold of the dragon, the enemy and adversary, and will bind him a thousand years, and will cast him into the abyss, and shut him up, and put a seal over him so that he shall deceive the nations no more for the thousand years. The saints will have then received judgement authority to judge and shall judge the world. In that day the Lord shall be King of the whole earth. The redeemed will sing, we shall reign on the earth. When the earth redeemed shall be Messiah's Kingdom, when he returns in bliss to reign.

H. MURPHY.

Exhortation.

Dear Resilution:

This is written for the Church of God at Blair and St. Paul, Nebraska, to those who have obtained like precious faith with me through the righteousness of God and of Jesus Christ our Lord. Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord, according as his divine power hath given unto us things that pertain, unto life and godliness through the knowledge of him who hath called us to glory and virtue, whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might become partakers of the divine nature. Dear brethren and sisters, I address you in the same words that the apostle addressed his brethren in his day, believing you and I may say knowing that you all have the same faith and hope that they had, the one faith in times of old delivered to the saints which another apostle tells us we should earnestly contend for. First you will notice that our obtaining unto the divine nature, or obtaining to the exceeding great and precious promises as our election or our entrance into the everlasting kingdom is made to depend on our part in multiplying, as well as in addition, grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God. The apostle closes the chapter by telling his brethren to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. No growth, then no grace or favor. What are we to feed on then that we may grow and thereby secure this favor? The same apostle answers this question by saying, "As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby, and the blessed Savior says that man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord. Says Paul, the life I now live I live by faith. Again he says, "The just shall live by faith.

Dear brethren and sisters, we feed safely on this bread—the Word of faith which is graciously given so that we grow up strong men and women in the Lord and in the power of his might. Dearly beloved in the Lord, have you ever fully realized that a life of faith is as dependent on the Word of faith as our physical life or mortal life is dependent on the food we eat to sustain it. Would we marvel or think it strange for our strength to fail us when we would neglect to feed ourselves on that that was needful for the body? Then may we not reasonably conclude, that if we fail to feed our minds on the Bread of Life which is the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever, which is the course and source of our spiritual life, that we will instead of growing strong become weak, sicken and die as a worthless branch severed from the living vine. No source of life. May we "not safely say with the apostle Paul, "for this cause many are weak and sickly among you and many sleep." But we are persuaded better things of you and things that accompany salvation. For I thank my God upon every remembrance of you, always in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joys for your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now. Being confident of this thing that he which hath began a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ, and this I pray that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge that ye may approve things that are excellent, that ye may be sincere and without offence till the day of Jesus Christ. Finally brethren, fight the good fight of faith that ye may lay hold on eternal life. Fight manfully onward, the kingdom is coming. I want to meet you all in our Father's kingdom, in our Father's house, where all will be immortal. When weeping will be a thing of the past, when joy will have come in the morning and where we will never sin again and say good by.

J. T. PRIME.

The Thief on the Cross.

"Remember me when thou comest in thy Kingdom "Luke xxiii. 42.

The request of the thief was not to go to Heaven at death, but for remembrance by the Lord when he came in his Kingdom; showing a knowledge of the teachings of Christ and a belief that notwithstanding he would die, that at some time in the future by resurrection he would return and set up his kingdom and that would be the time of reward. All of which tends to show that the thief in the awful presence of death for all three, had a firm belief in Christ and his claims and knew what he believed. His faith therefore, at a time when even the very apostles had lost all hope, was remarkable, and may well account for Christ's pardon and promise.

The common version translates Seemeron "To-day" but Wilson's Diaglott translates the same word "this day," and there is no reason why this translation is not at least as correct, and justifiable as the other, and if so, "this day" (Seemeron) may refer to the day of Christs return in his kingdom as this "Verily I say unto thee, this day (when I return to establish my kingdom) shalt thou be with me in Paradise.

Announcement.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God in Neb. will be held at the church in South Frontier County, commencing, the Lord willing, on Thursday Dec. 5, and holding over Sunday. It is earnestly desired that all, who are interested in the cause of truth, be present at this conference if they can possibly do so, and help to make the meeting a pleasant and a profitable one.

The signs of the times all indicate that this age is drawing very near its close, and that Christ will soon come to reward every man according to his works. Let us therefore "be up and doing, while it is called to-day, for the night cometh when no man can work." Then when Jesus comes, may we all have an abundant entrance into his glorious kingdom, is our earnest prayer. Your sister in Christ.

OBITUARY.

Died Oct. 31, 1895, of dropsy, at her home in Scircleville, Ind., Sister Emma Webber. She was born Aug. 11, 1861, being 34 years, 2 months, and 20 days old. In 1884 she was immersed into the all saving name of Christ by Bro. J. M. Stephenson.

During the most of her religous life she had been a great sufferer, and at no time could she say that she was well, but she bore her afflictions patiently especially during her last sickness when she suffered so much. My father spoke words of comfort to the bereaved ones giving abundance of proof of the soon coming of our Lord to reward the living and the dead.

She leaves a husband, three daughters an aged tottering mother, two brothers, and one sister to mourn; but it will not be without hope for they are all of the one faith and to that class precious promisees are given of meeting their loved ones again.

She was taken to the cemetery, where we looked for the last time upon the cold pallid face, then tenderly laid beside her three sleeping babes, one of whom was laid away in its sweetness and purity, only a few short months ago.

A large concourse of people gathered to pay their last respects to our sister, showing the high esteem in which, she and her family were held. We hope to meet her in the resurrection morning, when she will come forth clad in immortality, the pallid face we saw yesterday will be changed to the fresh glow of health. Let us pray for the bereaved family that they may be protected by God's loving kindness and remember the dear mother who is resting from her labors and her sufferings.

Sweetly the form may be sleeping
Under the cypress shade;
But though we be, fondly will we
Cherish the name of the dead.

They are going down the valley
The deep dark valley,
Will see their faces evermore
Till we pass down the valley,
The dark death valley,
And meet them on the other shore.

AZOBAH M. HATCH-SURDGES.

Died, at Ithaca, N. Y. Oct. 24, 1895, Thomas Wright aged 59 years. After months of suffering, he passed peacefully into that sleep from which he will awake with the perfect day. Mr. Wright will be remembered by many of the RESTITUTION readers, as in years gone by he was present at many conferences which he so much loved to attend. He was born near Birmingham, England, in 1836, and came with his father to this country, when about eighteen years of age. In 1859, he was married to Miss Adeline Perry in Buffalo, N. Y. Five children were born to them, two sons and three daughters, all living. For the last eighteen years Mr. Wright resided in Minneapolis, Minn., but had been living at Ithaca, a year or so before his death. He was laid to rest in the cemetry at Ithaca. He was a most kind father, and had an abiding faith in the covenants and promises of God. His life, was quiet from the busy world, and was obscure but it was full of good words and works, and he leaves behind him lasting examples of the Christian faith, and memories of eternal sweetness.

"....and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain."

".....and there shall be no night there, neither light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever."

G. F. WRIGHT.

Died of gastritis Nov. 1, 1895, Lawrence Howard Garton, only son of Edwin and Mary Etta Garton, aged 2 years and 8 months. This makes six children Bro. and Sister Garton have lost by death. The little fellow was a precocious child, and a favorite with every one. His funeral was largely attended. Text Jer. xxxi. 15, 16, 17.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1896.

Letter Drawer.

Dear Restitution:

I recently visited Oneita, Washington, and vicinity, spending a few pleasant, and we hope profitable days with Bro. J. A. Smalley and family, talking with them of the "One Hope" which is so dear to us all. On Sunday we held meeting at the school-house. On Sept. 2nd, Miss Sarah Smalley and Mrs. E. Upton made the good confession, and were baptized by the writer. May God bless them in their Christian life, and guide them in all truth. Brethren, these are days of gloom to the world, but to the watching ones we find much to cause us to rejoice. The times in which we live are very suggestive of coming events, and we cannot help feeling that our "Redemption draweth nigh." Let us look forward to the happy meeting of the faithful ones on the resurrection morning and press on with renewed energy toward the "mark of the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus."

Yours for Christ.
EDWIN E. GIGAL.

Editor Restitution:

I feel it a duty to express my sincere gratitude for the receipt of THE RESTITUTION these many months, and I wish to return my thanks to those dear friends who in Christian love have thought of the needy ones. By faith I hear my Lord say "Inasmuch as ye have done it to these my little ones ye have done it unto me—they have their reward." THE RESTITUTION is our comfort in times of trouble, it is the only paper we get, and indeed we wish for no other. It is to us a weekly feast of fat things upon the feast of fat things; full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined. We are not able to get away from our cottage home through infirmities of the flesh, so we can fully appreciate the good news as it comes to us week by week. I assure you many a prayer has gone up to our heavenly Father in our cottage home for the kindly message of love and instruction given to us in the dear old paper, from the pen of our good, old Auntie Wince, viz., The Story of Israel in Egypt—so faithful, so true—equally good for the man and woman of seventy years as for the children of her class. It makes us long for the time when we shall see the old patriarchs and prophets once again patrolling the very same old lands, only made more beautiful by the presence of our blessed Lord, who will guide us into the green pastures and lead us once again beside the still waters, freed from all the fatigue and weariness of human nature.

Our good Bro. Wilson is helping us greatly in defending the gospel of our God, may he never grow weary in well doing. And then there is brother John Wilson treading down the old orthodox story, and is giving us the important topics on the true Bible basis. We are glad to have the old story in its true light set before us. Edith is doing well, but Alfred far better. The dialogue will help many not only to hear the right, but also to read right even in the light of the holy and sanctified Spirit in a word we thank God for light and pray it may be disseminated freely, and as freely received. Your brother in Christ.

S. FREELAND.

Dear Restitution:

Dear brethren of like precious faith, after reading the many letters in our beloved paper, which is a great pleasure to hear them express themselves as still in the vineyard. Also reading the contributions of those whom I am personally acquainted with, being deprived of speaking to them face to face. I am still battling for the cause, but not without opposition. Myself and wife have just returned home from Ft. Smith, Arkansas. We went with team four hundred miles from where we reside, and were gone over one month. I expect to return to Franklin and Washington Counties in the near future and speak for them, if it is God's will. I was called on but a short time since to speak words of comfort upon the death of a son of a German Baptist (Dunkard), which surprised me. Quite a large audience was present and good attention. Text John xi. 11-35. A short time after I was visiting my son and fell in with Sister Clum, a Dunkard soul-sleeper. We were conversing on Bible subjects. I asked her relative to Matt. i. 18, 19 and 20. That Mary conceived of the Holy Ghost, and if according to Matt. xxviii. 19, there are three in the Godhead, namely, Father and Son and Holy Ghost, whose Son was the Christ. Luke i. 35 confirms the same, from my understanding. She claimed she had never noticed those passages before. She requested me to write to our paper, of which she is a regular reader, and she would write to the Examiner, which is the Dunkard light bearer, if I forget not. Now brethren, let us hear from all of you. In unity we do see light. If the Matt. formula is right we desire to know it. With love to all.

To the Royal Household of Faith scattered abroad:

I am still interested in the things concerning the Kingdom, and striving to make my calling sure, hoping to overcome all that would render me unworthy of gaining the kingdom. It has been a fight with me for 40 years, and is still a warfare, but I hope I may be able to overcome in the end. I should like to see a piece from all of my old brothers in the paper.

J. W. BOOTH.

Editor Restitution:

Allow me to say a few words through the columns of THE RESTITUTION to the brethren of Southern California, as I believe it to be the best medium through which to reach those interested in the cause of the gospel, and kindly ask you to insert this hoping it may prompt some to action that are willing to sacrifice a little of their time and talent in view of calling together the scattered few in some central place, to the end that we might provide ways and means to have a proclaimer of the Truth come to our assistance on this coast. I believe this is a good field for the work and we need the co-operation of all the brethren, and hope to see all encourage us in whatever way they can. The dark threatening cloud that hangs over the nations is a warning for us to be up and doing, and to speak to others of the things that will surely come to pass. Let us work while it is called day, for the time will come when man's work will cease.

I am located at Pomona, California, and will gladly reply to all correspondence of the brethren of this and other states, and will spare no pains to perfect arrangements to have a meeting at the most convenient place. A few of us have thought of a plan, yet we desire the suggestions of others and solicit your correspondence. We ask the brethren to remember us in their prayers that we might be successful in this work. Yours in hope of the kingdom.

W. O. STEFFA.

All things earthly have an end. Moments end, hours end; days end, centuries end, this age shall end; and the end is come, no wealth, no power, no wisdom, can bring back that which is gone. There will be a last sabbath, a last sermon, a last exhortation, a last entreaty, a last invitation, a last warning, a last appeal. There will be a last struggle with conscience, and a last decision, a last refusal to hear the gracious call of God. There will be a last rejection of offered mercy, a last neglect of the great salvation, a last despising of the riches of God's goodness, a last resisting of the Holy Ghost, a last trampling under foot of the Son of God, a last smile to veil the anguish of a hardened heart, a last saying, "Go thy way for this time."

Conference Notice.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Indiana, will meet at Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 15, 1895, and continue over the following Sunday.

A hearty invitation is extended to all of like precious faith.

Come with hearts filled with love and all differences laid aside. Let the one great aim be to cheer and encourage each other on the way and by so doing better prepare ourselves to overcome the trials and temptations we may have to endure. Come and let us do our duty and God will take care of the rest.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You defy paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill; some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication is made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in other of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Poetry.

Be Kind to One Another.

Be kind to one another, tis only a little while,
The moments hurry by, and of the hours beguile,
We will not cause the pain, in other hearts to ache
But rather leave the sunshine a brighter faith to make.

Be kind to one another, let it be our daily prayer,
To cheer the sad and weary, we find them everywhere,
They grope in darkness now, no light upon the way,
But words of truth and love, will banish sin away.

Be kind to one another, let not one grievous word,
Stir up the bursts of anger, or rouse the sad discord
The flowery paths of peace, are on the sunny side
For tis in darkening shadows, that dangers doubtide.

Be kind to one another, the Saviour when below,
He sought to give the light, that loving words bestow,
The emblems of the pure, were beaming on his brow
He now looks down upon us, his words are with us now.

Be kind to one another, there is magic in the sound
To soothe the little sorrows, which every where abound,
It comes as comes the brightness, when from the morning sun
We group the beaming lustres, that linger as they come.

Be kind to one another, for deep within the heart,
There lie the tender echoes, tears will unbidden start,
For with the chains of love, the pearls we gather here,
Are subjects for the kingdom, the time is very near.

Bible Chronology vs Human Chronology.

In the RESTITUTION of May 1st, I notice an article entitled "Israel in Egypt—How long?," signed "B. W." The writer appears to have come into contact with a chronological puzzle, not a new one, but one that has troubled many a student in the past. As I gave the subject some thought previous to this, I will gladly offer the result of my investigations as far as I have gone, which may, at least, prove helpful to those who desire to continue the investigation still further. I do not claim to have reached the end, by any means, as there are many points I desire light upon in this same line myself.

A summary of "B. W.'s" article is as follows:

1. Jacob and his family moved into Egypt 215 years after Abraham entered Canaan.

2. Jacob at this time was 130 years old, and Joseph was about 40 years (39 really).

3. Joseph lived about 70 years after this, during which period Israel prospered and multiplied, which added to the 215 years, makes 285 years from the time Abraham entered Canaan.

4. Israel was to be afflicted, 400 years by the Egyptians (Gen. xv. 13, Acts vii. 6, 7). As the affliction did not begin until "another king arose who knew not Joseph," and as this was after Joseph's death, and he died 285 years after Abraham left Canaan, therefore if the affliction was to cover a period of 400 years, this, added to the 285 years, would make a period of 685 years from the time Abraham entered Canaan to the time of the Exodus from Egypt.

5. From the "promise" made to Abraham to the Exodus 430 years were to transpire. In proof of this we are referred to Exod. xii. 40, 41; Gal. iii. 17, and Gen. xii, 40, 41.

6. Our Bible chronology gives 144 years from the death of Joseph to the Exodus, which is 256 years short of the 400 required years of affliction in Egypt.

If all the foregoing be true there certainly are some hard nuts to crack. Let us carefully groover the ground, and find, if possible where the discrepancy lies.

No's. 1, 2, and 3, are correctly stated, and we will pass them.

No. 4, needs a little revision. Genesis xv. 13, regular version reads: "Thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs: and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them 400 years." At first, on reading this we might conclude that the 400 years covered a period of affliction; but really it covers the period of service, and affliction. The Septuagint reading of this text I think gives a clearer idea if this, which is as follows:

"Thy seed shall be a sojourner in a land not their own, and they shall enslave them, and afflict them and humble them 400 years.

Dr. Taffels literal word for word translation reads as follows:

"Knowing thou shalt know that a stranger shall be thy seed in a land not (being) to them, and they (then) shall serve them and they (then) humble them 400 years."

Stephen's reference to this in Acts vii. 6, is as follows:

"And God spoke thus, that his seed should be a stranger in a foreign land, and that they will enslave and oppress it 400 years."—Diaglott.

A careful reading of these quotations cannot fail to convey to the reader's mind this thought, that the 400 year period covered a season of service, affliction, and oppression. It was not 400 years of oppression, but began with service or enslavement, which grew into affliction, and culminated in oppression such as we read of just before their final deliverance. It was progressive; and this is in accordance with what we might expect, as it is not reasonable to suppose that this people would submit to a sudden imposition of violent tyrannical bondage, but we can understand how this outcome might be reached gradually, progressively, as described, by 1st, enslavement, 2nd, affliction and 3rd oppression.

Now a word as to the time when this 400 year period began. As the whole term of Israel's "sojourn" was 430 years, and as it must have ended when the "sojourn" was completed, and the Exodus took place, it is manifest that as 400 years in 30 years less than 430 years, the 400 year period must have begun 30 years after Israel entered into Egypt. But this was while Joseph still lived; he being 70 years of age at that time. Can we conceive of any form of enslavement being imposed on Israel while Joseph lived? Looking at the original word used for enslavement, I find that it occurs in numerous places, which may serve to enlighten us as to its meaning. In Rom. ix. 12, it occurs where we are told that "the superior shall be subject to the lesser." And Jno. viii. 33, the Jews resented the imputation of Jesus that they were in bondage, saying: "We are Abraham's offspring, and have never been in slavery to anyone." The Greek word douloo, signifies to reduce to servitude, enslave; passive, to be under restraint to become devoted to the service of, etc.

We can readily see that the enslavement or servitude of Israel in its incipient or beginning stages may have been of a mild character, not objectionable to them, but which, under a change of administration, might have been made more burdensome, as they certainly were under obligations to the Egyptians at the outset, living as they did, on their land, and being fed from the public storehouse. Fourteen years after the 400 year period began, a change of rulers took place. Amenhotep II. succeeding Thothmes III. He reigned but seven years, and was succeeded by Thothmes IV. who reigned eight years, and then Amenhotep III, came to the throne. It was during his reign that Joseph died, so that we see that serious changes took place during the latter years of Joseph's life, changes which might gradually bring on a more rigid servitude of Israel, finally working up to a period of "affliction." If anyone can suggest a more reasonable solution, in the absence of positive Biblical or historical testimony, we shall be glad to receive it.

As to the time question however, we can see that would vary somewhat from the 635 years figured up by "B. W." It would be as follows:

From the call of Abraham to entering Egypt by Israel 215 yrs.

From the entering of Egypt to beginning of the 400 year period 30 yrs.

The period allotted for servitude, affliction and oppression 400 yrs. Total 645 years.

Now let us look at No. 5. "B. W." says "from the promise to the Exodus 430 years." The Bible does not read that way. It says "Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt was 430 years." "And it came to pass at the end of the 430 yrs. even the selfsame day it came to pass, that all the hosts of the Lord went out from the land of Egypt." Exod. xii. 40, 41.

In Exodus 1, the names of the children of Israel are given "which came into Egypt. In Gen. xlvi. 6, 7, we read how they came "into Egypt, Jacob, and all his seed with him: His sons, and his son's sons with him, his daughters, and his son's daughters, and all his seed brought he with him into Egypt." Then follow the individual names of all who went into Egypt, even all the "children of Israel." Who was Israel?

"And God said unto him, thy name is Jacob: thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name; and he called his name Israel" Gen. xxxv. 10.

We have seen that it was Jacob's own children, the children of Israel, those who lived with him in Canaan, and journeyed with him to Egypt, who came into Egypt. And "they were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty, and the land (of Egypt) was filled with them." Exod. i. 7.

The reason why we refer thus particularly to the children of Israel is, because some expositors, in their anxiety to patch up chronology, reach back to Abraham, and bring in Abraham, Isaac and Jacob (Israel) himself as belonging to the "children of Israel" who sojourned in Egypt. They do this in order to gain a period of 215 years from the call of Abraham to the time when Israel entered Egypt, which they say covers half of the 430 year period of the sojourning of the children of Israel." Just think of the dilema into which they are forced when they bring old father Abraham, the grandfather of "Israel" and great grandfather of the children of Israel, and say that the sojourning of the children of Israel begins with him, thus making him fill the position of a child of Israel, a child of his grandson! Is not this stretching a point rather too far? How there could be children of Israel actually sojourning in Egypt or anywhere else over a hundred years before Israel had children born to him is a mystery. And when men are compelled to take Israel's father and grandfather and call them his children, in order to maintain a theory it is time the theory was dropped, and the simple account of the Bible accepted.

The children of Israel went into Egypt when Israel was 130 years old. They sojourned "there an exact period of 430 years to a day, for on the expiration of the last day of the 430 years they went out of Egypt en masse.

But, say some, if you stick to the account in Genesis as closely as that, you will contradict the plain statement of Paul in Gal. iii. 17, where he says: "the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was 430 years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect."

Here is a plain case, they say, where the period of 430 years, covers the time between the covenant made with Abraham and the giving of the law on Sinai. Therefore if you allow 215 years from the covenant to the time Israel entered Egypt, and 430 years from the sojourn in Egypt, you have a period of 645 years which is 215 years more than the apostle allows.

This we know has been the great bugbear that has compelled expositors to try and harmonize the "sojourn" in Genesis, with Paul's declaration, and in doing it they have been driven to the dreadful straits referred to, where a grandfather is made to be a child of his grandson, so as to have the sojourning period begin in good season in order to end at the proper time. Is there not some more reasonable harmony than this? Let us see.

"B. W." says; "from the promise to the Exodus, 430 years." So have many others said, but is this so? Does the Scripture read so? The apostle says "the covenant that was confirmed before of God, the law, which was 430 years after cannot disannul." After what? The "making" of the covenant, or the "confirming" of it? Clearly the latter. When, and to whom was this Abrahamic covenant confirmed? See 1 Chron. xvi. 16, 17.

"The covenant which he made with Abraham, and of his oath unto Isaac, and hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant." The same words are repeated in Psa. 105, 9, 10.

What was the covenant God made with Abraham when he called him out of the land of the Chaldees? He said "I will make of thee a great nation," etc. Gen. xii. 1. What was the confirmation of this covenant to Jacob? "And God spake unto Israel in the visions of the night and said, Jacob, Jacob. And he said. Here am I. And he said, I am God, the God of thy father, fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation. I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again.

Here we see the covenant which God made with Abraham, "confirmed" unto Jacob. When was it confirmed? At the time Jacob and his seed were on their way to enter Egypt, which, as Paul says in Galations, was 430 years previous to the giving of the law. So that when we pay closer attention to the wording of Paul's statement, there is no conflict whatever with the facts as recorded in Genesis. Paul says the law was 430 years after the covenant was "confirmed" (to Jacob) and we find that exactly 430 years after God confirmed the covenant to Jacob as recorded in Gen. xlvi. 2, 4, the law was actually given at Sinai. Israel then "sojourned" in a strange land, the land of Egypt 430 years, (not 215 years as many claim), and 400 years of this covers the period of progressive enslavement, ending in the most cruel and burdensome oppression.

So that we see it is a grievous error to say from the "promise" made to Abraham to the Exodus, 430 years. It was 645 years; and from the "confirming" to Jacob of the promise made to Abraham was 430 years. It makes no difference as to the facts and the truth, what length of time our Bible chronology indicated on the top column of Bibles. That is not inspired, but the text is. Let us stick to the text and follow its leadings no matter how many human chronologies topple over.

If any one has studied this subject more deeply, and is prepared to present a more satisfactory solution of the intricate questions presented by "B. W." than that given above, no one will pursue it with greater interest than,

STUDENT.

The Fatherhood of God.

The word fatherhood suggests the relationship of children. Gal. iii. 26-29, gives information as to who are recognized as God's children, "Ye are all sons of God through faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as were baptized into Christ, did put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, heirs according to the promise."

The phrase: "Through faith in Christ Jesus," is laden with precious thought, and is imperfectly comprehended by the professed world. Many say they have "faith in Christ Jesus," and at the same time (ignorantly) discredit his Word. Can a person be said to have faith in another, and at the same time have little or no knowledge concerning him or the message he heralds? People are frequently told to believe or have "faith in Christ Jesus," that they may be saved; and under the pressure of religious enthusiasm he says he believes in "Christ Jesus," although he is a perfect stranger to him, and has no knowledge of the message of life he has given — that they are believing and living. Is it sensible that a person can believe a message they never heard of? Many of these poor people have an idea if they only make this ignorant confession he will save them from the flames of hell-fire. Both instructor and pupil are both ignorant of the nature of the salvation, and the danger he saves from. To me it is a painful sight to thus see honest seekers cruelly deceived. What would you think of a person confessing that he is a Roman Catholic, and yet be ignorant of the claims and pretensions of the pope and his subordinate priesthood? and yet persons ignorant of "Jesus Christ," and his message of life, claim to be children of God, and believers in him they know not.

Our text says: "Ye are all the children of God through faith in Christ Jesus." I claim that a person must have some evidence concerning his claims before they can exercise "faith" in him. And if he does this, he must first have knowledge as to what his claims are. The apostle says: "Faith is the evidence of things not seen." Before faith can exist, knowledge concerning "things not seen," must first exist, and then "evidence" concerning those "things" gives a confidence in them.

Having this faith, the next step noticed in our text is: "As many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ." The result of having this faith, and being baptized into Christ, is: "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, heirs according to the promise." At this point the relationship of children begins, and the Fatherhood of God commences. It is perfectly useless for any one to imagine that they are children of God before complying with the above God-given way of coming into that relationship. Then we may rightfully address God as "our Father which art in heaven."

The apostle further adds: "And because ye are sons, God sent forth the Spirit of his Son into our hearts, crying, Abba Father. So that thou art no longer a bondservant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir through God." Before we become an "heir" we must be a "son."

This same thought of heirship is found in Rom. viii. 14-20: "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are the sons of God. For ye received not the spirit of bondage again unto fear; but ye received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are children of God, and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ."

The above quotations show us what it means to become "sons of God through faith in Christ Jesus," and the blessed results following that relationship.

Having come into the relationship of sons and daughters, the next thing to expect is discipline. Every child in this family must pass through a rigorous training. Peter says: "Now for a little while, if need be, ye have been put to grief in manifold temptations, that the proof of your faith, being more precious than gold that perisheth though it be proved by fire, might be found unto praise and glory and honor at the revelation of Jesus Christ: whom not having seen ye love."

The object of the discipline is to try the faith of those professing to be children of God, and by this means the illegitimate children will be sifted out. They are tried by various ways. Many love popularity and the association of those whom the world esteem great. God requires his children to travel a "narrow way," and keep the company of a few humble and unpopular travelers. Many will not endure this trial, but will soon switch off and unite with some popular church located on the "broadway."

The true child of God must not be depressed when trial comes, but endure it in a courageous manner. James says: "Count it all joy, my brethren, when ye fall into manifold temptations; knowing that the proof of your faith worketh patience. And let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, lacking in nothing."

All who have strength to endure, will find the result blessed. It pays to have true Christian grit. James says: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he hath been approved, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord promised to them that love him."

Why does it pay? Because the "crown of life" awaits the one who endures. Is that worth the cost? Peter says: "The proof of your faith being much more precious than gold that perisheth though it be proved by fire."

If we should judge by the actions of people, we must conclude that they consider gold the most desirable thing to acquire. But the true fact is the "proof of your faith," is much "more precious than gold that perisheth." In what does its excellency consist? Gold "perisheth," and its possessor will perish also unless by "the proof of your faith," he is entitled to the "crown of life," and that will tide a person through the endless years of eternity, dwelling in perfect bliss.

We read in Heb. xii.: "My son, regard not lightly the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art reproved of him; for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. It is for chastening that ye endure; God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is there whom his father chasteneth not? But if ye are without chastening, whereof all have been made partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons."

Whom does the Lord chasten? "Every son whom he receiveth," and adds, that if we are "without chastening," then we are not sons. We must also remember, that if we murmur at "the chastening of the Lord," we are not enduring the proof of faith.

We also read in Rev. iii. 19: "As many as I love, I reprove and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent." This covers every one upon whom God has placed his affection. When in affliction many seem to feel that God has withdrawn from them, when the reverse may be the case. As many as I love I reprove and chasten." See Heb. xii. 11: "All chastening seemeth for the present to be not joyous, but grievous: yet afterward it yieldeth peaceable fruit unto them that have been exercised thereby even the fruit of righteousness." Let us not "murmur at the chastening hand of God. Our Father does not take delight in chastening his children, it is because he loves them, and that through that means they may yield "peaceable fruit," "even the fruit of righteousness." He also teaches the same lesson when he speaks of the fruitful vine being pruned that it may bring forth more fruit.

He has also promised to help those who trust in him. Has he not distinctly promised that no temptation shall come upon us only such as we are able to bear, and that with the temptation he will provide means of escape?

It pays to endure whatever chastisement the Father may in his wisdom see would be for our good. He is interested in his children, and wont unnecessarily afflict, and will help when the burden becomes too heavy for our strength.

The blessings God has in store for his children, together with positions of honor and trust, require this previous discipline to enable them to enjoy the blessings, and perform the duties required at their hands. It is only for a little while, and then the trials will all be over, and having come off conquerors we will enter eternal rest, and be forever free from whatever will cause sorrow and pain. Be of good cheer, press forward with courage, he will never leave thee nor forsake thee. Faint not then, when under the chastening hand of God. Remember, he loves you, if he didn't, he would not have interest enough in you to correct you, that you go not astray.

"Since a Father's arm sustains thee,
Peaceful be;
When a chastening hand restrains thee,
It is He.
Know his love in full completeness,
Feel the measure of thy weakness;
If he wound thy spirit sore,
Trust him more."

W. H. WILSON.

Standing on the top of the Cheviot Hills, a little son's hand enclosed in his, a father taught the measure of the measureless love of God. Pointing northward over Scotland, then southward over England, then eastward over the limitless hill and dale, and sweeping his hand and eye over the whole circling horizon, he said: Johnny, my boy, God's love is as big as all that!" "Why, father," the boy cheerily replied, with sparkling eyes, "then we must be in the very middle of it."

Jesus has taught us to use the Bible in self-defense. The Captain of our salvation girded himself with the sword of the Spirit. You will be mortally wounded if you are not able to parry the strokes of the enemy. Search out the meaning of God's word, and use what you know. There was great vehemence in the words of Jesus. He was not content to parry the stroke, but cut with the edge of the blade. And the wounds he made have not healed to this day.—Thomas Champness.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

We publish evidence in this number that some of the best thinkers and ripest scholars begin to see men as trees walking, so to speak, and are learning that God's revelation actually reveals something of his purpose in redemption. •

THE New Age says it is hard to understand how the Bible can ever be so misunderstood as to be regarded as the bulwark of tyranny and priestcraft. Those who make such a mistake must be, we suspect, in the position of the old disciple of Voltaire who, after a lifetime spent in inveighing against Christianity, was at last found studying the New Testament, and exclaiming, "Why this is a capital book, after all, when one comes to read it!" The Bible looked at aright, is the most living book, the most intensely modern book, the book not alone for today, and the present, but for tomorrow also." •

CANNON Elliott, D. D. says: "It would carry us far beyond our limits to inquire into the manner in which the promise given to Abraham personally, as well as to his seed after him (Gen. xiii. 15) is yet destined to receive its accomplishment. It is manifest, however, on the very surface of Scripture that the promise of God to Abraham, and for the fulfillment of which we are expressly assured that Abraham looked, (Heb. xi. 10,) was not fulfilled during his early history (Acts vii. 5.1, 19,) inasmuch, then, as promises were given to them, as such, which have not yet received their fulfillment, it follows of necessity, that the promises which they saw afar off and embraced, shall be fulfilled in their experience; that they shall inherit, as Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, that is, in their reanimated bodies, the country, which on earth they sought, but did not receive." •

The Bishop of Exeter.

From "Some words of comfort by the Bishop of Exeter we quote some remarkable utterances for, as we read them we thought what would we not give for the privilege of showing him the glorious gospel of the Kingdom, and life eternal as God's great gift? It is painful to see men nauseated with the traditions of men, while still unable to get hold of the key of truth. Oh, with humble gratitude we magnify the name of the Lord for the rays of divine light that illumine our pathway. The utterances referred to are as follows:

"As I pondered the simple, severe statement of Scripture, I learned more and more of the error and guilt of those who, in all ages, have overlaid the word of the living God with human tradition, and have piled up countless materialistic and mental and moral horrors, not only as existing in hell, but as multiplying themselves there without end; and this, under the government of the Allwise, Alljust, the Almighty, whose name is love; horrors of which His holy Word says nothing but which its statements so far as they unveil the mysteries of the ages to come, absolutely and forever condemn and exclude..... It has been too much the custom of popular theology to speak of the saints immediately after death being admitted to the full unclouded glories of heaven. How is the thought repeated in countless hymns and sermons?

"One gentle sigh his fetters break,
We scarce can say he's gone;
Before the willing spirit takes
Her mansion near the throne.

And yet this entrance into the inheritance of the everlasting kingdom is reserved for those who stand accepted before the Son of Man in the day of His appearing." • Anniversary Services.

Anniversary services were held by the church of the Blessed Hope, in Cleveland, Sunday, Nov. 10th. The interest in the occasion was shown by the attendance of about all who could attend. The exercises at the opening of the house for the worship of God and the proclamation of the truth seven years ago, were as nearly repeated as was practicable. The subject in the morning being "The God whom we serve," and in the evening "That Blessed Hope." After the morning discourse we gathered around the board laden with the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our Lord, and then thirty-four stirring addresses were delivered by brethren and sisters, the majority of whom had been born of water, and begotten by the word of truth since the opening of the house. Truely we sat together in heavenly places those days, and had

(A SWEET FORETASTE)

of the joy that awaits us at the general assembly if faithful. Although we have strictly adhered to the one faith and hope of the gospel, together with the divine conditions exacted, it has been our exceeding joy to have received 97 by baptism since Nov. 1888, and others by letter; and we expect to witness the obedience of faith again on the 17th inst.; and so we thank God and take courage, because now and then one or two can be reached with the life-giving message. And we are more encouraged because our young people realize how many snares are set for their feet in a city of more than three hundred and thirty thousand inhabitants, and brace themselves up for the conflict by more frequent meetings for prayer, praise, exhortation and searching the Scriptures. And, as passing events speak to us of coming events of tremendous importance it is joyful to notice spiritual quickening in old and young, and an earnest aim to stand approved at that day. In the name of the household we extend Christian greetings to all of like precious faith and hope, praying that in the near future it may be our privilege to meet them in the goodly land, where we shall unite with the Psalmist and them in speaking of the glory of God's Kingdom, and talking of his power and uttering the memory of his goodness, and singing of his righteousness, and making known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his Kingdom, see Psalm 145. Amen, and Amen. •

Foreign News Items.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times says there is a strong impression that Prince Lobanoff, Russian foreign minister, has obtained some sort of pledge of Germany's absolute neutrality on various Eastern questions.

The recent speech of Lord Salisbury has had a quieting effect,—the money and stock market showed signs of improvement immediately.

William Redmon in a speech in Dublin last week threatened that if Ireland did not receive a measure of autonomy in the near future, Irishmen would certainly endeavor to realize the old saying that "England's danger is Ireland's opportunity."

The French cabinet resigned a few days ago and M. Bourgeoise, a Republican Radical has formed a new one.

Horrid tales of Armenian massacres continue to pour in, in spite of the efforts of the authorities to suppress them. It is stated upon apparently good authority that whole districts Erzeroum and Sivas. The Kurds have wiped out village after village. Shakin Pasha, who was appointed to carry out the scheme of reform decided upon, is unable, supported by Turkish troops, to stop the wholesale massacre of Armenians in the streets. •

A despatch by the Associated Press, dated Constantinople Nov. 12 says that the Sultan is in a bad box, he is hampered by want of means to carry out the reforms agreed upon, his troops are disaffected for want of pay and being poorly fed,—and then he is in mortal fear of assassination by the religious fanaticism of the people who cannot endure his agreement to carry out the measures demanded by the six powers.

Then, again, advices received here today announce fresh disturbances at Marash, Bitlis, and Sivas, with their attendant massacres.

It is also announced that a battalion of Turkish troops, which was in garrison at Zeitoun, and which recently distinguished itself by surrounding and shooting down a number of Armenian insurgents, was later besieged in its barracks by the Armenians, to whom the soldiers eventually capitulated with arms and ammunition, bag and baggage. It is added that the Armenians now occupy the quarters at Zeitoun previously occupied by the Turkish soldiery.

The Armenians, it is further stated, have also garrisoned all the important positions in and about Zeitoun, and are gathering ammunition and provisions, throwing up other fortifications and in every way preparing to hold the place. Zeitoun is on the route from Arabgheer to Aleppo and is an important iron-mining center.

Considerable anxiety is felt in American circles here on account of the absence of news from the districts where the American Missionaries are stationed, and the United States Ambassador, Mr. Alexander W. Terrell, has telegraphed to Commissioner Barnham, at Harput, asking him if the American mission is safe. According to advices today from Hadjin several villages in that vicinity have been attacked by rioters, who massacred the inhabitants and plundered their property. •

"The Soul and the Life."

Our brother, Dr. J. T. Smith, of Collinwood, Ohio, must have either found an open door, or opened one, for we find an article under the above caption in the "Medical Brief," and which we see has struck a responsive chord in other professional men. The article in question is as follows:

"I am aware that the "Brief" is a medical journal, however, if in the discussion of questions physiological, opinions and questions, theological should come in incidentally, they may perhaps be allowed.

I therefore venture to reply briefly to an article in August "Brief," p. 341, by J. R. Taylor, M. D., commenting on a question raised by L. G. Deane, M. D. in April "Brief."

The brain is the organ in which thought is evolved. Without a living, active brain there can be no thinking. If by compression, or other, cerebral activity is suspended, unconsciousness results and thinking ceases. At least, such is the conclusion to which any rational mind must come, from a study of the phenomena presented and apparent during the life of the human organism. Now, is there an entity in man that survives the dissolution of the organism, that is conscious and can think independently of the brain? Dr. Taylor seems to think there is, and raises the question: "If the breath is simply the soul, "what becomes of thought, reason, judgment? Are not these all results of cerebral activity? Why can one man think, reason, judge better than another? Because he has a better brain. Note the difference in the capacity to reason, between an idiot and Dr. Taylor for instance. Is it not due to the fact that the latter has the better brain?"

I know there is an existing belief that there is an entity in man, usually called the soul, that survives the death of the body, and is conscious, can think, etc., after its dissolution. Now, from what source comes this belief? Surely as above indicated it cannot come from a study of man's organism. Whence, then? Has it been revealed to us by the Creator in His Word? No! He tells us pointedly, "The dead know not anything," and he bases man's hope of a future life altogether on a resurrection from the dead. I am of the opinion, therefore, that the teachings of the Bible do not conflict with physiological laws, as we observe them.

Dr. Taylor refers to the account of man's creation as given in the first chapters of Genesis, in proof that man has a soul, but the narrative as read in the original, makes no difference between man and the lower animals. The word rendered soul occurs several times before, in the account of the creation of the lower orders, and is there translated life, or living creature.

In the passage, "Then shall the dust return to the earth, as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it," the original word for "spirit" is "ruach" and is rendered breath in Genesis vii. 22, as follows: "All in whose nostrils was the breath of life," (margin, the breath of the spirit of life,) also in Gen. vii. 15, ruach is rendered breath in the sentence. "All flesh wherein is the breath of life." The word rendered breath in the account of man's creation is neshamah, and is defined by the authorities to mean precisely the same as ruach, viz. "Breath," "Spirit" "wind;" so that one passage tells how man came into existence, and the other how he goes out, and the latter is the reversal of the former.

And formed man out of the dust of the ground; made an organism out of the inorganic; put into his nostrils the breath or spirit of lives (it is plural) and he became a living man. (It takes the two conditions, the organism and the atmosphere, to make a living being.) Man dies: the organism dissolves, returns to the inorganic, and the spirit or breath to the grand reservoir of breath, the atmosphere, by which God supports all animal life."—J. T. Smith. •

Christian Perfection—Is it Practicable?

Having been requested to publish our sermon before the recent conference at Argos, Indiana, on "Christian Perfection," we have concluded instead, to present the salient points of it in a series of articles.

The great question on this, as on every other question relating to man's character and destiny, should be, What saith the Scriptures, and hence to these we turn without preface. In 1 Chron. xvi. 29, we read, "Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." In Heb. xii. 14 we read, "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." In Rom. xii. 1, Paul beseeches us to present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God—our reasonable service." In 1 Cor. [illegible] we may more

THE TEMPLE OF GOD,

him shall God destroy, for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." In Eph. i. 4 it says, "According as he hath chosen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." In Col. iii. 12 the apostle writes:—"Put on, therefore, as the elect of God, holy, and beloved bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering," etc. And to the Thessalonians he directs that his epistle be read to all the holy brethren; and to Timothy he speaks of holding up holy hands; and of being called with a holy calling; and he directs Titus that a bishop must be holy; and to the Hebrews he writes of the holy brethren; and Peter enjoins us to be holy in all conversation and godliness; and speaks of holy women, and of holy men speaking as they were moved by

THE HOLY SPIRIT.

And in Matt. v. 48, Jesus says, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect." In 1 Cor. ii. 6 it says, "Howbeit, we speak wisdom among them that are perfect;" and in chapter 13 and v. 9 the apostle says, "And this also we wish, even your perfection;" and in 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17 he says the Scriptures are given by inspiration of God that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." And in Heb. xiii. 20 we find this prayer, "Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that Great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant—

MAKE YOU PERFECT

in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory for ever and ever." The prayer of the Lord Jesus for his disciples in the 17th of John says, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy Word is truth:" and again in verse 19 he says, "And for their sakes I sanctify myself that they also might be sanctified through the truth." In Eph. v. 25, 26 we read, that Christ "gave himself for the church that he might sanctify and cleanse it with

THE WASHING OF WATER

by the Word." And the following petition is found in 1 Thess. v. 23: "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." In 1 Cor. i. 2 we read of those at Corinth who were sanctified in Christ Jesus;" and in the 6th chapter, of those "sanctified in the name of the Lord Jesus;" and in 1 Tim. iv. 5 of sanctification by the Word of God and of prayer," and Jude i. of those

SANCTIFIED BY GOD

the Father. These three terms in numerous passages, viz.:—Holiness, perfection and sanctification brings the Bible teaching fairly before us. Our readers are doubtless aware that the doctine of perfection has given rise to much controversy in the past between the Armenians and Calvinists,—and I suppose these parties are really in theory, no nearer together now than when the controversy commenced, although the contention has almost died out on account of the growing impression in these days with almost all religious bodies, that it matters not what is believed, sincerity is the important factor with them. But notwithstanding this, we frequently meet with those on each side who maintain the old traditions of their founders. Some insist that sanctification corresponds with taken in a secret society, and having which, a person actually lives without a wrong thought or deed or word. We have in mind a person who told us on one occasion, how many days it was since he sinned in any way. Others will claim to be members of the Church and heirs of the kingdom (heaven), and yet in their prayers to God call themselves miserable sinners. Of course both cannot be true. They cannot be miserable sinners if they are heirs of heaven; and they cannot be heirs of heaven if they are miserable sinners. This condition of things induced us to try to set forth God's truth in the promises, [illegible] some expressions of gratitude from those who have listened encourages us to hope we may help other perplexed and disconsolate ones because the standard seems to be set so high that they despair of ever reaching it. •

OBITUARY.

Died at her home in Remington, Jasper County, Ind., Oct. 31, 1895, Mrs. Alice Cheek, wife of Mr. Croff Cheek.

Sister Cheek, whose maiden name was Deits, was born in Kingstown, Ulster County, N. Y., Aug. 15, 1853. While very young she removed with her father to Peoria, Ill., thence to Fairbury, Ill. She was married to C. Cheek, Nov. 28, 1873. From this union six children were born, four of whom, together with her husband and father are left to mourn her loss.

Sister Cheek became obedient to the Gospel of Christ, in 1878, during a series of meetings held by Bro. Houghawout, since that she has lived a most consistent Christian. Thus, instead of laying up treasures on earth, her aim was to have a reward in heaven which she could receive at the hand of her Savior at his appearing, even eternal life.

The writer addressed a large congregation of friends about that blessed hope as suggested in 1 Cor. xv. 49, "And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

May God's blessing rest upon the bereaved ones, and prepare them to meet the sleeping loved one on that glad resurrection morn.

F. L. ACARTH.

Cynthia Ellen, daughter of Cyrus and Maria C. Musselman was born Dec. 26, 1870, died Nov. 12, 1895. Was immersed into the all-saving name of Christ by Bro. J. L. Wince in 1888. A lingering sickness of twelve weeks was borne without a murmur of complaint. A strong effort was made to rescue the young life from the enemy but medical skill, and human sympathy were alike unavailing, and Cynthia was laid away to await the coming of the Master. O thou relentless enemy that spares neither youth nor age, we thank God thy power will soon be broken. Words of comfort spoken from 1 Cor. xv. 22.

J. F. WAGONER.

Mary Catherine Priser, daughter of Samuel and Salome Priser was, born Aug. 10, 1854, died Nov. 12, 1895, aged 41 years, 2 months and 2 days. Was united in marriage with John C. Johnson, Sept. 26, 1878. To this union there was born six children and two daughters and two sons, five of whom survive the mother. Words of comfort offered by the writer based on Rom. v. 12.

England and Russia Together.

There seems no longer any reason to doubt that at least England and Russia are agreed in their Turkish policy. Russia, of course, is acting not with England alone but as one of the six powers, but it is far more satisfactory to hear positively that these two are of one mind than merely that all the powers are agreed. If an English fleet enters the Dardanelles, a Russian fleet will enter the Bosphorus. The Italian fleet and the French fleet are both steaming eastward, and before many days there will be a concentration of naval force within a few miles of Constantinople which may impress even the stubborn intelligence of the Sultan.

What is really happening in Turkey nobody knows. Rumors abound, but the rumors of one day are contradicted by those of the next. There may be a revolution any moment. The Sultan may be murdered in his palace. The revolutionists may be put down. The new Cabinet pleases nobody, and has no policy of its own. The Armenians are massacring and being massacred. Whichever party is the stronger at a particular point exterminates the other. The Armenian [illegible] some fear of his life not from the Turks, but from his coreligionists and compatriots, admits that the Armenian revolutionary committees are provoking massacres. He looks, strangely enough, to the Porte for help.

The Porte continues to assure the powers that it will redress Armenian grievances without delay. The Turkish reserves have been called out, but whether to restore order in Armenia or to resist Europe remains a question. Turkey cannot resist Europe, but it can provoke a religious war and let loose anarchy throughout its dominions. That is what the powers dread, and that is one reason why they move with what seems to lookers-on extreme deliberation. The Sultan it may be fairly said, is capable of anything but a straightforward and sensible policy.—Chicago Tribune.

This and That.

I pity the boy, or the girl who believes
Just whatever the preachers say!
For one says this, and another says that,
Which one is right, now, I pray?

Why the one who says what the Bible says
The very best Book of all,
For the Bible was written by inspired men:
Such as Moses, Luke, Peter and Paul.

Some say, "We don't need all of God's Plan,
'Tis a day of improvement—we'll look in a bit,
And take out what's best suited to man."

I saw in a sermon, not very long since,
That a wise man preached, to men,
How they should bow down, and devoutly pray;
And rise up forgiven, then.

Now this man is a "Rev.."
A real rever—end, "D. D."
And as the world counts wisdom,
Is wise enough for three!

He, once, has been to Palestine.
And down in Jordan's water;
And there, one time, he dipped a man:
Thus; proved no lack of water!

If you can not guess who this preacher is,
It will never harm you at all;
But read the Bible, and learn the truth;
The truth will save, both great and small.

This poor man's eyes are holden;
I fear he will never see;
If he could see the "Truth as it is in Jesus,"
What a preacher he would be.

He would tell the people the "Good News;"
He'd tell them to repent,
And be baptized in Jesus name,
Now, be the gospel sent.

The gospel is God's saving power;
The apostle told it all;
But now, some preachers keep it back,
Some think it looks too small!!

Some, may be sorely blinded,
By wily old traditions;
While others must withold the truth,
Lest they lose good positions.

God's gracious plan is dearer far,
Than all that man can say;
Why, should not you obey his will,
Enter the "Narrow Way?"

That way is Christ, the crucified,
And Christ, the risen Lord,
You die, to sin, be buried then,
As shown in his dear word.

Then rise to walk in a new life,
Where sown your turn and hope,
Keep close to the dear Savior's side,
Love give, and strength invoke.

And should you stumble, by the way,
The Lord will lift you up;
If you will ask your God, each day,
Through Christ your Lord, for help.

A crown awaits each faithful one;
God's promises are sure;
But if you will the crown possess,
The cross you must endure.

And now if I could gain the ear
Of every boy and girl,
I'de guide them to God's blessed Word,
His precious truths unfurl;

I'de speak his praise, and sing glad lays
Of home, and life immortal:
And never would I cease this theme
While life should last, or till Christ redeem.

A Plea for Tolerance.

"Be strong and of good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God is with thee, whithersoever thou goest." Joshua i. 9.

The Conference at Lanark, Ill. was well attended, business was rapidly despatched, ample funds for conference expenses were raised and a most liberal spirit displayed in providing for the evangelistic expenses. The spirit of faith, perseverance and determination to uphold the cause was remarkable and full of encouragement and hope for the future. The sisters of this conference and circuit have talent, energy and courage which, well directed, can not fail to bear fruit in the near future by the help of God—and they are ably supported by the brethren.

Probably two-thirds of the life of the writer has been spent in the honest endeavor to find the truth, since then he has made the development of the truth his life's work. He has yet much to learn and no doubt many errors to correct. If this be so (and also with others) what right have we to expect a few discourses should be followed by a general acceptation of our teachings. Christ preached far better than we, but his converts were few and the many who heard were not convinced but hanged him on a tree.

Are we promised a speedy return for the sowing? Not so. The edict was to cast our bread on the waters that we might find it after many days. We murmur against God because he does not work as we desire. Did he grant our desires, we should boast in our works, become high-minded, fashionable, wealthy and worldly, and fall into destruction. In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand. Here is our duty. The Lord giveth the increase. If we see no increase that is not our business, but we have delivered our own souls. Some seem to think Christ is but a sleeping partner, and that we have to do all the work. Yet we are but his vessels and weapons of war.

Love is the factor to win souls. To denounce as recreants or attribute improper motives to those who do not at once accept our views is both unchristian and unbusiness like. It does not necessarily follow that those who largely know the Truth and affiliate with the sects have betrayed their Master. They may often be not fully persuaded in their minds that our diction on this point is wise or correct. "Judge not that ye be not judged." Think no evil of others too hastily. It is far better to use persuasion than denunciation, and the latter often removes out of our reach those we might influence for good.

Has God yet issued the call to his people to "come out of her?" If not, haply we may be found fighting against God. They may be there by his permission and to fulfil his purpose. Like many others the writer has conscious views as to his own duty on this point; but to act in accordance would be to him a sin. Others think differently. They may eat meats offered to idols that would cause some of us to lose eternal life. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. Give none offence, neither to the Jews nor the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many that they may be saved." 1 Cor. x. 31, 33.

The writer is known in the gates when he sitteth among the elders of different churches as a true [illegible] Christ—believer. He came to the city a perfect stranger, purposely presenting no introductions of which he had no lack—introducing himself promptly at the church doors as a soul-sleeper or to that effect. He has never swerved either to the right nor to the left in his beliefs, nor has he failed to sound the trumpet on all proper occasions, he has not been either "caught with guile" or "brought over" and he hopes to keep doing business on the same basis till the last roll call. He has many loved friends and acquaintances in all churches, who do not concur in his views. These he would gladly influence for good and is convinced that he can best do so by retaining their confidence and respect. Those who are weak in the faith, or yet lust after worldly desires had better keep as far as possible from temptation. But the fisher of men must go where the fish congregate, and not commence by flinging stones into the water. Herein is wisdom, let him that readeth understand. Our teachers can get more intelligent hearers among Christians than in the slums; our beliefs require intelligence and a knowledge of Scripture. We have left the laying of foundations to go on to perfectin and "strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil." Heb. v. 13, 14; vi. 1-3.

H. T. BAKER.

The Love of God.

"Because as he is, so are we in this world." 1 John iv. 17. In this chapter the apostle has been setting fourth the great love of God to man, and man's love toward one another, and he first tells of God's love to us, and the sacrifice it cost to purchase our salvation, for we are not "our own but are bought with a price, even the blood of Christ." Can we not learn something of what that means by taking a look back to calvary for a few moments. Ah, there we behold the blessed Son of God, as he hangs suspended between heaven and earth, the cruel nails piercing hands and feet; the torn flesh quivering in every nerve, the awful suffering distorting the features of his lovely face, his head bowed in meek submission, while those that stood by, mocked, saying, "You saved others, now save yourself. If you be the Son of God come down from the cross and we will believe in you." And there, too, we see on either side, seemingly to make the scene more shameful, the thieves, and over his head we read, written in the different languages, "This is Jesus, the King of the Jews." As we look through the crowd we begin to wonder where those faithful ones are that have so lately been his daily companions, and have professed such love for him, even asserting their willingness to die for him? Ah! they have fled and left him alone. Oh, he has done so much for them. His prayers have been so fervent for them, but they have gone, and now we hear the blessed Christ breathing the prayer, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." "Oh, love divine, all love excelling." Who but the Son of God, could in the midst of such agonizing surroundings breath that prayer? No wonder we hear him cry," My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" And methinks I hear the Father say, "Son it is enough, you shall suffer no more, it is finished, now come and sit with me in my throne, until thy bride hath made herself ready, for she must be perfected as thou hast been, then, shall you return, not as a sin-offering but as King of kings, then to take the throne of thy Father David and with him rule the nations, and before thee every knee shall bow. Thy Bride shall be worthy to walk with thee in white and the heavens and earth shall resound with thy praise." This is God's love to man, how are we as he is? I answer, in our love, one toward another, for we read that we know that we have "passed from death unto life," because we love the brethren. And again, "A new commandment I give unto you that ye love one another." And again, "beloved, if God so loved us, we ought to love one another." It was God's love [illegible] Christ's love that made him a willing sacrifice. It is our love that will perfect us as the bride. "For behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God." We became the sons of God by obedience, and "if we be sons, then are we heirs with Christ." O let us cultivate that love that will make us willing and obedient children. That love that will make us as "he is" in this world. "Know ye not, that he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God," and is able to walk in that higher plane of life, and lifts us above its pride and vanities, and keeps us in sweet communion with the blessed "Spirit of Truth." We have not yet reached that perfection of Christian character that it is our priviledge to attain to; but by a diligent study of God's Word and a consecrated prayerful life our love shall be made perfect and we may have boldness in the day of judgment, because, (as for this reason) "as he is, so are we in this world."

R. A. B.

PURITY.

"What manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness." 2 Pet. iii. 10.

And yet with this text before them we know of persons professing Christ, strong in their praise of him, loud and long in their prayers, constantly talking of preaching the gospel (seeking places where the pay is certain) and still using by-words, and sentences to emphasize their conversation that any refined person would be ashamed to use, even though they made no profession of religion. Peter asks the questions, "What manner of persons ought ye to be?" and immediately sets himself to answer it: "in all holy conversation." Why! Because we are all looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God. And did we really believe the good Master was coming tomorrow, would we not be very careful what our lips should utter. If, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," we can judge somewhat the manner of persons before us. Surely any person having a desire to preach the gospel, should be free from all impure talk, all unnecessary by-words, for O how they are watched, what an influence their words, manners and actions have on all around them. Then, most disgusting thought, a man ordained to preach the gospel venturing some Sunday morning to read this for their Scripture lesson, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you, If any man defile the temple of God him shall God destroy," and at the same time have to move the quid of tobacco from one cheek to the other, and before kneeling in prayer stoop to empty his mouth of the filthy saliva which at that very moment is finding its way to the clean white shirt bosom his patient wife has taken such pains to prepare for his use, and more than likely this same mouth puffed the smoke of a cigar while walking to the house of prayer reluctantly parting with the sickly stub at the door. What a picture, what a temple to ask God to bless and sanctify (set apart) for his use. How can we preach purity of lives, cleanliness of habit to others with these filthy rags clinging to us. And these same temples are as much God's temples when belonging to any member of the Church of God as to the ministerial staff, "For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones, what a close relationship we bear to that sacred head Christ Jesus. "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting the holiness in the fear of God." The blessed, pure, beautiful Church of God, what a place of honor to be in, and when from Christ's own lips we hear, "come ye blessed of my Father," we can realize the struggle here has not been in vain, but we may present ourselves before him "A glorious church, not having spot, or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish." Amen.

Will Christ Reign Over the Saints while He Mediates for Them.

The intercession of Christ cannot be a reign over those for whom he intercedes. While he prays the Father for them he cannot be governing them. In John 17th he prays, first for his disciples, and then for those who shall believe on him through their Word. Here is his mediation, his intercession through all time until he comes. Not until he comes to judge the world, after his intercession has ended, will he reign; and then not over his saints in the sense of coercion, for they then will need no governing, being like him, having the same mind, and be beyond the possibility of erring or going wrong. Christ's reign will be over the nations of the earth, the wicked—his enemies, putting "down all rule and all authority and power"—"all his enemies under his feet."

There will be a reign of Christ—a literal, personal reign. It will be what the Father has appointed him. He will then have the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession. Then will he break them with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel. Psa. ii. 8, 9; Rev. ii. 26, 27.

The Divine Agent, the Holy Spirit, the followers of Christ now have; and this Helper comes through his intercession. He said to his disciples: "I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." John xiv. 16, 17. The Holy Spirit takes the place of Jesus here. His influence in the hearts of God's people makes them what they are; and while Christ intercedes in heaven for them their salvation is assured. They are "kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time." 1 Peter i. 5.

It is a mistake to think that Christ is King while he is our High Priest in heaven, and upon his Father's throne, instead of now having one of his own. When he comes to his throne, then it is that he will be a King. He tells us plainly when he will take his throne: "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Matt. xxv. 31. Not until he is seated upon his own throne will he occupy the position of king, and judge the world. He must before this leave us Father's throne, and be no longer his people's intercessor, but their King forever. His work hence forth will be to fit up the earth for his kingdom. In doing this, the destruction of his enemies, those that are not his subjects, will and must take place. See Mal. iv.; Matt. xiii.; 40-42.

There is no spiritual, mystic reign of Christ to be found in the divine programme of redemption. Jesus reigned not when he was here; for the kingdom has not come, nor will it come until he comes. Then he will reign, and his saints will reign with him on earth. Rev. v. 10. This is the plain teaching of the Word, harmonious throughout; free from mysticism and a tortuous interpretation. Why it is not seen by all who love the Word of God, who can tell? It seems that an effort is now being made to reduce the literal meaning of Holy Writ to a fanciful one, calling it "the spiritual teaching of the Word." This is one of the thousand deceptions of today. We are in danger of being led away from our true position by this spiritualizing, imaginative interpretation of God's Word.

The reign of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, say many, are all here in this life, and are spiritual. "Christ comes in the conversion of every soul, and then begins his reign in that soul. The resurrection is when the soul is raised up from a spiritual death to a spiritual life." Salvation is all here and now. "This is holiness, sanctification by a second blessing. There is nothing wanting beyond these." To speak of the literal coming of Jesus, the real resurrection of the dead, and of a future judgment—these are all foreign to the subject of our salvation, with many. To speak of the life to come, apart, even, from the coming of Christ, is an annoyance. "All is here," "I am saved."

What a contrast to the faith and hope of patriarchs, prophets and all the ancient church of God—to the church of Christ through all the days of persecution and the martyr age! The hope of the true church is now laid aside for that which has no hope in it (present full salvation), and a giving up as void of the promises of God relating to the future inheritance of his saints. What will the outcome of this teaching be? Are we to have confidence in such a theory, or go by the belief and teachings of those who advocate it? Let us stand on the foundation of apostles and prophets, "Christ himself being the chief corner-stone." It will soon be seen who is standing thereon. The reign of Christ soon cometh, when he will intercede no more for his people, but have them with him in judging the world. 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3.—I. I. Leslie in Crisis.

Israel as a Factor in History.

Considered from the ordinary point of view, Israel was not one of the great nations of the ancient world. Compared with the Babylonians, the Assyrians, the Persians, the Greeks, and the Romans, who all aimed at the realization of what was the highest ideal of the state-craft of antiquity,—namely, the establishment of a world's empire Israel, with its few millions and its diminutive territory, is but a pygmy power.

It is owing mostly to the exceptionally central geographical location of Palestine that even the rare mention of Israel in the literatures of Assyria and Babylonia and Egypt is made. Of the Israel of the exodus period there is no distinct extra-bibical record. In addition to the inscription on the Mesha stone, the latter period of the chosen people is recognized only occasionally and incidentally in the bonsiful reports of the struggles between the Assyro-Babylonian kings of the east and the Egyptian in the west, in which contest Palestine was naturally an important debatable land. To this must yet be added the fact that Israel, unlike other nations of antiquity, never sought to impress its individuality and power upon surrounding peoples by war and conquest. Its peculiar development was conditioned, not by contact with its neighbors, but rather by isolation. The natural consciousness of the people was of a kind that did not suggest an aggressive extension of territory or influence. In other words, neither externally nor internally were the conditions that ordinarily enter into the composition of a history-producing nation present in Israel.

Yet, if the teaching of the philosophy of history is correct, that a people is entitled to the rank of a historic nation in so far as they have contributed permanent elements to the culture and civilization of the world, then Israel can claim a position in the front rank of the favored few. Its mission has been of such a unique kind that it constitutes a sui generis factor and force in the development of history, offering an attractive problem, not only to the theologian and Bible student, but also to the historian in general. Of all the nations of antiquity, there are practically only three that have left an abiding impress upon the destinies and fate of mankind; namely, the Greeks, the Romans, and the Israelites. Modern civilization and culture with its roots strikes down deeply into the soil of these three history-making peoples. It is in accordance with the law of the survival of the fittest that these three most gifted races of antiquity have supplied the world ever since with the highest ideas and ideals of individual and national thought and activity. The discovery, in recent decades, of the vast literary storehouses of the Euphrates and the Tigris and of the Nile, however valuable these may be, shows that in Graeco-Roman literature and in the Hebrew Scriptures we still have the best that the mind of antiquity produced, in the thought-world of the brightest peoples af the ancient world. It is not an accident that these three were the historical peoples of antiquity.

And yet of these three the smallest is the greatest. They did not all supply the same elements to later civilization, nor supply equally valuable elements. The Greeks have contributed more than all other to the intellectual and esthetical department of modern culture, and their influence is most largely felt in the methods and manners of thought, in the ideals of the art, in the systems of philosophy, in scientific research, and the world of abstract thought in general. To the Romans later generations are largely indebted for the forms of government, for the legal systems controlling states and society, property and individual rights. The social, economic, and political fabric of the modern world rests to a great extent on Roman precedents. And yet these are not the most powerful factors and agencies directing the destinies of men and nations.

More powerful than all these, and expressive of the most potent instincts implanted in the hearts of men, is the religious feeling. History has again and again shown that its influence it vastly superior to the ties of language, and even kinship and blood. And the mighty ideas and elemets which have contributed most to the development of Christian civilization, and to the present day yet continue in the world of faith and morals, in all the ramifications of individual and social life, to rule the hearts and minds of countless millions much more strongly than ever the laws of Rome or the philosophy of Greece did or will, are substantially rooted in Jewish soil. They have assumed their historic and present proportions in the newer covenant, supplementing and complementing the older.

Israel could not vie with other nations in the arts and sciences. She has left us only a meager literature, which, in variety and extent, has already been surpassed by the cuneiform inscriptions of Assyria and Babylonia; practically in none of the lines of secular thought or attainments did Israel excel its neighbors. But yet this small and seemingly insignigcant people have, under the providence of God, through the further development of the principles of the faith and morals by the teachings of Christ and his apostles, made the most lasting contribution to the make-up of the historic forces that have been guiding the destinies of mankind ever since. This constitutes to the present day the best and most permanent elements in modern life and thought, and the most aggressive agency in the spread of civilization. No honest student of history can fail to recognize in Christianity the leading agency in the thought and life of the world since its first proclamation by the Nazarene; and notwithstanding some appearances to the countrary, it, consciously or unconsciously, is recognized as such still. To have supplied the beginnings and the roots of this agency has been the historic mission of Israel. It has, in truth and in reality, been the peculiar people, not only from the stand-point [of sacred but also from the standpoint of secular history.—Prof. Dr. G. H. Schoole.

REPORT.

Dear Restitution:

I write to inform you of the good meetings we have been having at Lake Shore, near Vancouver, Wash., at our conference and since.

Through the providence of God, our dear old Brother R. Corbaley, of Waterville, this state was with us and did most of the preaching at the conference, and good interest was manifested throughout. Many Bible subjects were treated in an able manner. At the close of the conference, Brother Corbaley went to Scholls, Oregon, to hold a series of meetings at Lake Shore, one week, resulting in much good. At the close on Saturday the 27th, six young converts were baptized into the all-saving name. Three of Brother Jared McErwin's daughters, one of Brother James Wolf's daughters and two sons of the writer, making five of my children who have put on the Lord. All the converts were under eighteen years of age. At the close of the meetings on Sunday evening the "communion" was observed, when all did partake of the body and blood of the Lord, according to the commandment.

The meetings were truly enjoyable, and we can speak highly of the sincere work done by Brother Edwin Groat, although only a young man, yet he has taken upon himself the yoke of Christ, and is doing splendidly in showing "the way, the truth, and the life" as it is in Jesus.

Brother Skeels was also present and did some of the preaching. Quite a number were present from Scholls, Troutdale and Portland, Oregon, and some from other places, and altogether the meetings were profitable for the cause of the Master. Yours in Hope,

J. M. FIKE.

Announcement.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God in Nab. will be held at the church in South Frontier County, commencing, the Lord willing, on Thursday Dec. 5, and holding over Sunday. It is earnestly desired that all, who are interested in the cause of truth, be present at this conference if they can possibly do so, and help to make the meeting a pleasant and a profitable one.

The signs of the times all indicate that this age is drawing very near its close, and that Christ will soon come to reward every man according to his works. Let us therefore "be up and doing, while it is called to-day, for the night cometh when no man can work." Then when Jesus comes, may we all have an abundant entrance into his glorious kingdom, is our earnest prayer. Your sister in Christ.

PSALM. 116.

PSALM 116 { 116 COM. VER. The COM. VER makes one psalm of the 114 116. 19 verses }

1. An Allelouia. I had had faith; Therefore have I talked; And I became exceedingly humbled.

2. And I said in my distraught condition, Every man is a liar.

3. What shall I repay to the Lord for all that he hath paid me?

4. A cup of salvation will I take, and the name of the Lord will I invoke:

5. My vows unto the Lord will I pay in the sight of all his laity.

6. Honorable in the sight of the Lord in the death of his holy ones.

7. O Lord I am thy bond-servant, I am thy bond-servant and a son of thy hand-maid (or house-maid). Thou hast rent asunder my bonds.

8. Unto thee will I sacrifice a sacrifice of praise, and in the name of the Lord will I invoke.

9. My vows will I pay unto the Lord in the sight of all his laity.

10. In the courts of the Lord; In the midst of thy Hierousalem.

PSALM 116 (117 COM. VER.)

1. An Allelouia. Praise ye the Lord all ye nations; May ye have praised him all ye laities:

2. Because his mercy hath asserted control over us, and the truth of the Lord abideth forever.

PSALM 117 (118 COM. VER.)

1. An Allelouia. Confess ye unto the Lord that he is good, (agathos not chrestos here, the latter remembor has the idea of utility in it) that his mercy is forever.

2. May the house of Israel especially have said that he is good that his mercy is forever.

3. May the house of Aaron moreover have said that he is good that his mercy is forever.

4. May all those indeed who fear the Lord have said that he is good that his mercy is forever.

5. From out tribulation I invoked the Lord and he heard me in a wide place.

6. The Lord is my responsive-helper and I shall not have feared aught that man will do unto me.

7. The Lord is my responsive-helper and I shall look upon my enemies.

8. It is a good thing to have trusted in the Lord rather than to have trusted in a man.

9. It is a good thing to hope in the Lord rather than to hope in rulers.

10. All the nations compassed me about and I warded them off in the name of the Lord.

11. They compassed me about and in the name of the Lord I warded them off.

12. They compassed me about like bees as it were around a honey-comb and they flamed out like fire among acanthus plants, and in the name of the Lord I washed them off.

13. Thrust away I turned to fall and the Lord intervened in my behalf.

14. My strength and my hymnal song is the Lord and he hath become my salvation.

15. A voice of gladness and salvation is there in tabernacles of justified ones; The Lord's right-hand hath caused ability.

16. The Lord's right-hand hath exalted me; The Lord's right-hand hath caused ability.

17. I shall not die, but live and I shall discourse the works of the Lord.

18. The Lord hath chastened me and not delivered me up to death.

19. May ye have opened unto me gates of righteousness; and when I have entered in thereby I shall confess unto the Lord.

20. This is the gateway of the Lord; Justified ones will enter in thereby.

21. I shall confess unto thee that thou didst hear me and becamo my salvation.

22. A stone that the builders rejected, this hath become a head of a corner.

23. From the Lord did this come to pass, and it is wondrous in our eyes.

24. This is the day which the Lord hath created (or caused); Let us be glad and rejoice in it.

25. O Lord save indeed; O Lord prosper forsooth.

26. Blessed is the one who cometh in the name of the Lord; We have commended (blessed) you from out the Lord's house.

27. The Lord God hath appeared unto us. Gather together a festival with shading (boughs) even unto the horns of the altar.

28. My God art thou, and I shall confess unto thee; My God art thou and I shall exalt thee, I shall confess unto thee, that thou didst hear me and become my salvation.

29. Confess ye unto the Lord that he is good (agathos not chrestos) that his mercy is forever.

COMMENT.

The 116th psalm true to its number is a consumation of consummations; and its messianic import has been generally recognized because of Christ's own endorsement and comment upon it. The translations from the Hebrew all give evidence of Rabinnical tinkering. Read and compare. The psalms is nothing if not Messianic and in this light it is a calevin illumination of another world and another kingdom. Observe the 10 x 10 conjunctive significance also.

The 116th psalm is an allelouia of confession and prise appropriate only in the mouth of Christ and the redeemed and as a conjunction of conjunctions looks forward to the time when the redeemed will have realized and are no longer living in faith and hope. Then it will be evident why in the mercy and beneficence of God, "These all though attested through their faith did not realize the promise."

The 117th psalm, also an Allelouia, reminds us of the first psalm in the way it begins, and numerically it should so remind us, as it correlates with it and amplifies the same general thought and teaching. The character and "ennblement" of "the man" here spoken of finds its exact fulfilment in one man only and that the Christ of God. Read the whole psalm in this light and see for yourselves.

The 112th psalm, also an allelouia and appropriate praise put into the mouth of God's "children" as here stated, looks forward to the conjunctive-time when they can and will utter and sing it in the presence of the angels.

Of course it was formally sung as an allelouia in the old temple service, and was then a prophecy of the coming glory.

Observe the numerical significance of 12 as it appears in the 12 sons of Jakob, the 12 apostles as sons and heralds of the new sonship, and the 12 x 12 x 1000 equals 144000 of Israel.

The 113th psalm, also an old temple-service allelouia seems to be, true to its number, commemorative of God's first organic works of leadership under Mouses, and is highly practical in thought, if not in metre and rythm.

Think of this being chanted with an appropriate instrumental accompaniment and as a part of the praise worship of a people who were witnesses to the truth of these wonders, here recited; matters of hypostasis and not hypothesis or fable.

Observe that this is a psalm of 26 verses; but divided in the common and R. V. into two psalms, an unmistakeable evidence of Rabinical tinkering for some purpose and a purpose that is now coming to be understood at least by a few.

The 114th psalm, also an allelouia seems to have been subjected to the same attempt to confound the true numbering. According to its thought and import this psalm should be a 4th, as it depicts God in the character of a just as well as merciful judge and redeemer. It finds its natural conclusion with the 9th verse also whereas the perverted numbering carries it over 10 verses more into the 115th psalm which is a minor or 5th instead of a major or fourth.

It is an allelouia of faith and hope not of triumphant realization. See how it opens. "I have had faith; therefore I talked; and I became exceedingly humbled."

Still more in the second verse. "And I said in my distraught condition every man is a liar." Faith and hope in God alone "even though every man prove a liar" just as Paul puts it in Romans. This is the true major harmonic of faith and hope and it is the condition of mind and heart where every heroic Christian has to come sooner or later. There is only one minor chord that is higher and fuller of the divine melody, and that is "Though he slay me etc."

The idea of running these two psalms together as one namely the 114th and the 115th is as absurd as it would be to combine any major and minor strains in music without a proper transition in some way.

The 116th psalm also an allelouia is an eighth in its harmonic signification and post-resurrectional in its fulfilment as the reading of it makes evident at a glance.

"All ye nations" and "all ye laities" are addressed and exhorted.

"Because his mercy hath asserted control over us." It is allelouia of the redeemed who have realized and are in glory and at a time when "nations will be converted in a day."

The 117th psalm as an allelouia emphasizes as its number would indicate the completeness of God's goodness (utility) and mercy and the complete propriety of the confession of it on the part of all those who have experienced it, beginning with "the house of Israel" and ending with "all those who fear the Lord." From the 5th verse on the confession becomes individual and specific as well as strongly Messianic in fact. There are 20 verses, the last bring a repetition of the first, teaching us that the summing up of God adds nothing to his Oneness, and also teaching us that the true salvation of the 7 to the 8 is as completeness is to fullness, an idea which Paul dwells upon a great deal, the completeness of the law to do just what God designed it to do but its inefficency to give life, and in contrast with this "to be filled with the fullness of God" by becoming partakers of his divine life.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Christ is not now, nor has ever been, reigning King over the earth; but he will soon be.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 27, 1895. NO. 44.

Poetry.

"I Shall be Satisfied."

Thus mused the voyager on life's stormy tide:
"When I awake in thy likeness I shall be satisfied."
Thou hast promised to man an immortal state.
If he for Christ's coming will patiently wait.
He who comes to fulfill the promises of old,
And to gather the sheep in his Father's fold.

May we then, dear Father, flee from all sin,
And diligently labor that crown to win,
Which in this life we are seeking to earn,
And receive the blest boon at our Savior's return.

"I go to my Father," were his words of cheer;
"But again I will come"—and the time is near.
Soon we may view him in marvelous light,
Clothed in all power and garments of white,
"Behold, I come quickly and bring a reward
To give every saint who has kept my word."

Dear brother and sister, faint not, he will come,
Our weary, sad hearts will soon be at home
In the Kingdom of God, with Christ as our King.
And there with the blest to his glory will sing;
There all the joys of a new life we'll partake,
Yes, "I'll be satisfied to in thy likeness awake."

Prophecy.

In my last letter I called attention to a prophecy which clearly foretells a time when the Gentiles will be engaged in terrible wars.

What is the prize for which they will strive?

It will be for the possession of that part of the earth whereon the feet of man first trod.

There is one little spot in the world, on which more important events have taken place, than in all the world besides. Man was created there. It was there that he was informed that everything that God had made was his, with one little exception. All the little fish in the sea, all the birds in the air, all the animals on the mountains, on the plains and in the valleys, all the herbs of the field bearing seed, and all the fruits of the trees except one single tree, were generously given by a generous God to his two children. It was there that a merciful Father gave his promise to mother Eve. It was there that the promises were made to Abraham, to Isaac and to Jacob. It is the country inhabited by the children of Israel. Solomon built the temple there. John the Baptist preached there. Jesus was born there. The Savior spent all of the three years and half of his ministry in that country. He was crucified there, resurrected there, and ascended to the right hand of the Father from there. That country was the home of all the apostles and nearly all the prophets. Truly it has been the favored country, but it has been trodden down by the Gentiles for more than eighteen hundred years. The time is coming when it will again be the favored country and the laws which will rule the world, will go out from there.

In the 38th chapter of Ezekiel's prophecy we find the following: "The word of the Lord came unto me saying (please remember that Ezekiel is simply repeating the words of the Lord) "Son of Man" this is the title the Lord gives to Ezekiel, "set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, and prophecy against him." The first thing to note is that the prophecy is against Gog. We must therefore first ascertain who Gog is. Before proceeding I will call attention to the fact that no part of this prophecy has ever been fulfilled. Its fulfillment is still in the future, but that it will be literally fulfilled there is no doubt whatever.

We learn from ancient history that Gog was the title of a class of Monarchs, the same as the Pharaohs of Egypt and the Caesars of Rome. We are told by the prophet that Gog is the chief prince of the countries of Meshech, and Tubal. In Lesser's translation it reads "chief prince of Rosh, Meseeh and Tubal." We learn from history that the countries of Meshech and Tubal are now embraced within the territory of the Russian Empire. The word "Rosh" used by Lesser is the same name as Russians have today.

From the foregoing we learn that Gog, against whom the prophecy was uttered, is none other than the Czar of Russia, and as he is the representative of the government of which he is the head, the prophecy is against the government of Russia.

Having learned to whom the prophecy refers, we will go on with the examination of it.

"Thus saith the Lord God, behold I am against thee O Gog, and I will turn thee back and put hooks into thy jaws, and I will bring thee forth and all thine army, horses and horsemen all of them clothed with all sorts of armor, even a great company with bucklers and shields. Persia, Ethiopia and Lybia with them." "Gomer and all his bands. The house of Togarmah of the north quarters and all his bands and many people with thee." The foregoing countries are to furnish the armies which are to be led by Gog, or more properly speaking, the Czar of Russia. We will now locate the countries named:

Magog lies north of the Black Sea.

Rosh lies south of the Gulf of Finland.

Meshech is north of the Caspian Sea.

Tubal lies between the Black Sea and the Caspian Sea.

Persia is located south of the Caspian Sea.

Ethiopia lies south of Egypt It is called by the Hebrews, Cush.

Lybia is located in the northern part of Africa. It embraces all lying west of Egypt bordering on the Mediterranean Sea. It is sometimes called Put.

Gomer. There was a small country called Gomer, the territory of which is now embraced within the territory of the Russian Empire. I do not think that that is the country referred to by the prophet, on the contrary I am of opinion that the country referred to is none other than the German Empire. I know it is the almost universal opinion of politicians and statesmen that France and Russia will be allied in the great struggle, which is now impending. One thing is certain, France and Germany will be on opposite sides in the contest. I know full well that it is said treaties of offence and defence have very lately been entered into between the countries of Russia and France. These two countries have certainly been hobnobing with each other within the last year. Notwithstanding all this, I think Germany is Gomer and will be allied with Russia in this the last great war to be fought in this world.

The house of Togarmer is Tartara.

The prophet after naming the foregoing countries winds up by saying "and many people with thee." This is very broad and includes all other nations who will join Russia. What nations these are the prophet does not inform us, but Russia can probably rely on the assistance of the Balkan States-Servia, Roumania, and Bulgaria.

After the prophet informs Gog, the Czar of Russia, what countries he can rely on for assistance he gives him the following command, viz: "Be thou prepared, and prepare for thyself thou, and all thy company that are assembled unto thee, be thou a guard unto them! Here is a command to the Czar that he shall not only get his own country on a war footing but that he shall see to it that all the countries which are to assist him, shall also prepare for war. In other words the Emperor of all the Russias is commanded to so manage and so conduct himself that all the nations who shall be allied with him shall do as the prophet Joel said they would viz: "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near, let them come up."

"Beat your plowshares into swords and your pruninghooks into spears." How literally the Czar has complied with the command we know only to well. Who shall say that Joel's prophecy is not being literally fulfilled today?

Report of Travels.

On Wednesday morning, October 16, 1895, I left my home in Waterville, Washington, for the purpose of attending the N. W. Conference of the Church of God, for the States of Oregon and Washington, to begin on the 18th of October, at Lake Shore near Vancouver, Wash.

I went by stage to Wenatchee. The next morning I took passage on the Great Northern to Seattle. The Northern Pacific train for Portland, Oregon, had left Seattle one hour and a half before our arrival. After a short stay in Seattle I boarded a steamer for Tacoma. The ride on Puget Sound was indeed a delightful one. The next day at 2 p. m. I left Tacoma on the N. P. overland for Portland, Oregon, arriving there at 8:20 p. m. The next morning I went to Vancouver. From there Bro. Fike furnished conveyance for me to the conference. I reached there at about 10:30 a. m. and found a goodly number of brethren and sisters engaged in a social meeting. I went in the house with a few others thinking I would take a back seat, but had scarcely passed through the door when W. L. Skeels announced, "Bro. Corbaley has come." This announcement caused confusion in the social meeting for a few minutes. I had written to the conference that I had no expectation of being able to attend, therefore, the surprise was greater. I never met a more hearty welcome, or more kindly greetings at any conference I ever attended than at this one. I was carried back in memory to some of the conferences I attended many years ago in Indiana. While these brethren and sisters were not the ones I had met with in the long time ago; yet they were of the same faith and hope; with this difference, that they are now nearer the consummation of their hopes. And this fact stimulates and encourages in a good degree to not only look after the welfare of the brethren and sisters, to keep their lamps trimmed and burning, but to use every means in their power to enlist others to join their company. During the conference I did not hear a discordant note. There were no hobbies introduced; and it is to be hoped that hereafter such things may be kept out of all our meetings. Where introduced they bring disastrous results.

On Sunday night at the close of the conference two young men, sons of Bro. Fike of Vancouver, came forward for baptism. It was decided to continue the meetings for three evenings. On Monday evening four young ladies presented themselves for baptism. They and the two young men were immersed in Lake Creek on the following Sunday by Bro. E. E. Groat in the presence of a large company. The meetings at Lake Shore closed on Wednesday night, many seemed reluctant that they could not be continued longer. I confess to a feeling of sadness in my closing address when beholding familiar faces before me, when the thoughts come: 'Will we ever meet again in this world, and am I closing my work here?"

I have passed my 75th birthday anniversary, and I am truly thankful to God for the health and strength which I have. I have a grateful remembrance of the members of the conference not only for the zeal for the cause, but for their kindness to me in every way including the material aid thus enabling me to preach beyond them. May God reward them all.

From the Lake Shore, I went on Thursday the 24th of October to Scholls Ferry, Oregon. I commenced meeting Friday night and closed on the next Monday night. The meetings were well attended and good attention given to the things spoken. The Church has built a very comfortable house to worship in, and I learn there is no debt hanging over it. The preaching brethren who live in this vicinity divide their labors at Scholls, Lake Shore and some other places. These two localities are very well supplied with speakers who are doing a good work. The names are W. A. Prosser, W. L. Skeels, W. W. Juquith and E. E. Groat. At this place I found the same kindly greetings from brethren, sisters and friends as at Lake Shore. This was the first time I had been at their conference for four years. In that time many changes have taken place. Some have removed elsewhere, and some have been captured by the enemy death, and will be held as captives until the coming of the great Life-Giver, when all who are worthy will be the recipients of immortality and eternal life. If we meet no more in this world may we meet in the first resurrection.

In this report I should have given more of the details of the meetings but for the reason that I suppose the secretary will make full report. In all I preached eleven discourses. I reached home safely on the 31st of Oct., having traveled about 800 miles during the trip.

The Church of God at Waterville, Washington, numbers thirty with a prospect that others may be added soon. We are watching the signs of the second coming of Christ. One of the prominent ones is the action and position of Turkey. Ere long that power will make its last stand in the glorious holy mountain, where he shall come to his end and none shall help him. And at that time Michael shall stand up. Brethren, watch. The time is at hand. In hope.

Dear Restitution:

I see my time has expired. I will renew as I feel that I could not do without it. The Church at Blair, Nebraska, is still prospering. We have our Bible readings every Sunday and all feel glad to be serving our blessed Redeemer. I feel more than ever this pleasant morning that I need a Savior and ask an interest in the prayers of God's people that I may be faithful and merit a place at the feet of my Lord, as one of the least in the kingdom, and I do not feel worthy to stand any higher. Yours in hope.

MRS. LIZZIE JOHNSON.

Dear Restitution:

I cannot think of doing without my much loved paper, as it is all the preaching we have, and I hear from the dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad, and especially those I am acquainted with and love, and never expect to meet again in the flesh, but hope to be prepared to meet them in the kingdom where parting and suffering will be no more. I am 77 years old and do not expect to stay here much longer. I crave the prayers of the dear ones of the household of faith, that I may hold out faithful to meet our dear Savior in peace.

POLLY M. SPENCER.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed you will find a post office order for $1.50, my subscription for another year. As I see my time is out this month I will send now, as I do not like to miss a paper. It is joyful to read the letters from different places, to hear of the good meetings being held and to know that some are led to accept Christ and strive to enter into the kingdom, and we pray that kingdom may soon come, when sorrow shall be no more. Yet it is sad to think there are so many yet who take no interest whatever in the future or what it may bring; but let us still trust and pray that we may be found faithful.

E. M. B.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed you will find $1.50 to be applied to my subscription for THE RESTITUTION. I cannot get along without it, as it cheers me on my journey through life, especially since my husband, J. P. Jaeger, has fallen asleep. He died April 6th, 1895. He will be remembered by many of the readers of THE RESTITUTION. He was 76 years, 3 months and 19 days. He leaves a wife, 7 sons and one daughter. Pray for us that we may be faithful and enter into the kingdom of God, where sickness, pain and death will cease. Yours in hope.

MRS. J. P. JAEGER.

Dear Restitution:

My time having expired it is with much pleasure that I again renew, seeing our loving paper blows the gospel trumpet so clearly, I could not think of living without it, for often when I am reading the articles written by the brothers and sisters it seems to carry me forward to that happy time when we shall see and know each other even as we are known. I was very much pleased to find in some of our last papers that the spirit of some of our brethren is to send out the voice of warning still more faithfully than ever, to be prepared for the coming of the Bridegroom, and may God help us all to live before our fellowmen as those who must give an account so that when our blessed Master shall come we shall hear him say, well done. From your Brother in Christ.

JOHN HARIS.

Editor Restitution:

To the isolated brethren and sisters of the one faith, just a few lines from the Church of the Blessed Hope in Cleveland, Sunday Nov. 10th being the seventh anniversary of the church, the opening address of the church was repeated, which was one of those soul-stirring addresses such as it seems only our dear Bro. Joblin can deliver, and the church being well filled with the brethren and sisters much testimony was offered by both old and young, and how I thought of those to whom this is addressed. While we were listening as it were to the cream of God's truth, there were hundreds of our brethren and sisters that were deprived of such a privilege and the thought also came to me that if we could have such meetings now, what will it be when we meet our blessed Lord in his kingdom with the saints of all ages. Yours watching and waiting for the soon coming King.

BRO. C. WHALE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

What a privilege to call this great Being our Father, begotten of the Father, waiting for the spirit birth at the resurrection of the just, the church of the first-born then being called forth to enjoy the presence of the Lord forever, he who has bought us, and at the time of his coming into possession of the promises made of the Father, will redeem us from the power of the enemy. Oh glorious thought for poor mortals, who are tried on every hand, when that mortgage (so to speak) which Satan holds against the human family is lifted, we shall be free indeed. I wish to testify that I am trying by the mercy of God to let my light shine, and lead others to the truth, yet how many turn a deaf ear. Yet I rejoice in God's promises, though persecuted. Jesus bids us rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven. He says, "Ye are the salt of the earth, also the light of the world." We must also suffer with him if we should reign with him. "But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy. If ye are reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye, for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified." 1 Peter iv. 13, 14. These when our enemies have looked at, and called foolishness. I rejoice to be called nothing by the world. "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Gal. ii. 20.

Though scattered far and wide over the world, we should take courage and occupy till the King comes from the far country, having received for himself a kingdom and returned, we shall then be gathered home.

ELIZA A. RARE.

Editor Restitution:

Through the brotherly kindness of G. Soar of Nottingham, England, we have for some years enjoyed the visits of the THE RESTITUTION. It goes without saying, that we appreciate highly both the gift and the giver, and we doubt not but the latter will receive a rich reward. We thoroughly enjoy the tone of the paper, it is like pleasant music to us. There is a breezy sense of breadth and liberty about it that is peculiarly refreshing to us, who have been emancipated from that cold narrow feeling that cannot conceive of brotherhood only in the sense of an impossible uniformity in all our ideas on every subject.

Though we may be looked upon by some as eccentric, almost to the verge of apostasy, yet it is a very sweet comfort to us to know that there are brethren who will not, nay cannot refrain from holding out to us the right hand of fellowship. We are keenly alive to the noble and Christ-like nature of the Christian virtue of forbearance. How infinitely superior to that bad, old spirit of the past that has so often prompted the brethren to slam the door in the face of a brother, just because his ideas differed from theirs on one or more subjects. Look for a moment at the contrast in the results. In the former case the society of the brother is lost to the church, and he himself often falls away altogether through sheer loneliness. Now look at the forbearing method, our brother remains among us, he can be approached, reasoned with. Our elders and wise men can bring to bear upon him their stores of wisdom and knowledge. The Scriptures can be looked into once and again upon this point, then upon that, and then upon that other, all of which may be found to be beneficial all round. Nay it is just possible that some of our wise men themselves may find that there are some rays of light still left in the old Book that they themselves were not aware of. And given the presence of the absolutely indispensible, the childlike peaceable spirit, who knows what further bright gems may be dug out of our deep mine, the Bible. Any way what a delightful, a useful business to be engaged upon, in going over once and again the precious promises, the plain doctrines, the clear duties of our position, pausing once and again to ask ourselves the query, Have we cast off all human traditions? Do we realize the Truth to be a grand, harmonious whole? Have we seen all contradictions disappear? Is there not one grand, old, fundamental truth still waiting, oh, so patiently to be re-discovered, to be brought to the light of day, so that it may bless mankind before Messiah comes?

Oh my brethren look again, think again, begin where? Why, at the beginning to be sure. What does the word Scripture mean? Well, in the days of Christ it always meant Moses, the Psalms and the prophets. What book was it that John the Baptist, Christ and the apostles always preached out of? Why the Old Testament of course. Now, all ye of childlike, peaceable spirits, let us all sit down and begin at the beginning. Let us carefully note down all that is written about Messiah. I mean of course on the subject who he is. If we can only get to know who he is, we shall have made a creditable commencement. We can then proceed to get to know a great deal more about him that will be of great value to us. Till we have settled that question, there exists great confusion. Do not be afraid, the heavens will not fall because we have started investigating. Please find and note down every text which speaks of his beginning. Then ask yourselves what the Jewish nation, from Abraham down till now, have always believed about him, if after that the precious light does not begin to dawn upon our minds, then our case is sad indeed.

Dear Brother, will you kindly send the missing numbers of THE RESTITUTION? The first number missed contains Gardner's translation of Psalms 77, 78, 79 and 80. Next number contains 96, 97, 98, 99 and 100. You see I am very anxious to get the book complete, the translations are simply splendid. Yours in the bright hope of a speedy coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Strangely do some people talk of getting over a great sorrow—overleaping it, passing it by, thrusting it into oblivion. Not so. No one ever does that—at least no nature which can be touched by the feeling of grief at all. The only way is to press through the ocean of affliction solemnly, slowly, with humility and faith, as the Israelites passed through the sea. Then its very waves of misery will divide, and become to us a wall on the right side and on the left, until the gulf narrows and narrows before our eyes, and we land safe on the opposite shore.

A baby sin has no more right to live than one that is old enough to vote.

Infidelity never wrote a line that was comforting on a death bed.

The Restitution.

The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints associated here with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immediate destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as a pre-requisite to the forgiveness of sins, and a subjective acceptance of final salvation.

IT has been said that prayer is a Golden Key, which should open the morning and lock up the evening."

MASSILLAN declares that in the primitive days of Christianity "it would have been deemed a kind of apostasy not to sigh for the return of the Lord."

MATTHEW the commentator says, "One looking at Christ's coming as at a distance is the cause of all those irregularities which render the thought of it terrible to us."

"HE who lives for himself does not comprehend the possibilities slipping from him. Selfishness is the great obstacle to human progress as well as individual happiness."

PAUL says, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first." Amen. Even so come Lord Jesus.

THERE is nothing that the flesh so instinctively revolts against as obedience. Why the flesh will do anything, almost, and believe anything not required, but the thing commanded for the obedience of faith, is just the thing most people will not do; the flesh controls them.

AN erroneous faith is no more justifying than no faith. Men are justified by belief of and obedience to the true gospel, not a false one, or by the act of immersion; but it is in this act of obedience that they are justified by faith in the gospel. Grand in its simplicity is the gospel of Christ.

THE hearts of the brethren and sisters in Cleveland, were gladdened [illegible] faith of one more joyful truster in God on Sunday last. Sister Sadie Kirkly, formerly an Episcopalian, is hereby introduced to the Household of faith. May God bless her and make her a blessing to others, we pray.

IS a man dead to the world who for weeks and months and years spends fifteen to eighteen hours a day in business or pleasure, and not an hour in a week in attendance upon the appointed means of grace, or meditation upon the Word of God? If not, we see no alternative but that he is dead to God and to his people?

AND how is this for Calvin,—and what do Presbyterians think of their founder? Said he, "In plucking up the faith of Christ's coming, Satan aims directly at the throat of the Church. For what end did Christ die and rise again, but that along with himself he might some day redeem us from death, and gather us into eternal life. This is quoted and credited to Calvin by Dr. Gordon in his "Ecce Venit."

LUTHARDT SAYS, "This Word he has in fact spoken,—'Hereafter ye shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven," but it is Word of which there is no other example. Even the mad pride of Roman Emperors who demanded religious homage for their statues have never gone so far as to conceive such an unheard-of thought; and here it is the lowliest among men who speaks. The Word must be truth; for there is here no mean term between truth and madness."

Foreign News Items.

The London Standard's Constantinople correspondent on the 14th inst., said that of the report the French and American missionaries have been injured he confirmed, there is every reason to believe that France and the United States will no longer confine themselves to remonstrances. The Sultan and his entourage have been for two days in a state of panic. The condition of things in the palace is indescribable. Everybody believes the end is near, but nobody ventures to prophesy how it will be effected.

Another despatch of the same date says the massacres and pillage throughout Asia Minor absorb the attention of everybody to the exclusion of other matters. The Sultan is fearful that the powers may forcibly intervene.

Later news is to the effect that Russia is unwilling just now to do anything that may dismember the Empire. Russia sees that the other powers are alert to secure their share when the Turkey is carved, and would rather let things drift awhile till under some pretence or other it can seize what it pleases.

A despatch from London on the 18th says the cablegram from Constantinople says, "Massacres are proceeding almost everywhere in Asia Minor. Over 100,000 persons are dying from starvation in Armenia. For God's sake urge the government to put a stop to the most awful event of modern times. The Porte is powerless, as the telegraph lines are controlled by the palace officials who have invited these massacres. It is estimated that 20,000 persons have been killed since the Sultan accepted the scheme of reform.

The almost frantic Sultan has written a letter to Lord Salisbury asking him to make a speech to counteract the one recently made at the Lord Mayor's banquet, and giving his word and honor to carry out the reform agreed upon.

The Question Drawer.

Mr. G. writes as follows: "My dear sir, the more I think of baptism, the more I am inclined to the opinion that it is not a condition of salvation."

Happily this is not a matter of opinion, and cannot be settled in that way. It is a matter of testimony that demands our faith. You then say you "Think baptism is no more a condition of salvation than any other divine injunction, and, if literal and exact obedience to all injunctions is required, why is it more the difference between this command and all others:—

It is the first act of obedience after faith and repentance, and initiates a person into Christ. Rom. vi. 3; Gal. iii. 27. Secondly, sin of the past is remitted when in this act the sin-covering name of Jesus is obtained. And the proof that that is when and where and how men get rid of their sin is furnished by the case of Paul, recorded in the 2nd of Acts. He was told to "arise and be baptized, and calling on the name of the Lord." So that that eminent apostle was subjected to the same conditions as were the thousands at Pentecost, and proves what baptism is for, wherever we read of it. It is to free them from sin and make them candidates for eternal life in the kingdom, by adoption. You will see, we trust, that that makes baptism a pre-eminent condition of salvation, and that it is a mistake to place it on a par with a host of other divine injunctions. All the divine injunctions to regulate the children of God are not addressed to sinners, but to those whose sin have been remitted, and have been adopted as children and as such are heirs of God. All these other injunctions are given to those heirs, to regulate their lives so that they may be fit recipients of the inheritance.

What you say respecting law and grace shows that you have the mistaken idea that man is supposed to earn his pardon by baptism. This is very wide of the truth. "By grace are ye saved, through faith." "He that believeth the gospel and is baptized shall be saved, is a part of the gospel. And we are persuaded that a person who from the heart believes that statement from our Lord will make haste to comply with the conditions.

It is another mistake to suppose, as you do, that Jehovah has changed his plans or purpose if what we teach be true. It was his plan to reveal his purpose by installments, and to require faith in it as fast as revealed. Abraham had to believe more than Adam and Noah; and David more than those worthies. But there were things revealed to the Apostles that prophets and patriarchs and even angels desired to look into but could not. Of course we do not mean to say that there is not a new and living way whereby men can be saved, but it was so pre-arranged, not instituted because of a partial failure of previous arrangements, but let them on, or educated them up to all the truth as it is in Jesus, a wholly spiritual system of means.

The case of the thief cited by you is no criterion for us. The new and living way baptism into the name for the remission of sin could not be preached till after the death and rechving of Christ, see Luke xxiv. 46, 47.

Christian Perfection, No. 2.

Having given the testimony that no man shall see the Lord without holiness it becomes important to know what holiness is. "It is primarily a separation. It is applied to persons, places, and things in the Scriptures, and is used in reference to whatever is set apart dedicated, or devoted to the service of God, whatever is sacred, pure, clean. It means an entire consecration, a complete surrendered the will to God and his service; a separation from that which is not pleasing to God."

And now as to the word "perfect." At first it is a most startling injunction which our Lord gives in the 5th of Matthew:

BE YE PERFECT

even as your Father in Heaven is perfect." We hope no one who reads these lines will think Jesus is capable of commanding what is impossible to do; although it may seem to be so. Webster defines perfection to mean "All that is requisite to its nature and kind, as a perfect statue, a perfect likeness, a perfect system, complete in moral excellence." And the real question it seems to us, is, can man be as perfect in his place as a man, as is the pedestal or the picture? As a rule we think people imagine

MAN IN GOD'S PLACE

as perfect in God's place instead of his own. We regard this as a great mistake, as will appear by examining [illegible] We read of the 6th chapter of Genesis that Noah was a just man and perfect. In the first chapter of Job we read that he "was perfect and upright, and one that feared God and eschewed evil," and in the 17th of Genesis that the Lord said to Abraham, "I am the Almighty God: walk before me and be thou perfect. Surely, on reflection no one would think that Noah and Job were

AS PERFECT AS GOD

or that Jehovah required Abraham to be as perfect as himself. Positively perfection is a Bible doctrine: There is no way to avoid this conclusion. But it remains to be seen of what this perfection consists. After a most careful investigation of the subject we are persuaded that Bible perfection does not consist of any thing we can do, any thoughts we can think, or any words we may utter. If asked why we think thus, we answer, because of our imperfect knowledge. Our ignorance makes it impossible to avoid mistakes, of necessity imperfection marks our conduct. This applies also to our thoughts and words. We often say things we regret soon after, although we said the best we could think of, or knew of at the time, but discover our mistake later. We think it safe to say that no one in this world

IS ABSOLUTELY PERFECT.

Absolute perfection belongs to God and the Captain of our salvation only as yet. They make no mistakes. But the question now confronting us, is, In what does Christian perfection consist, if in nothing we do, or think, or say? We reply, in the heart, the mind, in the will, in the choice, the motive. In 1 Kin., 8 and 14th chapter we read that Asa's heart was perfect with the Lord all his days; and yet he sinned. Yes; man with

A PERFECT HEART, SINNED.

We have been able to discover only one sinless Son of Man. Any inherited a warped twisted, bruised mental and moral organism from his father, and was begotten of the will of the flesh. But God was the Father of the Sinless One. And so, although made like unto his brethren in all things, and was tempted and tried in all points like as we are, he made a sinless record; and we read that it was his sinless record that led to his exaltation above his brethren. It says to him and of him. "Thou hast loved righteousness and hatest iniquity, therefore God, even thy God hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows;" all of them. Clearly then, although Asa's heart was perfect with the Lord all his days he was not sinless. The case of Hezekiah is also in point. He was able to say to Jehovah, "I have walked before thee in truth, and with

A PERFECT HEART."

And the lesson that stands out in raised and golden letter, for us, is this: The "moral quality of all our actions is in the will! This comforts our poor heart, and we doubt not it has been a soothing balm to many another. Plainly it is revealed to us that we do not sin until the heart or mind consents to do what we know to be wrong. The Book of God enjoins growth in divine knowledge, but we are nowhere taught to be perfect in knowledge, or wisdom. In the 2nd of Chron. xvi. 9, we read, "For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show himself strong in the behalf of those toward him." What a wonderful, what a comforting declaration! What a precious gem of truth this is! We seem to see by the eye of faith his all-powerful arms stretched out to support those who have a mighty struggle with the law in their members that wars against the law of their mind, and sometimes gets the better of them, and like Paul cry out, Oh, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of death: And we trust they will like Paul be able to say,

WHOSE HEART IS PERFECT

"I THANK GOD,

through Jesus Christ our Lord." I shall be delivered by and by! In further support of our position we appeal to the words of Jesus in Matt. v. 8, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." We see no difference between a pure heart and a perfect heart: and we for not saying, "The pure shall see God" that would have shut us out, as it would have shut Paul out; for when he wanted to do good, evil was present with him, and the law of sin in his members captured him, although he really delighted in the law of God in the law of his mind, will or purpose. Thank God, it is the pure in heart that shall see God."

"Be ye Kindly Affectionate One Towards Another."

This Scripture was exemplified by my friends last holidays. I am so far from all of my friends and kindred that none of them can visit me or give me the many little attentions prompted by affection and Christian fellowship. But I have been remembered so kindly this last year that it has done much towards reconciling me to my helpless and isolated condition. I received from a sister in my former home a years subscription to the Restitution and my home paper. The former gives me all the preaching that I hear; and the latter is as good as a letter to me each week. A sister in Plymouth, an old friend sent me a years subscription to a very desirable magazine. While a sister in Chicago, a stranger (except through the faith,) sent me a beautiful illustrated book of "Flowers and Song," a sister in Philadelphia and one in New York, each sent me booklets (also illustrated) of sacred poetry.

These gifts coming to me from the household of faith, touched me more than I can tell you. And I wish the donors could know how much pleasure they have given me, and how they have helped me to beguile the lonely hours of my sick room. There was the double pleasure of having them to read, when able, and the comforting pleasure of being remembered by my friends.

I think that we (the readers of the RESTITUTION ought to feel grateful to Bro. Robert Dwiggins for introducing the Christmas letters into the paper. And I think that these letters have done more to draw us together and unite us in the bands of Christian fellowship than any other one thing. And they have encouraged us in that they have shown us that there are more of us than we had thought for. In my simplicity I thought that we were dwindling away, fast dying out. That the little handful in Indiana, in Michigan and a few scattered ones in the west were all that were left of the faithful. So many of the old people were dying off, and so few young people were coming in to take their places. I thought it forcible that we would soon cease to exist as a church.

I think I felt something as the prophet Elisha did when he went to the cave Adullam in Mount Horeb, and I began to think seriously what I would do if I were left alone in a community where there were none of our people? I am not well calculated to run the Christian race alone, would I conclude that I was wrong, that I misread the Scriptures? But after a careful review of the testimonies I felt more "set in my way" than ever. There is nothing plainer to me than that the Scriptures teach that "Eternal life is the gift of God to the righteous." That God will fulfill his covenant with Abraham, "In thy seed shall all the world be blessed." That that seed which is Christ is the nobleman who has taken his journey into a far country to get for himself a kingdom. And that his return will be the consummation of our hope. But I am weary. But when the Christmas letters began to appear in the RESTITUTION and kept coming and coming from the east, the north, the south, and the great west, I realized that God is able to take care of his truth, and that "He had yet a reserve of seven thousand" "Who have not bowed the knee to Baal." I also learned indirectly from the letters that I am not so isolated as I have thought. Brother and sister Upton live within two miles of this home. Sister U. and Miss Elton (daughter of Brother Elton, of Collinwood, called on me last June. Their visit was short but very pleasant, and Mrs. Elton showed a motherly interest in me by instructing her daughter [illegible] and a good place for sick people. Mrs. U. has visited me since and brought me flowers and fruits, and we have had some pleasant visits together. But I am wearying myself and must bring my letter to a close. Like all of my letters now it has been written at intervals, days when I am feeling the best; some days not more than a half dozen lines. There is something about human nature that makes us cling to the association of other days. We shrink from the thought of dropping out of the places we once occupied in the lives and interests of other people. I am not able to write personal letters to all of my friends much as I would love to do so, but can reach all who are readers of the RESTITUTION in this way, and will be glad to hear from any of you who feel disposed to write me.

The winter and spring months are so hard on me that it takes me all summer to get ready to recuperate. It seemed at one time that I would never again recover the use of my arms enough to be able to write, and I feel very thankful that I am permitted even a limited use of the pen. I began to improve about the first of September just as I did last year at this time; but I am much more comfortable than I was through the spring and summer. And that is a great deal to be thankful for. The coming of the Savior means a great deal more to me than it can possibly be to you who are living among your friends and associates. When I came here I left all my kindred and the associations of thirty years to come and spend my last days among strangers. The prospect before me now is not a cheerful one. The tendency of inflamation of the spinal chord is to paralysis. It may come soon, in my case or it may be that I shall suffer for years. No one can tell how or how soon it may terminate. I do not worry over this, in fact I seldom allow my mind to dwell on it, knowing that it will do no good and only make it worse for me if I give way to forebodings. I trust that I will be given grace for whatever comes upon me. If I am never able to write again think of me as looking and longing for that blessed hope even the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, Yours in love.

Conference Report.

As was previously announced the Church of God in Indiana met at Plymouth, Ind. Nov. 16, 1895, and continued over the following Sunday. The meeting should have began on Friday; but owing to the absence of the president and vice-president it was postponed until Saturday. Brother Wagoner and Wince being called away to attend a funeral.

On Saturday afternoon after the stockholder's meeting the conference was called. Brother Wince presiding. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and accepted.

The treasurer reported no receipts or disbursements since last report. Amount in treasury $101.52

Brother Woodward stated he had received letters from a Bro. Cruckmore, near Noblesville, urging them to come and preach. The matter was referred to the conference when on motion the evangelical committee was recommended to have them go and use their judgment as to what they should be paid out of the evangelical fund which they decided would be $1.50 each per day allowing that the church at Noblesville would meet their expenses.

There being nothing further before the conference it adjourned to meet next June.

The ministers present were Bro. and Sister Woodward, Bro. Wagoner, Wince, Railsback and Smith. The meetings were fairly well attended throughout by brethen and sisters in the vicinity and several from abroad. For want of more room the meeting was transferred to the Opera Hall Saturday night Sunday and Sunday night. Sunday afternoon a ministerial charge was conferred upon Bro. C. W. Smith. The preaching was excellent throughout, and the best of attention although there were no musitions during the conference. Brother and Sister Woodward had been holding a series of meetings of about three weeks before the conference and continuing a few evenings after during which time there were 24 additions to our little band fourteen receiving baptism and ten joined who had previously been baptized. May the Heavenly Father bless and care for each one and may they ever prove faithful.

Report of Stockholder's Meeting.

According to published call the stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association met at Chapel Hall on Nov. 16, 1895. Robert Railsback, President of the Board of Directors called the meeting to order, and on motion J. L. Wince was chosen Chairman, and A. C. Roberts Secretary. On call of the stock it was found that a majority was represented, and the minutes of the last annual meeting, with report of committee appointed, together with action of the Board for the past year, were read, and on motion approved. The election of a Board of Directors being next in order a ballot was taken and the old Board, consisting of Robert Railsback, Wm. Railsback, W. D. Thompson, J. H. Willey and A. R. Underwood was elected for another year.

A letter was read from J. H. Willey, he being in Vermont and not able to attend.

No other business being brought up the meeting adjourned to the call of the President of the Board.

Fare-Thee-Well.

A word of blessing as we take leave of the dear, faithful workers at Plymouth and Argos, to try in, to us, unknown fields of labor. Tears which speak of loving thoughts, course down the cheek as each in turn give us the hand of parting. Fare-thee-well, and truly we could leave no other wish with the earnest workers here. To fare well one must do well, and to do well will bring its reward. One young brother, formerly a Catholic, has had such a struggle with his old time friend tobacco, but by the grace of God has come off victorious. Another young brother said to us the day before left, "I stopped smoking last night for good." Thank God, that is the kind of well-doing that is pleasing to him who wants a pure Church, ready for his coming, but O these are hard battles to fight, breaking away from old habits that have such strong hold upon us. We are never quite satisfied though until we leave all the filthy habits, all the works of Satan, then we can enjoy and comprehend better the full love of God, whose power is able to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

This series of meetings has been among the best of our lives and there was a reason for it. The brethren were already at work, it did not take a week to get the Church converted first before pleading with the unconverted. The believers here are a band of workers, they do not believe in getting an interest for conference occasions, then never working at it until the next conference, but always keep their prayer meetings and Sunday schools booming the year around. No wonder the interest began with the first meeting, and grew more intense until twenty-four had been added to their number. There is a good prospect there for a new church building which they need badly, the little cozy hall not being large enough for their use. All that is needed to accomplish the work is a strong united effort, laying aside all selfishness in the matter, being determined to work. A swarm of bees do much the best when well hived, so a congregation will thrive much better if they have a good home of their own to worship in.

Our prayer is that each may work for the best good of the cause of truth. Then we are sure all will fare well. Yours, in Christian love.

R. W. & M. A. WOODWARD.

Dear Ole Restitution:

Thou hast long been my friend and counsellor, my comforter and guide. How I should love to accompany thee in thy weekly visits to thy many friends and patrons. How many there are who await thy coming with fond anticipations. Thou art a bearer of good news. Messages of love, messages of hope, messages of good cheer, messages of great joy, are wrapped in thy snow white wings. Thou art a harbinger of peace and joy to all whose lives are what thou dost recommend them to be. There is no peace like the peace that thou wouldst lead thy faithful followers into. A peace that flows on forever like a mighty river, never tiring and never ceasing.

Mayest thou be both meat and drink to the old and the young, to the babes and the veterans in the Lord's army.

R. S. DWIGGINS.

Dear Restitution:

I have been an earnest reader of your columns for many years, but in all that time I have never written for you. I write now, not to find fault but to suggest some things that may be a benefit to the paper. It seems too bad that so much good matter is not going into the hands and hearts of more people, the time to work is so short. We hear much this time of the year about making "Christmas Presents," and why not do something for "THE RESTITUTION," by sending subscriptions for yourself and friends? If each subscriber will only try to get one new one, if you can't get them to pay for it, pay for it yourself. Won't each one of us try for one any way, and as many more as we can get? Brother Dwiggins did a grand thing when he suggested the "Love Feast" letters, and now let us make it a "Love Feast" indeed. We hope that our editor will be as good to us this year as he has been here-to-fore, and that every subscriber will have a short testimony for the Lord. Brethren we love him. Let us speak for him through our paper, that others may know where we stand. Send the paper to others and let them know of the goodness of God. If we should have a special "Love Feast" edition why not send in for extra numbers now? We will want them sure. Don't forget the "Love Feast" and don't forget the new subscriber. Yours working for the Master.

POETRY.

Joy and Pain.

If there were never any storm or rain,
Fair days would cease to be so rare and sweet.
It is when fainting on the dusty street
We mind us of the woods. Ah, then we fain
Would rest among the shadows once again!
We long for winter. When the wild storms beat
Upon our hearth we pine for summer's heat.
There is no joy without some loss or pain.
For how life is we find it is the art
Of living well. Ah, let us not forget.
The sad life be dark today, there may be yet
Where'er manna comes, much joy for each glad heart!
Perhaps God sends us trouble as a test,
To see if it will prove us at our best.

PSALM. 118.

119 CON. VER.

1. An Alleluia. Blessed-happy are those who are blameless in way who go their way in a law of the Lord.

2. Blessed-happy are they who search out his testimonies; With all their heart will they seek him out.

3. For they have not gone their way in his ways who are engaged in the transgression.

4. Thou hast commanded that one watch exceedingly to guard thy commandments.

5. Would that my ways might be restored to uprightness to the extent of having watched to guard thy statutes (enactments that justify)

6. Then should I not be put to shame, when I look at thy commandments.

7. I shall confess unto thee with uprightness of heart, when I have learned the verdicts of the righteousness.

8. Thy statutes will I watch to guard lest thou forsake me exceedingly.

9. In what way shall a young man restore his way to uprightness? In having watched to guard thy words.

10. With all my heart have I sought thee out; Do not thrust me away from thy commandments.

11. In my heart have I hid thy oracular words; Would that I may not sin against thee.

12. Blessed art thou, O Lord; teach me thy statutes.

13. With my lips have I declared all the verdicts of thy mouth.

14. In the way of thy testimonies have I delighted as in all riches.

15. In thy commandments will I reflect and contemplate thy ways.

16. In thy statutes will I meditate; I will not ignore thy words.

17. Repay thy bond-servant. I shall live and watch to guard thy words.

18. Uncover mine eyes and I shall contemplate wondrous things out of thy law.

19. A sojourner on the earth am I; Do not hide thy commandments from me.

20. My soul hath longed in its desire for thy judicial renderings in every period.

21. Thou hast rebuked the haughty; accursed are they who turn away from thy commandments.

22. Take away reproach and contempt from me, because thy testimonies have I sought out.

23. Yea indeed rulers have sat and were talking against me, but I was reflecting on thy statutes.

24. Yea forsooth thy testimonies are my meditation and my joint counsels thy statutes.

25. My soul hath cleaved to the foundation; make me to live according to thy word.

26. My ways have I declared and thou didst hearken unto me; teach me thy statutes.

27. Make me to know the way of thy statutes and I shall reflect on thy wonders.

28. My soul slumbered because of discouragement; assure me with thy words.

29. Stand away from me the way of iniquity and with thy law have mercy on me.

30. I have been pleased with the way of truth and thy verdicts have I not ignored.

31. I have cleaved to thy testimonies; do not put me to shame, O Lord.

32. The way of thy commandments have I run, whenever thou hast enlarged my heart.

33. Legally instruct me, O Lord in the way of thy statutes, and I will seek it out constantly

34. Make me to understand and I will search out thy law, and I will watch to guard it with all my heart.

35. Guide in the path of thy commandments, because I have desired it.

36. Incline my heart unto thy testimonies and not unto selfishness.

37. Turn away mine eyes from seeing inutility; in thy way make me to live.

38. Establish for thy bond-servant thy oracular-word unto fear of thee.

39. Take away my reproach which I have surmised, because thy verdicts are good (useful-good)

40. Lo, I have longed for thy commandments; In thy righteousness make me to live.

41. And may thy mercy have come upon me, thy instrumental-salvation according to thy word.

42. And I shall have answered a word to those who reproach me, because I have hoped in thy words.

43. And do not take away from out my mouth the word of truth, this especially, because I have hoped in thy verdicts.

44. And I will watch to guard thy law constantly unto the animate-age, and unto the animate-age of the animate-age.

45. And I have gone my way in a wide place, because I have sought out the commandments.

46. And I have talked with thy testimonies in the sight of kings and I have not been put to shame.

47. And I have meditated in thy commandments which I have loved exceedingly.

48. And I have lifted up my hands unto the commandments which I have loved, and I have reflected in thy statutes.

49. Remember thy words to thy bond-servant in which thou hast caused me to hope.

50. It hath comforted me in my humiliation, because thy oracular-word hath made me to live.

51. Haughty ones have been evading exceedingly; but I have not inclined away from thy law.

52. I have recalled to mind thy verdicts since an animate-age, O Lord, and have been comforted.

53. Faintheartedness got control of me by reason of obdurate-sinners who were forsaking thy law.

54. Thy statutes were my song in the place of my sojourning.

55. I remembered thy name, O Lord; in the night; and watched to guard thy law.

56. It occured to me because I had sought thy statutes.

57. My portion art thou O Lord, I have said that I would watch to guard thy law.

58. I have besought thy face with all my heart; have mercy on me according to thy oracular-word.

59. I discoursed of thy ways, and turned my feet unto the testimonies.

60. I made myself ready and was not frightened in watching to guard the commandments.

61. They plaited the cords of obdurate-sinners about me, and I did not ignore thy law.

62. In the middle of the night I awoke to confess unto thee for the verdict of thy righteousness.

63. I am a participant with all those who fear thee and who are watching, to guard thy commandments.

64. The earth is full of thy mercy O Lord, teach me thy statutes.

65. Thou hast done that which is useful-good with thy bond-servant, O Lord according to thy word.

66. Useful-goodness and chastising and comprehension do thou teach me, because I have put faith in thy commandments.

67. Before I became humbled I erred discordantly; therefore have I watched to guard thy oracular-word.

68. Useful-good art thou, O Lord, and in thy useful-goodness do thou teach me thy statutes.

69. The iniquity of the haughty hath been multiplied against me, but I with all my heart will search out thy commandments.

70. Their heart hath become curdled like milk; but I have meditated on thy law.

71. It is a good thing for me that thou didst humble me, that I might learn thy statutes.

72. The law of thy mouth is better for me than thousands of gold and silver.

73. Thy hands made me and moubled me; make me to understand and I shall have learned thy commandments.

74. Those who fear thee will see me and will have rejoiced because I have hoped in thy words.

75. I have comprehended, O Lord, that thy verdicts (judicial-renderings) are righteousness, and with truth hast thou humbled me.

76. May thy mercy forsooth have come to pass to comfort me according to thy oracular-word to thy bond-servant.

77. May thy feelings of pity have come to me and I shall live, because thy law is my meditation.

78. May haughty ones have been put to shame, because they have transgressed against me unjustly; but I will reflect in thy commandments.

79. May those who fear thee and comprehend thy testimonies have turned unto me.

80. May my heart have become blameless in thy statutes (enactments that justify) that I may not have been put to shame.

81. My soul hath been fainting for thy instrumental-salvation; In thy words have I hoped.

82. Mine eyes have failed for thy oracular-word, while they say, when wilt thou comfort me.

83. Though I have become like a swine-skin with hour-frost; thy statutes have I not ignored.

84. How many are the days of thy bond-servant? When will thou assert judgment for me from those who persecute me?

85. Evaders of law have discoursed subtile talk to me, but not as doth thy law O Lord.

86. All thy commandments are truth; they have unjustly persecuted me; be my responsive-helper.

87. Within a little were they of bringing me to an end on the earth; but I did not forsake thy commandments.

88. According to thy mercy cause me to live, and I will watch to guard the testimonies of thy mouth.

89. Forever, O Lord thy word abideth in the heavens.

90. Unto generation and generation thy truth; thou hast founded the earth and it abideth.

91. By thy direction day abideth, because all things are thy bond-servants.

92. If thy law be not my meditation then may I have perished in my humiliation.

93. Never will I ignore thy statutes, because in them thou hast caused me to live.

94. Thine am I, save me, because I have sought out thy statutes.

95. Obdurate-sinners have waited for me to destroy me; thy testimonies have I understood.

96. Of every component-scheme have I seen an end; very broad is thy commandment.

97. Since I have loved thy law, O Lord, all the day long is it my meditation.

98. Thou hast made me wiser than my enemies as to thy commandment, because mine is it forever.

99. I have understood more than all my teachers, because thy testimonies are my meditation.

100. More than elders have I understood because I have sought out thy commandments.

101. From every wicked way have I kept my feet, that I might watch to guard thy words.

102. From thy judicial-renderings I have not inclined away because thou hast instructed me in law.

103. As sweet-things to my throat are thy oracular-words, more than honey to my mouth.

OUR CHILDREN.

Work for Little Followers.

There's always work in plenty for little hands to do,
Something waiting every day that none may try but you;
Little burdens you may lift, happy steps that you may take,
Heavy hearts that you may comfort for the blessed Savior's sake.

There's room for children's service in this world of ours;
We must them as we need the birds and need the summer flowers;
And their help at tuck and toiling, the church of God may claim,
And gather little followers in Jesus' holy name.

There are words for little lips, sweetest words of hope and cheer;
They will have the spell of music for many a tired ear.
Don't you wish your gentle words might lead some souls to look above,
Finding rest and peace and guidance in the dear Redeemer's love?

There are orders meant for you, swift and jubilant they ring,
Oh the bliss of being trusted on the errands of the King!
Fearless march in royal service; and no evil can befall
Those who do the gracious bidding, hasting at the Master's call.

There are songs which children only are glad enough to sing—
Songs that are full of sunshine as the sunniest hour of spring.
Won't you sing them till our sorrows seem the easier to bear,
As we feel how safe we're sheltered in our blessed Savior's care?

Yes, there's always work in plenty for the little ones to do,
Something waiting every day that none may try but you;
Little burdens you may lift, happy steps that you may take,
Heavy hearts that you may comfort doing it for Jesus' sake.

The Story of Israel Beyond the Sea,—No. 39.

THE SOJOURN AT SINAI.

You have had time enough now to look over the three chapters I gave you;—have you found anything in them that you do not understand? I suppose you have. The laws of any state would have some sections that would be hard for you to see into. We cannot take up the lesson verse by verse, but will try to explain some of the more puzzling portions. You know that the law begins with the 20th chapter, in the ten words or commandments that were spoken by God himself, and were then written on tables of stone.

These words are called "the moral law," everybody is under obligation to obey it. It is God, and not the State of Indiana, that asks our obedience. But the state law of Israel was built on the moral law: Every statute in it had some connection with one of the ten commandments. And many of our laws are the same as the laws of Israel, patterned after the same loving code of right. They all ought to be. No law is just or good that is not framed after the moral law. The laws of the world will be built on it by and by, and all from the least to the greatest will obey.

We have then,—the moral law and the state law of Israel. But the people of Israel must know how to worship God. This will give us another division of the law, called the law of worship, or the ceremonial law. You will find the moral law repeated in Deut. fifth chapter;—some of the statutes of the state law in Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy; and the ceremonial law lengthened out in Leviticus, and added to Deut. (Deut. xxix. 1).

Mr. James G. Murray in his Commentary on Exodus divides the statutes of the state law in this way:

1. Of servants, xxi. 1-11, 5th commandment.
2. Of personal safety, xxi. 12-32, 6th commandment.
3. Of property, xxi. 33; xxii. 14, 8th commandment.
4. Of conjugal fidelity, xxii. 16, 7th commandment.
5. Of truthfulness, xxiii. 1-9, 9th commandment.
6. Of set times, xxiii. 10-19, 4th commandment.
7. Of piety, xxiii. 20-33, 10th commandment.

These divisions may help you somewhat in seeing how the state laws are connected with the commandments.

The moral law and the state law must be connected to make a righteous government. Where God is the Law-Giver, morality, religion, and law, go hand in hand. Religion builds the state, and the state upholds religion. There is no persecution; no trampling on the rights of conscience, for all believe in the same way, all worship him alike.

You would not think in your first careless reading of the lesson, that the law of service was linked to the fifth commandment, would you? Yet it is so. The master must treat his servant as a father treats his child. He must not make him serve with vigor as the Egyptians made the Israelites to serve. And the servant must obey the master as the child obeys the father. This made the relation of the two a beautiful and a pleasant one. The word servant means a laborer, though sometimes applied to a slave. But I cannot believe there was anything like absolute slavery among God's people; certainly not such slavery as that in which the negroes of the South were held. It is more like a temporary hiring, and an adoption. Men bought other men, but not as they bought cattle: they did not own them as they owned cattle, to do with them as they pleased. They must respect their rights, must treat them kindly, and must not sell them to other men. In the case of the Israelite servant they seem only to have owned his time, just as we own the time of our hired men. No Israelite could make a slave of another Israelite. Lev. xxv. 39-55. The law was,—"If thy brother that dwelleth by thee be waxen poor, and he sold unto thee, thou shalt not compel him to serve as a bond-servant. But as a hired servant, and as a sojourner shall he be with thee, and shall serve thee unto the year of Jubilee. And then shall he depart from thee both he and his children with him, and shall return unto his own family and unto the possession of his fathers shall he return. For they are my servants, which I brought forth out of the land of Egypt, they shall not be sold as bondsmen."

If an Israelite got in debt so that he had to mortgage his farm, and found himself unable to provide for his family and redeem it, what could he do? What would one of your fathers do in such a case? Go and hire out to some rich man if he could. And that is just what the Israelite did. He went and sold himself for six years to some one who would maintain him and his family, and perhaps give him enough beside to buy back his home. It may have been to the very man who owned the mortgage. We cannot tell. If so, he would work out his indebtedness, and go free at the beginning of the seventh year. Selling himself would be selling his time. The time of the hired man belongs to the one who hires him. He is not free to work for himself, nor for any one else, until his time expires.

If he was married when his service began, his wife and children went out with him, but if his master had given him his wife he left her and his children behind, though the marriage bond, no doubt, remain unbroken. Does this seem hard? It looks a little so at first. But women-servants were not free to go out in the seventh year as men-servants, except in cases where they sold their own time, or in other words, hired out for themselves. Deut. xv. 12, 13.

Some find a solution of this question (Ex. xxi. 4) in a text in Lev. xxv. 44: "Both thy bondmen and thy bond maids which thou shalt have, shall be of the heathen that are round about you, of them shall ye buy bondmen and bondmaids." The woman that was left behind with her master, was, they think, not an Israelite, but a slave bought from another nation. She would be obliged to stay and serve her master, and she and her children would at his death, become the inheritance of his sons,—they were to be bondmen forever. Lev. xxv. 46.

But the husband need not leave his wife. He might go to the judges and say, "I love my master, I love my wife, I love my children, I will not go out free," and having his ear bored through with an awl, might remain a servant with her. Did this ceremony make him a slave all his life-time? The Hon. Lew Wallace thinks it did, but Josephus and the Jewish Rabbis, say he was only held until the next Jubilee came round. Our text in Lev. xxv. 41, may refer to such a case. It would be the authority of Josephus and the Rabbis, for their opinion of the matter. The man who went free at the Jubilee period took his family out with him. The word "forever" does not always refer to a great length of time, we use it in its limited sense when we say, "what made you stay forever?" At any rate the man who staid in service with his wife, did so of his own free will.

And the condition of servants who were brought from the heathen was greatly bettered. To win purity of character, and the freedom of a child of God in servitude, was better a thousand times, than to remain in their own families and be defiled by the wicked practices of idol-worshipers. For see, he that was bought with money of any stranger, was circumcised the same as if he were an Israelite and by that right was adopted into the nation. Gen. xvii. 12. He could eat of the Passover. Ex. xii. 44, and could rejoice before the Lord in the feasts of his people. A stranger who was a hired servant, could not do this. It looks as if the servant who was bought, was thought of very much as a child. And children were often bought and adopted. You remember Eliezur, Abraham's servant. Abraham said of him, "Lo, one born in mine house is mine heir." He meant that if no son were given him, Eliezur would be to him in the place of a son and would inherit his property and the unfathomable blessings of the promise. But what if an Israelite got in debt and was sold to a stranger? He could be redeemed by his friends before his time was out, must be treated as a yearly hired servant, and if not redeemed, could go out free with his family, when the jubilee came. Lev. xxvi. 47-55. So, whatever the blaspheming Ingersoll may say about it, there was no such thing among the Israelites as the slavery he has pictured. The Israelite sometimes sold his young daughter to be a servant, but it was with the promise that she should become the honored wife of the man who bought her or the wife of his son, providing she pleased him and her consent could be gained. The money paid, was looked upon as dowry money. If the man was not pleased with the girl, the money was paid back, and she was free. If none of his promises were kept, he lost the money and the girl went home.

Parties would become well acquainted under such an arrangement. The temper and the mental and moral qualities of each, would be revealed to the other. There could be no deception. Our young girls often go out to service and remain in the same family for years. They even marry their employers, or their employer's sons, and nothing is thought of it. The difference is, that the money is paid directly to the maiden, and not to the father, and no promise is given in the beginning of her service as to marriage.

A servant might be corrected just as a child. Ex. xxi. 20. But if a cruel master struck his servant in such a way as to cause his death, his punishment was sure, save in the case where the smitten slave lingered on for several days, when it would appear of course that the blow was harder than the man intended it to be. The loss of an eye or a tooth through the master's fault freed the slave. Ex. xxi. 26, 27. If a thief had nothing to pay for the goods he had stolen, he could be "sold for his theft." Ex. xxii. 1-4. No one might steal another man and sell him for a slave. The law looked upon such a thing just as it did upon murder, and put the man-stealer to death. We have had a long lesson, we must stop.

AUNTIE WINCH.

Letter to Indiana Conference.

To all who may be permitted to attend the Quarterly Conference, and the meeting of the stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association, at Chapel Hall, Plymouth, Indiana, Nov. 15 to 17th, I send greeting. I had hoped to meet with you; but in person I may not, yet in spirit I shall be present, and shall think of you each day, and shall pray that grace from God our heavenly Father may be abundantly bestowed upon you in your meeting together, that in his name much good may be done.

Another year is past. It may not be recalled. Its work whether done or only partially done is finished. The record has been made, and the book is closed. It shall not be re-opened until he the Christ shall come and break the seal. The year has been to some perchance a happy year. A year in which respondent love has filled some hearts and made them glad. It shall be well for such as have been blessed, if in their hearts the love of God is still enthroned. To others, and to such I speak in deepest sympathy. The year has been a year in which has come the saddest trials of life. From me my dearly beloved companion, my strong support in Christ, she who loved the truth so well, and cheered me by her faith is gone, and in my weakness I miss her gentle words of hope and faith and love. Pray for me, that I faint not, that my weakness may be made strong in Christ, and that I may be able to overcome that with all the faithful ones I may have part in the glory that shall be revealed at his coming.

I pray that you may have come together in the spirit of the notice given by our President and Secretary. That your hearts may be filled with love, and all difference be laid aside. That the great aim may be to cheer and encourage each other, that each may go from the meeting the better prepared to overcome the trials and temptations of life. For trials and temptations will surely come, and when the record is opened, how shall it read, shall we be justified? Dear ones, remember this, that trials are not always clothed in sadness to test our faith. I would they were, for then we might nerve our strength and die (if need be) to overcome. But when he comes as he came to Christ, and shows us worldly gain and worldly joy, it is then we most need his Word to guide and his grace to give us strength. May God help each to overcome that we may be clothed in white raiment, and that our names may be found without blot in the book of life. Your brother in hope of eternal life.

J. H. WILLEY.

A Time of Refreshing.

"Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out when the time of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord." Act iii. 19.

Dear brothers and sisters of like precious faith, scattered to the four winds, we the Church of God at Plymouth, desire and are rejoiced to tell you of what a great refreshing time we have had in the last few weeks, through the earnest and faithful work of our much beloved Brother and Sister Woodward.

They are truly workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

Their mode of work is worthy of the greatest praise; they not only work through there own great talents, and sincere desire, but have a very pleasant way of persuading all of the members to work with them, and help them in the good cause. They must truly believe in the old proverb "In union there is strength" and their mode of work is such that we think it commendable to and all who may need their services. They commenced their labor with great earnestness closing with the same spirit. The interest increasing so that towards the close of our meetings, our hall was not large enough, so we rented the Opera House to better accommodate the crowds we were having, the Opera House being none to large to seat them all. As fruits of their labor twenty-four names were added to our church book out, of which fourteen put on Christ by Baptism, and rose to walk in the new and better life. May our Heavenly Father keep them all in the strait and narrow way, until they reach the Kingdom of God is my prayer. Amen. Written by request.

Selected.

The Fountain of Love.

"Christ may be honored by what you give him, but he must be honored by what he gives you. There may be a question whether what you bring will be good, but there can be no question about the goodness of what you shall receive if you will come. "I want to love him," says one. Never mind about that, just try and feel how he loves you. "But I want to consecrate myself to him," says another. Quite right, my friend; but just now try and think how he consecrated himself to you. "Oh, but I desire never to sin any more." Quite right again, my friend; but now think how he took your sin in his own body on the tree. "I wish I had an alabaster box that I might break it upon his head and pour out the perfume." Yes, that is all very well; but just now remember if you have not got any ointment, he has. If you have none to bring, there is plenty that he will bring you. Oh it is so sweet to think that he bids thee come! It is not a bribe to gain your services; he is too rich to need the strongest and best of us. He asks us to take everything from him. And the greatest thing we can do for God is to be empty that his fulness may flow into us. I want to sit and try and think of nothing that I can offer my Master, but open my soul and take in what he wants to give me. There are times when you are dealing out your goods, but there must also be a bringing in. Now open wide the door and let all the goods come in—let all the grace come into your soul. "I feel I cannot enjoy anything tonight because I have been so hard at work," says one, "and I have so much care and such a heavy load." You are the very person that he talks to. Come now and receive, and glorify him by receiving. I do not know how we can glorify him better, for what is the whole world but a receiver? O sun thou art a great light, but not till God doth make thee shine. O moon, thou art gladdening the evening to night with thine, but still with borrowed light. O fields, ye yield your harvests, but the great Husbandman creates your grain. O earth, thou art full, but only full of the goodness of the Lord! Everything praises God because it receives all from him. So let me lie still to night beneath the showers of his love. Now let my heavy-laden soul stay herself and rest in Christ, and gladden him by being glad herself. God grant it. Amen.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Quiet Workers.

Quietness in a man or woman is a mark of strength. Many persons suppose that noise indicates strength. They think a man is a great preacher just in proportion to the loudness of his voice. Eloquence is noise. Boanerges has great spiritual power. The noisy man is the strong one. People who make the most bluster and show are the greatest workers. But a closer observation soon shows us that this is an untrue measurement. Noise is not eloquence. Loudness is not power. The great preacher is the one who most deeply and widely impresses other lives, turns them from sin to holiness, and makes them blessings in the world. Noise is impertinent in Christ's work, and detracts from the preacher's power. In all departments of life it is the quiet forces that effect most. The sunbeams fall all day long, silently, unheard by human ear; yet there is in them wondrous energy, and a great power for blessing and good. Gravitation is a silent force, with no rattle of machinery, no noise of engines, no clanking of chains; and yet it holds all the stars and worlds in their orbits, and swings them through space with unvarying precision. The dew falls silently at night when men sleep; and yet it touches every plant and leaf and flower with new life and beauty. It is in the lightning, not in the thunder-peal, that the electric energy resides. Thus even in nature, strength lies in quietness, and the mightiest energies work noiselessly. The same is true also in moral and spiritual things. It is in the calm, quiet life that the truest strength is found.—From "The Every-Day of Life," by J. R. Miller, D. D.

Prayer—a Privilege or a Duty.

It has always appeared to me almost ridiculous to hear Christians speak of prayer as a duty. It is one of the greatest of earthly privileges. What should we think of a child's coming to its parent for its dinner, not because it was hungry, but as a duty? How would it strike us to hear a beggar speak of the duty of asking alms of us? It is an infinite privilege to be allowed to come to God, and ask for the supply of all our wants. But to pray because we must rather than because we may, seems unnatural. To ask for what we want, and because we want it, and because God has encouraged us to ask, and has promised to answer our request, is natural and reasonable. But to pray as a duty and as if we were obliging God by our prayer, is quite ridiculous.—Charles G. Finney.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the North-Western Line has reduced the time of its trans-continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace Drawing-Room Sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles without change, and all meals en route are served in Dining cars. Daily Tourist Sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered Tourist Sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6.00 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at 6:00 p. m. and 10:15 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the East and South. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to agents of connecting lines or address A. H. Waggoner, T. P. A., 7 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.—Jan. 1.

Facts Conclusive.

We expect your patronage because the Nickel Plate Road operates conveniently scheduled trains equipped with unexcelled dining cars and luxurious sleepers between Chicago, Cleveland, Erie, New York and Boston. Lowest rates.—Jan. 1.

Every little duty performed counts, no matter how small an item it is. A little boy in England had but a half-penny to put into the missionary collection, but fearing it was too small an amount to be counted at first thought he would not give it. He finally deposited it, however, and was surprised when the sum collected was announced, to hear that "the collection today amounts to ten pounds and one half-penny."

Now is the time to make your plans for your winter California Trip. Ask agents on the Nickel Plate Road about low rates and connections with the fast California trains out of Chicago.—Jan. 1.

You can tear the rosebud open before the time when it would naturally open, but you destroy the beauty of the rose. So we spoil many a gift or blessing which God is preparing for us, by our own eager haste. He would weave all our lives into patterns of loveliness. He has a perfect plan for each. It is only when we refuse to work according to his plan that we mar the web.

Nickel Plate Road, Low Rates, and Perfect Service are all synonyms. A Through Sleeping Car Service between Chicago, Ft. Wayne, Cleveland, Erie, Buffalo, New York and Boston.—Jan. 1.

Announcement.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God in Neb. will be held at the church in South Frontier County, commencing, the Lord willing, on Thursday Dec. 5, and holding over Sunday. It is earnestly desired that all, who are interested in the cause of truth, be present at this conference if they can possibly do so, and help to make the meeting a pleasant and a profitable one.

The signs of the times all indicate that this age is drawing very near its close, and that Christ will soon come to reward every man according to his works. Let us therefore "be up and doing, while it is called to-day, for the night cometh when no man can work." Then when Jesus comes, may we all have an abundant entrance into his glorious kingdom, is our earnest prayer. Your sister in Christ.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through. No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The devil is still buying souls very cheap for the promise of spot cash.

Poetry.

The Blessed Hope.

...ance. "We're Marching to Zion."
...ow blessed is the promise made,
In the dear Book divine:
...lower our hearts, lift up our souls,
And keep us to the line.

CHORUS.

We are marching to Zion,
Beautiful, beautiful Zion;
We're marching homeward to Zion,
The beautiful city of God.

Behold, now are we God's sons,
And when Christ will appear,
...r eyes shall see him as he is:
For we, like him shall be:

A sweet incentive this
This hope to realize
To those, the called out for his Name
To purify their lives.

Prophecy.

Our Heavenly Father has said that he was against Gog, still he is controling and will continue to control his actions. God rules in the affairs of men.

"After many days thou shalt be visited, in the latter years thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword." Lesser in his translation renders it "the land that is being brought back from the sword." If we had to wait until Palestine was fully restored from its desolate condition, it would seem that the fulfillment of the prophecy under consideration was a long ways in the future. But Lesser removes this difficulty by informing us that the fulfillment will come during the time "the land is being brought back from the sword."

What land is referred to into which the Russian government is to come "in the latter years?" Let the prophet answer. He says "and is gathered out of many people against the mountains of Israel which have been always waste, but it (Israel) is brought forth out of the nations, and they (Israel) shall dwell safely all of them." All know where the mountains of Israel are. The great temple was built there.

In the picture here drawn by the prophet, we see the children of Israel returning from all nations into which they have been scattered to their own country, to the mountains of Israel. This takes place "in the latter years."

Again we look upon the picture and we see this country, which has been long desolated and trodden down by the Gentiles, being restored. "It is being brought back from the sword." It was made desolate by the sword of Titus in the year A. D. 70. It is now being restored from that desolation which was continued for eighteen hundred and twenty-five years. Let us go to Palestine and see the condition of things there. It is only a very few years since the inhabitants of Jerusalem consisted almost entirely of Turks. There was a law on the statutes of Turkey making it a criminal offense for a Jew to go into any part of Palestine. A few years ago through the efforts, first of the English government, and later of our government, the operation of that law was suspended and the Jews were permitted to return into their own country. Still later this country and England succeeded in having that law repealed. And what is the result? On the day of Pentecost there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews out of every nation under heaven." "Modern Jerusalem can excell the ancient city in this respect. To that gathering of scattered Jews could now be added representatives of countries then unknown.

We proceed with our investigation of the restoration of Palestine and we see the hills and the valleys, the mountains and the plains, that were flowing with milk and honey at the time Moses sent out the spies to examine that country, but which have been barren and desolate for more than eighteen hundred years, now beginning to bloom and blossom. The Lord is again sending his rains and his snows upon that country and the land that has been barren and stripped of vegetation for so many long years, is now covered with green grass and beautiful flowers. The trees that have been unfruitful are again bearing most lucious fruit. Our Heavenly Father is smiling on that county on which he has looked with displeasure for so long a time, and his smiles always bring happiness and great joy.

The Jews are now living in Palestine in apparent safety, but the prophet, speaking of Gog, says "Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm, thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, thou and all thy bands, and many people with thee." The armies of Russia and and all others who shall fight under the lead of the Czar, shall be so great that they will "come like a storm" and cover the land "like a cloud."

"Thus saith the Lord God, It shall come to pass, that at the same time shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt think an evil thought." The evil thought which the Czar shall think is as follows, viz: "and thou shalt say I will go up to the land of unwalled villages, I will go to them that are at rest, that dwell safely all of them dwelling without walls and having neither bars nor gates."

It must be borne in mind that Joel's prophecy, which we quoted in a former article, was not a command to the Jews to prepare for war by beating their plowshares into swords and their pruninghooks into spears, but the command was expressly given to the Gentiles. The great and terrible wars, which are yet to be fought in the world before we shall have universal peace, foretold in the holy Scriptures, will be fought by Gentiles. The great troubles of the Jews are almost ended. They have suffered long and terribly for their rejection of the Son of Man but the smiling face of a loving Father is almost visible in the dim distance. Ere long with outstretched arms and glad voices, we will hear them say "this is our Lord, we have waited for him." Blessed anticipation. "Come Lord Jesus and come quickly."

The Jews which will be residing in Palestine at the time of the invasion of that country by the armies led by the Czar will not be prepared to meet and resist an invading army but the Lord takes care of his own, as we will see later on.

The invasion is for this purpose "to take a spoil and to take a prey to turn thy hand that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the midst of the land. It is not upon the border.

While the Jews will be wholly unprepared to resist the invading armies led by the Czar, there are several Gentile nations, mentioned by the prophet, which will resist the advance of the armies of Gog with all the power they possess. The nations of "Sheba and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish with all the young lions thereof, shall say "art thou come to take a spoil."

Before Russia goes very far on her road to conquest, other nations will desire to know her intentions.

Sheba is in the southwest part of Arabia. It is now called Aden, and belongs to the British government. England has a fort there, which guards the entrance into the strait of Babel-Mandeb, which is the entrance to the Red Sea.

Dedan is in the southeast part of Arabia, at the entrance of the Persian gulf.

England is Tarshish.

The merchants of Tarshish is the East India Company. The English government chartered this company years ago and gave them authority to trade in India. This company under the assistance and guidance of the British government became so powerful in India, that it practically brought that nation under subjection to it, whereupon England stepped in and took possession of the country and reduced it to subjection to itself. The queen of England became the Empress of India, which office she still holds. She is as much Empress of India as she is Queen of England.

England is the lion country. The young lions are her dependencies. India is the one referred to by the prophet. India has a population of nearly or quite two hundred million people. Her men, when well officered and well armed, are good soldiers. England can draw an immense army from India, with which to fight Russia when she attempts the conquest of the Turkish empire including Palestine and Asia Minor.

The nations of France and Egypt and perhaps Italy will join England in the great contest. Should this nation become involved in the struggle it will join its forces with England. I am aware that I here cross the track of politicians and statesmen, who claim that in any contest between Russia and England our sympathies will be with the former. It is true that we have been friendly with Russia for a very long time. It is also true that we have had many little tilts, diplomatic and otherwise, with the mother country, but notwithstanding all this we will favor England as against Russia in this last great contest. Austria would naturally sympathize with Russia. What part she may take I am unable to predict. She certainly will be engaged on one side or the other.

The possession of the Turkish Empire, which includes Palestine, will be the prize for which the war will be waged.

Turkey will remain friendly with England and her armies will be added to the forces fighting under the lead of England.

R. S. DWIGGINS.

Practical Prophecy.

One day, while intently studying Rev. xii., an interpretation of that wonderful prophecy instantly flashed across my mind, which has been a glorious blessing to me ever since. Attached to it is a striking practical lesson, which has been exceedingly helpful to me in enabling me to overcome temptations. Since learning that lesson, I have set myself with a firm determination to become an overcomer in the name of the Lord. I will now give the exposition to you, and hope you will lay aside preconceived interpretations and take your Bible in hand, and test it thoroughly. It is in relation to the birth of the "Man-child," of Rev. xii.

Verses 1 and 2, brings to view, "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars: And she being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered."

Every class of interpreters of any note agree that this glorious "woman," represents the Church. Assuming this to be true, she becomes the mother of the "Man-child?" Now, the question is, who is the "Man-child?" Verse 5, shows the work he is to accomplish. "And she brought forth a man-child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne."

He is then destined to "rule all nations," and is also to be "caught up unto God and his throne." Is not the Lord Jesus destined "to rule all nations?" was he not "caught up unto God and his throne?" I answer, yes. But does this Scripture primarily refer to him? I answer, No, for the following reasons:

1. This is a prophecy given by the Lord himself. He certainly would not prophesy concerning his own birth and ascension AFTER they had become facts, and certainly he could not before he was born.

2. The TIME of the birth of the "Man-child," makes it impossible for it to refer to Jesus. This "child" is born under the seventh trump, which is yet to sound. See xi. 15; the birth is one of the events which take place under this last trump (xii. 5) which is about to sound. Every interpretation which places the birth in the past takes it away from the time named by Inspiration, and surely no Bible believer would do that.

3. The "woman," (the church) is the mother of the "Man-child." The church did not give birth to Jesus.

WHO DOES IT REFER TO?

We must determine that from the phrase: "who is to rule all the nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God and unto his throne." (xii. 5.) Who beside Jesus is to "rule all the nations with a rod of iron," and to be "caught up unto God, and unto his throne?" This same prophecy informs us, "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father. And I will give him the morning star. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

See also Rev. iii. 21, 22: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

"He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end," is the party which has the promise of ruling the nations with "a rod of iron," and being "caught up" to meet the Lord. They being the ONLY parties to which the promise is applicable, must of course be the "Man-child," which is brought to view, made manifest, brought forth, or born under the seventh trump. xi. 15; xii. 5.

Those composing the "woman" (xii. 1) or the church, are not all "overcomers," it being only a few in the church that she gives birth to as the "Man-child." See Rev. xii. 11. Remember this is under the seventh trump.

"The "Man-child" is "caught up." Now, what becomes of the "woman" out of which the "Man-child came? The woman doubtless has held to the faith, but has neglected the matter of being overcomers. See Rev. xii. 18. "And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man-child." The "dragon" is only permitted to go so far in his persecution of the "woman," and then God interferes. See verse 14: "And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent." God takes care of her in his prepared place "for a time and times, and a half a time"—three and a half literal years (it is not possible to get 1260 literal years within the short space allotted to the last, or seventh trump, in which this "time, times, and a half a time is included.) The "dragon" being defeated in his purpose, "was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." Ver. 17. "The remnant of her seed," will probably be the tribulation saints.

WHO IS THE DRAGON

which persecuted the woman? We need have no question about that, the Bible tells us definitely. See Rev. xii. 9: "And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him." Then the dragon is none other than "that old serpent, called the devil and Satan." We are sometime told that the dragon is Pagan Rome. This casting out of the dragon is an event under the seventh trump, (xi. 15) and Pagan Rome does not now exist to be cast out. The same dragon power is also mentioned in Rev. xx. 1: "And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years." Who expects Pagan Rome to be shut up in the abyss for a thousand years, and then let loose to deceive the nations, when that power don't exist?

We have seen from this short exposition, that the "Man-child," (overcomers) are "caught up," while the woman is nourished" in "the wilderness." Not a single soul can ever form a part of that Man-child, except overcomers, and there is a wise reason for it. This Man-child is to "rule all the nations with a rod of iron," and no one can be either fit or capable of "ruling all nations," unless they can first rule or govern themselves. He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of the Lord. The Man-child is a new man made up of both Jews and Gentiles, he purposed "to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace." Eph. ii 15. The new man is a pure and holy man, has overcome himself, conquered himself, and hence is fit to be invested with royalty, "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light; which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy." We have already seen that the Man-child and not the woman, which gave birth to the child, is to be invested with royalty, ("rule all nations with a rod of iron" Rev. xii. 5.) He is "caught up unto God and unto his throne," and returns with the "Nobleman," having received the kingdom. The woman is not "caught up," but is cared for in "the wilderness," for three and a half years. Rev. xii. 6, 14. "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end,—I will give him authority over the nations: and he (the Man-child) shall rule them with a rod of iron." Rev. ii. 26, 27; xii. 5. Being an overcomer, he is entitled to be "caught up," or taken away from the time of trouble. See Rev. iii. 10: "Because thou keepest the Word of my endurance, I will also keep thee from the hour of temptation, which is about to come upon the whole world, to try those who dwell upon the earth." The woman will still "dwell upon the earth," being in "the wilderness," (Rev. xii. 14,) and will suffer persecution in some measure. Rev. xii. 13. Inspiration draws a marked distinction between "the woman," and the "Man-child" she gives birth to.

Now, the important question with us all, is, which company do you wish to be allied with? Do you want to be "caught up" with the "Man-child," away from "the hour of temptation, which is about to come upon the whole world," do you want to be invested with royalty, and "rule all the nations with a rod of iron?" or do you wish to remain with the "woman," be persecuted by the dragon, and be finally cared for during three and a half years in "the wilderness?" When this distinction between the "Man-child" and the "woman" is dawned upon my mind, it stirred me to the very depth, and I more than ever resolved by the help of God, to overcome every obstacle which may cross my pathway. "Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man." Luke xxi. 26; "The "Man-child" being overcomers are "accounted worthy" of being "caught up," "to stand before the Son of Man," and "to escape all these things," but the "woman" does not escape all these things," but is finally delivered, and God protects her in "the wilderness." He shall send forth his angels, and shall gather together his elect," some to "stand before the Son of Man," and some to a safe retreat in "the wilderness." That there will be these two places provided as harbors of safety, none can doubt, when Rev. xii. is honestly considered. And that these events are limited to the seventh or last trump which will end human misrule, is clearly indicated in Rev. xi. and xii. And also that they will occupy the retreat, just three and a half years, is shown in Rev. xii. 5, 14. The usual interpretation of 1260 years would carry it far beyond the confines of the trumpet. If one trumpet could last 1260 years the other six could also, and that would give us 9,280 years, which would carry us back before creation. This would neither be natural or sensible, but taken literally, as it reads, it makes both harmony and sense.

Beloved in the Lord, what are you striving for: Do you want to "stand before the Son of Man" with the royal ones, (the Man-child,) "who is to rule all the nations with a rod of iron," (Rev. xii. 5; ii. 26, 27,) or gathered with the woman in "the wilderness," (Rev. xii. 6, 14,) which would you prefer? The matter rests with each one individually. Only overcomers can "stand before the Son of man." It is no use to try and reason these things away, and hence neglect our opportunity in the exceedingly limited time which now remains. Beloved, let us take heed to the lesson, and strive mightily.

Tobacco Again.

The Christian tobacco user if there is such a paradox, knows intuitively that the habit is sinful. Suppose he was a Sunday School teacher, and addicted to the habit, could he use the word indiscriminately before the pupils in his class?

Or could he with seeming indifference appease the unnatural appetite before the gentler sex?

No, because it would be a sin in either case.

Men of learning in medical and scientific circles testify that the perverted use of tobacco is a "serious physiogical evil" and that "every mature smoker, chewer and snuff-taker, influences dozens of youths to follow their pernicious example, and those who indulge in the habit, know that it wastes money, strength and life, and tramples on the laws of nature which are the laws of God. Hence it is a sin."

Can anyone who has sworn allegiance to the Great King be found in the ranks of those who "influence dozens of youths to follow their pernicious example." Let us trust they are very few. "They that are of Christ Jesus have crucified the flesh with the passions and the lusts thereof. That you may be blameless and harmless the children of God without blemish in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom you are seen as lights in the world." (R. V.)

The pipe, quid, cigar and glass, are adjuncts of the tavern and saloon. Frequenters of such places are generally addicted to smoking, spitting and chewing tobacco, interlarded with course jokes, brutal jests, and profane swearing. Notice the three S's are in close proximity to each other. That is, smoking, spitting, swearing. "The corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit." "Think of Christians fraternizing with such company. Can they do so and heed the words of Paul? "Abstain from every form of evil." Or the words of the absent Master, "Even so let your light shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

The absence of smoke demonstrates the brightness and purity of artificial light. There is no light or purity that comes from the fumes of tobacco, but effluvia in the clothes and in the breath, which anyone having the natural use of their olfactory nerves can scent the malodorous tobacco user afar off. Thus it is a sin against cleanliness and economy, utterly filthy, degrading, wasteful, abominable and unnatural.

It is said the British soldiers are not allowed the use of tobacco on parade, or when off duty on the [illegible] would be a serious breach of military discipline.

Shall soldiers of the armies of the world put to shame the soldiers of King Jesus whom Paul urged to endure. "Suffer hardships with me, as a good soldier of Christ Jesus."?

Subjoined is a note of warning given at a Friends conference held in north eastern Ohio, and ought to be of universal application.

"We hope that the number of our members who are in the habitual use of tobacco is not large; but we desire to caution all against being drawn into it, and if any of our members are engaged in raising tobacco or in selling it to the public, we would suggest for their serious consideration, whether they can continue to do so and preserve their consciences void of offence in the sight of God. Finally friends believing as we do that we are called with a "high and holy calling" and that we should present ourselves spotless in the sight of our Heavenly Father and in the eyes of men, let us be individually concentrated to do our whole duty in this matter, keeping in mind the admonition, "Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence, touch no unclean thing, go ye out of the midst of her, be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord."

The perverted use of tobacco is neither pure, lovely, or of good report. It cannot be used as human food. It induces thirst, it will not beautify or improve the person but rather the reverse. Therefore unto all who are victimes of the habit amongst the brethren and sisters and readers of the RESTITUTION we would earnestly implore you to act at once and forever, fight the habit unrelentingly. Remember should the battle be stubborn and prolonged, victory when gained will be more highly prized. Surely you will do nothing unworthy King Jesus and his cause. But in all things showing thyself a pattern of good works, rejoicing in the knowledge "We have done that which is was our duty to do."

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DEC. 4, 1895.

The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

WE devote quite an amount of space to foreign news, in this paper, as some critical things are now happening at Constantinople and other places, and a crisis may be expected in the political situation soon.

Our Christmas Number.

In another column is a short article from Bro. Dwiggins. Read it and send in your testimonies as he suggests, in a few words that all may have part in this meeting. Do you think that the Lord is coming a second time? Do you think he is coming literally to this earth again? Do you think the signs of the times indicate that he is soon to come, or do you think his coming is yet far in the future? Are the cares and burdens of this world so heavy that you desire his soon coming to change the present order of things, with all the dire sickness, pain and death attendant upon mortality, to the glories of immortality, when all the troubles of this life, with its heartaches and countless ills, will be changed to joy and singing? Do you pray "Thy kingdom come," and come quickly? If you have any desire, any hope, any foundation for your hope, express it in a few words as Bro. Dwiggins suggests, and we will have a testimony meeting through THE RESTITUTION that will do us each good, and rejoice the angels in heaven. All, each one, are invited, urged, commanded out to take part in this exercise. Will you speak out for the Master?

Boston, November 25. The following letter has been received in Boston from a reliable correspondent in Constantinople: "The Turks have induced some of the subsidized European papers to speak of [illegible] breaks, etc., but the ambassadors have full reports, which they ought to publish, that refute this and show conclusively that the Sultan within is a day or two after he signed the reform scheme ordered the Armenians to be massacred in order that there should be no question of an Armenian majority in any of the provinces. The people sought the spoils obtainable, and so did not execute the Sultan's wish to the fullest. But the loss of life has been awful. Moreover, there seems to be no way of preventing more of the same sort.

It is the most awful crime of the century, because it is so persistently falsified by its authors. Everywhere the story is the same. A deliberate preparation, and then a story sent to Europe that the Armenians attacked the inoffensive Turks, and were poniarded to order after a few [illegible] killed.
